THOUSANDS OF TROOPS AID POLICE IN GUARDING THE STREETS OF PARIS

Prodigious Preparations Made to Suppress May Day Disorders.

Banks, Embassies and Railroad Stations Are Strongly Guarded.

Crowds Are Kept Moving and Trouble Thus Far Averted.

Paris, May 1.—May day, the day for which the government made prodigious preparations, finds many quarters of the city presenting the appearance of an armed camp. The forces concentrated under Prefect of Police Lepine are estimated at 50,000 troops, 12,000 police and 8,000 Republican guards, gendarmes and detectives. Detachments of troops of all arms took up positions in the main centers at an early hour. The bulk of the military forces had been strictly confined to barracks since midnight and remained under orders to be ready to move at a moment's notice. The troops at midnight began to guard the public sources of water, gas and electric supply.

The plan of the authorities was to avoid the use of the military unless such a step was imperative to maintain order. Accordingly the aspect of the city during the early hours was little different than usual, but toward noon the military activity increased.

The metropolitan railroad and the omnibuses continued to operate but cab traffic was crippled owing to the cabmen's strike. Extensive central markets were deserted, the country folk refusing to risk bringing in provisions. The suburbs, which are guarded by troops, were reported calm.

Strong bodies of troops are posted at the main railroad depots in the city. The St. Lazare station is surrounded by a squadron of cuirassiers, several companies of infantry and Republican guards.

Prior to the opening of the bourse a regiment of infantry took up a position on the Terrace and detachments of cuirassiers occupied the neighboring streets. The bourse opened at the usual hour but business was restricted.

The Bank of France was similarly guarded by infantry and cavalry and pickets of troops patrolled the vicinity of all the leading banks and important commercial establishments.

The American Express company and many other institutions were guarded with infantry, carrying rifles, pacing up and down before their doors.

The appearance of the sentinels and patrols on the main boulevards and streets was an unusual sight. Squads of dragoons passed frequently through the jewelry district, the Rue de la Paix, where a number of the stores did not raise their iron shutters. The Place de la Republique is the chief center of the labor demonstration. The stores in its neighborhood are closed and police patrols were busy keeping the crowds circulating. Many of the strikers wore a cockade, bearing an emblem with the words:

"Eight hours work with a weekly holiday."

About 3,000 infantry occupied the barracks facing the Place de la Republique and other regiments were stationed in houses within easy reach.

The iron doors and windows of the Prince Eugene barracks are closed.

Paris, May 1, 6 a. m.—Cavalry and infantry detachments have taken up the positions assigned to them throughout Paris and in the outskirts of the city as a precaution against May day disturbances. As this dispatch is filed the authorities have completed all their arrangements to preserve order. There are no indications of any excitement in the central districts.

10:55 a. m.—In addition to the occupation of the Place de la Bourse by troops early in the day, prior to the opening of the bourse a battalion of infantry was stationed on the terrace of the building and detachments of cavalry were drawn up at each of its wings.

The boulevards, the Place de la Concorde, the Place de l'Etoile and the Place de la Bourse present their normal aspect. Traffic is uninterrupted except in the case of cabs.

11:20 a. m.—Owing to an increase in the excitement on the Place de la Republique the troops intervened and a hundred arrests were made. The prisoners were immediately taken before magistrates who quickly passed upon the cases and the disturbers of the peace taken to jail.

12:30 p. m.—The striking printers attempted to march in procession from the Bourse du Travail (labor headquarters) singing a revolutionary song. They attacked the police who intervened and the latter were compelled to draw their revolvers. The procession was then broken up.

1:30 p. m.—A squadron of Cuirassiers with an ambulance has occupied the part of the Place de l'Etoile facing the Champs Elysee.

Detachments of cavalry are patrolling the thoroughfares in the vicinity of the ministeries and the D'Orsay. The police has been stationed at the American embassy.

2:25 p. m.—Many anarchists have been expelled from Paris, including Stephane, Guertzicoff and one woman. M. Levy, secretary of the Confederation of Labor, and M. Fromentin, the wealthy anarchist, have been arrested.

Delegates from all trades are assembling at the labor headquarters.

2 p. m.—The Place de la Republique is the scene of continuous arrests. The number of disorderly persons has increased by several thousand. A detachment of 400 infantry has stacked arms on the Place de l'Etoile.

CAN SEND NO MONEY

Congress' Appropriation for Sufferers Available for Supplies Only.

Taft Explains to Committee How Money is Being Spent.

Washington, May 1.—The following telegraphic correspondence has passed between Chairman Phelan at San Francisco and Secretary Taft at New Haven via Washington:

"San Francisco, April 29, 1906.—William H. Taft, secretary of war, Washington, D. C.: As the funds appropriated by the government are to be disbursed under the president, we would respectfully request that you inform us to what extent, if any, the finance committee of the relief and Red Cross funds, which have now consolidated all funds, may expect to handle the government appropriation. We seek a concentration of funds and work, for obvious reasons and would be glad to serve you in this or any other capacity. Dr. Devine will keep you advised of our work. We now need money and new supplies.

"JAMES D. PHELAN,

"Chairman finance committee of the relief and Red Cross funds."

"Washington, D. C., May 1, 1906.—James D. Phelan, Chairman of the relief committee and Red Cross, San Francisco, Cal.: You and your committee evidently misconceive the nature and legal limitations of the congressional aid and do not understand the facts. Instantly on receipt of Gen. Funston's telegram of the extent of the disaster and the pressing need of food and shelter for more than 100,000 people, although I was without lawful authority to do so, I ordered sent to San Francisco rations costing $200,000, tentage, blankets, cots and bedding costing more than $1,000,000, and medical stores costing $150,000 to be used and distributed for the relief of the sufferers.

"The transportation of these supplies cost more than $150,000. I made this order anticipating that congress would ratify my action. Congress did so, by joint resolution authorizing me to furnish for relief of the sufferers subsistence, quartermasters' and medical stores for relief of the sufferers and appropriated $1,000,000 for these purposes to be used in my discretion. The president then advised congress that expenses had already been incurred for these purposes aggregating $1,500,000 and recommended the appropriation of $1,500,000 more or $2,500,000 in all. Congress thereupon increased the appropriation to $2,500,000 in all and authorized me to use this amount not only for subsistence, quartermasters' and medical stores, but also the transportation of troops. On the recommendation of Gen. Greely and Mayor Schmitz I ordered 2,500 more troops to San Francisco, which with previous transportation for same purpose involves an expense of $250,000.

"What there is left available of the appropriation under the law can only be expended for rations, quartermasters and medical supplies and transportation of troops which can only be expended through the lawful agents of the war department to wit: The bonded officers of the subsistence, quartermasters and medical bureaus, under my direction. I have no power or legal authority to turn the money appropriated by congress to your committee to be expended by you, or to expend it for anything but the specific purposes stated in the congressional resolutions. Should you think that the supplies of rations or quartermaster's stores or medical supplies ought to be increased, I shall be glad to direct the purchase and forwarding of them to the proper army officers in San Francisco for distribution, but I cannot order the payment of money out of the treasury of the United States to your committee for any purpose. My discretion is to be exercised only as to the amounts to be expended for specific purposes mentioned in the congressional resolutions, and is thus limited by law. As president of the Red Cross society, I have already directed the remittance to you by telegram of $250,000 out of the funds of that society and am prepared to order the remittance of more as you shall need it.

"It will aid us in taking proper action if you will advise me of the amount of money you have on hand and in general the purpose for which you need it. I infer from your telegrams, that you now have on hand food supplies, tentage, blankets and clothing enough for present needs.

"WM. H. TAFT.

"Secretary of war and president of the Red Cross."

GRAFT IN KING'S PALACE.

London, May 1.—Graft in the king's household has resulted in several important officials losing their positions. The king has been aware for some time that certain goods used in his palaces came only from certain dealers, and the charge of favoritism was freely bandied about. The king made a quiet investigation and learned that an elaborate system of commissions prevailed and that unless certain persons were "seen" and "fixed" the articles stood no chance of being seen on the king's table.

The king took a severe view of this offense and promptly retired the guilty officials. He has, furthermore made it widely known that firms endeavoring to gain a foothold in the house by corrupt methods will be debarred from orders for all time. The commissions have been particularly heavy in wines. The privilege of advertising a certain wine as the only one used by the king was so valuable that the favored firms secured the king's patronage by paying out small fortunes.

STRIKES ARE NUMEROUS

May Day is Marked by Small Labor Disturbances.

Number of Men Idle in New England is Not Great.

Boston, May 1.—May day was marked by numerous strikes in New England. The majority of the difficulties were confined to the building trades. Strikes of carpenters occurred at Lawrence and vicinity and in other places. The Lawrence men, about 1,000 in number, demand an 8-hour day, at a wage of $3. In Lynn about 200 machinists, who desire a 9-hour day, with a half holiday Saturday, are idle, and a number of carpenters, painters and plumbers are also out. Conditions are unsettled in the Cape Ann granite district, in the Blackstone valley and Fall River building trades, and in several branches of the building trades in other places. In Boston, while there was no general disturbance, several small strikes occurred, but the number of men idle here on account of labor disputes is not great.

QUIET AT WARSAW.

The Expected May Day Troubles Fail to Materialize.

Warsaw, May 1.—Three policemen were killed in the streets here during the night but the threatened May day outbreaks have not materialized up to 2 o'clock this afternoon. Warsaw is like a city of the dead. The shops and restaurants are closed. No cabs and no street cars are running and no newspapers are being sold. The streets are patrolled by troops but a heavy rain is falling which is keeping the people indoors.

WAINWRIGHT PLEADS GUILTY TO ROBBERY.

Minneapolis, May 1.—(Special to The Herald.)—Thomas J. Wainwright, under arrest for stealing property from Dr. J. N. Pinaud, valued at many thousands of dollars, changed his mind late yesterday and decided not to fight the charge. He pleaded guilty to the charge of grand larceny and was remanded for sentence by Judge Brooks, in the district court. Wainwright was brought back from the East two weeks ago.

RURAL CARRIERS.

Washington, May 1.—(Special to The Herald.)—The following Minnesota rural carriers have been appointed: Long Prairie, Route No. 5—Jay H. Perkins, carrier; F. A. Menardy, substitute. Mora, Route No. 1—Oscar J. Martin, carrier; Mae L. Martin, substitute. Princeton, Route No. 5—Oscar Henry J. Stanford, carrier; E. L. Wood, substitute.

KING HAS SLIGHT FALL.

Naples, May 1.—The fact that King Edward had a slight fall on the stairs of the royal yacht Victoria and Albert yesterday before leaving for Mount Vesuvius caused the circulation of exaggerated rumors about the accident. The king, however, was not injured and laughed at his mishap.

BOYS FIGHT WITH KNIVES

Nineteen-Year-Old St. Paul Lad Lies at Point of Death.

St. Paul, May 1.—(Special to The Herald.)—John Wilzak, 19 years old, is lying at the point of death at his home, 919 Minnehaha street, as a result of a fight with knives with Alex. Zajkowski, a 17-year-old boy living at 922 Rose street. Zajkowski is under arrest, charged with assault with a dangerous weapon and will not be examined until the nature of Wilzak's injuries are known.

The stabbing occurred last Sunday night. Wilzak and Zajkowski attended a dance on Jessamine street and Zajkowski went home with a girl named Pearl, whose surname he did not know. The girl lives on Tenth street and works for the Model laundry.

On his way back Zajkowski says he met Wilzak and another young man by the name of Kakoski.

Wilzak said to him: "What are you doing with that girl?"

Zajkowski replied that he had merely taken her home from the dance.

Wilzak, according to Zajkowski then struck him several times and pulled out a knife.

Zajkowski pulled his own knife and there was a lively mixup during which Wilzak got the worst of it.

The wounded man made his way home and Dr. Gabinder was called to attend him.

Yesterday Wilzak's injuries grew so dangerous that Zajkowski was taken into custody.

Dr. Gabinder reported to the police that Wilzak will probably die from the effect of the wounds.

KNIGHTS OF PYTHIAS

To Institute a New Lodge at Blackduck Thursday Evening.

Bemidji, Minn., May 1.—(Special to The Herald.)—A lodge of Knights of Pythias will be instituted at Blackduck Thursday evening of this week. C. S. Bartram, of St. Paul, grand chancellor of the order in Minnesota, and Fred W. Wheaton, grand keeper of records and seal, will participate in the institution, and the grand chancellor has requested T. J. Miller, chancellor commander of the Bemidji lodge, to get as many knights as possible from Bemidji and vicinity to attend the exercises. The new lodge will start out with a class of twnty-five charter members.

Sergeant P. R. Halloren, who has been in charge of the local marine recruiting office during the last three months, leaves today for Washington, D. C., where he will enter the school of gunnery. Halloren will be succeeded here by Corporal Thomas Miller.

C. H. Miles of Bemidji has sold his hotel at Hibbing, the Hotel Miles, to John A. Healy, proprietor of the Hibbing hotel.

MOVING DAY.

NOT A WHEEL OF A GREAT MANY BOATS IS TURNING IN CLEVELAND AND NOT A BIT OF FREIGHT IS BEING HANDLED

The Same Condition Exists in Practically Every Port on Lake Erie.

Traffic at Chicago at a Standstill, Little Effort Being Made to Move Boats.

Thus Far Duluth Has Been Affected But Little by the Order to Strike.

Cleveland, May 1.—Every member of the International Longshoremen, Marine and Transport Workers' union employed on boats and docks of the Lake Carriers' association quit work at midnight last night and today not a pound of ore, coal or grain is being handled in the port of Cleveland. The same condition exists in practically every Lake Erie port.

Every tug in the harbor was tied up this morning. The Licensed Tugmen's Protective association is affiliated with the longshoremen, as are the firemen on the tugs and not a screw on a union tug turned after midnight last night. A "wild cat" tug, the Charles Castle of Detroit had to be called into service to bring the big Detroit and Cleveland liner into Cleveland this morning.

Lumber boats, package freight boats and passenger boats are not affected by the strike at present as their owners are not affiliated with the lake carriers.

In the port of Cleveland 4,000 men are directly affected, 1,000 of whom are seamen. About 650 laborers went out on the Cleveland & Pittsburg dock alone. It the strike continues any length of time, however, the men in the independent furnaces will, in all likelihood, be thrown out for lack of ore to smelt, the foundrymen will have to quit for lack of pig iron and it is said there is more than a chance that some of the steel mills will have to shut down. The ore supply on the docks is practically exhausted, so far as high grade ores are concerned.

Train crews innumerable, railroad officials state, will be thrown out of work because of the stoppage of the coal traffic. Some of the big elevators will have to restrict their operations on account of the shutting down of the lake grain trade.

It is estimated that if the strike lasts for one month 30,000 men in Cleveland alone will be thrown out of work.

NOT FELT IN DULUTH.

But Little Evidence of Longshoremen's Strike in This City.

The strike of the longshoremen on the lakes has been inaugurated. Not much is known of it at the Head of the Lakes except that William Jones of Superior, agent of the Marine Firemen's association, was notified by President Keefe last evening that the strike would begin at midnight.

Not an evidence of the strike was to be seen in Duluth this morning. The fear that the tugmen might be off was unfounded for all were at work. There was a rumor that the firemen on the tugs would go out at 6 o'clock this evening but nothing was learned this morning to confirm. Most of the mates have probably signed articles under which they would have to make the trip to the lower end.

LAKE FREIGHT TRAFFIC

Chicago, May 1.—Lake freight traffic was, for the greater part, at a standstill here today, the vessel owners making little apparent effort to move their vessels. They said, however, that they would move their boats when they were ready to do so.

Several of the boats which are not affected by the strike bore upon their sides, early in the day, large placards announcing that they were "union" boats. The center of the strike, as far as this city is concerned, is not in the city proper, but in South Chicago, where the mills of the Illinois Steel company, a branch of the United States Steel corporation, are located. Several of the vessels at this place made haste to get away before the strike order reached their men, and were out in the lake when the strike materialized. The passenger boats running out of Chicago have not so far been affected by the strike.

QUIET AT BUFFALO.

The Handling of Grain Tied Up at That Port.

Buffalo, May 1.—Absolute quiet prevailed along the docks this morning, although many men were about, talking in groups or standing idly by watching the unloading of the Cleveland & Buffalo and Detroit & Buffalo boats, both of which arrived on time. Neither line belongs to the Lake Carriers' association and their officials anticipate no trouble. Besides these two boats only one other arrived in the night, the Maryland.

The Great Lakes Towing company has nine tugs under steam and six of them were working today. No orders for departures were on the books of the towing company and probably nothing will get out of this port today with the exceptions of the passenger boats and possibly one or two freights which may go up light. T. W. Kennedy, superintendent of the Lake Carriers' association, was asked how the strike affected the handling of grain. "We are tied up tight," said he. "I cannot say how soon there will be a change. We are waiting."

WILL RUN BOATS.

Lake Carriers Association Proposes to Continue Its Business.

Detroit, May 1.—President Livingstone of the Lake Carriers' association said today that the Lake Carriers' association will continue to operate its boats despite the strike of longshoremen. "We may be somewhat crippled for a time," he said, "but we shall continue in business."

It is understood that no meeting of the executive committee of Lake Carriers' association has yet been called to discuss the strike situation, but that each member of the committee is looking after the interests of the association in his home port. It is understood that plans are now being worked out by the Lake Carriers to provide non-union men to handle the freight.

Milwaukee, May 1.—There was no trouble among the longshoremen in Milwaukee up to noon today. Vessels which are arriving here are being unloaded by men employed on the boats according to contract. If any trouble arises it will be when local longshoremen are called upon to load vessels for return trips.

Detroit, May 1.—Telegrams received by President William Livingstone of the Lake Carriers' association announced that a number of mates had left their vessels at Buffalo and Chicago. The strike of mates, firemen, grain scoopers and dock workers was fixed for midnight, but vessel owners in many instances took the initiative and demanded to know the intentions of their mates, with the result that a number left the vessels at once. An interesting feature of the situation is found in the relations of the Lumber Carriers and Lake Seamen's union. The Lumber Carriers' association supposedly has been entirely outside the controversy. But now it appears that the Lake Seamen are aggrieved because the Lumber Carriers recognized the Mates' union as affiliated with the Longshoremen, the Seamen being a rival organization of mates. It is further stated that the Seamen claim that the Lumber Carriers, at recent conferences here, while refusing to recognize the Seamen's mates, promised to recognize any other organization of mates. Secretary Horace E. Runnells of the Lumber Carriers denied that any such promise had been made.

Secretary Penje of the Seamen's union is on his way from Chicago to the Head of the Lakes and from him is expected an announcement that will relieve the uncertainty of the situation. Should the Seamen declare a strike against Lumber Carriers already being involved with the Longshoremen, the result will approach a general strike of marine labor.

The quarrel between the Longshoremen and the Seamen over jurisdiction of the mates is of long standing. It was referred to President Gompers of the American Federation of Labor for decision.

MUCH ILLEGAL REGISTRATION

For Municipal Election Claimed by Citizens' League of St. Paul.

St. Paul, May 1.—(Special to The Herald.)—Municipal election day in St. Paul started with a chilly rain. The early vote was heavy in spots but there was nothing to indicate how the election was going. The Citizens' league, which has been supporting Luis G. Hoffman, the Republican candidate for mayor, against Robert A. Smith, the Democratic candidate, and which has for its object the overthrow of "boss rule," claims it has knowledge of over 500 cases of illegal registration. The league, aided by the Republican city committee, has watchers at the polls and threatens arrest for every person voting who is illegally registered.

PITTSBURG PAPERS MERGED.

Pittsburg, May 1.—George E. Oliver, the Republican leader of this city, millionaire steel magnate and owner of millions of dollars' worth of Pittsburg real estate, has purchased the controlling interest in the Pittsburg Times, the late Senator C. L. Magee's Republican organ. Yesterday the Times made its last appearance. It will be merged with the Gazette, as the Times-Gazette."

CHIEF JUSTICE RESIGNS.

Ottawa, Ont., May 1.—Sir Henry Taschereau, chief justice of Canada, has resigned. He probably will be succeeded by Charles Fitzpatrick, minister of justice.

TORNADO IN NEBRASKA

Several Persons Injured and Buildings Destroyed in Furnas County.

Oxford, Neb., May 1.—A tornado did much damage in Furnas county last evening. Telegraph and telephone wires are down and only meager reports have been obtained, but it is known that several residences were wrecked and a number of persons injured. No fatalities have been reported.

The storm came from the southeast, and the first house struck was that of John Reynolds, about five miles west of Oxford. This was destroyed but the inmates escaped serious injury. The homes of Fred Hartman and Fred Drews were next demolished. Here the people were not so fortunate, nearly all being more or less hurt, and Bertha Hartman received injuries from which recovery is doubtful. The residences of Fred Loos and T. J. Cook were wrecked, as were the school houses in the Buffalo and Morning View districts besides scores of barns and other farm buildings.

MAYOR RESIGNS; NO ONE WILL TAKE PLACE.

Cascade, Iowa, May 1.—Cascade is without a mayor and unable to secure one. As a result of a row with the council, Mayor Conley resigned. It caused so much trouble that all other citizens refused to act. The office pays $50 a year and honor, but Conley says it brings disgrace instead of the latter.

NEW POSITION CREATED.

Berlin, May 1.—Baron Kroupensky, first secretary of the Russian embassy here, has been appointed councillor of the embassy of Russia at Washington, a position which has hitherto not existed. The baron will rank next to the ambassador.

NICE POINT IS RAISED

Attorney Says Contractors Are Not Compelled to Secure Permits.

Court, However, Is Not Called Upon to Give Decision.

Because he failed to take out a permit for the construction of the county poor house, and refused to comply with the demands of the building inspector in this respect, John W. Hilliard, the contractor, was arrested this morning and brought before Judge Windom.

Mr. Hilliard claimed that he was not compelled to take out a permit for this building, and through his attorney, A. E. McManus, he fought the case on several grounds.

His chief defense was that he had been told by J. H. Robinson, who was inspector at the time the work was begun, that he did not need a permit, since the building was owned by the county. On this ground Judge Windom dismissed the case, and discharged the defendant.

Mr. McManus also raised the point that the contractor is not compelled to take out a permit, but that this must be secured by the owner of the building. This point was not decided by Judge Windom, however, as the case was dismissed on the other ground.

Mr. McManus stated that he was sorry that he had raised the first point, because he believed the second one was an important one, and one that should be decided by the court. It has caused numerous disputes between the contractors and the building inspector. The contractors claim that the owners should take out the permit, and the owners throw the responsibility on the contractor. The architect is also sometimes made responsible by both, and between the three parties the inspector frequently has a hard time in selecting the proper one and forcing him to take out the permit.

"I would like to have had a ruling on this point," said Mr. McManus. "It is an important one, and I am almost sorry the other point was raised, allowing the case to be dismissed without this point being brought before the court for a decision on its merits."

In cases where the owner of the building lives outside of the city, it is very difficult for the inspector to reach him, and the practice has been for the contractor to take out the permit.

BUSINESS HIGHLY SUCCESSFUL

Put in 1,740 Additional Telephones in Seventeen Months.

During the last seventeen months the Zenith Telephone company has installed 1,740 telephones. Probably no one outside of the telephone business realizes the importance of such an acquisition or has any adequate conception of the expenditure for labor alone necessary to such an achievement or of its consequent commercial value to our city. While it means the expenditure of a large sum of money, yet a large per cent of the amount has been paid out of the excess earnings of the company, this too notwithstanding the fact that telephone service has been furnished to its patrons at a very low rate.

While under the terms of the amendment of its franchise the company is entitled to an average of seven dollars per telephone more than it is now charging, yet as the company can at present continue its business successfully without its additional income of $25,000 to $30,000 per year, it is determined to give its subscribers the benefit. If the time should come in the distant future when a part or even all of the increase in rates which the company is now entitled to or will become entitled to, as the number of its 'phones increase becomes necessary to the successful conduct of its business its faith in the public is sufficient to cause the belief that the increase will be paid by substantially 100 per cent of its subscribers without protest.

The company's memory of the manner in which the people of the city rallied to its cause when their support became necessary, is one source of such "sublime faith." Another is the fact that the people are realizing more and more each year the danger from monopolies, not only the danger from existing or would be monopolies but from the combination of competing business concerns to form monopolies where there is no compelling force to prevent such dangerous combinations as obtains in the relation between the City of Duluth and the Zenith Telephone company. The company has learned to believe although such "sublime faith" might shock the ethical and commercial sense of the "Municipal League Publication?" of Duluth, that the public service corporation which deals fairly and justly by the public will be given a square deal in return. With this idea in mind and remembering the generous treatment and patronage which the citizens of Duluth have accorded to it, the directors have decided to refrain from paying any dividends on the common stock of the company until such time as it has accumulated a surplus of $100,000.

In view of a series of articles which are appearing in the papers of our city concerning Independent companies it may not be irrelevant to state that the Zenith Telephone company had decided on the above course long before these philanthropists began exploiting for the benefit of the unwary?

The above $100,000 surplus together with the increased earning capacity of the company, which is piling up because of the increase in rate to which it is becoming entitled by reason of its rapidly increasing number of telephones will make and keep its paper regarded from a standpoint of safety an absolute "business certainty."

ASSESSORS START WORK

Value of Personal Property of Citizens Now Being Estimated.

Three Sets of Figures Are Available for the Task.

Fourteen deputy assessors started out this morning on the work of assessing the personal property of the city of Duluth.

Under the system which is in use, the assessor will have three sets of figures available, and will be able to check one set against another.

The deputies are provided with blanks with two columns of figures. In one column the householder is expected to fill in the value of his personal property. All the different kinds of personal property are listed on the blank, and the owner fills out his estimate of the value of the goods.

The other column is for the assessor. The deputy carries with him a blank book, in which he places his estimates, and these are handed in to the assessor, together with the owner's estimate. The records of the office show the value of the property as it was assessed last year, and from these three sets of figures the assessor can make his estimate, and fill in the second column left on the blank form.

After the assessor has made his estimate, and the property owners have been notified, the board of review will meet and consider any complaints against the assessment.

The real estate will be assessed by the regular office force. The figures of two years ago are on file, together with the improvements made in the property since that time, and any natural increase in the value of the property will be added.

The deputy assessors are given certain police powers, among which is the right to enter a house between certain hours of the day, while in pursuit of their duty. They are provided with badges, which will identify them.

Sciatica Cured After Twenty Years of Torture.

For more than twenty years Mr. J. B. Massey of 3322 Clinton street, Minneapolis, Minn., was tortured by sciatica. The pain and suffering which he endured during this time is beyond comprehension. Nothing gave him any permanent relief until he used Chamberlain's Pain Balm. One application of that liniment relieved the pain and made sleep and rest possible, and less than one bottle has effected a permanent cure. If troubled with sciatica or rheumatism, why not try a 25-cent bottle of Pain Balm, and see for yourself how quickly it relieves the pain. For sale by all the leading druggists.

VOTING IS VERY HEAVY AT ST. PAUL

Republicans Claim Reform Element is Bringing Out Vote.

St. Paul, May 1.—(Special to The Herald.)—As election day progressed the voting became very heavy. The Democrats were exceedingly active, and pressed into service every obtainable vehicle. The Republicans, however, became more hopeful, pointing to the large number of votes cast as an indication that the reform element was bringing out the vote. At 11 o'clock it was claimed by the Republicans that Hoffman, the Republican candidate for mayor, would carry the Seventh ward by at least 500 majority. This is looked on as a Smith stronghold, and it was also said that if Hoffman carried this ward he would sweep the city. The Democrats say, however, that unless Hoffman gets more than 800 in that ward he cannot win.

CONFIRMS THE LEVY

Judge Cant Holds Second Street Paving Assessment Regular.

Question Was on Interpretation of the Charter Clause.

Judge Cant confirmed the assessment for the paving of Second street this morning, after listening for about two hours to the arguments for and against the appeal made by Esther T. Wadhams. Mrs. Wadhams was represented by Attorney F. W. Sullivan. The city was represented by City Attorney Bert Fesler.

Mrs. Wadhams owns two lots at the corner of Fourth avenue west and Second street against each of which there is levied an assessment of $268.17.

The appeal was based chiefly on one of the sections of the city charter relative to the petitions that are presented the board of public works for street improvements, and which was interpreted by Mr. Sullivan to mean that the petitions must necessarily contain the residences as well as the names of the signers.

The petitions for the improvement of Second street contained the names of four persons whose residence was not stated. It was stipulated by the city authorities and Mrs. Wadhams that in case these four names should be thrown off by the court, the petitions would then fall short of containing the names of 25 per cent of the property owners, owning 25 per cent of the property along the highway to be improved.

The appeal simmered down to the question of the court's interpretation of the section of the charter, whether the clause requiring that the residences be given was mandatory or merely directory.

Judge Cant stated that he believed the clause should be held as directory, rather than mandatory, although some other court might take an entirely different view and might be right in the premises. The court held that the burden was on the city to show that the clause is directory.

"I do not like the idea of holding any particular language directory when it is meant to be mandatory," said Judge Cant, in way of explanation of his position, "but there has been no argument to show that this matter is essential to the interests of those who will be affected by the decision. I must deny the appeal and direct an order to be drawn up confirming the assessment."

Following the court's ruling, Mr. Sullivan remarked that he might have the usual thirty days in which to perfect an appeal to the state supreme court from the ruling of the lower court, should it be decided best to do so.

There was pending another appeal from the Second street paving assessment, but as the case was based on exactly the same grounds as the Wadhams suit, the court intimated that his ruling would be the same and the matter was not argued.

DISTURBANCE IS LOCALIZED

Police and Troops Have Matters Well in Hand in Paris.

Paris, May 1.—A squadron of cavalry charged the manifestants on the Place de la Republique, forcing the rioters towards the St. Martin canal. Dragoons then formed a cordon, cutting off ingress to the square. Fifty additional arrests were made.

The first disturbance occurred at 11 o'clock, when the police called on the troops to assist them in keeping the crowd circulating on the Place de la Republique. Two squadrons of cavalry quickly swung into the square, while 150 arrests of disorderly persons were made by the police. The prisoners were formed into groups, and two magistrates, sitting at the neighborhood barracks, promptly tried the disturbers of the peace and committed them to jail. This, however, was not sufficient to break up the crowds on the square. Bodies of strikers, chanting the revolutionary hymn, attacked the police, using bricks and cobblestones. Reinforcements of police soon arrived. They charged the crowds with revolvers, and the mob broke and fled. The storekeepers in the neighborhood of the scene of the affray have closed their doors and shutters, fearing a general spread of the agitation, but the police succeeded in confining the demonstrations to the streets near the Place de la Republique. Up to noon the disorder had been localized, and the authorities were master of the situation. Reports from the large cities show the existence of a feeling of general unrest, but the situation is not critical.

COURT ORDERS ALLOWANCE

Frederick A. Miller's Heirs Will Derive Benefits Now.

Mrs. Lucy R. Hansen, widow of Jacob H. Hansen, who died Oct. 24, 1905, is given some relief in the matter of support and education of her three minor children, by an order of the court that provides for a monthly allowance of $20 from the estate held in trust for the children, and left them by their grandfather, Fdererick A. Miller.

Judge Cant, this morning, issued an order directing Charles Rakowsky, trustee of the estate for the benefit of the children, to pay Mrs. Hansen a monthly allowance of $20 out of the rents or profits of the estate, dating the payments back to Nov. 1, 1905.

The court's order is based on the facts set forth in the affidavit of Mrs. Hansen that her husband died and left her nothing but the homestead at 123 East Fifth street, from which she has derived a monthly income of $23 by renting some of the rooms. Mrs. Hansen stated that her oldest son earns $25 per month and contributes half that sum to the common support of the family. The other two children attend school. It is claimed by the mother that she has done her best to feed, clothe and educate her children, but that the strain is too much for her meager income and she believes that she should have an allowance from the estate held in trust, no part of the principal or interst of which has been used up to the present time.

Inflammatory Rheumatism Cured in Three Days.

It gave immediate relief and she was able to walk about in three days. I am sure it saved her life." Sold by all druggists.

Wants $5,270 for Fingers.

Nels Wedan has started a personal injury case against the Merrill & Ring company to recover $5,270 for damages alleged to have been received July 15, 1903, when Wedan was employed at a circular saw for cutting cordwood into stove lengths at the company's mill. Wedan claims the belt on the pulley of the saw carried became slack and the carrier stopped. He claims that he was pushing a stick against the saw at the time and it broke, permitting his right hand to come in contact with the saw and mutilating three fingers. The company is charged with negligence in not providing a proper belt or because it did not warn Wedan that the conditions were dangerous. R. R. Briggs represents Wedan.

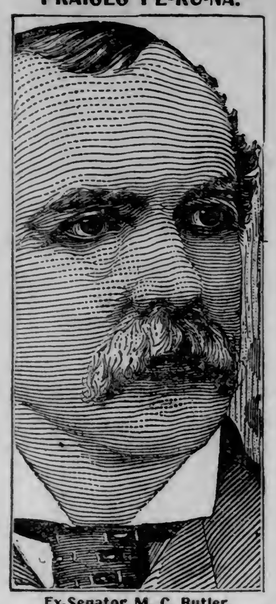
UNITED STATES SENATOR FROM SOUTH CAROLINA PRAISES PE-RU-NA.



Ex-Senator M. C. Butler.

Dyspesia Is Often Caused By Catarrh of the Stomach—Peruna Relieves Catarrh of the Stomach and Is Therefore a Remedy For Dyspepsia.

Hon. M. C. Butler, Ex-U. S. Senator from South Carolina for two terms, in a letter from Washington, D. C., writes to the Peruna Medicine Co., as follows:

"I can recommend Peruna for dyspepsia and stomach trouble. I have been using your medicine for a short period and I feel very much relieved. It is indeed a wonderful medicine, besides a good tonic."

CATARRH of the stomach is the correct name for most cases of dyspepsia. In order to cure catarrh of the stomach the catarrh must be eradicated.

Only an internal catarrh remedy, such as Peruna, is available.

Peruna exactly meets the indications.

Revised Formula.

"For a number of years requests have come to me from a multitude of grateful friends, urging that Peruna be given a slight laxative quality. I have been experimenting with a laxative addition for quite a length of time, and now feel gratified to announce to the friends of Pe-ru-na that I have incorporated such a quality in the medicine which, in my opinion, can only enhance its well-known beneficial character.

WEST DULUTH

In the council meeting last night, Alderman L. A. Barnes of West Duluth had a resolution passed asking the board of public works to examine Ramsey street and see what can be done to improve it. The street is very badly in need of repair and in its present condition is avoided by drivers of teams if it is possible for them to make any other route. The cedar blocks in it are rotting and falling away, leaving large holes in the surface, in which heavy teams sink and stick.

Mr. Barnes also had a resolution passed directing the fire board to look into the storing of oil in the old Oneota station, in order to see whether or not the thing is dangerous.

MOTHER IS ARRESTED

Spring Brings Numerous Complaints of Truancy From Teachers.

Because she failed to send her 13-year-old boy to school, Mrs. Lucy Malzac of Colbyville was arraigned in the municipal court this morning, on a warrant sworn out by Truant Officer Withrow.

The boy, whose name is Emanuel Malzac, has been kept out of school by his parents, according to the claim of Mr. Withrow, and when he was unable to persuade them to send the boy regularly to school, he swore out a warrant for their arrest.

The warrant was for both of the parents, but the mother was allowed to appear alone. She was convicted and fined $5 and costs, but Judge Windom remitted the fine on condition that she would spend the money in fitting the boy out with proper clothing and shoes, and promise to send him to school regularly for the rest of the school year.

This is the season of the year when the truant officer has the greatest trouble with delinquent pupils.

In the spring the principals and teachers always have an increased number of complaints to make to the truant officer. At the first suggestion of spring there are a dozen attractions to keep the boy out of school, and boys who are regular attendants all winter, break over the traces in the spring months and play truant.

In many instances they are encouraged to remain away by their parents, who are thus relieved of the responsibility of providing proper clothing for them. In such cases stringent measures sometimes have to be taken by the truant officer, although a warning is generally sufficient to cause them to obey the law.

The arrest this morning was the second that has been made for the offense. The truant officer was compelled to invoke the aid of the courts once last fall, after all his warnings and orders had been ignored.

BIG THEATRICAL TRUST FORMING

Fifty Million Dollar Syndicate to Control Show Business.

New York, May 1.—The most gigantic and most important combination in the theatrical world, involving a capitalization of $50,000,000 is virtually consummated.

Among the organizers of this coalition are Klaw & Erlanger, Morris Meyerfield, Martin Beck and, presumably, Stair & Havlin. This group of men control the majority of theaters in the United States, whether devoted to high class drama and musical plays, popular priced theatricals or vaudevilles.

A. L. Erlanger probably will be the master spirit and executive head of the corporation.

The objects of this combination are mutual protection, self-preservation and the general regulation of the theatrical business for the common good. According to the best available information the motives of the amalgamation are not primarily antagonistic. Conditions have arisen which make a regulation of the theatrical business absolutely necessary at this time.

"This is a matter," said Mr. Albee, Keith's general manager, "which managers have been discussing among themselves at intervals for years. It has simply assumed definite shape now. We do not intend to wage war on anybody, but we do intend to protect ourselves.

"We are not out to antagonize the actor. We merely find conditions confronting us which must be met and we believe we are able to meet them successfully."

FIVE STUDENTS TO BE SUSPENDED

From the University of Wisconsin for Vicious Hazing.

Madison, Wis., May 1.—As a result of hazing Joseph Pfiffner, a freshman from Stevens Point, at least five suspensions from the university are likely to result. President Van Hise will make an example of the leaders of a hazing in the university of Wisconsin.

On Saturday night Pfiffner went to the university armory to take part in a competitive drill. Fifty freshmen, headed by one known as "the Freshman King," gathered outside the drill room to pay Mr. Pfiffner their respects. Captain Bennett, a member of Pfiffner's fraternity, refused the freshmen admission, locked Pfiffner in the tower of the armory and telephoned for a policeman to escort him to his Gamma Delta house.

The freshmen, aggravated at this interference, attempted to persuade the officer to release their victim and on refusal to do so they threatened to apply force and it was only with the aid of his revolver and a determined "I'll shoot the first man who advances a step," that he succeeded in bringing Pfiffner to his "frat" house.

Pfiffner afterward voluntarily gave himself up and the freshmen painted his face with iodine, cut off a few locks of hair and exhibited him in the various fraternity and sorority houses, where they ordered him to sing. He refused, and with the refusal they clipped off another patch of hair.

A prominent senior, thinking the matter had been carried too far, made an effort to rescue the victim, but the freshmen hustled him away and averted an encounter with the leaders. Pfiffer was then taken to the gymnasium pier and thrown into the lake.

It is said that the hazing, which was the most severe that has been done in years, was the result of personal malice. It also is said that the next man to be introduced to the lake will be the "King" himself.

STREET LIGHTS AGAIN BURNING

Illumination of Potrero District of San Francisco Cheers People.

San Francisco, May 1.—For the first time since the earthquake and fire laid this city in ruins, street lights last night gleamed through the black mantle which has enveloped the city after nightfall. Everybody stayed indoors after dark, and nearly all San Francisco went to bed with the setting sun.

After the fire lights were not permitted. Last night the arc lights in the Potrero district were seen from all over the city, and did more to make people hopeful, restore confidence and goodfeeling than anything since the earthquake. Next to the resumption of street car service, the restoration of electric lighting is one of the most important indications that the city is rapidly returning to normal conditions.

Potrero district is in the southern part of the city, the lights there were operated by the electric lighting company's Potrero plant, which was practically uninjured by the earthquake, and was not in the fire zone. It is announced that there will be several hundred arc lights in operation through the unburned portions of the city tonight. Besides the three light routes, for which permission was given several days ago, it is intended to install lights along the principal roads where supplies are being hauled into the city. The company claims that it has enough power in the Potrero plant to illuminate the entire unburned sections. The question of restoring the electric lights will be taken up tomorrow or the next day, and lights will be turned on as fast as the necessary permits can be secured.

The street car service is rapidly being extended as fast as large gangs of men clear the streets of debris and replace the twisted and warped rails. The United Railroads operated cars last night until 10 o'clock. The cars in operation so far have been utterly inadequate to handle the heavy traffic, and owners of almost every kind of vehicle are having a lucrative business of hauling large numbers of people at the rate of 25 cents to and from the ferry.

Last night was the warmest and balmiest since the thousands of people have been compelled to camp in the open. In nearly all the parks and squares the homeless are now quite well provided with warm bedding and comfortably housed in tents. This problem has been pretty well solved by the arrival of more tents and blankets, but the food question is one that is causing the authorities much worry.

FRENCH NOBILITY TOUCHY.

Much Bitter Comment Caused by the English Ambassador's Mistake.

Paris, May 1.—Even an ambassador must not tamper with the rules of precedence of the French nobility, which, since there is no longer a French peerage, are based upon birth and not upon rank. Sir Francis Bertie, the British ambassador, innicently gave serious offense to the Faubourg St. Germain at a recent embassy dinner party. Among the guests were the Marquis de Ganay and the Comte d'Haussonville. Thinking of the etiquette of precedence used at home, Sir Francis put the marquis in a more honorable place than the comte, and thus committed an unpardonable social solecism. The ambassador's blunder was the subject of much bitter comment in the Faubourg. The heinousness of his offense will be at once seen when it is explained that the Marquis de Ganay, though ranking higher than the comte, is a person of yesterday, chiefly notable for his fine racing stable and his friendship with King Edward VII, while the Comte d'Haussonville is the representative of an extremely old and famous family of Lorraine, and is a member of the Academie Francaise.

TRICKS OF CRIMINALS

Houdini Exposes Various Methods Employed by Notorious Thieves.

Schemes of Those Too Lazy to Do Manual Labor.

Boston, Mass., May 1.—In the course of his long career as an innocent jail breaker, Houdini, the man who laughs at locksmiths, has met the leading police officials of the world and many of the noted crooks. Such of the latter as he has not had the opportunity of seeing personally he has heard all about from the former. The result is a thorough knowledge of the characteristics and methods of the criminal classes of the world. Some of the information which he has gleaned in this way Houdini has embodied in a volume which he calls "The Right Way to Do Wrong." This is by no means a text book for thieves, but an expose for the benefit of the public. "Knowledge is safety," says Houdini, and with this in mind he explains in twenty "shots" some of the clever tricks of those who are too lazy to work and too sharpwitted to have to beg.

In the initial chapter of the book the author explains that it does not pay, even from a monetary standpoint, to adopt thieving as a business. "Both burglars and confidence men," says he, "may make big coups occasionally, but their income is precarious. The burglar is at the mercy of the 'fence,' as the receiver of stolen goods is called, and realizes only a small part of the actual value of his peif. I suppose a burglar would be considered very successful if he made $3,000 a year actual profit. The 'fence' has much larger opportunities, and its veracity is well known. A detective friend, who was well acquainted with one who made $5,000 a year for several years, and who finally shot himself to escape arrest. The truth is that a life of dishonesty may pay at first, when you are not known to the police, but when an offender once falls into the hands of the ever watchful police, he begins to be a well-known customer. He then pays dearer and dearer each time he is brough up for trial. His brief spells of liberty are spent in committing some crime that once again brings him back to prison, so when you figure out the sentences he has to serve, why his gains are contemptible as compared to his awful penalties."

He has many interesting stories to tell of the ingenuity displayed by professional thieves. There seems to be no amount of trouble they will not go to in planning their raids. One English thief walked backwards a long distance in order that his tracks in the snow would not show which way he had been traveling. Another, when surrounded by the police, and unable to remove his booty, killed a sheep, removed the entrails and concealed the silver within the skin. It is through servants, says Houdini, that thieves secure much of their information about the house and the location of valuables. Often they are able to win their co-operation.

But, however much they may plan, they meet with many difficulties.

"In the first place the house must be entered, locks must be picked, burglar alarms must be circumvented, and every effort made to escape detection. Most people who carry a loaded revolver or have one in their bed chamber think they are protected. As a matter of fact, a burglar finds the least of his danger at the muzzle of a pistol. In the hands of a nervous and frightened citzen who wakes in the middle of the night to find his house being robbed, a revolver is not especially dangerous. Of course the burglar is likely to get a bullet, but the citizen is quite as apt to shoot himself or some member of his family as the burglar."

Nor do burglar alarms offer much protection. These are easily located and the wires cut. The pet dog is really apt to make more trouble for the burglar than a revolver, but even he is often chloroformed. The author gives some good advice to those who leave their houses for the summer.

"When going away for the holidays, it is a great mistake to shut up the house. This is simply to make public announcement that the place is unoccupied and may be entered with safety. The wiser plan is to make it look as much occupied as possible and give notice to the police that you are going away. The next-door neighbors, if you know them to be above suspicion, should also be notified. The best place to conceal your valuables is at your bankers."

The most effectual protection is often the simplest. A wedge under the door is much more efficacious than any intricate lock that can be cut out or forced. A couple of screws passed through a steel plate and so through the window sills will baffle a burglar, where patent fastenings will be easily removed. Chains make good fastening for doors, because they are apt to rattle when tampered with and are very difficult to cut out or force.

Thieves are a superstitious lot, and often will be more afraid of a black cat or freshly painted house than of the fiercest watchdog or a policeman. A stopped clock or a broken mirror are bad signs, while the cry of a baby in the neighborhood has often saved many a home. Pickpockets will not rob a cross-eyed or club-footed man. A blind man is immune, while, strangely enough, a blind woman is legitimate prey.

The smaller thieves are very ingenious in their methods. They mingle with the wealthy at church and come as wedding guests, departing, however, with sung sums of loot. The van thief hides a confederate in a push cart, and, plodding along behind an express wagon, gives his pal plenty of opportunity to reach behind the tarpalin back and seize the bundles. The station thief has an especially designed bag made, which has no bottom. He puts this down over an unwatched dress suit case, presses a button, which frees powerful springs which clasp the concealed grip, and calmly walks off. It is almost impossible to detect him, as he is generally well dressed and looks like an ordinary traveller.

Diamond merchants have, to keep a sharp watch out for well dressed women. A favorite trick of a famous English diamond thief was to enter a store and ask to look at the stones. While examining them another woman would enter and become interested. Suddenly a diamond would be missing. The women themselves would insist upon a search. Nothing could be found and the two would go out indignantly. What had become of the stone? One of the clever thieves had hidden it in a wad of chewing gum and pasted it below the counter. A third member of the gang would walk in at his leisure and secure the prize.

Then there is the aristocratic thief. He generally has brains enough to make of him a successful business man had he cared for that sort of a life. But he doesn't. He prefers the excitement of dishonesty. As a rule he operates with checks and makes his plays on his knowledge of banking rules.

A swindle which never got into the newspapers was recently played upon a Chicago bank, says Houdini. A depositor who had taken the precaution to have an account of several years' standing, appeared at the bank president's office with a draft on London for $30,000. He informed the president that he desired to deposit this London draft and at the same time to check against it, presenting his check for $30,000 for the bank president's O. K. The latter put his initials on it and thought no more of the transaction. The depositor then went to the bank and deposited his London draft, and on the following day presented his check for $30,000, which was paid without question, the teller knowing of the recent deposit of the draft. Later in the day he again appeared at the window and presented another check for $30,000, the one which had been signed by the bank president. Of course, this was paid without question, and now they are looking for the shrewd swindler.

In another "shot" Houdini mentions many of the tricks of pickpockets, including the false arm game, and the methods of the mob gang who jostle their victim and operate while he is a bit dazed. But as a trick for petty thievery, an English gang have devised one that is unusual. Two men wearing old-fashioned, stove-pipe hats enter the store of some small tradesman, apparently engaged in an argument. They explain it to the storekeeper.

"My friend here swears his hat will hold four quarts of molasses, while I have bet him that it will hold less than three. Now we are willing to pay for the molasses, if you will measure it out into the hat. It is worth the hat to prove him wrong."

The tradesman, anxious to see the fun, agrees, and brings back the hat full to the brim with the sticky substance. As he hands it to one of the men, the latter claps it down over the tradesman's head. While he is struggling, blind and gagged, they have plenty of time to rob the till and make good their escape.

One of the most interesting tales told by the author, in illustration of the methods of professional beggars, concerns a man who all unconsciously became a member of the gang. He was a German organist and came from Greenberg to St. Petersburg. Shortly after arriving, he went into the store of a German tailor and purchased a traveling cap to wear about the city. That night when he came home, he discovered two purses in his pocket containing sums of money. He was surprised and could in no way account for how he came by them. The next day, after a tour of the city, he discovered three more well-filled purses and began to think he was being befriended by some unknown fairy godfather. On the third day this was repeated, but by them he had become worried and willing to dispense with his unknown benefactor. He consulted the police and they could offer no explanation, but promised to follow him on his rounds the next day and see what they could find out.

The only noticeable thing was that in the course of the morning several men lounged up to the stranger and after brushing him by hurried away. In each case they left a purse.

An idea dawned upon the detective, and he went with the stranger to the store where he had bought the cap. The storekeeper explained that a few months before an Englishman had brought to him a piece of cloth of peculiar design and requested him to make up fifteen caps of the same pattern. This explained the mystery. The men who wore these caps were captains of gangs of beggars. The German, having a bit of cloth left over, made up a sixteenth cap, and this had been purchased by the innocent German organist. As a result of this accidental discovery a number of men were arrested and sentenced to imprisonment.

Bunco steering and fake doctors each received a chapter or "shot." Boston is familiar with both classes and remembers with especial vividness the career of the famous Dr. Truth, who, until stopped, made thousands of dollars out of the credulous.

During his long residence in England, Houdini had the opportunity to study the methods of those who manufactured fake art treasures, too often for the benefit of rich Americans.

"I know of one case," says he, "in Londen, where a dealer in fake antiques sought out an impoverished nobleman whose only property besides his title was an ancient manor house which was heavily mortgaged. The dealer bought this, and sent to it many vanloads of paintings, black oak furniture, armor and moth-eaten tapestry. In a few weeks he announced a sale of the art treasures of this ancient house of an ancient race. The sale actually lasted several weeks, as though the very cellars had been packed with art treasures."

"On the continent, to my certain knowledge, the case is even worse. One man who began life as a sculptor's assistant, began the manufacture of imitations of ancient statues and antiques, and is now making about $7,500 a year and employing several assistants. His masterpieces are certain Greek heads, attributed to Phidias, but he also makes eighteenth century and empire furniture. He himself says:

"You can take it for a fact that an expert can no longer tell the difference between a real piece of old furniture and a forgery. At any rate, not until he takes it to pieces. Few dare incur this responsibility for fear of injuring the piece, should it prove real. Greek and Roman jewels are made in Germany. Venice specializes in counterfeiting sixteenth century enamels. Abbeville and Amiens make flint arrow tops and hatchets for museums of geology, while old pewters are manufactured at Rodens."

Further on, he explains the wiles of the fair criminal and many of the devices used by gamblers for getting their money by unfair means. Every professional gambler has at the start one hand on the stack, for he has innumerable tricks which give him all the advantage of selecting his own cards. They are clever and can be successfully worked by experts for years without detection.

In explaining some of the methods of counterfeiters, he reveals the method by which prisoners often communicate with the outside world. In the upper right hand corner of an envelope, in miscroscopic writing, they give their message and then cover it with a postage stamp. Stamps are often washed and used over again. The face of the stamp is covered with a thing layer of glue so that the cancelling machine does not affect the stamp itself. But it is dangerous to fool with the federal government, and the stakes are too small in proportion to the risk to make this a popular form of crime.

Houdini concludes his volume with a chapter on humbugs and a brief biographical sketch of himself. Also with the brief and significant bit of advice to those who purport doing wrong. "Don't." Take all in all, the expose ought to be rather of benefit than harm to the public. While the methods of criminals are divulged, it is shown conclusively that the "profession" does not pay, and that success even among the best is brief. Modern police methods are making it more and more difficult every year for a man to be dishonest and prosperous. The palmy day of the criminal is passing.

Piles Cured Quickly at Home

Why Suffer Agony Any Longer When You Can Get a Quick, Sure Cure for Your Piles by Simply Sending Your Name and Address?

Trial Package Is Sent Absolutely Free, in Plain Wrappers to Everyone Who Writes.

Surgeons themselves consider a permanent cure of piles by a surgical operation as very doubtful, and resort to it only when the patient has become desperate from long continued pain and agony. But the operation itself is every bit as excruciating and nerve-racking as the disease. Besides, it is humiliating and expensive, and rarely a success.

Pyramid Pile Cure gives you instant relief. It immediately heals all sores and ulcers, reduces congestion and inflammation, and takes away all pain, itching and irritation. Just a little of the treatment is usually sufficient to give a permanent cure.

Pyramid Pile Cure is prepared in the form of suppositories so that they can be applied directly to the parts without inconvenience, or interrupting your work in any way.

We are sending a trial treatment free of charge, to every one who sends name and address. We do this to prove what we say about this wonderful remedy is true.

After you have tried the sample treatment, and you are satisfied, you can get a full regular-sized treatment of Pyramid Pile Cure at your druggist's for 50 cents. If he hasn't it, send us the money and we will send you the treatment at once, by mail, in plain sealed package.

BITTER AGAINST CHURCHILL

London, May 1.—To hound Winston Churchill out of office is the object of the achievement of which the Tory opposition in the house of commons is devoting all its energies. Under the dictation of Joseph Chamberlain, the belligerent members of the opposition have devised a plan of operation which has for its purpose the getting of Winston Churchill out of the way.

This young statesman has excited a wrath even greater than his father did. The fury aroused by lecturing gray bearded politicians is a subtle compliment to his ability, and the opposition generally recognizes him as the one dangerous man in the Liberal party who, for the safety of the Tory party's future, must be politically done to death at all hazards.

Mr. Chamberlain, in his Machiavelian way, hopes to put through an extensive campaign which he has planned. He hopes to induce Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman, through annoying tactics, to retire and take a peerage. This would leave the leadership of the house to the "mild brigade," composed of Mr. Asquith, Mr. Haldeam and Sir Edward Grey. As soon as this is accomplished the order will be given to introduce as much dissension as possible between them and the advanced wing of the government side of the house. The next few weeks of parliament will be of intense interest and show whether the opposition tactics have any chance to prevail.

It is Dangerous to Neglect a Cold.

How often do we hear it remarked: "It's only a cold," and a few days later learn that the man is on his back with pneumonia. This is of such common occurrence that a cold, however slight, should not be disregarded. Chamberlain's Cough Remedy counteracts any tendency of a cold to result in pneumonia, and has gained its great popularity and extensive sale by its prompt cures of this most common ailment. It always cures and is pleasant to take. For sale by all leading druggists.

THIS IS BEAUTIFUL MAY.

The beautiful month of May is here—a gentle northeaster wafts across the waves of Lake Superior—they put on their white caps and run dancing to the sandy shores of Park Point, and the skies weep for joy and sprinkle the thirsty streets and alleys of Duluth and the men and women who venture out to greet the first fine day of beautiful May.

Wouldn't this make you sneeze?

Not if you let these May breezes blow you inside the Columbia store and equip yourself with a good Cravenette Coat for say $15 or $18 (less or more) and with a stout pair of Columbia $3.50 shoes. A good pair of our $3 pants will save the trousers of your new suit.

If that new suit is not yet bought, here is the best place on earth to pick it out. $10 to $27.50.

HARTFORD FIRE INSURANCE COMPANY OF HARTFORD, CONN.

While exact figures have not yet been received, information at hand warrants the statement that the net losses of the Hartford Fire Insurance Company at San Francisco from all sources will not be in excess of $5,750,000 and will be well within the policy holders' surplus. At a meeting of the Board of Directors held on the 27th inst., it was voted to issue 7,500 additional shares of stock, par value $100, to be put out at $500 per share. This action adds $3,750,000 to the present assets of $18,061,926.87. Of this increase $750,000 has been added to the capital and $3,000,000 to the surplus, thereby increasing the capital stock from $1,250,000 to $2,000,000, and the net surplus over and above capital stock to over $8,000,000. We are encouraged to believe that the surplus to policy holders will approximate $5,000,000, after all San Francisco losses are paid. With our surplus strengthened in the manner stated, the prestige of the Hartford and its popularity with the insuring public will be as great as, if not greater than ever before, and it will be able to continue to occupy a place in the first rank of American fire insurance companies and to furnish its agents facilities and accommodations not surpassed by those of any other institution.

IMPORTANT INDUSTRIES

In Lake Superior Region Protest Against Free Alcohol Bill.

Menace to Primary Industries of Hardwood Timber States.

Marquette, Mich., May 1.—(Special to The Herald.)—That if enacted into law the bill removing the revenue tax from dematurized grain, or vegetable alcohol will deal a severe blow to important industries in the Lake Superior region, is the contention of large interests operating in the hardwood districts of Michigan, Wisconsin and Minnesota. The effect upon the production of wood alcohol and the kindred product, acetate of lime, would be serious, but no more so than in the case of the allied products of charcoal, pig iron and hardwood timber. Indeed, it is declared, the bill is a menace to the primary industries of the hardwood states.

The managers of the various chemical plants of the north country have after careful investigation become convinced that the proposed exemption of dematurized alcohol from the internal revenue tax would deprive them of a market for the larger portion of their wood alcohol output, drive many of their plants out of business, and render the separate production of acetate of lime unprofitable. This, in turn, it is asserted, would materially enhance the cost of producing charcoal and pig iron. The cost of charcoal, without the simultaneous production of wood alcohol and acetate of lime, would be nearly doubled, and the cost of charcoal pig iron increased $1.50 to $2 a ton. The improved quality and extended uses of coke iron have brought it into such close competition with charcoal that the increased cost of the latter which would be brought about as a result of the propesd legislation would undoubtedly greatly curtail its production and eliminate a large portion of it from the market.

In short, it is contended, the direct effect of the bill would be to transform the production of charcoal pig iron from a profitable into an unprofitable industry and menace its very existence.

The considerable charcoal iron, charcoal and by-product industries of the North country have grown up together, and so intimate is their relationship with one another that no one of them can be affected without consequences, injurious or beneficial as the case may be, to the others. Combined, they represent in Upper Michigan alone, the means of livelihood of thousands of wage-earners and the investment of millions of capital. Obviously, it is declared, the proposed law would take great values out of the forests of all hardwood states. Much of the standing hardwood timber is refuse and inferior wood, and without some practical means of utilizing it in connection with the manufacture of hardwood lumber, the legitimate profits of the latter industry would be seriously curtailed, if it were able to be continued under the new conditions. The availability of the charcoal plants and the furnaces, as a market for hardwood refuse and hardwood timber not suitable for manufacture, has greatly enhanced the value of hardwood stumpage within the territory where the joint manufacture of hardwood lumber and iron has been carried on, and, moreover, in lumbering it has permitted a clean sweep to be made of the ground, with the important result that vast acres are cleared for the settler, and the cultivation of the soil years earlier than would otherwise be the case, with the further result of an immediate enhancement, in many cases, of the value of the soil.

The proportion of refuse timber which under present conditions has a marketable value is of considerable size, running from ten to twenty cords to the acre. The cost of cutting, hauling and transporting this waste wood will average, including 10 cents for stumpage, $2.50 a cord, or from $25 to $50 for the product of one acre. All of this additional value, except the 10-cent stumpage, represents employment, or wages, to men and teams and railroads. When it is considered that this hardwood timber covers many hundreds of thousands of acres, its value to labor and industry is realized. It employs thousands of men, supports communities all over the timber-producing states and facilitates the development of agricultural interests and the permanent growth of towns and villages.

Thus, it is argued, the passage of the free alcohol bill would make unprofitable the utilization of this waste wood by destroying the wood alcohol industry, and by wiping out a large portion of the value of the inferior timber would increase the cost of hardwood and diminish the value of the timbered land. This is the reason why the pending legislation is viewed with alarm by timber owners, farmers, wage-earners and railroads interested in hardwood districts. It jeopardizes their business and property values, they say, and offers nothing definite or tangible, but only a chance for an experiment to see whether denaturized vegetable alcohol can be made a product that can compete with gasoline.

CENTER OF THE EARTHQUAKE

Evidently at Bolinas Bay Where New Island Has Formed.

San Francisco, May 1.—Prof. E. Knowlton has just returned from a thirty-mile walk to Bolinas bay, where, he says, there is evidence that the recent earthquake had its center. Few, if any, of the houses in that vicinity escaped damage, but no fatalities occurred. There is now an island in Bolinas bay, where were formerly muddy shoals, and on either side of the island the water is ten feet deep.

The Tenth regiment of Pennsylvania volunteers, which was camped in this city at the time of the Spanish war, has sent a donation of $10,000 to the relief committee. In a note, the officers told how they were treated by the people of San Francisco during their sojourn here, and said that as a token of their appreciation they made up this handsome purse to help out the big-hearted people of this city.

San Francisco is to build a new city hall at once, a temporary structure, but one which will do away with the necessity of paying the high rent rates which the owners of property, available for municipal use, are inclined to charge. A site which is looked upon favorably is the Lincoln school property, on the corner of Market and Fifth streets. It is proposed to erect the temporary building of corrugated iron or steel frame, and to have in it all the city offices, as it will be practically fireproof.

BEATING THE LAW.

Los Angeles Times: The lates James E. Martin, brother of Bradley Martin, was a man of old-fashioned integrity, and the illegal practices of many noted financiers and corporations angered and shocked him.

In a discussion of a certain much-investigated company, Mr. Martin said one day:

"This concern seems always to have found it easy to break the law. It has been as ready and resourceful as a tenant I once had.

"My tenant was an enthusiastic pigeon flyer. One day he took a pigeon in a bag to the Grant monument, intending to time its flight home. But when he took the bird out of the bag, a policeman came up and said:

"'What are you doing there?'

"'Getting ready to fly this pigeon,' said my tenant.

"'You can't fly no pigeons here,' said the policeman.

"'Why not?' the tenant asked.

"'It's against the law—that's why not,' said the policeman. 'If you try it on I shall be obliged to lock you up.'

"My tenant placed the pigeon on the ground, stroked it, and said to it gravely:

"'I can't toss you up here, for it's against the law, so you must walk home. Do you hear? You must walk home.'"

HORRORS OF MOVING DAY

Increased Many Fold by the Rain and Cold Weather.

Van Companies Have All Business They Can Attend To.

Just to make the list of troubles complete, moving day dawned with a typical northeaster blowing, and today the weary flat hunters are wrapped in a mist of hopeless despondency.

Dull, grey skies, a cold, raw wind and occasional drenching showers, form a moving day combination that would sour the most cheerful optimist, and it is hardly safe to treat the matter lightly. It is in fact a tragedy of the deepest hue, and even those who sit by their comfortabel firesides this evening, figuring how to meet the raise in rents, could scarcely have the cruelty to rejoice in the sufferings of those who were compelled to face the horrors of May 1, this morning.

And there is no escaping it. The moving combination seems to be an endless one, and for one family to postpone its departure would involve innumerable complications.

When another family is waiting to move in, there is nothing to do but go on scheduled time, and in spite of the rain and the cold winds, the army of movers began its cheerless march almost before day broke this morning.

This is the busy day for the van and storage companies. Their teams began the day's work early this morning, and they will be busy until long after nightfall. Every available conveyance has been pressed into service to aid in the work.

"About 4,000, more or less," was the laconic answer of J. W. Sheridan of the Duluth Van & Storage company, when asked this afternoon if he were moving anybody today.

"This rain desn't stop them. They have got to get moved today, rain or no rain."

Similar reports came from the other van companies, and in spite of the terrors of the northeaster, the annual pilgrimage of the house hunting nomads is in full swing.

SHIPMENTS OF ORE BIG

Total Amount for April Larger Than for April, 1905.

Figures of Minnesota Iron Roads Make an Excellent Showing.

Despite the fact that the season opened a trifle earlier in 1905, the ore shipments for the month of April were considerably more than for the corresponding month last year.

The total ore shipments for April from the docks of the three roads which tap the Minnesota iron ranges were 984,351 tons, as compared with 875,195 tons for April, 1905.

The total shipments for the month of April from the Duluth & Iron Range docks at Two Harbors were 390,708 tons and for the same month last year, 321,353 tons. This year, shipments began at the docks April 13, while the first ore was shipped on April 11 in 1905. The first ore of the season arrived from the mines April 3 and the total receipts for the month were 411,982 tons. Despite the fact that shipments began a trifle earlier last April, this year's April total is larger by more than 100,000 tons.

The first shipments this year from the Duluth, Missabe & Northern docks at West Duluth were made April 14 and the total shipments for the month, ending yesterday, were 383,643 tons, as compared with 263,842 tons for the corresponding month in 1905. Last year, shipments began at the Missabe docks on April 11. The month's record shows that more ore was shipped from the Missabe docks this April than last, although shipments began a few days earlier in 1905.

The total shipments for the month just passed at the Great Northern docks, Allouez, were 210,000 tons, while the total shipments for the same month last year were 290,000 tons. Shipments began this year on the 20th, which was considerably later than the first last season.

NO AMERICANS HURT IN FRENCH COLLISION.

Paris, May 1.—The line from Cherbourg to Paris is still blocked at Andressy, where the trans-Atlantic special bearing the passengers from the Kaiser Wilhelm II collided with a freight train from Nantes last night. All the passengers of the train arrived here safely today. The three men killed and those who were seriously injured, belonged to the personnel of the trains. The American passengers were only shaken.

Mrs. George V. L. Meyer, wife of the American ambassador to Russia, and her daughters, who were among the pasengers on the train on her arrival here, first went to the Hotel Ritz and later removed to a private residence. They suffered only from the excitement of the incident. Mrs. Ogden Mills and her daughters Beatrice and Gladys, who also were in the wreck, are indisposed as a result of the excitement, but otherwise are all right.

DOWNFALL OF WITTE

Now Seems Practically Certain at the Russian Court.

Enemies Seem to Have the Upper Hand at Present.

St. Petersburg, May 1.—Yesterday the emperor may have decided to accept Premier Witte's resignation, but until the fact is published in the Official Messenger, nothing is absolutely certain. You can say, however, that Count Witte desires to go. He is worn out with the struggle. Nevertheless, the situation at Tsarskoe Selo changes with expected rapidity. A few hours may see the official promulgation of Count Witte's retirement or on the contrary the dismissal of Interior Minister Durnovo.

The above statement was made to the Associated Press today. The moment is certainly very critical. For the present M. Witte's enemies at court certainly have the upper hand and on the eve of the battle in parliament the emperor seems to be about to commit the fatuous blunder of changing his commander. Even the Reich, organ of the Constitutional Democrats, while it regards Count Witte as being an untrustworthy intermediary between the crown and the people, declares that the government has no one to take his place and that his downfall means the disappearance of the last chance of the government and people to find a common ground. In effect it regards the decision to throw Count Witte overboard as a direct challenge to the people. From this standpoint the Reich, in behalf of its party, welcomes the coming fray, saying that so long as Count Witte remained his skilful ability to shift progress with issues, could throw confusion into the ranks of the opposition. But without him, the decks are cleared and the tactics of the opposition are plain.

THE TROUBLES OF JACK AND JILL

By Cosmo Hamilton.

(Copyright, 1906, by Joseph B. Bowles).

In the middle of the room lay a suitcase, a hat-box and two overcoats.

Harry laughed. "Quick work, eh, Todd?" he said to the servant.

A sound of wheels on the frost-bitten road made both men cock their ears.

"A station cab! Who the dickens is this, Todd?"

"Dunno, I'm sure, sir."

Harry went to the window. It's my brother, Todd, this is magnificent. Dash down with as much baggage as you can carry, tell Albert to take the cart back to the stable, load it there, and I'll slip out the back way."

Todd caught up a bag in each hand and staggered to the door.

"Mrs. Melville and Miss Melville are coming to tea at 5 o'clock. That's why I'm catching the 4:15. Tell my brother just exactly how things stand in that direction, and leave it to him."

Harry gathered up the hat-box and the overcoats and bolted.

The other door opened violently. Harry Follitt's brother entered at a run.

"Where's my brother, Todd?"

"Good afternoon, sir. Your brother has gone up to town, sir. Dear me, it's quite extraordinary!"

"Why?" asked Jack, with a touch of curiosity. "What's he up to now?"

"I beg pardon, sir; he frequently does. I was referring to the wonderful likeness, sir."

"Oh, that," said Jack. "Yes, I suppose it is. It doesn't amuse me being a twin. It makes me feel so unoriginal."

Jack threw his gloves on the table with a touch of excitement. "I hadn't time to send a wire to say I was coming. I heard by accident this morning that some great friends of mine had taken a house down here. I had lost sight of them, and the people at their hotel hadn't a notion where they'd gone."

"May I ask the name of your friends, sir?"

"Melville. Does my brother know them, do you think?"

Todd was surprised into a gurgle of astonishment and amusement.

"I beg your pardon, sir," he said; but as a matter or fact—"

"Well?"

"Well, sir, as a matter of fact, sir, it's because your friends are coming to tea, sir, that Mr. Follitt has urgent business in town, sir."

Jack stared at his brother's usually discreet man in amazement. "What do you mean, exactly?" he asked, sternly.

Todd crossed the room, opened a drawer in a desk that stood in a corner, and silently handed a photograph to his master's brother.

Jack took it. "Why, it's Jill!" he cried "'Jill Melville.' 'To Jack, with love from Jill.' 'To Jack.' This photograph was never given to me!"

"No, sir; it was a present to your brother, sir."

"But he's not Jack!"

"He has been, sir, for a time."

There was silence for at least a minute. A look of bewilderment was chased over Jack's good-looking face by one of great and not unnatural annoyance.

"Perhaps you'll be good enough to explain," he said.

"Yes, sir. Mr. Follitt asked me to tell you how things stood, sir. A month ago the manor house was taken by a Mrs. Melville, a lady with one daughter, sir, and a mole on her left cheek, sir. Two or three days afterwards, sir, Mr. Follitt was driving through the village, and was pulled up by two ladies, sir, who were delighted to see him, and called him Jack, sir. You know the sporting instincts of your brother, sir, and he sprang down, sir, and, taking advantage of what I may call an unfortunate drawback, he took on the friendship where you had left it.

"The brute!" cried Jack. "And this photograph is one of the results! What are the others? Has he had the cheek to propose to Miss Melville? Go on, tell the truth. I'll make him pay for this!"

Todd cleared his throat. "It is true, sir," he said, "that Mr. Follitt was somewhat taken with the young lady, sir, at first, but of course he had no idea of carrying his little joke too far, sir, especially as Mrs. Melville, sir, seemed very anxious to bring things to a crisis, if I may call it so, sir."

"You have been in this, too," cried Jack. "How far did my brother carry what you have the impertinence to call his little joke?"

"Well, sir, I should like you to understand, sir, that we have gone no further than squeezing hands, sir."

"Oh, really! And you say Mrs. Melville is coming to tea today?"

"Yes, sir— That's their ring, sir."

Todd opened the door softly.

With an effort born of despair, Jack adopted a slightly more breezy manner than the one that was his. Mrs. Melville and Miss Melville entered.

Tea was brought. Mrs. Melville instantly appointed herself skipper.

"I'm quite sure you're not well," said Jill finally, with delicious sympathy. "I do wish you would let us send in the doctor on our way home."

Jack dropped his spoon and trod on the cat. "No," he said; "I'm only in the wildest spirits, that's all."

"How delightful!" said Mrs. Melville. "And now I must run into the kitchen for a moment or two, if you will allow me. I want to ask your cook how she makes these dear little cakes. Do you mind?"

Before either Jack or Jill could say a word they were alone. The maneuver was masterly, though obvious. Jill looked almost as uncomfortable as Jack. Jack could see exactly how these things seemed to Jill. Harry would not have been alone with her for two minutes without squeezing her hand. Jack longed to do so, too.

"Jill," he said, with the tremor in his voice that fills a woman with pleasurable anticipation, "Jill."

"Yes, Jack?"

"Jill, ever since I first saw you I've been trying to tell you something. I've got no right to say it—you see I'm such an average kind of an idiot,and you're so—so wonderful."

Neither of them heard the sound of wheels.

"Well, what is it that you have wanted to say?"

"That I love you appallingly, and that I want you to be my—"

Todd tapped him on the shoulder. His ordinarily expressionless face was puckered up with excitement.

"I beg your pardon, sir," he said. "Your brother has missed his train, sir."

"What!!"

Todd repeated the words with deliberation.

"He is in the hall at this moment, sir," he added.

Without waiting to finish his sentence, Jack bolted out of the room. Todd followed him, just as Harry entered from the rear.

Jill turned.

"I thought you had gone," said Harry, lamely.

"Gone?" cried Jill. "Oh, my dear."

With an abandon that was girlish, she slipped into his arms.

"I'm sure this is very kind of you," said Harry, "but I don't think I—"

"Well?" asked Jill, slipping her arms round his neck with a little laugh.

"I've got a sort of notion that I'm not the right man."

He took her hands away, and hurried to the door of his bedroom.

"Will you excuse me?" he said, and entering the room turned the key violently in the lock.

Todd entered and began gathering up the tea-things.

"Where is Mrs. Melville?" said Jill, trembling with indignation.

"Mrs. Melville, miss? I think she is in the kitchen, miss, making notes as to the number of eggs used—"

Jill turned on her heel and left the room.

Shaking with suppressed laughter, Todd knocked at his master's bedroom door.

"Who's there?"

"Todd, sir."

"Go away!"

"If I might speak to you for one moment, sir—"

"Go away, I tell you. I'm going to bed."

"Where's Miss Melville? Where's my brother?" cried Jack, rushing in.

"Miss Melville has retired to the kitchen, sir, and Mr. Follitt to bed, sir."

The door opened and Jill sailed in again.

"Jill," said Jack.

Taking no notice of the appealing whisper, Jill addressed herself to Todd.

"Would you be so good as to tell me where the cook can have taken my mother?"

Todd slipped away.

Jack caught her arm as she was following. "Jill, darling."

"I'm sure this is very kind of you," she said coldly. "But I don't think I—"

"What?"

"I've got a sort of notion that I'm not the right girl."

Then Jack understood. Jill had continued the conversation with Harry where he, Jack, had left it.

"Jill," he cried, "don't talk like that. Can't you understand what all this means to me? If you, being me, suddenly discovered that I, being you, loved you, being me, enough to tell you, being you—"

And then Jill laughed.

Without any further ado, Jack caught her in his arms and stopped the laughter in the usual pleasant way.

Everything was satisfactorily explained later on, but Harry grew a mustache before acting as best man at Jack's wedding.

CANADIAN WINS MARATHAN RACE

Greatest Event in Games is Captured by William Sherring.

Athens, May 1.—The Americans already have won the greatest number of events in the Olympic games. The Greeks come next, with the Swedes probably third and the Englishmen fourth. The superiority of the individual American competitors is acknowledged by all, but the defeated athletes are endeavoring to find some solace in the fact that the Americans had many strings to their bow and held a superiority in numbers in nearly all events. The official list of the results will be published tomorrow.

Various finals are being decided in the stadium this morning preparatory to the Marathon race, the great event of the games. There will be forty-eight competitors in this twenty-six mile run, starting from Marathon at 3 in the afternoon and finishing at the stadium. William G. Frank, Irish-American A. C., New York; J. J. Fowler, Cambridgeport gymnasium A. A., Cambridgeport, Mass.; Michael Spring, Pastime A. C., New York, and Joseph Forshaw, Missouri A. C., St. Louis, Mo., are the American representatives.

Canada is represented by Sherring and England by J. N. McCormack and J. J. Daly. The competitors were driven to Marathon last night and slept there.

The running high jump was concluded today. C. Leahy, England, was first, with one metre 72½ centimetres. Goenchy Hungary, was second, 1 metre 75 centimertes.

H. W. Kerrigan, Mutonomah amateur A. C., Portland, Or., and Diakidcs, Greece, tied for third place, with 1 metre 72½ centimetres.

WEST END

KILLED IN ACCIDENT

The body of John J. Dilger, formerly of the West end, went through here yesterday on the way to Ironwood, Mich., for burial. Mr. Dilger was recently killed in a railroad accident in Seattle and leaves a wife and two children.

He resided in the West end of Duluth for a number of years and was employed in the Northern Pacific yards here during a great part of the time he lived here. He was well known among railroad men at the Head of the Lakes in general and among all classes at the West end.

He got the Western fever last fall and just last Christmas moved to Seattle, believing it to be the land of golden promise. The golden opportunity came, but not in the form he looked for, and yesterday his remains were taken to his old home for interment. Mr. Dilger was about 35 years of age.

PAVING DELAYED.

Rain Checks the Good Progress Being Made With Macadam.

The bad weather of today is the first break in Contractor Hugh Steele's plans for paving West Superior street. Last night when the work ceased for the day the work of paving was almost complete as far east as Nineteenth avenue and the roadbed is showing up good. Almost to Nineteenth avenue the tar macadam is laid and all that is lacking is the top layer of fine stone.

Nine blocks of tar macadam still remain to be laid, and also two blocks of Telford macadam, which will be put in between Thirteenth and Fifteenth avenue west.

The merchants of the West end are very much pleased over the rapid work being done by Mr. Steele and his crew and regret very much that his work has been interrupted by the rain today. However, he has everything ready so that just as soon as the rain will have ceased, the men will be at work again.

A. E. ANDERSON LEAVES.

Organist of Swedish Mission Church is Now Henry Oberg.

The Swedish Mission church of Twenty-first avenue west and Second street, changes organists today. A. E. Anderson, who has been organist and choirmaster there for three years, lacking one month, will leave at 5:30 this afternoon for Chicago, where he will take charge of the choir of the Lakeview Swedish Mission church, one of the most important charges of that denomination in the United States.

The new organist at the West end church is Henry E. Oberg of Minneapolis. Mr. Oberg is said to be an organst and pianist of more than ordinary ability, and his performances so far seem to have corroborated his reputation. He is now in charge here, and will soon be established permanently in some place of residence.

Mr. Anderson, who is leaving today, is an organist and choirmaster of such excellent reputation that the Chicago congregation made it very much of an object for him to accept the call there. He will be accompanied to Chicago by Rev. August Pohl, pastor of the church to which Mr. Anderson is going. His departure is widely regretted.

West End Shortrails.

The concert given last Thursday night at the Swedish Mission church, at the West end, was repeated in the Swedish Mission church in Superior last evening.

Dr. Braden was in Cloquet yesterday.

The choir of Bethany Lutheran church will give a concert at the church on the evening of the 16th. Rev. Theodore Ekblad of Rock Island, Ill., will probably be the speaker of the evening. The paving of one side of Michigan street for three blocks is progressing and will be finished in a day or two.

Your prescriptions are compounded, true to your doctor's formula at the Lion Drug store.

The steel work of the building being erected at Fifteenth avenue west and Superior street, to serve as a distributing station for the power company, is about all up, and the work of erecting the concrete walls is under way.

If you are in need of medicine you need the best, go to the Lion Drug store.

Sarah Bernhardt in a tent is a success at getting the money, but from the standpoint of art and the satisfaction of the patrons, yesterday's matinee performance of "Camille" in Duluth, given in a tent at London road and Twelfth avenue east, was very near a failure.

To begin with, the management of the affair was execrable. When it was decided to bring the tent to Duluth, there came with a garrulous gentleman named Ben Rosenthal, a man of considerable circus experience who has broken into independent theatrical circles, as manager of the tent. During his visit in Duluth he spent much time informing people as to how the trust would be wiped off the map in Duluth in ninety days, and finally broke into print with his story. If his management of the tent is an indication of the treatment the independents would accord their patrons, the public would choose the trust as the lesser of two evils.

Three classes of tickets were sold, $3, $2 and $1 tickets, and the buyers were shown a diagram of rows lettered and seats numbered. When the ushers went into the tent in the afternoon they found not a section, row nor seat numbered. They waited some time to be given a clue to what they were to do and finally were compelled to seat them as best they could. It was about half as hour before the opening before they saw a chart and then it was too late to do anything and would have been next to impossible with no lettering or numbering. Those who had paid $3 found themselves next to those who had paid $1 and in some cases nothing at all, and very naturally they felt that they had been swindled. This feeling was not without reason, for every condition indicated that the management expected to give them just what it did.

To expect anything like a finished performance under conditions such as those that prevailed yesterday would be an impossibility. The stage was necessarily a rough and temporary affair, and the scenery of a battered and dingy appearance, lending to the play none of that elegance which is a part of "Camille." And imagine men and women appearing in evening dress on a stage where the cold blasts of a northeaster struck them as it came fresh from Lake Superior! What could they do but rub their hands and shrug their shoulders and try to draw their clothes tighter about them and shiver and look half frozen and wish they were back in sunny France?

Mme. Bernhardt is a most remarkable woman. Time and the strenuous labor of an active and noteworthy career have hardly begun to show their effect upon her matchless genius and brilliance, and she plays Camillo with the enthusiasm and abandon of the young woman of 23, but looking the part is absolutely essential to an effective characterization, and even those most enthusiastic in their admiration of the divine Sarah will hardly contend that the bloom of youth still rests on her face. On a stage, with all of the accessories and lighting effects that so effectually conceal where it is desired, she might have preserved about herself the glamour of youth, but on a stage in the open air, with the broad sunlight streaming down upon her face, the illusion of youth could not be preserved, and one could see only the paint and powder applied to an old woman's face in the effort to give it the touch of youth.

And yet there were moments when her wonderful force made one forget all and see only the suffering, quivering Camille. The first of these instances came in the scene with Duval, the parent, when she consents to renounce his son. Again was the same great moving power found in the scene in the gambling apartment, when she begs Armand to leave, but of all the scenes of the play the one that probably lives most in the memory of everyone is the moment when Armand returns, in the final act. All the passionate longing of a man of intense power to love, and denied the love that was life to her, found full expression in the transport of joy that Mme. Bernhardt portrayed so perfectly as she greeted Armand.

Of course Mme. Bernhardt has an excellent company. One of the most striking features of the work of these French actors is their splendid enunciation. Rapid talkers though they are, every syllable is clear and distinct, and their American brothers in art might well take example from them.

MURRAY AND MACK.

Patrons Generally Satisfied, Getting What They Looked for.

Murray and Mack in "Around the Town," which is none other than the familiar farce comedy, "Finnegan's Ball," which stood the Celtic comedians in good stead for many years, was the attraction at the Lyceum theater last evening. The audience was quite large and delighted with the entertainment. It howled with approbation at most everything.

What mattered if some of the chorus girls were the same who formed a background for the comedy ten years ago? They can dance better now than they could then and time has apparently dealt leniently with some of them.

Murray and Mack have not changed much either. Murray still wears red mutton-chop whiskers and Mack the kind known as "Galways" and of a light pink shade. Both have considerable ability in the fun making line, even if some of their antics are broad enough to penetrate a mule. One thing, there is nothing intricate about the humor of a Murray and Mack production.

It seemed rather pleasant last evening to sit back and look at a farce comedy with Celtic comedians at the helm again. Some ideas have been borrowed from musical comedy, but for the most part, "Around the Town" is untainted with farce comedy of the "Muldoon's Picnic" kind.

The true lovers of farce comedy gave contented sighs of keen enjoyment when Murray gave Mack a kick in the stomach and similar and noisier expressions of approval when the twain accomplished their famous boxing match in the last act. Some changes have been made, but mostly "Around the Town" is the "Finnegan's Ball" of pleasant memory.

Many of the musical numbers have been heard here before, but were well received. The audience simply could not get enough of the quartet and its principal number, "Peezey Weezy," which was sung with considerable success by the author at the Metropolitan a few weeks ago.

Mayme Taylor is the prima donna of "Around the Town." She is no relation to the popular drink of the same name. Miss Taylor has a fair voice and her coster song got a flattering reception. Gladys Van is the soubrette and is as fluffy and nimble as the part requires. Her best song was the swing number.

So those who went to the Lyceum last evening got what they wanted.

Rich in Nutrition, Easy to Digest

Malta-Vita Is the Perfect Food For Children and Grown Folks.

We know of no other food so rich in nutrition and so easy to digest as Malta-Vita, the perfect whole-wheat food.

One of the foremost educators in Ohio recently said: "For ten years I suffered almost everything in the way of pain and misery, and was unfit for business from the worst form of indigestion and constipation. I suffered agony from sick headache, lasting sometimes two or three days. There were but few weeks during the ten years past that I did not have an attack of sick headache. A year ago I tried Malta-Vita and have eaten it almost every day since—sometimes three times a day. My constipation is almost wholly removed. If I have a light attack of sick headache once in two months, I count it frequent. I am constrained to give my diet the credit."

Malta-Vita is appetizing in the morning, at noon and at night. It puts the tingle of new life into sluggish blood, builds up bone and muscle, refreshes the brain and nerves.

And Malta-Vita is so good to eat! One dish of it, with a little milk, cream or fruit, starts the day just right.

All grocers sell Malta-Vita—so delicious it melts in the mouth, so crisp, so refreshing, so satisfying that no other food can take its place. Always ready to eat. Now 10 cents.

ANOTHER GREAT SILK SALE!

Surpassing in values any sale ever held by us before.

Sale Begins Thursday, May 3rd, See Window Display,

ALSO A RIBBON SALE

that cannot help creating quite a furore. This time it is the salvage stock of Silks and Ribbons saved from the recent great fire of Charles Schoolhouse & Son, the Big Silk Manufacturers.

Read what the New York Commercial says about this sale:

SALVAGE SILK AUCTION ATTRACTS DISTANT BUYERS.

Goods From Schoolhouse & Son's Fire Bring Moderate Prices—Fancy Silks Readiest Sellers—Ribbons Not Sought.

At the opening sale of the salvage stock of silks, ribbons and velvets of Charles Schoolhouse & Son held in the building of Samuel Gans & Co., yesterday, a larger part of the buyers present were from out of town. The stock inventoried at $230,000, and comprised a wide assortment of goods. The prices secured were moderate and bidding was not of a very lively character. On black goods, prices on which were 60 to 70 cents, brought from 37½ to 40 and 45 cents. On fancy colored silks the prices were from 2½ to 5 cents higher than on the plain blacks. Wide brocades and goods of this class were taken with more spirit. On chiffon taffetas and plain taffetas some of the highest prices of the day were secured.

The offers of crepe-de-chine were taken mostly by the smaller out-of-town buyers. The great bulk of the offerings were goods in perfect condition, and buyers were surprised that such a large quantity of goods should have been saved, particularly from so serious a fire. On the velvets and white silks the offerings were numerous, and in the afternoon the bidding on this class of goods improved somewhat. The ribbons were not reached until late in the day, and the bidding showed that this section of the sale awakened small interest. Comment was heard among the buyers present that it looked as if the out-of-town houses were doing a larger silk business than those in the city.

Several buyers from the Pacific Coast who were present at the sale stated that they had booked the largest spring business that had been secured in the Pacific Coast in many years. One buyer in particular stated that things were booming in his locality, namely Los Angeles, which city he stated was growing rapidly, and within the next ten years would be the largest and most prosperous city in that part of the country. He stated that the silk business and the demand for all classes of silk fabrics had been exceptionally large on the Pacific slope, and that he looked personally for one of the largest summer seasons that the trade in that quarter has ever seen.

When questioned as to his purchases at the sale, he stated that he had taken some fair lots of goods, but that prices were exceptionally high, but that the goods did not look as if they had come out of any fire, as they were not damaged in the slightest way either by water or smoke.

Our New York representative, MR. GEORGE SLOAN, was one of the largest buyers present at the sale, representing as he does, the following houses:

"THE FAIR," Chicago, Ill.
JONES DRY GOODS CO., Kansas City, Mo.
JONES DRY GOODS CO., Topeka, Kan.
FIELD, SCHLICK & CO., St. Paul, Minn.
PANTON & WHITE COMPANY, Duluth, Minn.

Doing a combined annual business of over thirty million dollars, and this places him on the front rank as a buyer and large operator, and gives him entree to the best markets everywhere. Besides, his wants are catered to by all, while the little fellow has to pay dearly for what he gets, with no attention. No lot is too large for him to handle when his houses join hands to save themselves money, and make money for their customers.

The goods were sold at auction on Wednesday, April 11, at the warerooms of Samuel Gans, 143-47 Franklin street, by Field, Chapman & Co., auctioneers, for the benefit of the insurance companies.

LATE DOINGS IN MICHIGAN

William White Instantly Killed by Rolling Logs at Wells.

Escanaba—While unloading logs at Plant 2 of the Stephenson company, at Wells, Monday, William White, aged 25, was caught by rolling logs and instantly killed. His parents live at Niagara, Wis., and his body will be sent to that place.

Preliminary work on the construction of one of the largest coal docks on Green bay will be begun by the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul road at this port in ten days. The contract for the pile driving work has been awarded Stark Bros. Dock & Dredge company of Milwaukee, which recently completed a contract for the Milwaukee company at this port in work on its ore dock. Only the pile-driving work will be done on the new coal dock this summer, the remainder being finished next winter.

Calumet—A complete telephone system has been installed underground in the Wolverine mine and it is now possible for the president of the company in New York to talk to an official of the mine while the latter is 3,000 feet beneath the earth's surface.

Marquette—City Marshal Moloney and Street Superintendent Johnson, suspended from office last week, have been removed. Formal charges of neglect of duty were presented by Mayor Culver and by a vote of fourteen to one the council has declared the men no longer employes of the municipality.

Sault Ste Marie—Frank Bros. were find $10 in Judge Couch's court for keeping open their saloon on Sunday in violation of the city ordinance prohibiting Sunday opening. The case was originally started under the state law, but later it was nolle prossed and the firm was arrested under the ordinance. This was a case which Attorney M. F. McDonald asked to quash on the ground that the law under which the court was authorized was unconstitutional.

THE AUTOMOBILE.

There can be no doubt that the automobile has come to stay. It is true that in the height of the bicycle craze people said the same thing about the bicycle; it is also true that while many bicycles are now made and used, it was only a craze, from which most of its victims have since recovered.

But the automobile is different. Nothing can run it out but something better, and the only thing imaginable along that line is the flying machine. And it is likely to be some little time before sky-traveling becomes a popular diversion.

According to an article in Pearson's Magazine America is now making more automobiles than England, Germany, Italy or even France. This country has $21,313,000 invested in the industry, and one new machine is being turned out of our factories every five minutes. In the state of New York alone 24,000 machines are registered, while in France, where the automobile originated, there are not more than 17,000. It is believed that in the whole United States about 70,000 machines are now in use. Ten years ago there were less than fifty, and eighteen years ago there was not a single one.

The industry in this country is really only about six years old. True, machines were made in considerable numbers in the nineties, but America lost four or five years by paying no attention to what had already been accomplished in France. About 1900 the American industry made a new start, and now it leads the world.

Hobert N. Casson, who writes the Pearson's article, makes an interesting comparison between the automobile and other infant industries showing that it is now seventy times larger than the wheelbarrow industry; it is 40 per cent ahead of the sewing machine, is running a close race with the piano, has left behind it the tin plate industry, and last year passed the oldest of all American industries, the fur trade. Michigan leads the states in the making of autos. Last year that state sold machines worth $80,000,000, which were made by 2,800 men and six women.

A year's expenditures in the United States for new machines represents more than $36,000,000, and the cost of running all the automobiles, old and new, comes to about $70,000,000. Doubtless part of the rise in suburban real estate and of the sum spent in country homes and improving roads must be credited to the influence of the automobile.

Duluth's automobile ownership is growing very rapidly, and dozens of machines are owned here now where there was one a few years ago.

A LOYAL SON.

Iowa furnishes a story that is most refreshing in these days when a financial obligation is considered by most men to be an obligation only when there is law back of it to enforce it.

James G. Whitney has just finished the herculean task of wiping out a debt of $700,000 left by his father, who became bankrupt ten years ago and died as a result of his business reversals.

His father's estate was ruined through unfortunate business investments. There was no taint of corruption, no misappropriation of funds, nothing reflecting upon anything but the judgment of his father. This made no difference, however, to the loyal son, who took upon his own shoulders the business of the private bank which his father had managed, and assumed all his obligations to the last dollar. The estate which he assumed was badly complicated, and it had not been hoped that it would yield the creditors more than 50 cents on the dollar. But it has. It has yielded 100 cents on the dollar, and every creditor has been paid in full.

The son was not legally obligated to pay a cent. When his father died the natural course of events would have been that his estate would have gone into the hands of a receiver, who would have closed it up and paid the creditors what fraction of their claims he might have been able to realze. That is what would have happened with most similar estates.

But the young man buckled down to work, took the load upon his sturdy shoulders, carried it successfully, saw his father's memory cleared of even the slight taint left upon it by misfortune, and is now going ahead, with clean books and clear mind, to make a fortune for himself.

He deserves it. It is to be hoped that he gets it. But it will not bring any more satisfaction to him than the payment of the last dollar of his father's debt.

Some people may call this act quixotic. They may expose their own sordidness by sneering at his high-minded nobility. But just the same it was a noble deed, and the world is better for it. The very fact that its novelty makes it conspicuous also makes it more valuable as an object lesson.

"SENATORIAL COURTESY."

Many people have speculated somewhat over the action of the United States senators in filing out of the senate chamber while Senator La Follette of Wisconsin was delivering his long speech on the railroad rate regulation bill. Some have imagined that perhaps it was because the senators did not like his views, and others have come to the conclusion that it was simply because they did not like his oratory.

It was neither of these things, but a strange manifestation of that queer institution, "senatorial courtesy". Senatorial courtesy requires new senators to keep their mouths closed and their minds drugged for a definite term. A new senator goes in to serve six years. If he speaks during his first session of congress it is a grave infraction of senatorial courtesy. If he attempts to do his duty to his country and to serve the state that sent him there, by taking part in the consideration of important problems pressing for solution, the older senators are very indignant about it, and they take very harsh means of expressing their anger.

So while the chamber had been full during practically all of the debate on the rate bill, when Senator La Follette rose to speak it quickly became empty. The senators were attempting to punish him for his presumption in talking before his time. But the speech was reported, by the official reporters in the Congressional Record and by the correspondents in their newspapers, and if the senate refused him a hearing he got before the country anyway, and that is the principal object of speeches in congress.

The attitude of the senators is childish, of course. Such pettiness and petulance is more in keeping with a kindergarten than with what ought to be the greatest parliamentary body in the world. It will not serve to put the senate in the place in popular esteem that it ought to have, a place that has been forfeited by its own disregard of popular rights.

The policy of restraining new members might account for the abyss that separates the senate from the people. A new senator comes fresh from the people, full of their needs and alive to their rights. If he took part in the deliberations at once, as La Follette is doing, he would naturally take the side of the people. But by keeping him back a couple of years the senate has a chance to win him away from his allegiance to the people and to fill him with the idea that the senate is on a lofty plane beyond the reach of the public, convincing him that the senate knows better than the people what the people want and what they ought to have. In breaking down this barrier Senator La Follette will accomplish much for his country.

EARNINGS OF GRADUATES.

An Eastern college instructor has compiled some figures showing the earnings of college graduates, which furnish some interesting comparisons, and throw some light on the value of a college training. They show, apparently, that it pays to have the advantage of such training, and while there still exists in some quarters a feeling against "college graduates", it does not seem possible that this can be founded on anything but prejudice. No college training, of course, will make a man out of a boor, or plant brains where none grew before. But a trained mind is the most effective mind, always, and the breadth that a college training should give cannot fail to be of great assistance in any occupation the graduate may choose to follow.

The figures are based on returns collected from 774 Bowdoin graduates engaged in certain occupations. All who have been out of college less than ten years are excluded from the figures, because it is believed that they have not yet had time to get into the running. The figures follow:

Occupation.	Number.	Average Yearly Earnings.
Law	115	$4,577
Medicine	64	4,067
Ministry	68	1,559
Education	108	2,258
Journalism	7	4,271
Business	61	5,779
Banking	11	5,718
Government service	19	3,230
Miscellaneous	40	2,567

Medicine appears to be the most remunerative occupation, with law, business and banking next in their order. Education and the ministry bring up the rear. In some cases the number of men figured upon is too small to make the results worth anything. For instance, but seven journalists are reckoned, and their average yearly earnings are $4,271. This is not anything like the average earnings in journalism, by college graduates or by those who have not had that benefit. One of the seven gets $10,000 a year, and two get $5,400; all three being exceptional newspaper salaries. Many college graduates in the newspaper field earn much less than this, $2,000 or $1,500 and less being much more frequent figures.

The ministry makes a poor showing with its average of $1,559, and education but little better with its $2,258. These figures, however, will not be surprising to those who realize how much the element of sacrifice necessarily enters into these careers.

But on the whole the showing for the value of college training is good. Nor can it all be measured in income, for there are many other compensations to the educated and systematically trained mind, with resources beyond the imagination of fallow intellects.

HOTEL GOSSIP

"The attempt being made in Philadelphia by the Merchants' Tailor exchange to bring about a change in the style of evening clothes of men, is causing a good deal of comment, both in the press and otherwise," said a traveling salesman from New York at the Spalding. "As a result of this attempt, and an exhibition in one of the leading hotels of the city, during the coming season, the well-dressed man, in Philadelphia at least, may, without fear of adverse criticism, bedeck himself in evening clothes of Cambridge gray, whether it be claw-hammer or dinner-jacket.

"This style has been advanced by the tailors to meet the demand made upon them for some deviation from formal black evening dress for summer wear, and the result is a striking garment. In both dinner-jacket and dress coat the facings and linings are of gray silk of slightly darker shade than the material of the coats, which are of serge, and along the edges are almost imperceptible cordings of gray braid.

"Light gray waistcoats of silk go with either style of coat, and the same narrow braiding is carried down the trouser seam."

"It seems rather remarkable that more poor people of the South have not taken advantage of the opportunity presented them by a fine growth of timber in the district in which they live and gotten rich," said F. H. Randall of St. Paul at the St. Louis. "Had the same conditions existed in the North, the poor man would have raised money some way and invested in timber lands, selling them at a good price as soon as the demand came.

"Some of the richest belts of timber in the United States are situated in the South, and practically no attention was paid to them until the Northerner went down there and bought most of them up. The scene of greatest logging activity will in a few years be transferred from the North to the South. Conditions for logging are different down there than they are up here, and in most cases the work is more difficult. The people through the Southern timber regions never seemed to realize the value of the forests, and are only just beginning to awaken to their worth, but too late to do themselves any good.

"There are more poor people in the country districts of the South, by a long ways, than up here in the North. I guess this has been true ever since the war. They are a more shiftless lot, and then I guess they don't have such good advantages for getting ahead as do their Northern neighbors. If they do have them they don't take advantage of them, for a poorer lot you never saw."

But They Didn't.

Once a gray and guileless farmer
To the wicked Bowery came,
And he met a friendly stranger,
Who accosted him by name.
Treating him to wine and whisky
Till his head began to swim;
For the stranger had a gold brick
Which he meant to sell to him.
But he didn't.

Many months a faithful lover
Wooed a fair coquette; but lo!
When at last he popped the question
Cruelly she answered no.
"But the next time he proposes,"
Said the maiden very vain,
"I will tell him yes, for surely,
He will plead his cause again."
But he didn't.

There was, too, a lovely heiress,
With a dower of shining gold,
And a noble count she wedded,
With a ruined castle old;
And she thought as she went sailing
O'er the ocean at his side,
She would dwell in endless rapture
As his proud and happy bride.
But she didn't.

'Twas a knowing chap who purchased
Quite a lot of gilt-edged shares,
And who thought to cut a figure,
With the Wall street bulls and bears,
And who reckoned on an auto
And a splendid country seat;
For he planned to make a million
From a promised rise in wheat.
But he didn't.

Came a youth in yachting flannels
To a cottage by the sea,
Where the summer girls were boarding.
"I'm the only male," said he.
"All these sweet and pretty creatures,
Gazing on my manly charms,
Will be straightway captivated,
And will fall into my arms."
But they didn't.

Oh, the book he sought to publish,
And the house he hoped to build,
And the friend we ought to visit,
And the place she should have filled!
There's a score of angels weeping
In the far celestial blue,
While a record they are keeping
Of the things we tried to do,
But we didn't.

THE WEATHER

No, this isn't very pleasant weather. After a midday yesterday that was almost hot, the temperature reaching to 70 deg., the wind switched into the northeast again, and last night the thermometer dropped to 34 deg. Rain came, and continued most of the day. The weather man expects the northeaster to continue tonight and tomorrow, and the wind is likely to be high this afternoon and tonight, decreasing in force Wednesday and becoming variable. Says Mr. Richardson of conditions:

"The Texas-New Mexico disturbance has increased in energy, advancing its center to Western Iowa and causing light to heavy rains in the central valleys, light snow in the Rocky mountains and strong northeast winds on Western Lake Superior. It is colder this morning near Lake Superior and over Kansas and warmer in Western Canada and the lower Missouri valley. Conditions favor rain and higher temperature in this locality tonight and Wednesday, attended by high northeast winds this afternoon and tonight."

Following were last night's lowest temperatures, as recorded by the weather bureau:

In Early Spring.

I heard a thousand blending notes,
While in a grove I sat reclined,
In that sweet mood when pleasant thoughts
Bring sad thoughts to the mind.

To her fair works did Nature link
The human soul that through me ran;
And much it grieved my heart to think
What man has made of man.

Through primrose tufts, in that sweet bower,
The periwinkle trailed its wreaths;
And 'tis my faith that every flower
Enjoys the air it breathes.

The birds around me hopped and played;
Their thoughts I cannot measure—
But the least motion which they made,
It seemed a thrill of pleasure.

The budding twigs spread out their fan,
To catch the breezy air;
And I must think, do all I can,
That there was pleasure there.

If this belief from Heaven be sent,
If such be Nature's holy plan,
Have I not reason to lament
What man has made of man?

—WILLIAM WORDSWORTH.

The Sage of Sauk Center.

Frank M. Eddy in Sauk Center Herald: It takes a great calamity to make some men charitable.

Men who are compelled to make promises to get votes must have a new set for each campaign.

Business men would not keep a man in their employ very long if he sat still all the time, but they frequently keep men in office year after year that are not even good chair warmers.

There is one man in Sauk Center who never lied about the weight of the fish he caught—he never went fishing.

If there were no buildings in the world but printing offices and churches there would be no burglars.

Nobody ever claimed a revival in a town increased the saloon business.

A man seldom breaks his neck as long as he rides on the water wagon.

If there was no muck there couldn't be a man with a muck rake.

It will be some time before they will stack hay with automobiles.

Not Enough for a Swim.

New York Post: The consumption of champagne in America has increased a third in the last five years, and yet we get only one bottle a year for each eighteen persons in the country. Thus statistics hardly bear out those perfervid socialistic writers who picture us as lapped in luxury.

MINNESOTA OPINIONS.

Little Falls Herald: President Roosevelt, in his message to congress on the insurance question, lauded Governor Johnson, and most deservedly. We are ready to admit that there have been Republican presidents who would not have praised a Democratic governor in a message.

Park Rapids Clipper: Maybe the senators should have larger salaries, as J. Adam Bede says, but the fact remains that some of them would come high at any figure.

Thief River Falls Press: These warm spring days make a feller just naturally hanker for his barefoot boyhood days. Then the cares and trials of life were as fleeting as the scudding summer cloud and living was one long holiday. But, as Kipling says, "those days are past and shoved behind us; there are no birds in last year's nests."

Bemidji Sentinel: June the 6th is the day the Republicans will elect delegates to the Republican convention at Duluth, which will be held June 13. It looks at this writing like an awful waste of money.

Sauk Center Herald: Why don't some genius propose the following ticket: For president, Theodore Roosevelt; for vice-president, William Jennings Bryan.

Alexandria Citizen: Has anyone noticed a drawn or worried expression on the countenance of Governor John A. Johnson? He has "let" all worry and anxiety to the gentlemen who are booked to perform a barren, fruitless task at Duluth in June.

Breckenridge Gazette: There are indications that the farmers are going to take a hand in the various county conventions and that among the delegations will be many new faces. Some of the old "fixers" who have dominated politics for years are going to be chiefly noticeable by their absence.

Crookston Journal: The instructed delegate will be a toothsome morsel for the machine in politics the coming convention.

Northfield News: There are very few Republicans in this state who do not declare themselves to be Roosevelt Republicans; certainly none who hope to be regarded as leaders. But there are Republicans who are working like nailers for railroad candidates. Their practice does not square with their professions.

Red Wing Republican: Leslie M. Shaw's boom for the presidency seems to be about the size of an apple core left by a small boy.

Walker Pilot: It is hard at times to tell which one makes the biggest noise in the Sixth district—the would-be postmaster who failed to land, or the one who landed and is working overtime to make good.

St. Peter Free Press: Greene and Gaynor, who were involved with Capt. Carter, U. S. A., in swindling the government on harbor contracts, have been convicted and sentenced to five years penal servitude. Had the trio been incorporated they might have been given the privilege of an immune bath under Judge Humphrey's recent decision.

Logs Versus Fish.

Mississippi Valley Lumberman: The state of Minnesota, or, more properly, the game and fish commission of the State of Minnesota, and a logging company in the north part of the state, are engaged in a law suit to determine the relative rights of fish and logs in a certain stream. It appears that the fish desire to go up the stream at the same time that the logs desire to go down, and that there is not room for both in the stream at the same time. The fish claim the right of way, because the stream is their natural element, and they have to go up if they are to lay their eggs where they will hatch out properly. The logs claim the right to float down, because they cannot float up. Nature has made it possible for fish to go either way, while the logs are, of their own volition, only able to go down, after they are once given a start. Incidentally, the state commission has taken the part of the fish, and the owner of the logs has sided with them, while the court has about settled that at the time the fish want to lay their eggs they are entitled to the use of the water. The state commission wants to rob the nests, and when the details were brought out it developed that the fish were only pike anyway, and anyone is pretty mean that will raise a row over pike eggs.

A Happy Thought.

Harper's Weekly: A well known Boston writer tells, with glee, of a neat sally on the part of his 9-year-old son, who is a pupil in a private school at the Hub.

Apropos of something or other, the teacher had quoted the line, "In the bright lexicon of youth there's no such word as 'fail.'"

At this point the lad mentioned arose and politely made known his desire to offer an observation with reference to the maxim.

"It occurs to me," said he, "that if such be the case, it might be advisable to bring the omission to the attention of the publishers of that lexicon."

The Domineering Waiter.

Detroit Journal: Secretary Taft said of a certain domineering statesman:

"He fills men with dread. They quail before him. They can't call their souls their own in his presence. Altogether he makes me think of a waiter I once met in the West.

"In a small Western town many years ago I put up at the Palace hotel.

"I was assigned to a room. There was no water nor towels in the room, and I rang.

"There was no reply.

"I rang again.

"Still no reply.

"And again and again and yet again I rang, and finally a waiter appeared.

"This waiter was a robust man of stern and forbidding aspect.

"'Did you ring?' he said, in a rumbling bass voice.

"'I did,' I answered.

"'Well, don't do it again,' said the waiter, with a menacing growl, as he withdrew."

Nor understand it anyway,
It is art.
So do not be censorious,
Just watch their acts laborious,
And shout that it is glorious,
For it's art.

Proceed to rave about the play,
It is art.
Do not show your coarser clay,
This is art.
So while Sarah is before us,
Just join the gladsome chorus,
Surely art can never bore us,
Vive Bernhardt!

FLASHES OF FUN.

Cleveland Leader: "I think that every young woman should learn to play the piano before she is married."

"That's right. And forget it afterwards."

Life: First Doctor—Yes, sir, I've had 140 cases of appendicitis.

Second Doctor—Lose any?

First Doctor—Not one; they all paid up.

Judge: Tommy—Papa, what is a consulting physician?

Papa—He is a doctor who is called in at the last moment to share the blame.

Washington Star: "What makes you think that Mars is inhabited?"

"My correspondence with the editor of the magazine I write for," answered the professor. "He says that is the only view which has any popular interest."

Philadelphia Ledger: "I understand that you advertised for a stenographer and typewriter at $8 a week."

"I did.

"Hours 9 to 6?"

"Yes; are you an applicant?"

"No, but my nerves are run down and I just wanted to inquire what nerve food you used."

Chicago Tribune: Mr. Graham was poring over his ledger.

"Why are you doing that?" asked his wife.

"Because," he said, "I consulted a fortune teller the other day, just for a lark, and she told me I would get what is coming to me before I die. I want to see how much it is."

Washington Star: "You should always think of something pleasant," said the cheery citizen.

"It can't be done," answered the man with a grouch. "Even if you manage to get your mind off the weather, someone is sure to call attention."

Reflections of a Bachelor.

New York Press: Lots of people would get up to see the sun rise if they could bet on it.

The dangerous thing about getting engaged to a girl is you may have to marry her.

There is something about baseball that makes a man awful glad he doesn't care for grand opera.

No matter how much a man loves a woman, it is better for him to tell her he loves her more.

Generally a woman keeps the pair of slippers she wore at her first ball along with her love letters.

Ever Feel That Way?

Ain't felt right pert fer a week or two;
Been sorter cranky an' restless an' blue;
No p'tickler reason, es I ken see;
Can't find erythin' specially wrong wi' me;
Jes' don't feel frisky an' don't wanter do
A goldarn thing that I don't hev to;
Food don't taste jes' 'xactly right;
Sleep is kinder broken up at night;
Don't wanter set still, an' don't wanter walk;
Don't wanter keep quiet, an' don't wanter talk;
Nothin' t' hinder me doin' jes'
Th' very thing thet'll suit me bes';
Yet when I'm doin' jes' what I wanted to,
I find it's jes' what I don't wanter do.
Now I wonder
What's the matter
Wi' me, by thunder.
'Tain't fever, sure—fer my heat ain't riz;
'Tain't biliousness, ner rheumatiz;
'Tain't my head, fer I think right smart;
'Tain't my liver, ner yet my heart;
'Tain't stomach, ner gout—then goldarn me
'Tain't nothin' at all, es I kin see.
En yet it's somethin'—guess I'll go
An' see th' doctor; he'll sure know.

Seems t' me I remember this very same thing
Come on about this same time las' spring;
An' th' doctor doped me with nasty stuff
By th' gallon, an' I bought drugs enuff
T' start a store; but Lordy, they Couldn't drive that gnawin' inside away;
Somethin' jes' a-gnawin' at my innards—th' same
Symptoms thet I hed when th' las' spring came.
Gosh! what's th' use o' seein' th' doc;
He ain't got nuthin' et all thet'll knock
This here trouble thet allus comes
When th' birds all sing an' th' honey bees hums;
When th' ice breaks up, an' th' streams all roar;
An' th' soft air blows through th' open door;
When th' violets come, an' th' grass blades sprout,
An' th' sun gits warm, an' th' buds break out;
Lemme tell you this—when th' world gets green
An' a feller gits ornery, restless, an' mean—
Thar ain't no doctor in eny place
Es kin properly diagnose his case.

Th' on'y cure fer a man I know
Is t' git right out o' th' town an' go
Where th' wil' ducks swarm an' th' geese go by,
An' th' trout an' bass are a-jumpin' high;
Th' on'y thing thet'll cure him then
Is t' git away from his feller men,
An' loaf all day by some laffin' stream
An' fish an' whistle an' sing an' dream.

Game of the Coal Barons.

Indianapolis News: Possibly a settlement of the anthracite strike might be achieved by a representative committee of consumers agreeing to sign the scale of prices which the operators want to establish. This would keep men employed, business moving and, on the whole, would probably prove to be an economical move.

LOWNEY'S

Chocolate Bonbons are the most delicious and have the largest sale of any in the world.

In their making nothing is used but the choicest chocolate, pure cane sugar, finest nuts and fruits, and purest extracts of fruits and flowers.

One thing peculiar to Lowney's Candies is that they can be eaten freely—they are pure and wholesome.

ENJOINS THE WATER COMPANY

Superior Citizen Intends to Test the Corporation's Franchise.

Charles A. Erhart, a taxpayer residing in Superior, has secured a temporary injunction against the Superior Water, Light & Power company to restrain it from following out its alleged threat to shut off the water from certain dwellings for which Erhart is the agent. The restraining order is to remain in effect until Saturday, when the water company is to appear in the superior court and show cause why a permanent injunction should not issue. The temporary order also restrains the company from collecting water rentals until further determination of the case is had Saturday.

The injunction is the outcome of the reports of the bad condition of the city water. Mr. Erhart alleges that the company has failed in its contract to provide pure and wholesome water, in which event its franchise provides that it shall suspend the collection of rentals during the time that it cannot furnish good water. Mr. Erhart has refused to pay the water rentals for his buildings for January, February and March, the aggregate sum due being $115.40. He says the water company has notified him that if the rentals were not paid by April 30, the water would be shut off. Mr. Erhart is represented by Assistant City Attorney T. L. McIntosh.

Manager Ellison of the water company admitted service of papers and said the case was in the hands of the company's attorney. He said he expects matters will be satisfactorily arranged when the case is called in court.

ALL QUIET AT MOUNT CARMEL

The State Constabulary is at the Sayer Colliery.

Mount Carmel, Pa., May 1.—Absolute quiet prevails here this morning, following the shooting of a number of foreign mine workers by a detachment of constabulary yesterday. None of the victims are dead, but four are thought to be fatally injured. Lieut. Smith and his troopers are at the Sayer colliery, and Sheriff Joseph Sharpless telephoned the lieutenant, from Shamokin early today, not to enter here with his men, as their appearance would likely cause another outbreak. Burgess Penman and his subordinates patrol the streets, and the foreigners, who are keeping within their homes, promise the burgess as well as the mine leaders, to keep away from the troopers, even if they should enter the borough. The sheriff is confident there will be no further trouble. He denies that he ordered the troopers to keep on firing during the second fight until the streets were cleared of foreigners. He stated that he was doing his duty according to law, and would, if more serious rioting occurred, lose no time in asking Governor Pennypacker to send state guardsmen here. Lieut. Smith says he, too, will follow strictly the line of duty. He maintains that his men were not responsible for the starting of the fight, and that he could not stand by and see his troopers battered with bricks and clubs.

Sheriff Sharpless is indignant at the Lehigh Valley Coal company, for what he states is "the high handed manner in which they attempted to place the state constabulary at work to guard their Sayer colliery workmen."

The sheriff alleges that when he was first notified to appear at the mine with deputies there was no necessity for it, and finally, when he appeared here, he had no success in swearing in men, as no one would take oath. Feeling there would be no serious conflict, the sheriff did not compel citizens to become deputies. He said that if he had anticipated any trouble he would have called for state guardsmen, as their appearance would not have been so objectionable to the miners, especially to the foreign element. He was asked repeatedly by Lieut. Smith to swear in the troopers as deputies, but he refused.

How long Lieut. Smith's command will remain at the colliery is unknown. President John Fahey and other union leaders of the Ninth district here last night held an extended conference, and bitterly criticized the action of the lieutenant and his men in shooting the people. The mine leaders will leave nothing undone to try and place the lieutenant and some of his men in jail. Following the return to camp of Lieut. Smith's command, following the two battles, three of his men, who had been badly clubbed about the body, became seriously ill, and were removed to the Pottsville hospital.

KNIGHTS OF COLUMBUS.

Winnipeg, Man., May 1.—Knights of Columbus from Duluth and other American points who came here to institute Winnipeg Council No. 1167, left for home by their special train on the Soo line at 5:30 Sunday evening.

Minneapolis, Chicago, Duluth, Fargo, Grand Forks and Wisconsin points were well represented, while practically every state in the Union had its quota. The event was a gala occasion for Winnipeg Catholics, who had been endeavoring for five years to secure the location of the order.

The council was installed in the afternoon with appropriate ceremony. Officers were elected as follows: Grand knight, T. D. Deegan; deputy, J. E. O'Connor; chancelor, J. K. Barrett; recorder, F. W. Russell; financial secretary, J. J. Callahan; treasurer, Norman J. Lindsay; advocate, A. J. H. Dubuc; lecturer, H. H. Cottingen; warden, L. Cardinal; inside guard, T. J. Langford; outside guard, O. Marrin; trustees, D. Smith, L. Villeroy, J. Berliner.

In the evening a banquet was served in Manitoba hall in honor of the visitors. Dr. Buckley of St. Paul presided and about 400 were present. The principal speakers were the archbishop of St. Boniface, D. W. Lawler, Father Reardon and Prof. Hartigan of St. Paul.

The ladies of the party were entertained by a committee composed of the wives of leading Catholics. In the evening there was a reception and musical in St. Mary's hall.

CHINA'S AWAKENING.

Ten Thousand Books Translated Into Chinese From Western Languages.

New York, May 1.—Kang Yu Wan, the president of the Chinese Reform association, who is passing through New York on his way from Mexico to Europe, addressed a meeting of the association Sunday night. Later he was interviewed by a paper which quotes him as follows:

"China is no longer in the dark ages. She has already reached the point where Japan was only twenty years ago, after years and years of endeavor. This is not because the Japanese were slow in learning, but rather because they were the pioneers. They cooked, we ate. We have now, for example, more than 20,000 Chinese studen's pursuing advanced modern courses of study. As to common schools, some 5,000 have been started in the one province of Canton. There are now 4,000,000 Chinese who can speak English.

"Our courts are being remodeled after the English system. The number of books we have translated into Chinese—textbooks, technical works and treatise mostly—indicates how extensively the progressive movement is spreading. We have thus appropriated to our use over 10,000 American, English and European works."

LISTS ARE CONFIRMED

The Board of Education Approves of Appointments of Teachers.

Most of Them Get Salaries Raised $2.50 a Month.

Suspense, which the school teachers of Duluth have felt for several days, knowing that the school board was considering reappointments, is over. At a special meeting held last evening, the committee on schools and teachers submitted to the board of education the list of appointments for the next school year and it was confirmed.

In recommending raises in salary, the committee pursued the same course that has been followed for several years. Where teachers of long experience have come in from the outside and started at $60 a month, there have been increases of $5 a month and, with few exceptions, the teachers here were found to be entitled to the $2.50 a month increase.

The committee report was submitted by the chairman, J. L. Washburn. The other members of the committee are J. W. Powell and M. C. Hendricks.

School will open next fall on Sept. 6 and will close June 7, 1907.

The board decided to pursue the usual course in electing successors to the retiring directors on the board. A resolution was passed inviting the electors of the school districts to submit their preferences before June 1. The board will have the tickets printed and the voters will choose the new members. Directors Codding, Stevens and Powell are the ones whose terms expire. The following teachers were given reappointments:

WOMAN WINS DAMAGE SUIT.

Gilmore City, Ohio, Must Pay Annie Kelley $1,000.

Fort Dodge, Iowa, May 1.—The jury in the case of Annie Kelley vs. Gilmore City, in district court at Humboldt, after being out all day, brought in a verdict yesterday for the plaintiff for $1,000. Miss Kelley received severe injuries on the night of Oct. 1, 1905, on account of a defective sidewalk in Gilmore city. Her suit was for $5,000.

BRIDE WINS FORTUNE.

La Crosse, Wis., May 1.—Mrs. Walter Davis, a bride of one day when her husband died, was yesterday awarded $1,500 a year out of the estate of her husband's father, after a hard fought trial. She was a working girl and married Walter Davis on his death bed. When the fortune is finally divided she will get her share.

Judge Beer By Its True Worth

Progressive Men and Women Consider It a Means to National Temperance.

We have recently published a number of articles on the food value of beer, the importance of the brewing industries as a factor in our national wealth, our national revenues, and the use of beer itself as a means to temperance and sobriety.

We believe that sooner or later beer will be recognized at its true worth, as a food beverage of splendid tonic effect and high nourishing value. Noted men and women of this country are already alive to the situation and besides Miss Phoebe Cousins and Dr. Joseph Feisler of Northwestern University, many others of note give their endorsement to beer as a means to national temperance.

Miss Cousins for a quarter of a century the most eminent woman suffrage advocate in the West, said in a recent interview: "There never will be a law that will compel prohibition, and the sensible thing for the Women's Christian Temperance Union to do is to aid in the substitution of mild, nourishing drinks like beer, which seldom produce drunkenness. A prominent army officer who served in the Southwest, operated canteens at three different posts. He made the canteens so acceptable to the soldiers, who found beer satisfying their demands, that he actually ran all the low dives of the surrounding neighborhood out of business."

Pabst Beer meets all the demands for a mild, healthful, refreshing beverage such as Miss Cousins suggests. It is made of the exclusive Pabst eight-day malt, choicest hops and pure water. Eight-day malt, which is the only perfect malt, gives Pabst Beer its superior food value and richness. Strong in nourishment the body requires, it is refreshing and satisfying.

Perfect in age, purity and strength, absolutely clean and containing only three and one-half per cent of alcohol, Pabst Beer is the ideal temperance beverage. No other is so healthful.

BOARD WAS ARBITRARY

Council Refuses to Comply With Order to Abandon Fountains.

Deadlock on Election of City Sealer Finally Broken.

In the belief that the state live stock board was acting in an arbitrary manner, and exceeding its authority the council, last evening, refused to comply with the order of the board and shut off the water in the drinking fountains.

Dr. Ward of the state board was present at the meeting, and addressed the aldermen, giving his reasons for the order. He said that the board feared the spread of glanders, and stated that watering troughs for horses are frequently the means of spreading the infection.

Alderman Wilson opposed the turning off of the water, claiming that that there had not been a case of glanders in Duluth since last January. "They have not shown us that there is any danger of an epidemic," said Alderman Wilson. "They have exceeded their authority and are attempting to legislate, saying that drinking fountains are a bad thing, and that they should be abolished. If there were any imminent danger I would consent to turn off the water in the fountains, but it seems to me that the board has taken an arbitrary stand in the matter. I am perfectly willing to take any steps to make them more sanitary, however."

Aldermen McEwen, Moore, Haven and Barnes spoke in favor of complying with the board's orders, but the motion was lost on a vote of 10 to 6.

It was unanimously agreed, however, that the board of public works and the plumbing inspector should devise some system for cleaning and flushing the troughs, under the direction of the state live stock board.

The deadlock on the position of sealer of weights and measures was finally broken last evening, when Alderman Mueller switched over and voted for Noble Sampson. This vote, with the eight Republican votes, gave Mr. Sampson the required number, and he was declared elected.

Mr. Mueller declared that the council was wasting its time, and that in order to break the deadlock and settle the matter, he would vote for Mr. Sampson.

Mayor Cullum submitted his list of poundmasters for the coming summer. It was as follows: First, Mike Moore; second, Chris Ottinger; third, John McDonald; fourth, Charles Krebs; fifth, Thomas Gordon; sixth, M. Shanahan; Woodland, George McGhie; Duluth Heights, W. S. Butler; New Duluth, John E. Bartz.

The old bill of $16.50 for gasoline for Chief Black's automobile, was again presented by the board of fire commissioners, and again turned down by the council on a vote of 10 to 6.

The bill was approved by the board, because the chief had used the automobile in the city's service during the time that some of the horses were unfit for use. The board had authorized him to do this and had promised to pay for the gasoline. The council, however, refused to pass the bill.

Another bill for $25 for surgical services to Chief Black was held up for one week. The chief was thrown from his sleigh while in performance of his duties and it has been the custom of the council to pay for medical services in such cases.

Alderman Wilson submitted an amendment to the speed ordinance, which had been recommended by the automobile club.

It does not change the present speed limits, but simply adds a new clause to the ordinance, which provides a penalty for careless and reckless driving.

"A person may be within the provisions of the present ordinance and still drive carelessly or recklessly," said Alderman Wilson. "This clause will cover such cases. It is simply an additional string."

The amendment was laid over a week for its second reading.

On the recommendation of the board of water and light commissioners, the council authorized the city treasurer to advertise for sale the entire issue of $375,000 water and light bonds.

They will be sold in installments as follows: July 1, $50,000; Aug. 1, $50,000; Sept. 1, $50,000; Dec. 1, $50,000; Feb. 1, $75,000; June 1, $100,000.

On a motion by Alderman Moore, the district in which it is compulsory for wire to be laid underground, was extended to include Second street from Sixth avenue west to Seventh avenue east, and Tenth avenue east from London road to Fourth street. These streets are to be paved this spring, and the wires can be placed underground at that time.

Petit Jurors Summoned.

The following petit jurors have been summoned for the trial of civil and criminal actions in the district court, beginning next Monday morning: Sylvester L. Richert, John V. Saxton, Rufus H. PRIESTS OF MINNESOTA Appointed Prelates of the Papal Household at Request of Ireland.

Rome, May 1.—The pope yesterday received Archbishop Ireland of St. Paul, Minn., in farewell audience. He referred most cordially to the archbishop's sojourn in Rome and expressed the pleasure he felt in meeting him. The pontiff added that he would follow with affectionate interest his work at St. Paul, especially in the erection of the cathedral there.

On the suggestion of Archbishop Ireland, the pope appointed the Revs. T. C. Kennedy of Belle Plaine, Minn.; Alois Plut, of Shakopee, Minn., and Dominic Major of St. Paul, prelates of the papal household.

SHOT IN NECK AND JAW.

No Clue to Murderer of John Stewart in Roseau County.

Roseau, Minn., April 1.—At the coroner's inquest on the body of John Stewart, whose remains were found in the woods near Plainville, Roseau county, Saturday last, it was found that he had been shot with a shotgun, being hit on the lower jaw and the charge passing through the neck.

Stewart left the home of William Stevenson, where he had been stopping, the morning of Dec. 31, 1905, and stated that he was going to North Dakota, so nothing was known of his being missing. No clue has as yet been found as to the murderer. The dead man's mother lives in Sundance, Wyo.

CLERKS ARE LAID OFF.

Shamokin, Pa., May 1.—A large number of shippers and clerks on the Shamokin division of the Philadelphia & Reading railroad were suspended today until the collieries resume. Another carload of deputies arrived here today, seventy-five men being stationed at the Burnside, Bear Valley and Henry Clay shafts collieries of the Reading company.

THE PROFESSOR SAID
About Coffee

(A certain Professor in a Chicago University in a recent talk to students)

"We talk of drunkenness as a crime," he continued, "but tea and coffee drinking at meals is more injurious than liquor to some men."

THINK THEY WILL QUIT?

Yes, many of them know that with good health they can "do things" in this world, so when they find stomach trouble, weak eyes, bad blood and muddy skin, or any of the many incipient signs of disease set up by Coffee they quit.

THEN THEY TAKE ON

Postum Food Coffee

Because it furnishes the Coffee flavor, charming color and all the pleasure of Coffee drinking and does not destroy stomach and nerves but makes for the sure rebuilding of the entire body on healthful, sturdy lines.

There's a Reason

HARD TO LEARN.

Takes Hard Experience to Teach People Some Facts.

Many people jeer at the idea that coffee causes the aches and ails they suffer from and often such people will go on for years sticking steadfastly to the coffee and suffering month in and month out, but maintaining "Coffee don't hurt me."

Only an actual test will open their eyes to what they throw away when they cast aside the richness and power of health for a cup of coffee now and then. A lady says:

"I did not learn the real truth until I made the change, but I can now positively state that the headaches I had for about seventeen years were caused by drinking coffee, for when I changed and gave up coffee and used Postum in its place I experienced entire relief; I have not been troubled with headache since I began Postum in 1896.

"This in brief has been my experience on the coffee question. Among my friends I have seen many other wonderful instances of the power of this food drink when used in place of the drug drink coffee. Among my friends there are those who tell me of relief from kidney trouble, neuralgia and eczema by leaving off coffee and using Postum and I have even known it to relieve rheumatic pains in limbs.

"I readily believe these statements, for since I cut out coffee and used Postum I never seem to have an ache or pain and I would not dare go back to the old coffee again. Not only myself but my family use Postum exclusively and we know there is no hot beverage that can take its place. Nearly seven years steady use of Postum convinces me I know what I am talking about when I say it is food as well as drink and most valuable to build up the system." CONCERNING WOMEN

The executive committee of the Assembly have issued the invitations for the May ball. The affair will be given Friday evening, May 11, at the Spalding as usual and dancing will begin at 9 o'clock. The committee consists of Messrs. Elmer Whyte, C. E. McBride, Charles Brown and H. S. Clapp. This will be the first of the Assembly affairs since Lent and is eagerly anticipated.

Farewell Affairs.

Mrs. J. F. Griffith, who will leave the next few weeks to make her home at Cleveland, Ohio, will be the guest of honor at some charming affairs before her departure. Thursday afternoon of this week, Mrs. B. G. Henderson of 210 Fifteenth avenue east will entertain at cards in Mrs. Griffith's honor and Friday afternoon, Mrs. Ray Nichols of 1801 East Third street will be hostess at cards.

May Day Wedding.

The wedding of Miss Allie Marie Piper and Henry J. Jeronimus will take place this evening at the home of the bride's mother, Mrs. M. M. Hoare, at 18 West Second street. The service will be read by Rev. M. S. Rice of the First Methodist church before the intimate friends of the young people. Mr. Jeronimus and his bride will leave for a month's western trip and will later return to this city, where they will be at home.

Home Wedding.

The wedding of Miss Anna McBride and John F. Gogins took place yesterday at the home of Mrs. Mark Morton, of 309½ West Fifth street. The rooms were prettily decorated in smilax and white roses and in the dining room pink roses were used. The wedding service was read by Rev. M. S. Rice of the First Methodist church. The bride was attended by Miss Annie Mackey and the best man was Odin Mickelson. The bride wore a dainty gown of dotted Swiss and carried white roses and her maid wore a gown of lavender and white organdie and carried roses. The wedding reception was held last evening at the home of the groom's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Michael Gogins, of 725 East Second street. Mr. and Mrs. Gogins will be at home in this city.

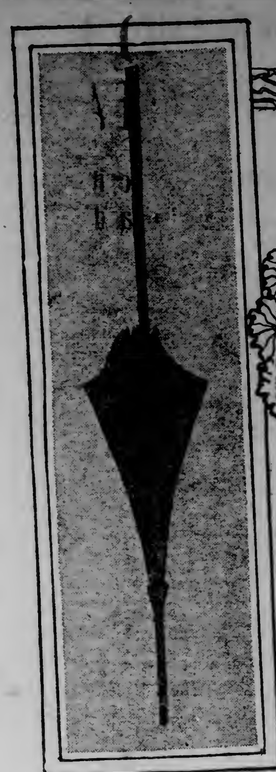
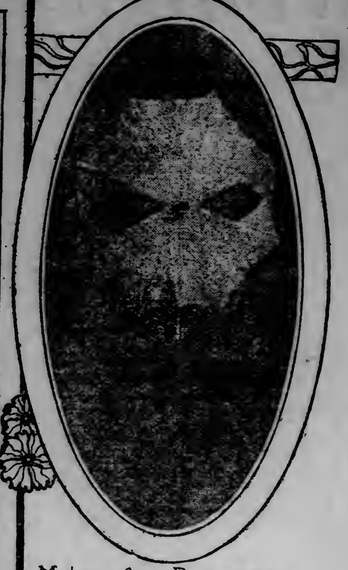
The second division of the society will hold an all-day meeting at the church. The meetings are important ones, and every member is urged to be present.

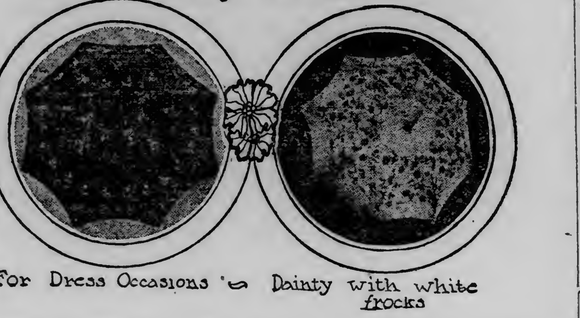


Walking Parasol.

Smart Carriage Parasol.



Motor Car Parasolette.



For Dress Occasions 'tis Dainty with white frocks

Parasol of New Model For Automobilists

It is characteristic of the extravagance of the age that this season the wardrobe with any pretension to correctness includes from half a dozen to two dozen parasols of various sorts, their purpose quite distinct and different.

The fashion requirement of one color costume necessitates the sunshade in the color scheme of the dress, but color is not enough; the characteristic of the parasol must be that of the costume also. With the smart walking suit for early morning, a plain silk parasol with long handle of natural wood, topped with metal or ivory in very simple design and tied with heavy cord and tassel, is carried.

With the light voile or crepe de chine visiting costume a smaller parasol in silk with a broad band of warp print ribbon inset the handle ivory carved and the rods ivory tipped, is quite the correct thing. Or a new form of lace parasol, not the all-over design of old, nor flounced affairs that have been known for so long, but rather a parasol smoothly covered with silk to which lace insertions are flatly applied in ribbon design and the whole band embroidered at intervals with bright colored flowers.

Lingerie parasols are almost as numerous as the lingerie costumes and may be of heavy linen simply embroidered or of the sheerest fabrics frilled and flounced. A smart novelty to be carried with a colored linen suit is of silk faintly printed in orchids and ferns and over all a huge black and white polka dot. The sections of the parasol are so cut that these large dots join in half on the ribs, making a heart-shaped figure.

For those who motor there is the small parasolette, which is quite new. These may be had in colors to suit one's visiting gown and they are quite as fine to handle as their larger and more pretentious sisters. They are, of course, hinged for adjustment as are carriage parasols. A tucked chiffon parasolette has the upper portion overlaid with embroidered chiffon motifs with an edge of the same. The large diamonds of transparent material in deep petunia tone to shield the eyes lend an added touch of smartness and carry out the color scheme of the general costume.

WHAT RETAIL MARKETS OFFER.

Chuck steak, 12½ cents a lb.
Porterhouse, 25 cents a lb.
Soup bones, 10 to 35 cents each.
Cooked corn beef, 20 cents a lb.
Asparagus, 2 bunches for 25 cents.
Extra big bunches, 35 cents each.

Our earliest recollection does not chronicle anything about the delicacy of "chuck" steak. Shoulder steak is a more elegant way of referring to the part of the beef that nobody wants to eat, and very few people in this vicinity do eat it. Everybody here, with or without copper stocks, eats porterhouse. The butcher's heart warms to the folks who buy chuck steak, although he may not give them his most careful attention, for he complains if only people would buy more stews and soup bones, and such things, that lovely hunk, called porterhouse, would be something less than 25 cents a lb.

Cooked corn beef is a kind of a jellied affair, good for lunch and picnics. Shivers! Would any one ever want to go on a picnic?

Green peas are only 80 cents a peck, and asparagus is especially fine, says the market man. Four our part we would just as soon have a little dob of gently boiled rags, peppered and buttered, but there are those who find something to approve of even in asparagus.

Black and White Checks for Children's Garments

By ELIZABETH LEE.

The small black and white checks that were so popular last year refuse to be entirely ousted by the reigning favorites this year, more indefinite checks and plaids, and have taken a new lease of life in the development of children's garments, for boys and girls alike. Always refined looking, the most simple frocks and suits have an air quite their own, while, with a little decoration, the most fascinating effects may be obtained. Coming in a number of different materials, one has only to choose the goods to suit the occasion. Taffeta, louisine, cotton voile, gingham, mohair and duck offer a wide choice. Nothing could be more dainty yet practical for a best frock than a black and white taffeta, the skirt made full, trimmed above the hem with two rows of black velvet, then accordeon pleated. A baby waist cut low, edged with a frilled bertha of pale blue chiffon broadcloth, partly overlaid with tabs of ecru embroidered batiste, the gulmpe of finest lingerie, the belt of ecrue beading threaded with black velvet and the puff sleeves similarly confined, would complete this sweet little garment and be quite within the skill of the home dressmaker.

Pretty School Frocks.

Are school frocks needed? Then mohair or the light weight ducks made up in sailor style will be decidedly smart. A duck made with a full skirt, gathered in to the waist, the regulation sailor blouse, with collar of white linen trimmed with a hem and stitched bands of the check or, with dark red, as preferred and the shield all white displaying a crimson emblem, will have as a finish a soft black silk sailor's knot tie, and the frill sleeves stitched to form cuffs will end at wrist in narrow band cuffs matching the collar.

A black and white checked mohair in sailor style, chosen for a fair little girl, will be charming if collar, cuffs and belt are made from mauve broadcloth, trimmed with rows of silver soutache, the knotted tie to be of the faintest, softest green silk; and a pretty model for cotton voile is a simple frill skirt hemmed and tucked on the bottom, gathered into the waist, the bodice a plain round yoke, to which a full lower portion is gathered, the whole confined at the waist by a bright cherry ribbon sash and the yoke covered with a large ecru batiste collar, or a pale blue sash and the collar of ivory lingerie. The full puff sleeves will end in small turn back cuffs of the material matching the collar, tied on the outer edge of arm with a bit of ribbon. Nothing could be more attractive than this little frock for afternoon wear, or for a party, and it can be made at slight expense. Three dollars should cover it entirely, supposing, of course, that the collar and cuffs were made at home, and would include the hair ribbon.

Checked Coats Smart.

Some of the smartest coats, too, are made in these checks, the box model being preferred, and made to cover the frock. Closing double breasted, these are entirely untrimmed, even the buttons being of the material sunk into black metal rims; yet there is no question as to the style they possess. Speaking of coats brings an entirely new model to my mind that is not only good for new material, but for making over when there is no material left from making, or at most a few scraps.

As children's coats as a rule are loose below the armhole, it is above this that the garment is found to be too tight, and so, the sleeve being removed and perhaps the shoulder seam opened, material is laid on to fit both back and front from any small pieces on hand, and then a bolero is simulated by rows of braid matching the coat, one row, of course, covering the seaming, the braid starting from the neck in front, going under the arm and up to the neck again.

How to Make Over.

Supposing the sleeves are both too short and too tight, as they will be when the body of the coat is changed. Then join at the top, curving the added piece and cover the seam with the braid, sewing other rows below, following the design of the bolero effect. This will drop the sleeve, of course, and, lacking material to match, silk or velvet may be used. A very pretty effect was given on a white silk coat by covering this little bolero with overlapping rows of Valenciennes lace. A charming little box coat in Alice blue cloth was made very dressy looking by the addition of rows of narrow silk gulmpe the same shade simulating bolero and elbow sleeves.

To go back to the black and white check, it would seem possible to have a whole family of boys and girls dressed in the same materials, for ducks and inohairs are being developed into the Buster Brown for the small boy, the conventional sailor suits for the little man and the Norfolk and double breasted suits for the school boy.

The EVENING STORY.

JENNY CARR OF BOSTON

By Charles Michael Williams.

(Copyright, 1906, by Joseph B. Bowles).

This is a tale about a girl in Boston. Her name was Jenny Carr and I met her when I worked in a small department store. I got nine dollars a week, and worked ten hours a day; and I certainly did earn the money. I had been sleeping on a couch in Dick Allen's studio, on Boylston street, and he had been buying my meals, but now I got a room of my own in the West end, and a meal ticket. Allen was an old friend of mine—the oldest, shyest, and most lovable chap I ever knew—an artist who was always drawing women's faces, and dreaming (although you had to know him very well to be aware of it) of love, and who, nevertheless, lived a lonely, companionless life. He did not want me to leave his rooms. But my rough and ready ways and habits consirted ill with Dick's refined manner of life, and, besides, I had been sponging on him too long.

Jenny sold things from the tinware counter, in the kitchen-ware department, near the basement where I unpacked the goods. I hate to have to try to make you see a pretty girl in the murky medium of my words; but here goes for a try. Well; her eyes were blue, and her hair was black, her lips were red and her cheeks were white * * * Oho! Such a catalogue, doesn't form a magic mirror and evoke Jenny's face for you, I know.

Jenny was 1 years old; and would still have been going to high school had not her father, a little groceryman, died just as he failed in business—leaving five children behind him. The family had come from Maine and had few friends and no relatives in Boston; and it was a case of all those in it able to work to get out and do so.

In that store there were about fifty girls—ranging in age from about 16 years to 60—and four floorwalkers looked after them. There were no men behind the counters; only in the basement, packing and unpacking, and in the shipping room. The manager of the store had eyes in his head, and his eyes were on intimate terms with his brain; that is, what his eyes saw his keen brain made use of; the millionaires who owned the store, together with some fifty others like it all over the country, could not have had a better manager than Mr. Benbow.

I worked hard, everywhere; and Benbow saw I was a hustler. He spoke to me several times when I was toting things around the store; and by and by he came to me and said that the young fellow who had been floor-walker in the kitchen-ware department was going, as head floorwalker, to a town in another state where a new store was to be opened, and how would I like to tackle his job?

There would be ten dollars a week in it, and easier work. It was all one to me where I worked; I intended soon to quit Boston, anyhow, and make for the South for the winter, and I took the job. To tell the whole truth, it was because Jenny worked in that department that I really cared to accept.

But this girl, Jenny Carr, was in my head, together with thoughts of her that bothered me. She seemed to me as a flower in a patch of weeds, bound to be lost amid them. There was a something in her eyes, in the way she carried her head—which was poised on her shoulders as lightly as is that of a bird—this told me she was pining, grieving, wasting—and not, perhaps, knowing why. She was a creature made for sunshine, and thrust into shadow; a being made for free flight—and cribbed, cabined and confined. Life called to her; her heart stirred, strained toward the call; but her limbs were bound.

And if there is any one thing that more than any other has come home to me in my loafings and rovings through the streets, it is the fact that these streets are full of guns and traps and pitfalls set for the feet of poor girls. As I walked through this store, among the fifty girls, bending over their counters, mostly frail and plain and pale and wasted girls, I could count several whom the snares had snared. Oho! My head is full of stories—yes, but I can not tell them all; but I made up my mind that if it could be helped, the tale of Jenny Carr should not be numbered with those darker tales.

For already the setter of snares had marked her down.

Jenny was frightened when I approached her after work hours one evening, as she got off her car at Roxbury to walk to her home; poor girl, some of the dark tales were already becoming familiar to her.

But her fright did not last long. We became friends. Friends—and that was all. But I came to see that no friendship was going to serve this girl; and I could be no more than a friend.

And I began to see that the man of snares was coming more often to her counter. One night Mrs. Carr, happily smiling, told me that Jenny was going to a little party with a girl from the store, on the next night; and she was so glad of it—the poor girl had so little amusement.

I said to myself: "Oho, I guess I'll do a little gum shoe work tomorrow night."

I did. The man of snares was a klnsman of the men of millions who owned our store; a fat, baldheaded young fellow, with a foolish goatee which he was always caressing with a plump hand, on which a big diamond shone. He was working under our manager, who was trying to lick him into useful commercial shape; but he was a dub all through. He took Jenny to a pretty loud kind of musical comedy that next night; and I wasn't far behind at any of the time. Coming out, he stopped after a time before a restaurant. A mongrel aggregation of fakirs from the West end were rigged up as a Bohemian band, and the violins were scraping and jingling inside. I saw the girl's flushed face; but—thank the Lord!—she shook her head; and the fat boy took her home.

As I walked home that night, thinking of Jenny, pining for life and fluttering like a little bird around the limed tree of a poisonous life, I asked myself why it was that I didn't fall in love with her myself; hanged if I didn't try to persuade myself to do so; but I knew all the while I could not; and then I asked myself: "What sort of man would fall in love with Jenny?" And the answer came in this way: "I'd bet a million that Dick Allen would!" And I went to see him.

I said to Jenny the next day: "Will you be at home tonight?"

She turned her sad, perplexed, deep eyes upon me, and said: "Yes." And a flush crept under her white cheeks as she remembered, I guess, how she was not at home the night before.

I said: "All right, then; I guess I am going to bring a friend with me. He is an artist, and I am going to have him make a picture of you."

You see, I had simply forced Dick Allen to promise me that he would make a portrait of a girl I knew, for me.

Jenny looked at me in a startled manner, as if I were taking strange liberties; but I could see that under this emotion there was one of pleasure. She had something to think about. No girl minds thinking that her face is to be memorized.

One day the fat youth, kinsman of the millionaires, came rubbering around. He had all the other floorwalkers on a string. Knowing who he was and what he was, they just fairly licked his shiny patent-leather shoes. Dixon was the fat youth's name.

Said Dixon: "Well, Mr. Neville, you have quite a bunch of girls down here. The pick of the shop."

I said: "Do you think so?"

"Sure," said he; he was in one of his jovial moods, and I could smell vermuth on his breath. He put a fat hand on my ribs and facetiously tickled me. "They are all right—especially one of them; and look here, Neville, just be as easy as you can with that particular one; don't put up a kick if she takes an extra half hour at lunch, you know; and as I have taken over the job of overseeing the payroll, I'll slip an extra fiver in your envelope on Saturdays for a while."

Yes—just like that he tried to buy me; as you would buy a pair of boots.

"Dixon," said I, "you run along up stairs and don't bother me—or anybody else down here, do you see?—or else I'll spread your nose all over your face. Now, you git."

And he went. I said to myself: "I can see my finish here."

That evening I went home in the car with Jenny. I could see that she was curious and pleased and excited about the picture-making; so I told her that this artist was going to be a great man, one of these days, and I was helping him to get pictures.

I went off to fetch Dick Allen. When we got to the flat—which was simply and neatly furnished, bespeaking the fine, simple taste of Jenny—I found that Mrs. Carr had cleared the family away from the front room; and I asked no questions. Jenny was dressed in a white shirt-waist, and plain dark skirt; and I noticed the eyes of the artist light up as he saw the blue of her eyes, the curve of her clear red lips against the clear white skin; so I came out in my mule-headed, obstinate way, with: "Well, now, Dick, you see the job you have. I have got to go out for awhile; you go ahead with the picture, and I'll be back by and by."

I went down town and played pool for an hour. Then I went back and took Dick away. "What do you think of her, Dick," said I.

Allen said: "Paddy, you are a lucky dog. I congratulate you."

Oho—I could spin this yarn out; for I like to think of it; but you see its finish for yourself. The trouble grew in Dick Allen's eyes day by day, and spread to Jenny's. Why, if I had really earned my salary as floorwalker, I should have berated her soundly many times each day. For a dream was in her heart; a dream that lighted up the shop of cheapness and ugliness, where the fat youth prowled with his diamonds shining. He still prowled around Jenny; but I guess I had cut his claws. But I wanted more than that—I wanted to punch his nose, just for my own satisfaction.

And it looked to me as if a punching was coming his way; for he extended his prowling to Roxbury.

That night when I went for Dick, he was sulky. "Here's your picture," he said: "I needn't waste any more time over you. It's done. Take it along and show it to the girl."

"Dick, I'm glad to have this picture," I answered earnestly, "for I like that girl; it will remind me of her. I'm off again tomorrow."

He jumped about three feet. "What?" he cried. Then he threw himself into a chair. "Oh, I see. The marriage is tomorrow; I see."

"No," said I, "you don't see—you are blind as a bat—you chump. Jenny Carr is eating her heart out for love of you—and I'm not in love with Jenny; no sir; I hit the trail tomorrow, for the South. I got fired today."

Dick jumped up, nearly squeezed the bones of my hand into slivers, and then hustled out the door. I took up Jenny's picture and followed. When I got into the street before the flat, looking up I saw a shadow come upon the blind. It paused, another swiftly advanced; and the two of them joined into one. And just then I saw the fat youth. Dixon, getting on a car, with a big bunch of flowers in his hands. Things had come out as I wanted them to do, just according to my book—but, do you know?—I felt suddenly sore and sorry, and lonely as a lost dog, when I saw those two shadows so swiftly join.

I stepped before Dixon. His fat face paled when he saw me. "Where are you going?" I demanded.

"It is none of your infernal business," he replied. "Get out of my way."

"But here's a stroke of my business!" I yield, and I gave him that punch on the nose. It was a good one. He yelped and went down hard, and tucking my picture of Jenny under my arm, I walked on; cheerful, now; my sorceress all gone away. I left it with the fat boy.

Woman's Nightmare

No woman's happiness can be complete without children; it is her nature to love and want them as much so as it is to love the beautiful and pure. The critical ordeal through which the expectant mother must pass, however, is so fraught with dread, pain, suffering and danger, that the very thought of it fills her with apprehension and horror. There is no necessity for the reproduction of life to be either painful or dangerous. The use of Mother's Friend so prepares the system for the coming event that it is safely passed without any danger. This great and wonderful remedy is always applied externally, and has carried thousands of women through the trying crisis without suffering.

STONES IN HIS LUNGS

This "Human Quarry" Has Thirty Deposits in His Body.

Forty-Seven Have Been Removed—Is First Case Known.

Denver, Colo., April 30.—A strange case, heretofore said to have been unknown to medical science, has been discovered in Denver. William A. Robertson, whose physicians have named the "human quarry," carries more than thirty stones in his lungs, and forty-seven have been extracted by artificial methods by surgeons.

Robertson, who was for years a wealthy real estate dealer in Kansas City, is now living at 3022 Winona court in Denver. The physicians who attended him while he lay flat on his back, unable to move, for two years in Kansas City, reported the case to the National Medical association.

He was examined by the finest lung specialist, who were unable to determine which branches were involved, and finally the professional all over the world had its attention called to the phenomenon. The London Lancet published several accounts of Robertson's case, together with chemical analysis at different times of the stones found in his lungs.

Robertson derived little benefit in Kansas City, and on the advice of Dr. Murphy of Chicago he came to Denver as the last resort of a dying man. He was placed in a hospital here and the sisters coaxed his wavering soul back into a healthy body in six days, when he was pronounced out of danger. On arriving here he weighed 109 pounds, and in less than a year he has regained his former flesh, and now tips the scales at 205 pounds.

"I am the best living advertisement for Colorado's climate," he said.

Robertson then told his story: "Here is a bottle containing forty-seven stones. An X-ray photograph, taken recently, shows that there are still thirty more remaining in my lungs. This is how it happened: I was a victim of tuberculosis although thanks to your ozone and 315 days of sunshine during the past year, I don't look like it now. I had fifty hemorrhages in two months, and one day I lost six pounds by bleeding.

"When I came to Denver a year ago I thought it was all over. But my wife was hopeful. I was placed in an ice pack that covered the entire torso. I was literally frozen. The extreme cold coagulated the blood and stiffened the walls of the arteries that had broken. But then a fresh danger more horrible than the first unexpectedly arose.

The blood, in hardening, formed a peculiar membranous tissue on the walls of the arteries. This film acted just like a dam in a river. The pulsing blood was checked slightly in its flow, and, as a result, the mineral properties dropped and formed a deposit. Nearly 200 of these deposits formed in my lungs. I was as near an ossified man as I could be.

"These deposits contained salts, iron; in fact, all the numerous minerals found in the blood, and especially lime. Through a special treatment we managed to work forty-seven of these stones gradually loose and they passed on through the arteries all right, but when they came to the tiny capillaries they broke the lung tissue. However, we finally got them into the bronchial tubes and I coughed them out.

"These deposits had been literally hardened into actual stones as dense as granite. The most peculiar property of these stones is that they exhibit a double refraction of light almost as high as regular polarizing prisms.

"There are still thirty stones in my lungs that I never hope to get out. A surgical operation would give me septicaemia, the doctors say, because the stones are encapsized in bags filled with the deadly poison of pus and matter.

A doctor recently took a skiagraph of my lungs, which shows a very large stone, as big as a lima bean, situated near where the right pneumogastric enters the chest cavity in front of the subclavian artery, and still another as large is lodged in the back part of the root of the right lung, where it is breaking into the posterior pulmonary plexus, and may seriously affect the sympathetic nerve.

"I have coughed up most of the forty-seven stones, but a few have been regurgitated through the nasal passages while I was asleep. I have suffered a great deal from involuntary sobbing and vomiting, induced by excessive irritability of the vagus and lower lungs."

William M. Robertson says that he has something to live for, as his wife is the mother of his three pairs of twins—Grover Quay and Nova May are 11 years old. Ernestine and Irene are 5 years of age and Paul and Celeste are 2 years old. They are all thriving in Colorado air, and the family of eight children and Robertson and his wife live at 3022 Winona court, near Elitch's gardens, in plain view of the mountains.

Ozomulsion

The Cod Liver Oil Emulsion "Par Excellence."

Is your blood thin and poor?

Are your nerves unstrung?

Can you go through the whirl of a strenuous day without feeling a total sense of collapse at the end of the day?

AFTERMATH OF DISASTER

San Francisco Business Man Writes Duluth Relatives of Conditions.

In a letter to his brother-in-law, H. J. Achenbach of this city, August Houthmaker, a former Minnesotan, who has been in the real estate business in San Francisco for the past four years, writes of follows on April 25, as regards the aftermath of the great disaster:

"I received your welcome letter today, just one week after the awful earthquake. We are having one or two shocks a day, but these are doing no damage.

"The fire is out now except in some large piles of coal that are burning near the dock.

"We are living in the house, but doing what little cooking we have out in the back yard, as the authorities will not permit fires in any of the buildings until after the chimnies have been inspected.

"We have no gas or electric lights, and no water except what the water wagon brings us once a day. There are plenty of provisions, such as canned goods and crackers. Today we were able to get bread. Everybody is willing to share with his neighbor.

"I send you a San Francisco paper, which will give you the general news better than I can write it to you, but it gives the rosy side of it. It was an awful disaster, but we are thankful we are alive. The women are so nervous, every little shock unnerves them. The children don't want to stay here. They want to go back to Minnesota.

"We had our trunk packed in case of fire at our home, as the air was full of burning shingles, and there was no water to check it. They were using giant powder and dynamite near us to stop the fire. Fortunately we escaped the conflagration.

"I am going to a meeting of our company at the ferry building. We had to walk through four and a half miles of debris, there being no cars running. Our office building is standing, but was gutted by the fire. We lost about $1,200 worth of furniture and fixtures, with no insurance, as the building was supposed to be fireproof.

"At the time of the earthquake we were doing a fine business, and had some big deals under way, but they are all off now. Our loss, as near as we can get at it, is about $20,000.

"The banks all over the state will be closed for thirty days. They think all the banks are safe.

"People are leaving the city by the thousands. There is no money to be had except through postoffice orders. I have $1.05 yet, but there are no stores open, the government having taken all the stock, so we don't need any money at present. Since the earthquake we have got in some checks, but cannot get them cashed.

"The country, I am afraid, has received a serious setback; everybody is afraid of another shock. It will surely take five or ten years to restore confidence, and perhaps that uneasy feeling may still remain. They are blasting the ruined building preliminary to improvement.

"With regards to all, your brother,

"AUGUST HOUTHMAKER."

STRANGERS ARE SCARED

Think Sleeping Dog on Superior Street is Black Bear.

Did you ever happen to notice in your travels along West Superior street, a large black dog asleep in front of some leading establishment?

For fully two months this dog has been in evidence on the city's principal thoroughfare, and most of the time is stretched out full length, and is in the bone-clustered field of dog-dreams.

Strangers pass the sleeping animal with fear and trembling. They think it is a bear. Some of them have read in humorous New York papers that pedestrians frequently have to shoo bears out of their way on the downtown streets of Duluth. While these reports contained accounts of loss of life, the strangers cannot help but feel a little uneasy when they see heaps of black fur on the walk.

Other persons—not strangers in the city—have oft seen the dog and wondered whether it had any right to a part of the busy sidewalk of Superior street as a downy couch. But they believe, as the police evidently do, in letting sleeping dogs lie.

The dog chose a nice spot in front of a leading jewelry store between Third and Fourth avenues west, as a sleeping place today, while a clothing store in the same block was honored yesterday.

No one appears to know who owns the animal. It apparently has no permanent address. Although obviously a vagrant that might prove a menace to passers-by, the canine has not been taken up as yet by the authorities.

Unless something is done, several perturbed citizens are planning to try for writs of "canine-corpus" to make the dog show cause why he should not be forcibly removed and even ejected from the city when he blocks traffic on a busy day.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from ten drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

DIED FROM INJURIES.

Virginia, Minn., May 1—(Special to The Herald.)—The funeral of Anton Adamsich, who died at the Lenont hospital as the result of an accident at the Mohawk mine near Aurora whereby both legs were severed by the wheels of an ore car, was held at the Catholic church here Sunday afternoon. The Austrian society, of which deceased was a member, turned out in regalia headed by the Fayal band of Eveleth.

The High School Athletic association has organized for the season with the following members: Leslie Reid, captain; George Michan, Dan Mahoney, Henry Sincock, D. McLean, Elmer Lindsay, Leighton Simons, Axel Dahl, P. Shipley, John Bonner, H. Eaton, H. Neff and James Baille. A track meet will be held during the latter part of May, with teams from Virginia, Eveleth, Grand Rapids and Ely high school teams participating.

A private car carrying officials of the United States Steel corporation arrived here Sunday evening from Hibbing. The officials are making an inspection of the mines.

There was a large attendance of Odd Fellows and Rebekahs at the special services held at the M. E. church Sunday morning. Rev. H. A. Logan delivered a very impressive and interesting sermon on Odd Fellowship.

DEMAND IS GREATER

Copper Authority Says Metal Can Hardly Fail to Advance.

Consumption Ahead of Production---Walker Believes in Buying Shares.

George L. Walker in his last letter says that the copper market is very strong and quotes a man well informed as to the copper metal market as saying that it may be hard to prevent an advance in prices even though the producers want to, for the reason that consumption is greater than production. Walker says:

"Copper continues extremely strong but domestic prices are only slightly changed. Lake is held at 18¾ to 18⅞ cents and electrolytic at 18½ to 18⅝ cents per pound. Sales are being made at all these prices. The buying at the present time is nearly all for July and August delivery. Some copper has been purchased for September delivery. Consumers have recently been able to secure small lots of spot copper and some for May and June account, but so far as can be ascertained cash supplies are now practically exhausted. Producers have generally sold their entire production up to August 1st.

"The all engrossing problem in the trade at the present time is stated by the representative of a leading producing interest as follows: 'I do not know where European consumers are going to get their June and July supplies of copper. Even if they do not consume any more than they did last year, they will be unable to supply their requirements in this country. I know how closely all the largest producers are sold up, and I know approximately how much of their product has been taken already for export. I am satisfied that Europe will need a great deal more copper than it has so far purchased, and I do not know the source from which it is to be supplied.

"The consumption of copper is clearly running ahead of production. It may be impossible to prevent an advance in prices above 18½ to 18¾ cents as it was last year to hold the prices down to 15½ cents. You will recall that the largest producers sold the last pound of copper they were able to supply at 15½ cents, believing that would be the top of the market and feeling that it was inexpedient to encourage a further advance. We are now supplying the demand for copper as far as we can, but we are about ready to say no to those buyers who desire deliveries between now and midsummer.

"There is a good foreign demand for copper, Germany, as usual, being the largest buyer. Russia has been out of the market for several months past as a result of its internal disturbances. Had it not been for this reduction in the demand, prices would now be higher than they are. I think the San Francisco disaster will cause an increased demand for copper. In my opinion, the next change in the price of copper will be an advance and not a decline.'

"The foregoing are the views of one who can always be relied upon to state the case conservatively. Other large producing interests have been consulted this week and they confirm the statements quoted. The recent strength of the London market reflects the fact that foreign consumers are in urgent need of supplies, and a 20-cent copper market before the middle of the year therefore is not improbable.

COPPER SHARES.

"In the general rush of liquidation by insurance companies and the bear selling by traders the copper shares have declined quite generally this week. There has been no heavy selling pressure except in two or three individual stocks. The persistent selling of Amalgamated caused that stock to lead the decline at times. The buying of it, however, was called good by those who were in a position to pass competent judgment. Money has been gradually working easier.

"There is a very general feeling in speculative circles that the whole course of speculation has turned and that prices generally are on their way to a much lower level. This feeling is, indeed, so general that there seems no possibility of it being correct. The public's holdings of stock are relatively small and unusually well protected. Almost all small traders are in a position to buy more stocks and they are planning to do so on any further decline in prices.

"Big men are generally bullish. They point to the tremendous industrial activity and declare that a business reaction in the immediate future is an impossibility. New orders are being placed every day for all kinds of merchandise and equipment, and I know of at least one company that is now contracting to make machines for delivery in the fall of 1907. The situation is such that the earnings of corporations of all kinds must continue for a long while at the present record breaking figures. This prosperity has not been fully discounted in the stock markets and, following the present period of liquidation, there is likely to be an early resumption of bullish speculation.

"The copper mining companies have only begun to receive the full benefits of present high metal prices. Copper did not sell at 18 cents per pound until last December and a great deal of copper was sold during that month for delivery as far ahead as March and April. Few companies received more than 18 cents for their March output, but all of them will receive as much if not more than that price for their April production. From now the copper mines of the United States, Canada and Mexico will receive an average profit of 100 per cent on every pound of copper produced. There will be a profit of more than $90,000,000 on the copper produced in these three countries this year and such prosperity can hardly fail to be reflected in the copper share market.

"I believe that all of the best copper stocks should be bought on this reaction and held for much higher prices, which are pretty sure to be realized before the end of the year."

CASHIER ENDED LIFE.

Quincy, Ill., May 1.—The body of Walter W. Somers, missing cashier of the International bank of Hulls, Ill., was found yesterday in the cellar of a residence adjoining his own. He disappeared April 14, leaving a deficit of $2,200 in his account. His father, John W. Somers, a banker at St. Joseph, Ill., made good the deficiency. Somers had shot himself in the temple. A revolver taken from the bank at the time he disappeared was found beside the body.

CASTRO RETIRES TO AVOID STORM

Startling Effrontery and Elusiveness Shown by His Valedictory.

New York, May 1.—President Castro's valedictory, on his "temporary retirement," of which the dispatches have hitherto supplied only a few scraps, has been sent here by the Willemstadt correspondent of the New York Herald. It indicates startling effrontery and elusiveness to the very last.

In the face of the insults and complexities of the French imbroglio, Castro says to his people:

"Our actual international position is perfectly defined and cleared, and this makes us expect that everything will progress in the greatest harmony and on the basis of mutual respect and consideration."

As against the numerous efforts of the New York and Bermudez company to induce Castro to submit the asphalt dispute to an impartial international tribunal, the retiring president now says:

"Our right is universally acknowledged and by necessity the pending questions will come to a friendly settlement, or, as a last and supreme recourse, to arbitration as civilization recommends."

Castro also makes this astonishing proclamation:

"As to our financial and economic situation, it could not be more promising, notwithstanding the disastrous and troublesome times which we have passed, as even nature herself has denied us her beneficent fertilization."

Commenting on this last and the other statements of the Venezuelan dictator, the Herald correspondent says:

"It is Castro who has brought the country to sore straits, filled it with monopolies, invited approaching industrial paralysis, caused a handful of favorites to grow suddenly rich with him in the enjoyment of special business privileges ,while the poor and all others have grown poorer, created threatening foreign complications and so mismanaged all civic affairs that his supposed brilliant administration of the restoration seems doomed to result in ruination.

"With Indian cunning he has just made a move to escape responsibility for his failure as an administrator by placing Gomez temporarily in power to face the French whom he has insulted, to shake off enriched favorites now odious, to cure financial ills and take the blame for all that may come out of a bad situation.

"If Gomez fails Castro again will be able to pose as the restaurador, exclaiming on resuming the presidency, 'This would not have happened if I had been in power. I alone am fit to be the nation's head.'" If the country recovers under Gomez it will be by virtue of a policy laid down by Castro before he sought the safety of the forest. Heads he wins; tails Gomez loses. That is the explanation of the retirement of President Castro to Los Teques for the recovery of his health."

WONDERFUL GROWTH OF A GREAT MINING CENTER

The Fabulous Output of Adams-Spruce and Fayal Mines.

An Illustrated Story of a Successful Minnesota City.

BY J. A. MONGER.

Eveleth is a city of 7,000 population, located seventy-one miles north of Duluth, the judicial seat of St. Louis county, on the Duluth, Missabe & Northern and Duluth & Iron Range railroads. This is the great mining center of the Mesaba iron ore range, the home of the world's famous "Fayal," and the fabulous ore producer, Adams-Spruce. The city is built on a commanding site overlooking the richest mining range that the sun ever shone upon, where stood great virgin pine forests but fifteen years ago, the population consisting of a handful of adventurers! What a change the discovery of iron ore has brought forth! The Eveleth of today, that we are writing about, is a modern hustling city, with graded streets and alleys. It owns its own water works system, which cost $100,000. The supply is pumped from St. Mary's lake, two and one-half miles distant, into a water tower holding 95,000 gallons, eighty feet above the highest business block, giving ample fire pressure. It has an electric lighting plant with 6,000 incandescent, thirty city and fourteen commercial arc lights. It has a sewerage system that covers the business and residence districts. The school system comprises five buildings, including the Eveleth High, built at a cost of $60,000. There are eight costly church edifices, representing all denominations and two hospitals, the More, costing $35,000, and Fabiola, $20,000. Eveleth has many hotels, among them the McNeil, a three story brick and stone structure, built at a cost of $50,000, giving the best of hotel accommodations for the commercial traveler and tourist. It has two banks, First National and the Miners National, with ample capital to take care of every business interest, and a well drilled and equipped volunteer fire department. Eveleth is a successful city, its streets being lined with substantial business houses and handsome residences, making it a desirable place to live and do business in. For a healthful climate, pure, bracing air, free from smoke and disease bearing germs, the purest of spring water and other health giving conditions so essential to the vigor of youth and so comforting to middle and old age, none excel this magic city of the wonderful Mesaba iron range.

It takes no profound sage to realize that this city and St. Louis county are pregnant with a resplendent future, to be gathered from the unexplored and undeveloped iron ore lands and great agricultural resources.

THE DAWN OF EVELETH'S MINING GREATNESS.

It was in 1893 that the Vega, renamed the Cloque, and now part of the Adams-Spruce, was opened up, and later put on the shipping list of mines. No one mine of the Mesaba iron ore range has contributed more to its fame, as it is one of the most wonderful underground iron mines in the world in point of production. The Fayal is another which has broken all mining records as a producer, being ann underground, open pit, steam shovel proposition. The following table gives the output of the Eveleth mines for the year 1905:

	Tons.
Adams-Spruce mines	1,747,202
Fayal mine	1,358,588
Troy mine	87,584
Total tons	3,193,374

The number of men employed to operate these mines, including strippers, will average 2,250 daily, who are paid an average wage scale of $2.20 per day, or a monthly pay roll averaging $120,000. This does not include the money expended on explorations and improvements. During the past ten years the mining companies operating here have paid out over $15,000,000 in pay rolls. Iron mining is the foundation on which every business industry has been built. Mining here is only in its infancy, as the real mineral wealth is as yet untouched. The persevering prospector has demonstrated that the unexplored lands are full of iron ore that only await the magic touch of capital. The hills, valleys and swamp lands are underlaid with solid veins of ore, enough when opened up into shipping mines to supply the world's markets for hundreds of years to come. These ore deposits are hidden in the bosom of mother earth, and only need the explorer's drill to unlock their secret vaults of untold treasure. Is it then not safe to predict that Eveleth, in the next five years, will have 14,000 population, and 5,000 men working in the mines, with a monthy pay roll of $240,000?

Among Eveleth's bright spots in connection with the mining operations are the well lighted, ventilated boarding houses in which the miners are housed. There are no stagnant pools of water in the front or back yards, emitting fetid odors, rickety stairways, floors coated with dirt, uncleaned windows, or overcrowded rooming houses. The mine workers as a whole are a clean and wholesome people, and there is little to criticize. They are good providers for their families, taking great pride in giving their children an education.

The United States Steel corporation and the independent mine owners are liberal paymasters and watchful caretakers of the health, morals and religious environments of the men in their employ. This humanitarian policy accounts for the freedom from strikes and other labor troubles on the Mesaba and Vermilion iron ranges.

THE FAYAL MINES.

The general superintendent of these properties, Capt. R. Trezona, we knew twelve years ago, when he was identified with the Gogebic iron range. He is one of the best known mining men in the Northland, an expert who won his way up the ladder by merit, without the aid of boosting. The Fayal is one of the most celebrated as an ore producer on the Mesaba range, shipping in 1905 1,358,588 tons. The property consists of eighteen forties, has three producing shafts and two open pits. The average depth of each is 200 feet. No. 4 shaft has a lifting capacity of 2,400 tons every twenty-four hours. There are six steam shovels now working, three in ore and three stripping. The Fayal plant consists of four power houses, one for each producing plant, machine and pumping house.

The Fayal wash house for the miners won our admiration with its two hundred lockers, and hot and cold water.

The Gilbert is another property under the watchful eye of Capt. Trezona, 26-58-17. The ore body is now being drilled to ascertain its location and size. There are five drills at work on the property, which consists of four forties, located four miles northeast of Eveleth. This exploration will be on the shipping list of mines in another nine months.

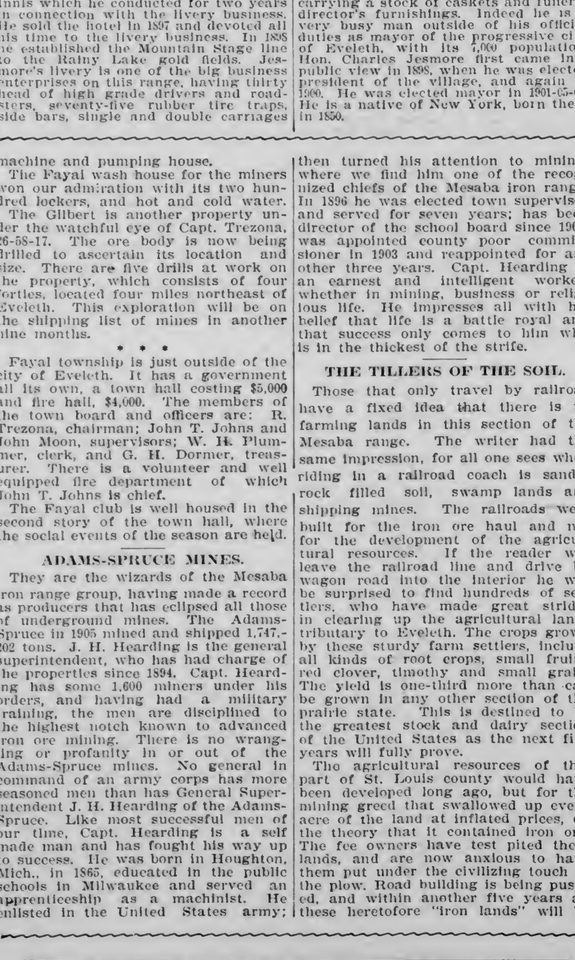
Fayal township is just outside of the city of Eveleth. It has a government all its own, a town hall costing $5,000 and fire hall, $4,000. The members of the town board and officers are: R. Trezona, chairman; John T. Johns and John Moon, supervisors; W. H. Plummer, clerk, and G. H. Dorner, treasurer. There is a volunteer and well equipped fire department of which John T. Johns is chief.

The Fayal club is well housed in the second story of the town hall, where the social events of the season are held.

ADAMS-SPRUCE MINES.

They are the wizards of the Mesaba iron range group, having made a record as producers that has eclipsed all those of underground mines. The Adams-Spruce in 1905 mined and shipped 1,747,202 tons. J. H. Hearding is the general superintendent, who has had charge of the properties since 1894. Capt. Hearding has some 1,600 miners under his orders, and having had a military training, the men are disciplined to the highest notch known to advanced iron ore mining. There is no wrangling or profanity in or out of the Adams-Spruce mines. No general in command of an army corps has more seasoned men than has General Superintendent J. H. Hearding of the Adams-Spruce. Like most successful men of our time, Capt. Hearding is a self made man and has fought his way up to success. He was born in Houghton, Mich., in 1865, educated in the public schools in Milwaukee and served an apprenticeship as a machinist. He enlisted in the United States army; then turned his attention to mining, where we find him one of the recognized chiefs of the Mesaba iron range. In 1896 he was elected town supervisor and served for seven years; has been director of the school board since 1900, was appointed county poor commissioner in 1903 and reappointed for another three years. Capt. Hearding is an earnest and intelligent worker, whether in mining, business or religious life. He impresses all with his belief that life is a battle royal and that success only comes to him who is in the thickest of the strife.



MAYOR CHARLES JESMORE.

This sturdy type of manhood is dubbed "the best mayor Eveleth has ever had." He is the grand old pioneer of the Vermilion and Mesaba iron ranges. Locating in Tower in 1889, he moved to Eveleth in 1895, opening the Hotel McInnis which he conducted for two years in connection with the livery business. He sold the hotel in 1897 and devoted all his time to the livery business. In 1898 he established the Mountain Stage line to the Rainy Lake gold fields. Jesmore's livery is one of the big business enterprises on this range, having thirty head of high grade drivers and roadsters, seventy-five rubber tire traps, side bars, shingle and double carriages and two black hearses. In a word, a $25,000 livery outfit, while he owns the building, sixe 50 by 120 feet, two stories and basement. Mr. Jesmore, in connection with the livery business, has undertaking and embalming parlors, carrying a stock of caskets and funeral director's furnishings. Indeed he is a very busy man outside of his official duties as mayor of the progressive city of Eveleth, with its 7,000 population. Hon. Charles Jesmore first came into public view in 1898, when he was elected president of the village, and again in 1900. He was elected mayor in 1901-05-06. He is a native of New York, born there in 1850.

THE TILLERS OF THE SOIL.

Those that only travel by railroad have a fixed idea that there is no farming lands in this section of the Mesaba range. The writer had the same impression, for all one sees when riding in a railroad coach is sandy, rock filled soil, swamp lands and shipping mines. The railroads were built for the iron ore haul and not for the development of the agricultural resources. If the reader will leave the railroad line and drive by wagon road into the interior he will be surprised to find hundreds of settlers, who have made great strides in clearing up the agricultural lands tributary to Eveleth. The crops grown by these sturdy farm settlers, include all kinds of root crops, small fruits, red clover, timothy and small grain. The yield is one-third more than can be grown in any other section of the prairie state. This is destined to be the greatest stock and dairy section of the United States as the next five years will fully prove.

The agricultural resources of this part of St. Louis county would have been developed long ago, but for the mining greed that swallowed up every acre of the land at inflated prices, on the theory that it contained iron ore. The fee owners have test pited these lands, and are now anxious to have them put under the civilizing touch of the plow. Road building is being pushed, and within another five years all these heretofore "iron lands" will be the garden spot of the New Northland.

EVELETH'S NEARBY LAKE RESORTS.

There is no section of Minnesota that has more attractive lake resorts, in their virgin state of preservation. Ely Lake, St. Mary's, Horseshoe and Pleasant lakes are all within from two and one-half to four miles of the city. They are all well timbered and afford the best of fishing. They are delightful picnic grounds, and are reached by the best of wagon roads. As this section becomes more populous these lakes will grow in popularity as ideal summer resorts.

EVELETH'S BANKING INSTITUTIONS.

The Miners' National bank was established in October, 1903, with a capital of $25,000 and has a surplus of $2,500. The average deposits reach $154,000 which reflects the great prosperity of its community. One of the strong features of the Miners' National is the payment of interest on time deposits of 2½ per cent. The president of the Miners' National is Walter J. Smith, who has resided here for the past six years, filling the position of cashier of the First National for three years. He is rated as one of the most popular men in Eveleth. He is clerk of the board of education and a leader in the business and social affairs of this section of St. Louis county. Leo Shapiro, cashier of this bank has hosts of friends as he is to the manner born, while James A. Robb, the vice president, is one of the solid business men of large interests on the Mesaba iron range. The board of directors contains the following list of substantial business and professional men: F. W. Bullen, J. V. Johnson, James A. Robb, R. R. Bailey, N. B. Maxwell, J. C. McGilvery, W. J. Smith.

The Miners' National bank of Eveleth, with Walter J. Smith and Leo Shapiro at its head will grow and expand with the development of Eveleth and the surrounding territory, as it is one of the best managed banks in St. Louis county.

The First National bank of Eveleth is now in its sixth year of prosperity. The capital is $25,000, with surplus and profits of $25,000, making it one of the financially strong banks of the Mesaba iron range. Mr. G. A. Whitman, the president, is a wide awake clever man with large interests, while R. M. Cornwell, the cashier, is an expert in handling the affairs of the First National in his sphere. The following are some of the leading stockholders: Hon. O. D. Kinney, Dr. W. E. Harwood, J. W. Falk, Hon. E. B. Hawkins, Dr. C. W. More and Max T. Shapiro. The deposits of this bank average $325,000, which speaks volumes for the popularity and great financial strength of the people who do their banking business with the First National of Eveleth.

EVELETH'S BIG DEPARTMENT STORE.

The best and truest guage of a city's progress is the size and number of its business houses. By this reflex we find Eveleth fully abreast of the times. Reid & Dawson Co., the proprietors of the big department store, are the leaders, having a store space 87½ by 75 feet, with eight large show windows, a metropolitan business house, stocked with all the best lines of dry goods, cloaks, millinery, gloves, notions, house furnishing goods, druggists' sundries, jewelry, men's furnishings, boots and shoes, glassware, lamps, crockery and hardware. It is not only a large stock, but is well selected, and, what is most important, is sold at the lowest bargain prices; lower than the much advertised special city sales. Reid & Dawson Co. purchase all their stock from the manufacturers in unbroken packages, which insures the lowest cash prices, and for this reason are able to quote prices far below those of other houses who carry the same lines of goods. The business of this company, since the opening on June 17, 1905, has been one of growth. They opened the store with five clerks. Today they employ twelve. All goods are marked in plain figures, which enables a child to buy just as cheaply as the most experienced veteran. The individual members of the big department store are experienced dry goods men, educated in the business. This more particularly applies to James Reid and C. S. Dawson, two very popular gentlemen, whose reputations are of the highest standard. All the people of Eveleth take great pride in the "big store," and well they may, as there are none better at the Head of the Lakes. If you want bargains, do not overlook Reid & Dawson Co.'s department store, the bargain center of the Mesaba iron range.

SAARI BROS.' LEADING STORE.

The business of this enterprising house was established in November, 1904, and today does as much business as any four stores in its line, and what is more, is the best equipped, having a floor space of 24 by 120 feet on each of the two floors, which are stocked with all lines of staple and fancy groceries, glassware, crockery and tinware. There is a metropolitan meat and vegetable market, equal to any in Duluth or St. Paul. In the basement is carried all box goods, vegetables, fruits and surplus stock, that rivals that of many jobbing houses, such is the extent of Saari Bros.' business. There is a separate department for country produce, flour, hay and feed, that does an immense business. Mr. J. S. Saari is a thorough groceryman, having worked from the bottom up, starting as delivery boy for Jackson & Co. at Virginia. John Saari, the other member of the firm, is a member of the Forty-ninth legislature and a candidate for renomination. He is also attending the law department of the state university. The Saari brothers are known far and wide for their sterling qualities and liberal, open-handed way of doing business.

HON. P. E. DOWLING.

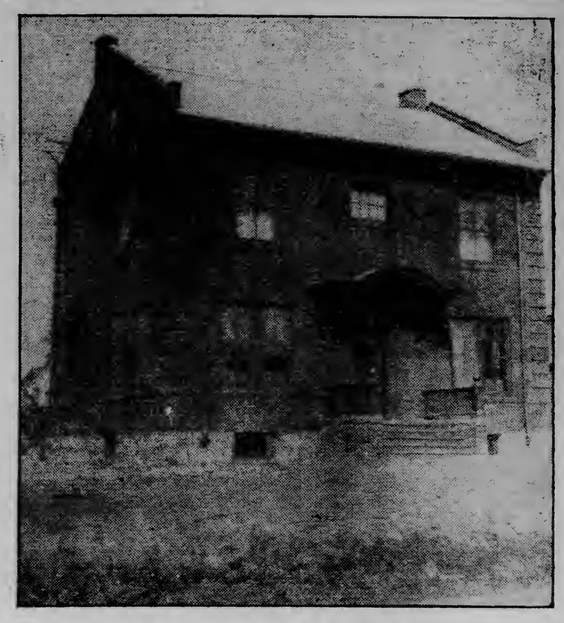
The above gentleman located here in 1892, and was appointed postmaster under the Cleveland administration in 1893, which position he held for three years. In March, 1893, he established the Eveleth Star. He is also the pioneer druggist. In politics as in business, he has been a strenuous worker. In 1902 he was elected representative of the Forty-ninth legislative district, a position that he has filled with ability and credit to his constituency. The popular streak in Mr. Dowling's make-up is his reliability in political and business life. Hon. P. E. Dowling as editor, statesman and business man, is one of the leaders of the great Northland.

THE MESABA TELEPHONE CO.'S GROWTH.

The business of the Mesaba Telephone company has grown to such proportions in Eveleth as to require a building of its own. A contract has been let for a two-story brick, size 25 by 45, to cost $4,000. The company will also expend $10,000 in rebuilding the outside construction, substituting aerial cable in place of the present open wire construction, besides all new equipments for subscribers' stations. It is putting in a mile of cable at Biwabik and building a toll line from Cohasset to Deer River. In a talk with George A. French, the superintendent, with headquarters at Duluth, we learned that over $100,000 is being expended in right-of-way and material purchased for improvements and additional toll facilities for the Mesaba iron range. The Mesaba Telephone company has only one thing to sell, service, and it is most anxious to make that the best service that money can provide. F. E. Lister, the district superintendent, has Eveleth, Virginia, Biwabik, Allen Junction, Mount Iron, Buhl and long-distance lines under his supervision, and it is rated the best service on the Mesaba iron range. This speaks well for his tact and great executive ability.

THE NEW CITY HALL AND FIRE DEPARTMENT.

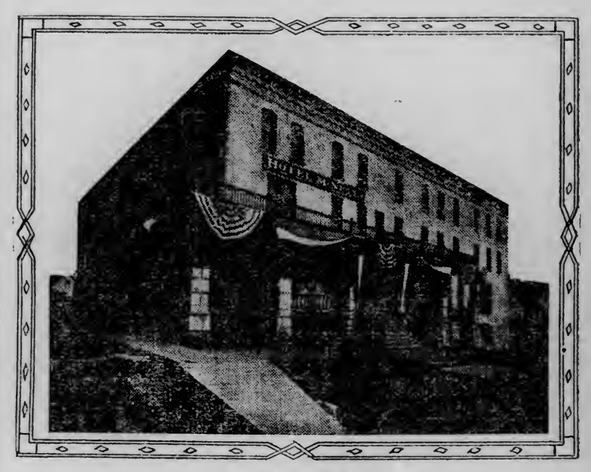
The best evidence of Eveleth's growth is the new $15,000 city hall just building. It will be a two-story brick and stone building, size 46x90 feet. The first floor will be used as a fire hall, city jail and chief of police's office. The second, for council chambers, municipal court rooms, clerk's offices, dormitory for the firemen,



THE FEE-OWNERS' BUILDING.

This association is the owner of the town site of Eveleth, which comprises 160 acres. In addition it owns the larger part of two forties platted by the Fayal Iron company, and known as the Fayal Location. Since 1899 the town site proprietors, who are the Fee Owners, have disposed of upwards of 1,000 lots, nearly all of which have been sold on small monthly payments. Not a lot has ever been foreclosed or taken back, which speaks volumes for the liberal policy adopted. Mr. Dudley W. Freeman is the resident manager for the Fee Owners, and being a thoroughly trained real estate man, handles the property to the best advantage for the homeseekers and the people he represents. Mr. C. E. Bailey, who is an experienced engineer and draughtsman, making all the maps of the mines at every stage of their development, completes the office force.

The Fee Owners' building is a two story and basement pressed brick with brown sandstone trimmings, size 30x32. Its architecture is of the Dutch colonial style. The building is finished in quarter sawed oak, has hardwood floors, is heated by hot water and lighted by electricity. It has fireproof vaults, where are kept all the maps of the mine and other valuable papers. The second floor contains two bedrooms, bath and toilet rooms, completing an unusually well adapted office building.



HOTEL McNEIL.

bath and toilet rooms. The volunteer fire department of Eveleth is recognized as being one of the best in the state. The equipment consists of three hose carts (always ready for service, two of which always leave the hall on the call of the whistle), a chemical, hook and ladder truck. Chief W. M. Murray is an able officer, who takes great pride in the record made by his men, they having broken three state records at the firemen's tournament here last year.

CITY ATTORNEY J. C. McGILVERY.

This gentleman came to Eveleth in 1898, and was soon after made municipal judge, which position he held until the spring of 1904. In January, 1906, he was appointed city attorney, as also village attorney for Biwabik and Aurora. Judge McGilvery is making a splendid record as city attorney. He is a man of a legal bent of mind and a student all the time, which keeps him posted on all the latest decisions. That he is now making as able a city attorney as he is a judge, is admitted by all.

City Clerk Edward Skeel is a new man at the helm, being appointed in 1906. He is making a splendid record, and will not use his vest pocket as a banking house for the city money. Mr. Skeel is a printer by trade and the publisher of the Eveleth Mining News, and is therefore a clean man of ability. He is also collector of water rates and agent for the National Surety company.

MUNICIPAL JUDGE VIVIAN PRINCE.

Judge Prince is one of the banner carriers of the Mesaba iron range. He located in Virginia in 1892, where he was burnt out June 18, 1893. From 1893 to 1897, Vivian Prince was justice of the peace at Virginia. Then he removed to Biwabik, where he was appointed justice of the peace and served eighteen months. In 1899 he located in Eveleth and filled a two years' term as justice of the peace and was elected municipal judge Nov. 7, 1903, for a four years' term. Judge Prince is a native of Cornwall, Eng., born there in 1843. He came to America in 1869. The judge is an enthusiastic member of the Improved Order of Red Men and the first member in the state to receive a volunteer badge from the great council of the United States. He is at present junior sagamore of the state.

HOLY FAMILY CATHOLIC CHURCH.

This church was built in 1900 at a cost of $10,000 and has a seating capacity of 700, with standing room for 300 more. Rev. Father M. Bilban, the priest in charge, came here in 1895, when Eveleth was but a mission. Father Hogan was the first resident priest, stationed here from May, 1903, to October. Father Bilban is a native of Seebach, Province of Carnila, Austria, born there in 1863. He came to the States in 1883, to St. Cloud, Minn., where he finished his classical course, and went to St. Paul in 1887, where he was ordained Dec. 17, 1892, and appointed to the diocese of Duluth. The Holy Family has a large and growing congregation, there being 1,300 Austrians in Eveleth. The priest's home was built at a cost of $4,000. It is heated by hot water and lighted by electricity.

MEN AND FIRMS OF NOTE.

Dr. J. V. Johnson located here in April, 1901, and today enjoys a large and growing practice. He is a graduate of the Starling Medical college, Columbus, O., class of '96. The doctor is numbered among Eveleth's most liberal citizens and thorough going business men.

In public hospitals this city is in the foremost rank. The Fabiola was built at a cost of $20,000, and equipped with every appliance known to surgical and scientific treatment of disease. Dr. W. E. Harwood, a graduate of Rush Medical college, class '80, is the physician and surgeon in charge. He is ably assisted by Dr. F. Barrett, graduate of Rush Medical college, Chicago, class '97.

We are indebted to D. P. McIntyre for the photo from which the Eveleth High School illustration is made. Mr. McIntyre is winning quite a reputation as an amateur photographer.

The Eveleth Star is branching out in all directions. P. E. Dowling has ordered a Mergenthaler and other equipment in order to publish the Star

EVELETH HIGH SCHOOL.

This splendid piece of school architecture was dedicated Friday, Nov. 10, 1905. It is a three-story and basement steel frame building, built of pressed brick, with brown sandstone trimming. It cost $60,000 as it stands today. It is equipped with program clocks and gong, school telephone, sanitary drinking fountains, automatic heat regulators, double wardrobes with swinging doors, Johnson's patent adjustable shade hangers and is lighted by electricity. The toilet rooms are in the basement, as also on the third floor for the girls. The auditorium, situated on this floor, has a seating capacity of 600, a well appointed stage, dressing rooms and a Steinway Grand piano. The Eveleth high school is built in the center of a block, size 256x307 feet, overlooking the city. The grounds are receiving the civilizing touch of the landscape artist, which with concrete walks and an iron fence will complete the work.

The School District 28, of which Eveleth forms a part, has five school buildings all within a quarter of a mile radius. The following is the able corps of teachers:

B. O. Greening, superintendent; Harriet Petry, music and drawing; Emmalissa Mandeville, sewing and cooking, and Emily Scott, substitute teacher and librarian.

High school building: Irene P. McKeehan, principal, English and history; tress); Ida Rohrer, seventh; May Tre-Esther McFadden, science and mathematics; Elizabeth Boulsom, latin and German; Alice Coombs, Eighth (preceptress; Ida Rohrer, Seventh; May Trezona, Sixth; Jessie Allen, Fifth; Henryetta Davis, Fourth; Alice Backus, Third; Julia Skjel, Second; Hilma Berg, Second; Corrie Barrett, First; Cora Uren, kindergarten.

Fayal building: Agnes Flynn, Fifth, principal; Minnie Whiteside, Fourth; Elsie Lawson, Third; Agnes Long, Second; Sarah Bowers, First.

Eveleth building: Laura Scott, Sixth; Elsie McKenzie, Fourth; Bertha Lyons, Third; Marie Peterson, Third; Lulu Wilson, Second; Ada McKenzie, First, principal; Florence Lavey, kindergarten.

Adams building: Olive Pfitner, First, principal; Agatha Costin, kindergarten.

Fayal kindergarten: Olive Bowers, kindergarten director; Mary Bagan, kindergarten assistant.

The school census at this writing is 1,172 in actual attendance. The board of education contains such active and prominent men as J. H. Hearding, director; G. H. Dorner, treasurer, and W. J. Smith, clerk. All are true blue friends of the public school system. All can rest assured that the rising generation of this section of St. Louis county will be well fitted for the battle of life.

THE MORE HOSPITAL.

This hospital was established in 1895. The building was erected in 1900, and an addition was made to it in 1905. There are accommodations for forty patients, in addition to the staff of medical men, which includes such physicians and surgeons as Dr. C. W. More, proprietor; Dr. F. W. Bullen, Dr. T. J. Kinnear, Dr. E. M. Gans and Dr. E. B. Daugherty. There were treated last year 800 patients, 200 of whom were surgical cases. Dr. C. W. More is a graduate of the medical department of the Northwest university, class 1888, and is a member of the Minnesota state board of health.

A. Rohrer, jeweler, located here in 1900, coming here from Tower, where he was the pioneer jeweler, having located there in 1889. Mr. Rohrer is an expert watchmaker and repairer of jewelry, and is ably assisted by D. P. McIntyre. The stock of goods carried covers all lines of jewelry, diamonds, watches, clocks, art glass, decorated china and silverware. Rohrer's is headquarters in this line, and occupies a floor space of 25 by 50 feet. If you desire to make a wedding, birthday present, or to purchase favors for parties, do not overlook this stock, as you will find it contains a thousand and one appropriate selections, at bargain prices.

The lumber, coal and building material business of Eveleth is controlled by Messrs. Calvin & Robb, who have extensive yards on the Duluth & Iron Range railroad. They have yards at Biwabik and Sparta, as also a sawmill plant at Bassett, on the Duluth & Iron Range, with a capacity of 25,000 feet of sawed lumber per day. Mr. James A. Robb is one of Eveleth's very interesting business men and a director in the Miners' National bank, one of the foremost financial institutions on the Mesaba iron range.

G. W. Mulligan is the well known manufacturer of "White Seal" and "Slimo" cigars, straight 10 cents or three for 25 cents. These brands are celebrated for their superior flavor and smoking qualities. There are none better, bearing the union stamp, made. Mr. Mulligan manufactured and sold over a quarter of a million of these cigars in 1905, on the Mesaba range alone, which tells the story of their popularity better than we can write it. This factory employs four journeymen and two strippers. Mr. Mulligan is a native of Brantford, Canada. In 1896 he established a cigar factory in Hibbing, which he successfully ran until locating here in 1899. If you desire a 50-cent smoke for 10 cents try a "White Seal," and you will be satisfied.

The Eveleth Electric company is one of the popular institutions of this growing Minnesota city. It was established in 1893, and has grown from a small plant to its present commanding position, under the skillful management of S. S. Hough, superintendent and lessee. The plant is run by steam power, has two 120 Kill-Wat generators and three 300-horse power boilers. The city is wired for seven miles, exclusive of the arc lights. At this writing the plant is operating 6,000 incandescent, 30 city and 14 commercial arc lights. The rate charged is on a sliding scale, from 10 cents to 15 cents per hour, the lowest rate prevailing in many of the range towns. This speaks well for the Eveleth Electric company, under the management of Mr. Hough, one of the most popular public spirited citizens of this place.

SEPARATION, BUT NO DECREE

Judge Ensign Disposes of the Hertzog Divorce Case.

A legal separation granted the wife, but no decree of divorce, is the judgment of Judge Ensign in the divorce case of Catherine Hertzog against Felix Hertzog, an action that has been before the district court on numerous occasions during the past two years.

Both parties demanded a decree of divorce, Mrs. Hertzog alleging desertion of herself and three children, Sept. 1, 1903. The court holds the charge well founded.

Hertzog asked a decree on a counter claim of cruelty and inhuman treatment. During the trial other charges of a sensational nature were made on both sides, but Judge Ensign recognizes only the desertion charge.

The court found that Hertzog conducts a meat market at First avenue east and Fourth street, which nets him about $75 per month. He has property on Lake avenue and other parts of the city, valued at several thousand dollars. Mrs. Hertzog owns the Pioneer hotel on Minnesota Point, and some lots on East Seventh street and in Highland Park addition.

Judge Ensign orders that each keep the property now owned, and that Hertzog shall pay his wife $20 a month for the support of the children, who remain in the mother's custody. This amount is to be increased to $25 per month after today, and Hertzog is to be given possession of the Poineer hotel, with its furnishings.

REACH HOME THURSDAY

White Sox Will Play Three Games With Hibbing Team.

Two Sides of the Baseball Troubles at Grand Forks.

Thursday morning Capt. O'Dea and his aggregation of rag rustlers will step off the train at the Duluth Union depot, and come into their own once more.

For nearly four weeks they have been hitting the death trail circuit through Iowa, playing the Three-Eye, Iowa State and Western league teams with more or less success, and now with the smell of new mown hay about them they are coming back up into God's country for some exhibition games before the season opens.

They will play Hibbing Friday, Saturday and Sunday, and during next week they will practice at Athletic park with local teams, leaving the following week for Fargo to open the season there.

Ludwig, the outfielder, who played with Crookston last year, has signed with the Sox, and arrived in Duluth yesterday. Ludwig batted .236 last year and fielded .957. When he gets with a team of live ones he ought to do even better.

Little has been heard from the Sox on their trip. They have written but brief letters to the club managers, as the trip was taken by them on their own responsibility, and they were not called upon to report. They have been changing their schedule so rapidly that is has been impossible to keep track of them, and the club officers do not even know the men who have reported.

On their arrival here, however, the weeding out process will be begun, and the team whipped into shape as soon as possible.

Here's the free, open hearted manner in which the Grand Forks Herald boosts the ball team from that city:

"The report has been made so often that no one has yet been signed for the Grand Forks team that the fans are losing interest and don't seem to care a rap whether any are signed or not."

And again, the same paper breaks out as follows:

"Bill Hanrahan leaves tonight to join the Winnipeg team at Minneapolis. A Grand Forks team without Hanrahan will seem queer."

The other side of the story is told by the Grand Forks Times. Here it is:

"The men who are to represent Grand Forks in the Northern-Copper Country league during the season of 1906, and upon whom it devolves to furnish an article of baseball which will keep 'the best city in the state' where she has always been in baseball history—near the top—have all been signed. At least, such was the statement made by W. H. McNeil, the local manager, in a roundabout way this morning, while conversing with a representative of the Evening Times.

"'You may tell the people, if you wish,' said Mr. McNeil, 'that the report in this morning's Herald to the effect that Leighty, the fast shortstop who scooped 'em up for Crookston last year, had been signed by Duluth for this season, is an error. I have signed Leighty myself and if he plays ball this season it will be with Grand Forks.'

"'What about Hugh Leach, last year's catcher, whom Winnipeg is claiming?' was asked of Mr. McNeil.

"'Well Leach is ours if we want him, but I have another deal on tap which may make unnecessary any dispute as to him.'

"Mr. McNeil steadfastly refuses to give out for publication a list of players signed until such time as the money for the local club is in hand and the men sent for. The arrival of the men and practice of the team is being delayed day after day through the delay of the soliciting committee in getting money. No special blame is laid at the doors of the committee, but there seems to be a general feeling abroad that matters ought to be hastened, in order that the manager may have a show for his life—and the team a show to make a good start. It takes money to get players here and it takes more coin to keep a club going when once started. The Grand Forks citizens have always proved equal to the emergency, and will undoubtedly do so again."

Eveleth Was Winner.

Biwabik, Minn., May 1.—(Special to The Herald.)—A game of baseball was played here Sunday afternoon, the first of the season, between the Eveleth and Biwabik teams. It was a snappy game and resulted in the defeat of the home team by a score of 7 to 5.

SEASON IS OPEN.

Wisconsin Trout Streams May Now be Fished Without Fear of Law.

The trout season in Wisconsin opened this morning, and several Duluth fishermen left for the Brule for a few days' sport.

The Minnesota season opened on April 15, but owing to the fact that the north shore streams do not provide very favorable conditions for early fishing, few local anglers have taken advantage of the open season as yet. They have been waiting for the opening of the Wisconsin season, which allows them to fish the Brule and other streams along the south shore.

JOE McDOUGALL DEAD.

Ripple, Minn., May 1.—The body of Joe McDougall was found by the railroad track a few miles from town. He was 47 years old and had relatives in West Superior and Minneapolis, and has a mother at St. Michaels, Minn. He was subject to fits.

FATAL INJURY.

Gladstone, Mich., May 1.—Louis Larson, a coal heaver, working in the hold of the steamer R. W. England, was fatally injured yesterday by a cable breaking, letting a bucket of coal drop on him. Larson is a widower, having lost his wife a short time ago.

GATHERING OF OARSMEN

Boat Club Members Discuss Classification of Crews for Training.

Prizes Will be Offered for Both Juniors and Seniors.

Oarsmen to the number of about forty gathered in the trading room of the board of trade last evening to talk over plans for the coming season.

With only two months intervening before the regatta on July 10, the time for training is very limited, and the crews will have to begin active work at once.

The twentieth anniversary of the club will be celebrated on July 10, and the regatta is to be held in honor of the occasion. Crews from St. Paul, Winnipeg, Fort William and Port Arthur are expected, and the Duluth club will also send crews to several outside regattas this summer.

The men present at the meeting last evening were notified to turn out Wednesday evening for the first practice row of the season.

The meeting was held for the purpose of talking over the plans for classification of oarsmen, and for the awarding of the medals offered as prizes for the winning crews in the club regattas, which will be held about every second week during the summer.

After some discussion, it was decided to leave the classification of the men to the rowing committee, which consists of Dr. F. L. Lynam, B. M. Peyton, H. H. Peyton, S. A. McPhail and J. D. Mahoney.

The committee will classify the men as juniors and seniors, and the ranking will hold throughout the season. Prizes will be given for the winners in each class. A junior oarsman will hold his classification throughout the season, but this does not debar him from taking part in a senior race. An entire junior crew may row in a senior race if it desires, but a senior crew may not row in a junior race, or a senior man in a junior shell. The fact that a junior oarsman has substituted in a senior shell on some occasion does not debar him from returning to the junior ranks, even though he should have won in the senior race, but his victory in a senior race would constitute his a senior next year.

In this way every advantage is given the new oarsmen. They have a chance at both sets of medals, and if a man develops rapidly enough, he will be given every possible opportunity to carry off some of the prizes.

The classification will have nothing to do with the picking of the crew to represent the club in outside races. This crew will be picked by the rowing committee, and it will be made up of the best oarsmen in the club, regardless of their classification or previous experience. Everyone has an equal chance for the crew, the only thing considered being fitness.

The regular regatta rules will be followed as closely as possible in all club races.

Each oarsman present last evening handed in his name, weight, previous experience and the hour at which he can row, and the information will be kept by the committee for reference.

The basis on which the prizes will be awarded, and the nature of the prizes, will be determined by the committee. The members last evening expressed a preference for medals over buttons or cups, and they will probably be selected. They will be of such a nature that they can be made into very attractive watch fobs.

The men will be given a certain number of points for each race won, the basis of marking to be settled by the committee.

Every member of the club who desires to row this season is requested to be present at the clubhouse Wednesday afternoon between 4 and 6 o'clock.

NO BIG GAMES.

Michigan, Wisconsin and Chicago Will Play Only the Smaller Colleges.

Chicago, May 1.—The football teams of the universities of Michigan, Wisconsin and Chicago will not meet next fall. This ruling was made known at the university of Chicago last night, when it was announced that the games had been cancelled by order of the university board of physical culture and athletics and the university senate. This action limits the schedules of the three universities to games of minor interest and abolishes the "big" gridiron battles. According to the statement of the Chicago officials, the new rule was designed in the interest of "pure sport."

JEROME PUT OFF INVESTIGATION

By Grand Jury of Political Contributions by Insurance Men.

New York, May 1.—The grand jury yesterday returned a presentment to Recorder Goff in which it declared that it had failed to investigate political contributions by insurance officials because District Attorney Jerome had advised the jury not to do so. The jury stated also that it had asked Mr. Jerome for the evidence against the insurance officials and that he had opposed action because he desired first to secure an opinion from the appellate division of the state supreme court whether such political contributions constitute larceny. Such an opinion Mr. Jerome had told the jury would be given early in May and the cases then could be taken up by a special grand jury.

Justice Greenbaum had already decided that the contributions were larceny, but Mr. Jerome expressed his doubts whether this ruling would be sustained. Mr. Jerome said it was in order to secure such a ruling before indicting any of the insurance officials and attaching to them an indelible stain that he took the case against George W. Perkins direct to the court instead of before the grand jury in March.

"If Justice Greenbaum is sustained," the district attorney said, "it will be necessary to call as witnesses Cornelius N. Bliss, treasurer of the National Republican committee, and George B. Cortelyou its chairman and postmaster general, and indict a large portion of the officers of every financial institution in this city."

Recorder Goff accepted the presentment and discharged the jury, but informed it that it had not done its full duty, although it had rendered a signal service in accentuating the "unequivocal responsibility which now rests upon the district attorney. In his argument to the grand jury, Mr. Jerome said:

"An indictment is not simply an accusation in the eyes of the public. Whatever is done with that indictment, it remains and always will remain an indelible stain.

"The court not being willing to make a definite ruling, I was unwilling to present to another grand jury the questions involved until I had an authoritative and definite ruling by a court. It made no difference to me which way the court ruled, but it seems to me that there should be a ruling so that a grand jury might not find indictments unless the acts complained of constitute an offense."

Mr. Jerome then recited the arrest of George W. Perkins and said that Justice Greenbaum ruled "that if a trustee of a corporation, especially a life insurance corporation, contributes its funds to a political party, such an act constitutes larceny."

"That was the ruling of one judge," said Mr. Jerome. "It is not a clear and simple proposition of law. A lawyer as eminent as ex-Judge Tracy, who does not represent any insurance company, says that it is perfectly plain that it does not constitute larceny. Among others, I mention Gov. Folk of Missouri and Gov. Deneen of Illinois, from both of whom it has been possible to get opinions.

"The moment Judge Greenbaum's decision was rendered an order was entered the next day and an appeal at once taken and will be brought up for argument before five judges of appellate division on the first Friday of May. We will then have an authoritative decision on the apparent facts of this case which will enable a grand jury or a district attorney to act, and act at once.

"Now, why this absurd haste? My personal opinions or suspicions are not to be laid before you gentlemen, but I understand perfectly well that there is a better conflict between the Morgan and Harriman interests. You know that the most prominent person in connection with this whole matter of contributions is George Perkins, a partner of Pierpont Morgan, but as a matter of fact it would involve the chief financial officers practically of every great financial institution in the country."

Commenting on the presentment, Recorder Goff said that the jury acted within its authority, but that the district attorney should have submitted the evidence.

THE THANKS OF CONGRESS

Extended to Gen. Horace Porter in Appropriate Resolution.

Washington, May 1.—Gen. Horace Porter, late ambassador to France and recoverer of the body of John Paul Jones, yesterday received tribute in the house of representatives, both in words and in the unanimous adoption of a resolution extending him the thanks of congress and of the people for the recovery of the body.

The thanks of congress are reserved for very rare occasions. The last time such action was taken, Admiral Dewey was honored. The last resolution of thanks to a civilian was passed during the Civil war when Commodore Vanderbilt was thanked for presenting a ship to the nation. Henry M. Stanley also received the honor as a reward for his explorations in Africa.

The thanks of congress carry the privileges of the floor of both senate and house.

Representative Olmstead of Pennsylvania, in whose district Gen. Porter resides, initialed the resolution and obtained unanimous consent for its consideration yesterday.

As an added compliment, Gen. Porter was asked, in an amendment to the resolution, to furnish for publication in the Congressional Record a copy of his speech at the recent exercises at Annapolis.

The resolution of thanks read as follows:

"The thanks of the senate and house of representatives and the people of the United States are justly due and hereby tendered to Gen. Horace Porter, late ambassador to France, for the disinterested and patriotic service in conducting upon his own initiative and at his own expense a series of researches and excavations extending over a period of six years and resulting in the recovery of the body of John Paul Jones from a forgotten grave in a foreign land and its return to a country which he had loved so well, and so heroically."

Representative Olmstead reviewed Gen. Porter's experiences. He said:

"Whether in the field of arms or the field of diplomacy, he has always deserved well of the American people. It is not too much to say that since the days of Benjamin Franklin we have not been more successfully, effectively or brilliantly represented at Paris than by him. This resolution, however, deals with a patriotic, unselfish and an unique service outside the line of official obligation or duty."

The committee on library made a favorable report on a senate bill appropriating $50,000 for a pedestal to a monument to John Paul Jones, to be erected in the grounds of the congressional library, adjacent to the capitol.

CONFIRMED PROOF

Residents of Duluth Cannot Doubt What Has Been Twice Proved.

In gratitude for complete relief from aches and pains of bad backs—from distressing kidney ills—thousands have publicly recommended Doan's Kidney Pills. Residents of Duluth, who so testified years ago, now say their cures were permanent. This testimony doubly proves the worth of Doan's Kidney Pills to Duluth kidney sufferers.

A. Ebmer of 331 Fifth street east, Duluth, Minn., says: "My experience has demonstrated the fact that Doan's Kidney Pills are a remedy of exceptional merit and one that can be relied upon in treating different phases of kidney trouble. Six years ago I suffered from a most distressing, dull, heavy pain in the small of my back and through the loins. It broke my sleep at night, and in spite of the various remedies I used from time to time I had obtained no relief. At length I got Doan's Kidney Pills, and began using them with the most gratifying results. In a short time I found a cure, and this has proved lasting and permanent. I am an earnest advocate of Doan's Kidney Pills, and have already recommended them in the local newspapers."

WOODSMAN A SUICIDE.

Deliberate Act Brought on by Despondency Near Beaver Bay.

Two Harbors, Minn., May 1.—News comes from a tie camp located three miles west of Beaver Bay, that Jim Carum, who was running the camp, had committed suicide by shooting himself. He and Bill Chisholm, superintendent of the Merrill & Ring interests, for whom he was getting out the ties, had some difference regarding them, and the trouble had caused him to grow despondent. He considered himself injured, and, it is started, was intent on killing Chisholm when he showed up and then himself. Fortunately for Chisholm he failed to appear at the time he was due, and Carum, after setting fire to the tie landing, retired to the woods. Removing one of his shoes he placed the muzzle of his rifle against his big toe. The fire which he had started was extinguished in time to save most of the ties.

BRIEF TELEGRAMS.

William Cary Sanger of New York, former assistant secretary of war, and Surgeon Gen. O'Reilly of the army, have been added to the American delegation to the Geneva Red Cross convention in June.

Lieut. Leigh C. Palmer, attached to the battleship Missouri, has been selected to represent the navy at the nuptials of King Alfonso at Madrid in June. Lieut. C. S. Grant III, corps of engineers, had been previously selected to represent the United States army.

A telegram was received at Los Angeles Monday afternoon by Vice President Murphy of the National Congress of Mothers, from Mrs. Frederick Schoff, president of the congress, stating that the next meeting of the congress, which was to have been held there May 7-11, has been indefinitely postponed.

SANTA ROSA NEEDS AID

To Clear Away the Wreckage of Many Ruined Buildings.

The Remarkable Escape From Injury of Luther Burbank.

Oakland, Cal., May 1.—Governor Pardee has returned from Santa Rosa, where he inspected the ruin wrought by the earthquake. He was accompanied by Secretary of Commerce and Labor Metcalf, Gen. Greely, Congressman McKinley and several minor officials on his trip. The governor said that the pressing need of Santa Rosa at present is money. The debris from the wreckage of many building must be cleared away before business can be resumed. It is estimated that $147,000 will be required to do this work. There is call for $25,000 or $50,000 for immediate needs.

A remarkable escape from injury was that of Luther Burbank, the world famous horticulturist. His home and experimental gardens were indisturbed. Mr. Burbanks saved his valuable collections of photographic negatives. These were unbroken, though the other half of the gallery in which they were stored was smashed to splinters.

A report has been received from San Jose, which also suffered severely, that the local relief fund has been able to provide for all citizens as well as to aid many refugees from San Francisco.

At the Agnes asylum where great damage was done, most of the inmates are now living in tents. Aid in obtaining better shelter and food would be welcome.

GOVERNOR JOHNSON HERE.

On His Way to Brule River for Few Days of Rest.

Governor John A. Johnson arrived in the city today on his way to the Brule river for a few days of recreation. Accompanying him were Mrs. Johnson, Miss Mary O'Brien, Miss Rachel O'Brien and Mis Agnes Peterson, daughter of Collector of Customs Peterson of St. Paul. At the Brule they will be at the club house. C. D. O'Brien, Judge Bunn and Dr. Weaton of St. Paul are now there and the party will fish and enjoy outdoor life until Sunday or Monday. They will leave here this evening.

NEW REBEKAH LODGE.

Institution of One at Tower Has Just Taken Place.

A Rebekah lodge has just been instituted in Tower by the district deputy of Majestic Rebekah lodge of Duluth, and five of her officers. This was authorized by Grand Master T. W. Hugo, who was also present at the Tower institution. The name of the new lodge at Tower is Victor lodge, No. 143, and the institution took place yesterday afternoon, at which time the following officers were installed:

Berenice Elkwood, N. G.; Susan Doyle, V. G.; Wimalfred Campaigne, secretary, and Mary Wheeler, treasurer.

Last evening the degree staff, composed of members of Majestic lodge, conferred the initiatory degree. The new lodge has started out in a flourishing manner, and has every evidence of a bright future before it for carrying on the good work of the order. Grand Master Hugo, last evening, spoke on the general principles of the order, particularly those relating to the Rebekah branch. The I. O. O. F. brothers of Tower entertained the Duluth delegation in a most hospitable manner, and all branches of the order were represented in the entertainment of the Duluth visitors. Grand Master Hugo treated the grand officers to a drive about Tower, showing them all of the interesting points of the surroundign iron country. The Odd Fellows served a fine banquet at the close of last evening's work.

On the way up to Tower on the train, the instituting party was met at Allen Junction by Rebekah members, bearing sandwiches and fruits, and notwithstanding the fact that the ride was only four hours, this was fully enjoyed. On the departure from Tower a complete picnic luncheon was handed the chaperone of the party, and the first Odd Fellow and Rebekah picnic of the season was enjoyed on the train. The Duluthians returned to Duluth this morning, much pleased with the trip.

GET TWENTY-YEAR TERMS

Judge Cant Sentences Matt Vranes and Matt Ivankovich.

Matt Vranes and Matt Ivankovich, the Austrians, who were convicted of manslaughter in the first degree, were sentenced late thi safternoon by Judge Cant to terms of twenty years each in the state penitentiary at Stillwater. Vranes broke down and cried when his sentence was rendered. Ivankovich's motion for a new trial was denied, but the matter will be taken up again a little later.

Vranes and Ivankovich were charged with the murder of Rude Tankovich, a fellow countryman who was killed just outside Doyle's saloon on Raleigh street, West Duluth, Sunday morning, March 4. Vranes admitted shooting Tankovich, but claimed that Ivankovich put the revolver in his hand and that he shot in self defense. Vranes claimed that Tankovich was about to attack him with a knife.

Ivankovich denied that he gave Vranes a revolver or told him to shoot Tankovich. He claimed to have been so much intoxicated that he did not realize fully what was taking place.

TAKE RAILROAD CONTRACT.

C. L. Twohy and Thomas Kileen Get Job in North Dakota.

C. L. Towhy and Thomas Kileen returned from Garrison, N. D., where they have taken a contract from Foley Bros. & Larson for constructing about eight miles of the Drake extension of the Soo road. They will at once start to gather together an outfit of seventy pairs of horses, graders, scrapers, etc., and will ship them the last of the week to Garrison. The work will continue all summer. The part of the work they are to do will cover about eight miles.

DRAFTSMEN NEEDED.

Civil Service Commission Urges Eligibles to Enter.

The United States civil service commission is urging eligible persons to try for the position of draftsman in the office of the surveyor general, which are now open in the government service. An examination for such position will be held in Duluth on June 6 and 7, and the commission goes out of its way to ask draftsmen to get in. There are seven vacancies to be filled, and the commission is finding considerable difficulty in filling them They are: One each in Arizona, Nevada and Washington and four in Idaho. Four dollars a day is paid. Persons passing this examination will be eligible for appointment only in offices outside of the District of Columbia.

Mechanical draftsmen are also wanted for the Panama canal service, and their salaries will run from $1,200 to $1,800 a year, but the average is $1,500 per year. An examination for these positions will be held also on June 6 and 7.

Not If as Rich as Rockefeller.

If you had all the wealth of Rockefeller, the Standard Oil magnate, you could not buy a better medicine for bowel complaints than Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. The most eminent physician can not prescribe a better preparation for colic and diarrhoea, both for children and adults. The uniform success of this remedy has shown it to be superior to all others. It never fails, and when reduced with water and sweetened, is pleasant to take. Every family should be supplied with it. Sold by all leading druggists.

PHYSICIAN SUSTAINS PATRICK'S CONTENTION.

New York, May 1.—The effects of embalming fluid in concealing evidence of death by inhaling chloroform was the subject of expert testimony today at the hearing of Albert T. Patrick's motion for a new trial on the charge of murdering William Marsh Rice, of Texas. Dr. Albert T. Weston, a coroner's physician, and witness called in Patrick's behalf, said that he had injected embalming fluid into the bodies of twelve persons before making incision of the lungs. Although none of these persons had died of inhaling chloroform, he said that the embalming fluid made entry into the lungs and would make it difficult to determine whether death had been caused by breathing in any irritant vapor, chloroform included. One of Patrick's contentions has been that embalming fluid may cause the lungs to appear as if the subject had died of chloroform poisoning.

STATE CONVENTION

ELECTION AT OMAHA.

Omaha, May 1.—Regular election for city officers is being held today. The day is ideal and a full vote is expected. Rastus A. Benson is the Republican candidate for mayor, and James C. Dahlman heads the Democratic ticket. A very lively campaign has been waged, local issues being chiefly discussed.

DIFFERENCE OF OPINION

Is Manifest Among Committee Considering Smoot Case.

Question Comes on Whether to Expel or Exclude Senator.

Washington, May 1.—Differences of opinion based upon constitutional questions caused the adjournment until Friday next of the meeting of the senate comittee on privileges and elections which considered the Senator Smoot case today. No decision was reached upon any point, but the lines on which the case will be argued in the committee and later in the senate, were clearly defined. The question of importance is whether the proper proceedings are to move to expel the Utah senator, which would require a two-thirds vote, or to exclude him from membership of the senate, which would require only a majority vote. Senator Bailey declared that after a senator has been seated there can be no motion to exclude and it requires two-thirds of the senate to unseat.

Chairman Burrows and Senator Dubois took the position that as the charges against Mr. Smoot are not for misconduct as a senator, but are that he belongs to a religious hierarchy whose teachings and practices are in conflict with the laws of the land and that his relation with this hierarchy began before and continued after his election to the senate, it is proper to vote to exclude. Senator Smoot had several defenders in the committee. Among these were Senators Dillingham, Foraker, Beveridge and Hopkins took issue with the argument that congress could determine to what degree religion should be mixed with politics. There was no expression indicating what the division in the committee will be on the broad question of whether a case has been made against Senator Smoot which would justify a report to unseat him. From the indications, however, it appeared that a majority of the committee would vote in favor of excluding, instead of expelling.

In speaking in favor of excluding Mr. Smoot by a majority vote, Senator Dubois called attention to notice given by the late Senator Hoar, three years ago, when Mr. Smoot was sworn in, for Mr. Burrows, who was compelled to be absent. Mr. Hoar said that it was his understanding that the orderly and constitutional method of procedure in regard to admistering the oath to newly elected senators was to accept the credentials, allow them to be sworn in and "that all questions relating to his (Smoot's) qualifications should be postponed and acted upon by the senate afterwards."

Opponents of Mr. Smoot took the stand that this statement on behalf of the chairman of the committee on priviledges and elections reserved to the senate the right to "exclude" Mr. Smoot from membership if charges against him were sustained, and that he could not get the benefit of declaring that a senator sworn in shall only be unseated by expulsion, requiring a two-thirds vote of the senate.

The discussion will be decided on Friday.

ANOTHER SEARCH

Of Home of Professor Muenter Made by the Police.

Cambridge, Mass., May 1.—Police today searched again the home of Erich Muenter, the German Instructor of Harvard, who is wanted here on the charge of murdering his wife. Several things were removed, including household utensils, which will be subjected to chemical analysis for possible traces of poison. Prof. Whitney of Harvard will make the examination, but it is probable that the request of Gilbert A. Pevey, counsel for Muenter, to have a representative of the defense present will be granted by the authorities. The police have been discussing the advisability of holding an inquest in the case, but no decision has been reached. Lawyer Pevey, who has advertised, urging Muenter, wherever he may be, to return to Cambridge and face the charge brought against him, said today:

"I have not the slightest knowledge as to where Muenter is. From what I do know, however, I should say that going away as he did was the perfectly natural thing for him to do under the circumstances."

THE DEWEY THROUGH CANAL.

London, May 1.—The United States dry dock Dewey passed out of the Suez canal safely today.

MURDER AND SUICIDE.

New York, May 1.—The lifeless body of John S. Given, a real estate broker and his wife were found in their apartment in Brooklyn today. A coroner's physician stated that evidence indicated that Given had killed his wife by administering cyanide of potassium and then committed suicide by taking the same drug. No cause for the tragedy is known.

MRS. MORRIS' CASE COMES UP AGAIN

Senator Tillman Offers Resolution for Further Investigation.

Washington, May 1.—At the beginning of today's session of the senate Mr. Flint offered bills appropriating a total of $705,000 for the restoration and repair of the public buildings in San Francisco and other cities injured by the earthquake.

Mr. Tillman presented and had read a resolution directing the committee on the District of Columbia to investigate the arrest of Mrs. Minor Morris at the White House last January and it went over until tomorrow. The resolution recites that the arrest was attended with "indignity and cruelty," and provides for an extension of the inquiry to the investigation of the affair made by the superintendent of police of Washington, directing the committee to especially inquire whether the said superintendent of police and one of the chief witnesses against Mrs. Morris have since received recognition by the appointment of near relatives to office."

In connection with the rate bill, Mr. Aldrich raised the point that the agreement arrived at yesterday does not preclude voting on amendments to the bill before Friday, when, under the agreement, the consideration of amendments under the five-minutes rule will begin. The consensus of opinion was, however, favorable to the view that voting must be prevented until Friday. A bill amending the law relative to lost checks in the hands of disbursing officers was passed.

There was a brief discussion in the senate today of the disposition of the $2,500,000 appropriated for the benefit of the San Francisco sufferers. Mr. Allison said that practically the entire sum had been expended in procuring supplies under the direction of the secretary of war. Mr. Lodge asked unanimous consent for the consideration of the resolution of thanks for Gen. Horace Porter, passed by the house yesterday, but Mr. Aldrich insisted that it should go to the committee on foreign relations. Protests against this course were made, but Mr. Aldrich insisted upon his proposition.

IN THE HOUSE.

Portland, Or., May 1.—The Telegram's correspondent at New Era says that Outlaw Smith was shot dead today.

NEW POSTMASTERS FOR MINNESOTA.

Washington, May 1.—The president today sent the following nominations to the senate: Postmasters—Minnesota: F. B. Lamson, Buffalo; J. T. Hammar, Madison; F. A. Smartwood, Waseca.

STICKING TO IT.

New York Sun: "Stick to it," said the salesman, "is my motto. It's a good one in any business. This is how it works out:

"I represent a wholesale provision firm, dealing only in the finest grades of goods, with high class buyers. Among my best customers in and about New York are the railroads.

"One of the first important sales I made was to the buyer of the dining service of one of the biggest roads running into the city. I went straight to the big man's office, told him what I had and did my best to make a sale.

"Nothing doing. My eloquence didn't impress the big man a bit. Finally, he ordered me out of the office. By that time he was mad, and I was mad, but he had the bulge on me and, escorted by a attendant, I went.

"But I was bound to land that fish. It was in the midforenoon that we had our stormy interview, but I waited at the main door of the office until I saw my man go out to dinner; then I followed him.

"He went to an exceedingly swell dining place, but I walked in at his heels and took a seat at the table with him. He appeared not to recognize me when I spoke to him, but as soon as I opened up on the provisions line he spotted me.

"'Oh!' he exclaimed, and I trembled; then suddenly his frown melted into a smile and a twinkle in his eye told me I'd won.

"'You've got me,' he owned up, and before we left the table he'd given me a big order.

"Ever since then he's been one of my best and pleasantest customers. I simply tired him out, wore him down.

"There's another big railroad with which I do a big business that was still harder to land. Every Saturday I called on the manager of the dining system, only to be told that I was wasting time.

"Well, I kept on wasting it, every Saturday, for two years. Finally, the manager gave me an order, just to get rid of me. The goods did the rest, and that railroad accounts for a big chunk of my commission today.

"Stick to it does the business—nerve, and a little tact in using it."

WOMEN'S VIOLET FARM.

Chicago Daily News: A violet farm is the latest venture of two enterprising north shore women, Mrs. George C. McReynolds and Miss Nina F. Howard of Glencoe, who have in a year built up a business supplying the local florists.

"We started our farm last spring in the face of the most discouraging propheeles from our friends and the keenest competition of violet growers of New York," said Miss Howard in speaking of the undertaking. "But we believed we could be successful. We had studied the best scientific methods of growing the plants, had imported the best soil obtainable and built a greenhouse fully adapted to our needs, so we just went ahead, and we have found it to be a paying proposition.

"Our first experiment was in making cuttings from the violet farm of Miss Chittenden at Lansing, Mich., a woman who has been a most successful grower. These did not thrive, and we next imported 3,000 cuttings from the Hudson river country, where violet culture has been most successful. It is not generally known that John D. Rockefeller has the largest violet farm in America at Tarrytown-on-the-Hudson, and our cuttings came from that part of the country.

"The first rule is to keep the temperature of the greenhouse between 45 and 50 deg. Violets are spring flowers and wither and droop if the temperature is not at the right degree. Most people think the double violets have no fragrance because most of those that we get in Chicago are grown in New York, and lose their fragrance in transit.

"We supply 2,000 flowers a week, and as they reach our patrons within two or three hours at the most from the time of cutting, they retain their fragrance. They are also larger and of a deeper color than the New York flowers. Next year we hope to go in for violet culture on a much larger scale.

"While the work is not hard," said Miss Howard, "it requires infinite care and vigilance while the little plants are growing. As a career for a woman, violet growing offers greater inducements than anything I can think of, particularly to women who wish to remain at home and who are fond of country life."

Rochefoucauld wrote. "We promise according to our hopes, and perform according to our fears." If some of your employes illustrate this truth, take up the "Help Want" ads. in The Herald as a course of reading—and perform acording to your interests!

FATHER GAPON WAS EXECUTED

Further Evidence Concerning Fate of Former Leader Priest.

St. Petersburg, May 1.—Additional confirmation of the truth of the story of Gapon's execution was received today. It consisted of a copy of the sentence of death passed by the revolutionary workmen's tribunal and was mailed, like Gapon's portfolio from Berlin to M. Margolin, the former priest's lawyer. The document gave details of Gapon's offences and closed with the laconic phrase: "The sentence has been executed."

In a long preamble justifying the execution, it is set forth that the workmen's tribunal had incontestable proof of Gapon's secret relations with various members of the political police, whose names are given, to whom he promised to betray the revolutionists if allowed to reopen his organization. Later he undertook, in behalf of the chief of the secret police, Gershamoff, to find out and betray to the government a plot to kill the emperor, Premier Witte and Interior Minister Durnovo, and opened negotiations with a member of the fighting organization, offering $12,500 for the necessary information and guaranteeing personal security for the traitor from the vengeance of the revolutionists.

THE FLAT BELOW.

Mrs. Rubberino Discusses Social Pretentions of Her Neighbor

New York Sun: "You couldn't guess in a thousand years what causes that tramping and all that shuffling of feet overhead," said Mrs. Rubberino to her visitor. "Why, it's the woman who lives in the flat above having her weekly at home. Did you ever hear of anything so perfectly silly in all your born days? The idea of a woman living in a $60 a month Harlem flat having a day! Why, we pay $90 for this flat, but, my dear, you don't see me putting on an old cerise waist that's been cleaned a hundred times and having a day at home for that reason, do you?

"Why, that woman spends all of her time between her days at home cleaning her old clothes with benzine and other smelly things to wear at what she calls her receptions, but, for the life of her, she can't help looking dowdy and country, no matter what she puts on. The only thing she's got that I'd wear even at a bicycle race is a set of sables, and they are mighty handsome—but, my dear, some people have got extremely mysterious ways of getting things. How she squared getting those sables with her husband, 'deed I couldn't tell you.

"She told me that an uncle of hers out West sent them to her for a birthday gift—as if one's old uncles, out West or anywhere else, ever loosened up that way! Of course she couldn't tell her husband any such a humbug story, but it would be just like her to tell him that she bought the sables at a bargain sale for $1.48 or some such ridiculous figure, and he'd never know the difference, I honestly believe.

"Wasn't I upstairs when she showed me a new hat that she'd just got, and when he came into the room and asked her where she got it didn't she up and brazenly tell him that she'd bought it for $4 out of money that she'd saved from the marketing—and, my dear, it was a hat that you couldn't even smell at for less than $35. And the poor silly of a man swallowed the yarn whole, and patted her on the back for being such a swell self-provider, as he expressed it!

"Good looking? Oh, she's big, you know, and tall, and willowy, and all that, and my husband is always saying that she's a perfect Burne-Jones type, only stouter and better filled out—but, the way she pads! I was upstairs one day when she was dressing in a hurry for the matinee, and she was just crazy to have me go so that she could get all of her filling-out harness on without my seeing her; but I was determined to see just what she put on to make her figure so swell; and, my dear, she has the most actressy set of pads you ever saw or heard of in all your life. Oh, of course, I'm not denying that her own figure has its fine points, if you like these tall, long strides, long women that are always trying to give out the impression by their movements that they are treading on air and that they spurn the ground, and—

"Oh, you noticed her skin, did you, when you met her in the hall as you were coming here the other day? Well, what conclusion did you come to about her skin? None, except that it was mighty fine and white? My dear, foolish, simple minded girl, anybody could have a smooth, fine, white skin if anybody wanted to take arsenic for it all the time. That's the answer, all right, as my husband says—oh, no, he doesn't say that about her—I mean he just says 'That's the answer' about things. Oh, no, you'd never get Jim to say a word about that woman. Do you know, I really believe he's just a bit fascinated by her. He's always talking to me when I mention her about how 'swell' and 'lithe' and all that sort of thing she is; but when I expressed my opinion that she was an arsenic eater for her skin do you know he became really angry, and asked me how I knew such a thing, and accused me of unfairness, and acted just as unreasonable—just like men.

"Oh, yes, she pretends to be in rugged health, but all of these people who use drugs for their complexions pretend that, and it won't be long before she'll break down and go all to pieces. She hasn't got a bit of style, with all her fair skin and her lank Englishy figure—goes in for those 'simple' effects, you know, just for the sake of making a hit with the men. Tries to look Greekish and all that—not a bit up to date. Jim declares and affirms that he likes the way she dresses herself, and he was mean enough to hint after we came down from a card party they had up there the other night that if some women used less furbelows and flub dub things on their clothes they'd look better. I wouldn't even reply to him.

"You've met these ingratiating women, haven't you, that are always pretending to be so fond of women, when, in reality, they just hate all womankind, and haven't an eye in their heads except for the men folks? Well, she's one of that kind—I am perfectly sure of it. The other evening she sent us down for dinner a lemon meringue pie that she claimed to have made herself. She just did that to make a hit with Jim, of course, for she had heard him remark how crazy he was over lemon pie. Was it good? Why, it was delicious, of course, and Jim ate nearly all of it and said he'd never tasted anything like it since he broke away from his boyhood home, but, my dear, the very nerve of that woman, expecting me to believe that she made that pie! She bought it at one of these French caterers, of course, and, oh, the foxiness of her! Do you know, she must have just stewed the inside of a lemon up in her flat that afternoon, for the purpose of making me believe when she sent me the lemon pie that she really had made it, for the smell of the lemon came down the dumb waiter shaft strong during the time she was supposed to be making the lemon pies, and, of course, she kept her dumb waiter shaft door open just so that the smell would penetrate down here.

"Of course she tried to make it appear that it was just a little bit of neighborliness—she's always talking about the neighborliness of the folks out West, where she comes from—but couldn't I see through her dodge? The next thing she'll be doing will be to try to pump some stock tip out of Jim. Jim, you know, recently won $800 on that thing he calls 'T. C.' and I.'—I don't know what that means, but it's some kind of stock—and when she heard Jim telling her husband about it she was all ears and could hardly keep still in her chair, and she has been all but jumping down my husband's throat ever since, and I'm sure that she'll be trying to catch him in the hall one of these days and digging something out of him about the stock market, or trying to. But I'm watching her, and just let me catch her at it, that's all!

"Supposing she trots down to his office, you say? Oh, she wouldn't dare, my dear—she wouldn't dare! Why, if I even dreamed of such a thing I'd—but I'm glad you mentioned that. Why the creature's capable of doing anything—anything! Do you know, I never thought of the possibility of her going down to Jim's office, the very next time she goes out I'm going to drop in at Jim's office, even if it is away down town, just to see if I can catch her. And if I do catch her—oh, I don't know what I wouldn't do to her!

"Tacky looking lot coming to her at home, aren't they?" went on Mrs. Rubberino, moving over to the front window with her visitor and looking down.

"Did you ever see such a common looking crowd in all your born days? She says that most of her New York friends are Western people—she belongs to the Ohio society, or the Indiana society or some such Reuben affair—some society organized by folks from the state she hails from and that live in New York. I'm sure they all look it. And I'll bet all of those women were wearing pink sun bonnets only a few years ago and driving into town to see the circus. Didn't I come to New York from Western Illinois, you ask? Why, of course I did, and I'm proud of it, but mercy me! Jim and I have been in New York for eight years and we don't go sloshing around joining farmers' societies and we're not pretending to belong to the Four Hundred and all that! Anyhow, I never lived in the country in Illinois and we had two servants and a butler, although I wouldn't have mentioned that for worlds if you hadn't asked me. We lived in Cairo.

"My, they must be having a cakewalk up there and I'm afraid of my life every minute that the plaster 'll be coming down on our heads! I suppose it's because all those farmery-looking men wear hobnailed boots or something. She gives 'em some kind of potato salad that she spends all the morning in making, and peanut butter sandwiches, and cocoa, and all that sort of thing—and half of them look as if they only visit her on her days—her 'days'—to eat! The potato salad is gorgeous—I must say that. She sent a little platter of it down the other afternoon, after one of her at homes. I ate it all myself before dinner—I wasn't going to have Jim gobbling it up and then bragging to me about that woman. But the idea of a woman having a day at home and then making her own salad to give to the folks that come to see her!"

Mrs. Rubberino and her visitor were still talking things over when, about an hour later, the flat bell rang and the tall, handsome woman from the flat above entered.

"Why, come right in, dearest," ecstatically exclaimed Mrs. Rubberino. "You look too sweet for anything. Did you have a nice party? What a lovely waist. How beautiful your hair is done today."

"I came down to see if you and Mr. Rubberino would care to attend the first night at the Umpiala theater tonight," said the woman from the flat above, graciously. "Somebody sent my husband two seats, but some old friends are coming for whist tonight, and we can't go. You are very welcome to the seats if you and your husband would care to go."

"Go, my dear!" exclaimed Mrs. Rubberino, rising and clasping the woman from the flat above around the waist. "Of course we'll go, and be delighted. Jim tried to get two seats a week ago and they were all gone. If you're not the sweetest thing that ever lived. I must kiss you, duck. My, but how your ears must have been burning this afternoon. We've been saying the loveliest things about you."

ORIGIN OF PHRASES.

San Francisco Bulletin: To Shakespeare we owe: "All is not gold that glitters," "Make a virtue of necessity," "Screw your courage to a sticking place" (not point), "They laugh that win," "This is the long and short of it," "Comparisons are odorous," "As merry as the day is long," "A Daniel come to judgment," "Frailty, thy name is woman," and a host of others.

Washington Irving gives us "The almighty dollar"; Thomas Norton querled long ago, "What will Mrs. Grundy say?" while Goldsmith answers, "Ask me no questions and I'll tell you no fibs." Charles C. Pinckney: "Millions for defense, but not one cent for tribute." "First in war, first in peace, and first in the heart of his fellow citizens" (not countrymen) appeared in the resolutions presented to the house of representatives in December, 1790, prepared by General Henry Lee.

From the same we cull: "Make assurance doubly sure," "Christmas comes but once a year," "Count their chickens ere they are hatched," and "Look before you leap."

Thomas Tassar, a writer of the sixteenth century, gives us: "It's an ill wind turns no good," "Better late than never," "Look ere thou leap," and "The stone that is rolling can gather no moss." "All cry and no wool" is found in Butler's "Hudibras."

Dryden says: "None but the brave deserve the fair," "Men are but children of a larger growth." "Through thick and thin," "No pent-up Utica contracts our power," declared Jonathan Sewell.

"When Greek join Greek then was the tug of war."—Nathaniel Lee, 1692.

"Of two evils I have chosen the least," and "The end must justify the means," are from Matthew Prior. We are indebted to Colby Clibber for the agreeable intelligence that "Richard is himself again." Johnson tells us of "A good hater," and Mackintosh, in 1791, the phrase often attributed to John Randolph, "Wise and masterly inactivity."

"Variety's the very spice of life," and "Not much the worse for wear," Cowper; "Man proposes, but God disposes," Thomas a Kempis.

Christopher Marlow gave forth the invitation so often repeated by his brothers in a less public way, "Love me little, love me long." Edward Cook was of the opinion that "A man's house is his castle." To Milton we owe "The paradise of fools," "A wilderness of sweets" and "Mopling melancholy and moon-struck madness."

Edward Young tells us "Death loves a shining mark." "A fool at forty is indeed a fool," but alas! for his knowledge of human nature when he tells us "Man wants but little, nor that little long."

From Bacon comes "Knowledge is power."

Considerable so-called slang is classic "Escape with the skin of my teeth" is from Job. "He is a brick" is from Plutarch. That historian tells of a king of Sparta who boasted that his army was the only wall of the city, "and every man is a brick." We call a fair and honest man "a square man," but the Greeks described the same person as Tetragonos—"a four-cornered man.'

"Every dog has its day" is commonly attributed to Shakespeare in Hamlet's speech. "The cat will mew and dog will have his day.' But forty years before "Hamlet" Heywood wrote: "But, as every man saith, a dog hath his daie."

TOO BRUTAL.

Los Angeles Times: In a discussion of the brutality of football Morris Wood, the skating champion, said the other day:

"One of my friends told me that last fall, as he was walking down a certain street, he saw a crowd collected, and, in the center, two lads fighting like mad.

"The older lad, as my friend approached, downed the younger one, and then began to kick him.

"To this treatment the younger lad objected lustily.

"'Here, Jack,' he shouted, squirming under the kicks, 'mind what yer about. This is only a fight. It ain't football.'"

ORDERS COME TO TUG FIREMEN TO GO OUT

Marine Strike Reaches Duluth—Men Quit at Six O'Clock.

Seven Firemen to Walk Out, Tying Up All Tugs.

The marine strike has hit Duluth. The tug firemen are concerned and have been ordered to quit work at 6 o'clock tonight until the differences between the longshoremen and lake carriers is settled.

The tug firemen, it is expected, will be all that will be ordered out here. Although the tug captains and engineers are affiliated with the longshoremen the same as the firemen, it is not expected that they will be ordered out for the reason that they are licensed men and to have them summarily quit their posts without direct cause might involve them in trouble over their licenses, and this is to be avoided. However there is no doubt that if an attempt should be made to put non-union firemen into the tugs, the masters and engineers would refuse to work with them. Therefore this ordering out of the firemen is equivalent to a direct tie-up of the tugs.

By this order seven firemen will go on strike at 6 o'clock tonight. The Union Towing company has eight tugs in the harbor, including the America, which has two crews and which is used exclusively for fire protection at the Missabe ore docks. It is expected and in fact, understood that the firemen on the America will be allowed to remain at work, but the tug cannot be used for towing.

Just how the strike will affect the other tugs of the harbor, cannot be learned at this time, but as most or all of the firemen on them are union men, it is expected that while they will consent to work at individual work for the owners of the tugs, they will not consent to do any towing of boats against which the strike is made.

This strike order also involves the tug Edna G. at Two Harbors and the tug Crosby at Ashland, which belongs to the Union Towing company and do towing at these points.

This general strike order ties up or will within a few days, the shipping of almost every port on the great lakes from Duluth to Buffalo. So far as boats in the harbor now are concerned, it is not expected that their mates or other members of the crew will desert for they for the most part at least, have signed articles for a round trip, signing at some lower lake port and will keep their agreement until the trip is completed, quitting when they get to the port at which they shipped. At least no desertions have been reported so far.

It is generally believed among vessel men and marine union men alike that this strike will be a serious and long continued one; that, in fact, it will be to a finish. The Lake Carriers are determined to settle the question of mates once and for all and have given it out cold that they are going to see which is the stronger. It has gone so far, already, it is understood, that those of the lake carriers who have advocated peaceful relations with the men, have been told that if they show any signs of weakening, certain interests will refuse henceforth to give them cargoes. This puts them in a position where they must stand with the majority of lake carriers.

NO TROUBLE THERE.

Seamen's Union Delegate Says All is Well With Them.

Agent McEachen of the Seamen's union, with headquarters in Superior, says that if Secretary Penge of his union is heading toward the Head of the Lakes regarding any trouble with the lumber carriers, or on any mission whatever, he has not been notified of it, and feels that notice would have been sent him if such were the case.

He says further that he knows of no reason why his union is to have trouble with the lumber carriers or lake carriers either, as intimated in a dispatch from Detroit. The contracts between the Seamen's union and the Lake Carriers and Lumber Carriers, were signed on April 2, he says, and the union proposes to carry out its part of the agreement. He says that so far as he knows, there will be no strike of the Seamen's union as everything is settled for the season with them.

The Seamen's union takes in, on steamers, the mates, wheelmen, deckhands, seamen and oilers; and on barges takes in all hands but the captains and cooks.

STILL FREE-FOR-ALL.

Lumber Carriers Will Not Have Proposed Chartering Committee.

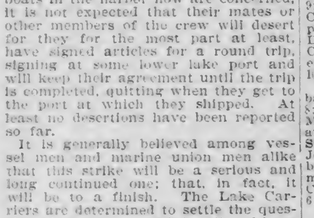
It has been reported from the lower lakes that the proposed plan of the Lumber Carriers' association to place all the boats enrolled in the association in the hands of a chartering committee in order to insure a square deal for all members will not become a fact this season, at least.

Every effort was made to secure the signatures of 75 per cent of the membership to the agreement, which would make it operative, but the work went for naught and the proposition will sleep for another season. Meanwhile it will be a scramble for business at the best rates obtainable.

If the plan had carried, all chartering would have been done by the committee, and if the trade became depressed the boats would be withdrawn in order to hold up the rates. The committee was also to look out for dispatch at both the loading and unloading ports.

Some owners of lumber tonnage express disappointment that the plan did not go through.

It is not known when another meeting of the association will be held.



Driving in a Driving Rain

at one time might have been considered a very foolish thing to do, but if you wear a good raincoat and a "LITHOLIN" Waterproofed Linen Collar you'll really enjoy it—yes if your footgear doesn't.

"LITHOLIN" Waterproofed Linen Collars defy the worst rain or snowstorm. If they get a bit muddy, your man can wash them off. No laundries for "LITHOLIN," thank you. At collar shops or of us. Collars, 25 cents. Cuffs, 50 cents.

NO CHANGE IN ROUTE.

St. Lawrence Fleet Will Remain on Its Present Run.

A dispatch from Montreal to the effect that the boats of the Great Lakes & St. Lawrence Transportation company will soon desert Montreal and will deal with American ports is denied at the office of D. T. Helm, agent at Duluth. He says there is nothing to the report. The dispatch says that the steamers of this line would use the Erie canal, which, of course, is impossible.

Two of the boats of the line have been chartered for the year to carry steel rails and ore.

Ashtabula Closed Tight.

Ashtabula, Ohio, May 1.—The longshoremen strike has thrown hundreds of men out of employment at Ashtabula. The harbor is closed tight. Many boats partially unloaded and others waiting to be unloaded are tied up. No trouble is expected. The Pennsylvania and Lake Shore roads, today, laid off about twenty yard crews each. More will be laid off tomorrow.

Her First Trip Here.

The steamer Susquehanna of the Anchor line arrived in Duluth today. It is a rather peculiar circumstance that although having sailed on the Great Lakes for over twenty years this is the first time she has ever been on Lake Superior. She has operated exclusively between Buffalo and Chicago up to this time.

The Rees Released.

Cheboygan, May 1.—After jettisoning about 600 tons of coal, the wrecker Favorite yesterday afternoon released the steamer W. D Rees from Poe's reef. Steam pumps have been put aboard and are now keeping the vessel free of water. She will proceed to her destination under her own power.

Dozens of New and Charming Spring and Summer Suits Are Ready Tomorrow, Wednesday, May 2nd.

With the scarcity of desirable materials—the scarcity of competent hands to turn out High-Class Garments properly, and the scarcity of Fashionable shades — the Garment Trade has never been in such a position for delivery of Fine Garments as now!

We say this, that our trade may fully appreciate what it means to be able to get desirable Garments at prices we are able to offer at this time.

Circumstances such as the San Francisco earthquake cannot be foreseen. The trade out there was the heaviest they had for many seasons, and buyers of important houses were in the market at the time of the catastrophe picking up novelties for their stores. When the news of the calamity came—buyers immediately cancelled.

Makers could not afford to hold these goods which were already in workrooms, so had to dispose of them to their best advantage. Our firm was fortunate in having our buyer on the ground—the result is that you are able to get NOW the best values in High-Class Garments that we have ever been able to offer our trade!

Rich and effective styles in an almost endless variety of beautiful shades and models, starting at $19.50, $22.50, $25, $27.50, $29.50, $32.50, $35, $37.50, $39.50, $42.50, $45 and $47.50, at a saving in each and every instance of from $10 to $25—and right at the very beginning of the spring and summer season!

¶ We planned with our makers to hurry their deliveries, so we would be able to show fairly complete lines during the first week of May, and they have begun to arrive!

The Values Are Absolutely the Best We Have Ever Been Able to Offer Our Trade

¶ Materials that have been unusually scarce were picked up in small quantities and made up into the later models and so attractively priced are they that we anticipate the Largest May Trade we have ever known!

Many lines that were made up for San Francisco firms were naturally cancelled as soon as the disaster was heard of, and many of their lines, too, we were able to buy at much less than their regular prices.

¶ We can give you a fairly intelligent idea of the values you can get in newspaper type—though it is really neccessary to see them to get the proper cenception of their real worth—for instance

Suits that ordinarily are priced at $49.50 can now be bought for $35.00
Suits that ordinarily are priced at $62.50 can now be bought for $47.50
Suits that ordinarily are priced at $45.00 can now be bought for $32.50
Suits that ordinarily are priced at $39.50 can now be bought for $27.50
Suits that ordinarily are priced at $29.50 can now be bought for $18.50

¶ This is about the range of prices and comparison of values, and in making these comparisons we wish to be absolutely fair, for we fully realize that it would be useless to exaggerate these values in the newspapers and have you come to the store and fine that we have in any way misrepresented facts.

To Have Our Regular Garment Stock Compare in Value to Our Later Purchases

We Shall, Beginning With Tomorrow, Reduce Many of Our High-Class Garments From Our Regular Stocks.

¶ And, offer unusual values in Tailored Suits and the more Dressy Gowns of Fine Voiles over Silk, reductions ranging from $10 to $25 according to price.

¶ All are exclusive novelties that would be difficult to describe in newspaper type as there are but one of a kind—many of them are made entirely over silk, and have been designed and made by the best garment makers in the land.

CIRUMSTANTIAL EVIDENCE.

It Endangers the Necks of Many Innocent Men.

That circumstantial evidence has put the noose around the necks of innocent men, and that it has sent innocent men to prison, will be admitted readily enough, says the Brooklyn Telegram. A young man had been surprised while in the sleeping room of the head of the family, and had escaped by jumping through a window. He was pursued, but got away.

Two hours later a stranger in the city was arrested. The man and his wife, who saw him, positively identified the young man, as did those who had joined in the pursuit. To his attorney, a personal friend of mine, he persisted in protesting his innocence, but could not account for himself at the time the crime was committed, except by saying he took a long walk to the city. The attorney, who at first believed his client guilty, looked up his record and became convinced that the young man was innocent, but his conviction seemed a foregone conclusion.

One day the lawyer met a man on the street whom he mistook for his client. Upon asking him how he had obtained bond, the stranger replied that the lawyer evidently mistook him for some one else.

An idea struck the lawyer. The stranger looked as though he was in hard luck, and a proposition to sit in the courtroom during the trial was readily accepted. The lawyer concealed the double until the case was called. Then he had the real prisoner sit behind him, where he could not be seen, the accused being small and my friend quite large. The double was seated in the prisoner's dock. Every witness identified the man positively, and the prosecuting attorney looked fully satisfied until the supposed prisoner was put on the stand and it was shown that he was not the defendant. Subsequently a convicted burglar made a confession, and among the crimes of his commission was the one with which my friend's client had been charged.

Circumstantial evidence convictions are much less frequent now than formerly, and the average American jury is inclined to give the prisoner the benefit of every doubt.

In 1870 John Maley, of Harrisville, W. Va., was sentenced to life imprisonment for murdering his wife with arsenic. Twenty years afterward it was accidentally discovered that the poison was given to Mrs. Maley by the servant through a mistake for medicine, and that, frightened by the result, she permited Maley to be convicted.

In June, 1885, John Crow mysteriously disappeared from a little town in Michigan. It was suposed that he had been murdered, and suspicion fell upon John Van Nieman, a brother-in-law of the missing man.

Circumstantial evidence governed the porsecution of Van Nieman, and he was convicted and sentenced to life imprisonment. He served 10 years in the Jackson prison, Michigan. However, Crow was not dead at all.

Crow, in his wanderings about the world, one day happened to read in an old newspaper the story of his murder by poor John Van Nieman. Thereupon in April 1894, he set about to get Van Nieman out of the Jackson penitentiary. As already stated, the unfortunate man served ten years. He presented a claim to the state, but whether or not he received anything, I'm unable to state.

George Nelson, a fresco painter, had the pleasure of spending two years in the San Quentin (Cal.) prison, because his voice sounded like that of a robber named Dorsey. He was charged with robbery, and attempted to prove an alibi by a Swede and his wife, at whose place he secured his supper. Through fear of being implicated in the crime the Swede and his wife denied that they had ever set eyes upon Nelson.

Upon circumstantial evidence a Sacramento jury convicted him, and he was sentenced to ten years' imprisonment. Two years afterward two men, Shim and Dorsey, were arrested in the East and brought back to the coast. It had been discovered that they, instead of Nelson, had committed the robbery.

W. F. Harmon, a young inventor, of San Francisco, spent four years across the bay as a penalty for the forgery of Louis L. Trowbidge, an all-around crook. When Trowbridge was in St. Louis, in 1893, he was informed that Harmon was serving time for his crime. He worried over the matter and finally gave himself up. However, this did Harmon little good for his term had expired a month previous.

THE SALTON DESERT.

Techhical World: It was there, on the lower Colorado river, that "Capt. Smith" found the lame turtle, and so won its gratitude by healing it that it returned in later years and offered its sevices as an animated ferry when the captain was on an island threatened with a rising flood.

On yonder mesa, sloping upward from Volcano Springs is the "invisible city," where the clangor of street car bells and all the hubbub of a metropolis can be heard, but where only the gravelly soil, the dreaary mountains and the scant, dwarfed vegetation can be seen.

Near Superstition Mountains is the spring of natural gin, where the coyote, the gray wolf, the fox and the wild fowl are on perpetual debauch; and near by is the hill from which flows natural ink. In the same vicinity is the mine of crystal which makes perfect pens, and the deposit of asbestos where one can tear off sheets of blotting paper ready made.

It was in the Superstition Mountains that Otto Schmidt found the invisible serpents with glass cups on their tails that revolved and produced beautiful music. It was in this desert, too, that an ingenious Yankee found a group of camels, abandoned in early days by the army, and by siphoning water from their sacks was able to irrigate a farm, while the animals plied back and forth between the river and the farm, ever keeping up the water supply.

Now the grim valley, rendered wonderfully fertile by irrigation, is the home of 8,000 thriving people. Recently the Colorado river, breaking through the old bounds, began again to run into the valley which it formerly occupied, but now great steel and concrete dams are being built, and the river will be forever shut out, except as it is needed for navigation purposes.

TONGUE PUMPS LIFE BACK.

The Searchlight: Rhythmical traction of the tongue has long been one of the most effective means of reviving a person who has been drowned. Dr. Laborde, who has carried on extensive investigation on the effect of tongue traction as a means of resuscitation, maintains that often, although the organism has apparently ceased to live externally, it lives internally. That is to say, life is still latent, and while there is latent life there is hope of saving a drowned or asphyxiated person. The function which is most necessary to revive is the respiratory.

Experimenting upon dogs, Dr. Laborde found that two or three hours after apparent death had set in it was sometimes possible to secure resuscitation. A vigorous half-bulldog, weighing thirty-five pounds, was chloroformed to such an extent that respiration had entirely ceased. After a quarter of an hour's traction of the tongue the animal came to. The experiment was tried again until complete asphyxiation had occurred, and traction was not resorted to till five minutes later.

The dog, which had been named Lazarus, this time appeared to be dead. One hour and two hours of traction followed with no result, but after another half hour a respiratory cough showed that life was present. The dog soon revived. It occurred to Dr. Laborde that it would be a good idea to substitute a mechanical device for the cloth-covered hand. The first apparatus made was driven by clockwork. The more improved apparatus now used is operated by an electric motor. By means of this improved instrument it is possible to subject the tongue to continuous traction for three hours, if such period be necessary.

To spend 30 minutes a day in reading Herald want ads. may prove to be the most profitable "side-line" of business you ever undertook.

WHEAT IS STRONGER

Prices Go Up in All of the American Markets.

Flax is Slightly Higher —Deliveries About a Half Million.

Duluth Board of Trade, May 1.—Wheat was higher in all the American markets today, although prices were lower in Liverpool and wet weather continued in the West and Southwest. Liverpool closed ½d to ¼d lower, and Antwerp unchanged. No deliveries of wheat were made in the local market so far as learned.

The May option closed ⅝c higher in Duluth, ⅛-¼c in Chicago, 1c in Minneapolis, ½-⅝c in New York and Kansas City, ¼c in St. Louis, and ⅜c in Winnipeg. The July option closed ½-⅝c higher in Duluth, ⅛-¼c in Chicago, ⅜c in Minneapolis, New York and Winnipeg, ⅛c in St. Louis, and ¼c in Kansas City.

Corn was higher in Chicago, the July option closing ¼-⅜c up. Corn was unchanged in Liverpool. July oats closed unchanged in Chicago.

Primary receipts of wheat were 360,000 bus, last year 205,000 bus. Shipments 563,000 bus, last year 457,000 bus. Clearances of wheat and flour aggregated 420,000 bus.

Bradstreet reports a decrease of 4,073,000 bus in the world's visible supply of wheat. East of the Rockies there was a decrease of 4,773,000 and in Europe and afloat an increase of 700,000 bus.

Primary receipts of corn were 596,000 bus, last year 170,000 bus. Shipments 428,000 bus, last year 403,000 bus. Clearances of corn 47,000 bus. The visible supply of corn decreased 2,749,000 bus.

Wheat was quiet in the Duluth market. May wheat opened ¼c higher at 78¾c and advanced to 79½c at 12:50. The price declined at the close, which was 79½c, a gain of ⅝c over yesterday. July wheat opened ¼c higher at 79¾c, advanced to 80½@¾c and declined to 80¾c. The closing price was 80-¼c, a gain of ½-⅝c over yesterday. September wheat closed ¼c higher at 78½c.

Flax was quiet. Prices were 1¼c lower in Antwerp and unchanged in London. A small amount of flax was worked for export. Direct deliveries or flax were 100,000 bus, but the contracts taken from the clearing house made the actual deliveries aggregate about 500,000 bus.

May flax opened ¼c higher at $1.15¾, declined to $1.15½, advanced to $1.16⅜, declined to $1.16 and rallied to $1.16¼. The closing price was $1.16 unchanged from yesterday. July flax opened ¼c higher at $1.17½, declined to $1.17, advanced to $1.18 and ranged between that and $1.17½ during the rest of the session. The closing price was $1.17⅜, a gain of ⅛c over yesterday. September flax opened ¼c higher at $1.17¾, declined to $1.17¼, rallied to $1.17⅞ and closed at $1.17¾, a gain of ¼c over yesterday. October flax opened unchanged at $1.16, fell off to $1.15¾, advanced at the close to $1.16¼, a gain of ¼c over yesterday.

May oats and oats to arrive and on track were ⅛c higher and other coarse grains unchanged.

THE CHICAGO MARKET.

Good Demand by Commission Houses Gives Wheat Firmness.

Chicago, May 1.—The wheat market was firm at the opening today on a good demand by leading commission houses. Offerings were small. The weather conditions rather favored lower prices, but the fact that the Liverpool market failed to respond to the decline of yesterday here offset the rains in the West and Southwest. July wheat opeend ⅛c to ¼c higher at 79¾c to 79¼c and sold up to 79½c. Minneapolis, Duluth and Chicago reported receipts of 240 cars, against 246 cars last week and 168 cars one year ago.

The market was firm all day. The high point for July was at 79¾@¾c. The close was firm and ¼ up at 79¼c.

The corn market was firm, chiefly because of reports of wet weather. Trading was not active. The July option was unchanged to a shade up at 46⅝@46¼c to 46⅝c and sold up to 46⅝@½c. Local receipts were 389 cars, with 189 of contract grade.

Like wheat prices were firm all day, and July closed ⅛@⅜c above the close of yesterday, and at the high point of the day. Final quotations were 46⅜c.

There was little trading in oats, and little news affecting the market, but prices were steady in sympathy with other grains. July was unchanged to a shade lower at 31⅜c to 31⅝@¾c and advanced to 31¼c. Local receipts were 251 cars.

Provisions were steady. July pork, unchanged at $15.90; lard, unchanged to 2½c higher at $8.75 to $8.77½; ribs, 2½c lower at $8.67½.

Closes: Wheat—May, 78¾c; July, 79¼c. Corn—May, 47¼c; July, 46⅝c. Oats — May, 32⅜c; July, 31⅝@¼c. Pork—May, $15.55; July, $15.85. Lard—May, $8.60; July, $8.75. Ribs—May, $8.45; July, $8.67½. Grain Gossip.

Logan & Bryan, Chicago: Wheat — There was a complete change in sentiment today, the buying side of wheat during the morning, which gave all months some recovery from yesterday's prices and late in the session the trade was so dull that the pressure did not off-set the early advance. The net gains, however, were limited. The trade had expected rather free deliveries May 1st, and nearly all the available wheat in Chicago houses went around on the early morning delivery. It is about an even chance whether the wheat delivered today will be delivered out again or whether some of the elevator people who delivered it out may want to take it back again. That is an open question. For the present what most concerns the trade is the progress of the new crop as indicated by weather conditions. Numerous authorities in the Southwest were busy sending crop damage claims today, covering portions of Illinois, Kentucky, Missouri and Kansas, but the reports are very indefinite, and not accepted at their face value. We look for a good trading situation in the July and September wheat, with some actual crop damage about the only hope of the bull forces at the present.

Corn—This corn market did today what it has done several times of late, demonstrated its strength and staying qualities in the face of what might be bearish influences. The lake strike is on and shipping reduced. Yet corn prices for the day show ⅝c gain for May and 4c to ⅝c gain for the other months. There are reasons why the lake situation is not very serious at the moment. It is not believed the strike will last long. Chicago has already shipped the bulk of her corn. The wet weather, if long continued, may become a bull factor.

Wisconsin Grain & Stock Company: Wheat has done very much better today. Sentiment was bullish from the start and congestion on the short side of the market. Liverpool and continental markets fail to respond to our weakness of Monday. Broomhall cabled a review on surplus stocks in Argentina, in which he believes it will be advisable to accept the fact that the exports this year from that country will probably be less than in 1905. The feature in the news is the large deliveries of 3,240,000 bus at Minneapolis and 2,000,000 at Chicago. Minneapolis deliveries may reach 5,000,000 or 6,000,000 bus. Millers as a rule took the contract stock. At Minneapolis shipments and milling requirements are very much over receipts, and for three days this week stocks in elevators have decreased 375,000 bus. The Southwest sent a lot of crop damage reports, and for a time they had an effect on the market. A Kansas City message claimed that after tabulating reports from every county in the state, the condition in Kansas was only 60.7. Inglis, who is traveling constantly in the Southwest, says prospects were fair to good. The principal item of strength is the manner in which our stocks are disappearing to millers and shippers. The situation is not a week one, by any means, and a further decline is not probable. As we said in our letter yesterday, we would buy July wheat on all weak spots.

United Kingdom—The condition of the crop is moderate.

Germany—The crops are in fair condition with supplies light.

Bulgaria—Weather conditions are favorable.

Roumania—Beneficial rains have fallen and prospects are good.

Russia—Good rains have fallen and crop reports are very favorable. Supplies at Odessa are light, elsewhere fair to good.

Spain—The outlook for the crops is favorable.

THE EQUITABLE'S NEW BUSINESS DECREASES.

New York, May 1.—A financial statement of business for the first quarter of 1906 was given out at a meeting of the directors of the Equitable Life Assurance society today and a number of amendments to the bylaws were adopted to take effect May 31. It is provided that the president and first vice president should be elected annually; actuary, secretary, treasurer and controller shall be appointed by the board of directors, but all the other officers shall be appointed by the president subject to the confirmation by the board. This last amendment includes the second and third vice presidents. Messrs. Tarbell and Wilson. The office of fourth vice president occupied by W. H. MacIntyre was abolished.

The financial statement showed that premiums on new busines were $1,160,496, a decrease of $1,383,147.

ENORMOUS LIQUIDATION CAUSED DROP IN STOCKS

Prices Fell With Great Violence in the Final Hour.

Feverish Rallies Ineffective and Market Closed in Great Disorder.

New York, May 1.—The advance in prices of stocks in progress yesterday was continued in the opening dealings in the stock market today. Changes in the majority of active speculative leaders were narrow, but in some of the specialties there were wide rebounds. International Pump jumped 5½; Pacific Coast, 2; Anaconda, 3, and Sloss-Sheffield, 2½. Northern Pacific rose 1½; Great Northern preferred about a point, and Louisville & Nashville, Denver & Rio Grande and Consolidated Gas, large fractions.

Stocks had a moderate setback after the opening and then fluctuated uncertainly. Reading and Brooklyn Transit were bought heavily and showed considerable strength, but the rise in the other leaders was slight. Pullman rose 7¼, Pacific Coast 5¾, Atlantic Coast Line 1½, Reading and United States Rubber 1⅛, and Delaware & Hudson, and Brooklyn Transit 1. While the market was selling off Consolidated Gas was driven 1⅝ below yesterday and Great Northern 1⅝, but made partial recoveries on the rally.

The demand became insignificant at the higher level and prices sagged. Colorado Fuel fell 2 below last night. Smelting 2¾ and Northern Pacific 1½. St. Paul and Northwestern 2 and United States Steel, Union Pacific, Atchison 1 to 1¼. There were advances in Minneapolis, St. Paul & Soo of 1½, the preferred 3, Wisconsin Central preferred, International Paper preferred 1 to 1¼. Bonds were heavy at noon.

Large selling orders were distributed and practically all stocks declined a point or more. Great Northern preferred slumped 6, Northern Pacific 5, Anaconda 4, Northwestern and Consolidated Gas 3, Smelting 2¾, Union Pacific, Reading and Canadian Pacific 1⅝ to 1¾.

A sligat rally occurred in the middle of the afternoon, but it did not last long, the traders putting new lines of stock out at the highest level, and forcing prices to the lowest. Copper and Pressed Steel Car scored losses of 2 points, Reading, St. Paul and Tennessee Coal 2¾, and Consolidated Gas 3⅝.

Enormous liquidation poured into the market again in the final hour, when the call money rate rose to 10 per cent, and the calling of loans forced selling for speculative account. Prices fell with great violence to far below last week's lowest. Covering of shorts induced some feverish rallies which proved ineffective and the market closed in great disorder.

Stock Gossip.

Logan & Bryan to Paine, Webber & Co.: The market slumped badly in the last hour, with the closing practically at the bottom. The opening of the market was strong and prices generally made some further advances over yesterday's close, but the pace could not be maintained. We had a substantial recovery from the violent break of Friday and Saturday, and many shorts had been forced to cover. The buying power being exhausted, removed the responsibility for the rally. Today's decline was helped by sharp advance in call money to 9 per cent and rumors that the government is about to investigate the Standard Oil trust. We have had a fearful decline in stocks from the top prices made last January, but the changed conditions, wrought by the San Francisco disaster in forcing liquidation by insurance companies, removes any hope for easier money conditions, in fact changing the financial conditions entirely. All these have made some good bears out of former excellent bulls. We feel we would still take advantage of the bulges to sell stocks.

Walker Bros. to Paine, Webber & Co.: The market today showed continued heavy liquidation which was forced throughout most of the day. There was some strength early, but this was shortlived and standard stocks like St. Paul sold off without any apparent reason and had a most unsettling effect. The market is aversely affected by the high money rates, although by many this was thought to be in connection with interest payments due today. The market closed at or near the lowest prices of the day.

The Cotton Market.

New York, May 1.—The cotton market opened steady at an advance of 2 points and worked up to a net gain of 4@8 points on covering by nearby shorts and bull support which was encouraged by steady cables, expectations that the week report at midday would indicate too little rain in the Eastern belt and continued firm spot markets. There was considerable realizing at the advance and the market eased off in the middle of the morning with the crop months relatively easy under Southern selling through wire houses. Prices shortly after 11 o'clock were 2@4 points higher on near months, but unchanged to 2 points lower on later positions. Trading was not more than moderately active.

Spot closed quiet; middling uplands, 11.75; ditto gulf, 12.00. Sales, 46,100 bales. Futures closed quiet and steady; May, 11.15; June, 10.96; July, 10.95; August, 10.78; September, 10.47; October, 10.39; November, 10.39; December, 10.41; January, 10.45; February, 10.48; March, 10.51.

Copper Gossip.

Boston to Paine, Webber & Co.: Certainly the action of the stock market today justified all our bearish predictions which we have given freely for the past few weeks. With the money market in the condition it is, stocks are bound to sell lower and our best posted customers are taking advantage of every rally to get rid of all their long stocks. The market this morning furnished unusual chance for liquidation at high prices. We advise all our customers to have cash instead of stocks for the present.

New York Money.

New York, May 1.—Money on call strong, 4@10 per cent; ruling rate 4¼, last loan 9, closing bid 8, offered at 10. Time loans steady, sixty and ninety days and six months, 5¼@6 per cent; prime mercantile paper, 5½@6 per cent. Sterling exchange steady at $4.84.25@30 for demand and at $4.81.20@25 for sixty days' bills; posted rates, $4.82@84 and $4.84.50@4.85; commercial bills, $4.81. Bar silver, 66c; Mexican dollars, 50½c. Government bonds and railroad bonds heavy.

Treasury Balances.

Washington, May 1.—Today's statement of the treasury balances in the general fund exclusive of the $150,000,000 gold reserve in the division of redemption shows: Available cash balance, $157,436,225; gold, $69,234,297; gold certificates, $49,955,180.

THE PRODUCE MARKETS.

The following prices, with the exception of those on hay, feed and meats, are the official quotations of the Duluth Produce exchange, and shippers can rely upon them as being correct. The list is corrected daily by the secretary, and it shows accurately the market condition up to 12 o'clock on the date of issue. The weekly market letter, published on Fridays, is not an official statement of the exchange, but the information is gathered personally from the different dealers.

HAPPENINGS IN THE DAKOTAS

Roman Catholic Church at Wahpeton Destroyed by Fire.

NORTH DAKOTA.

Wahpeton—Fire Saturday evening destroyed St. Adalbert's, a Roman Catholic church, and damaged the residence of Father Gayducek. The fire was discovered by Rose Shebik, the priest's housekeeper. It had started inside the church near the altar, and the highly inflammable furnishings gave it such headway that by the time the department arrived the church was doomed. The firemen turned their attention to saving the residence, and in this partially were successful. The loss is estimated at $10,000. The church building cost between $4,000 and $5,000 and the furnishings were valued at as much more, and the residence was damaged to the extent of about $1,000. There was some insurance upon the church building, but none upon the furnishings. Mrs. B. Simmer, who was helping to take the furniture out of the residence, became frightened at the rapid spread of the flames and jumped from a second-story window, sustaining slight injuries. The origin of the fire is a mystery. There had been no service in the church since the Monday before and no fire of any kind. A defective electric wire may have started it.

Father Gayducek left the city on Tuesday for an extended tour of Europe, but has been telegraphed to and probably will return.

Grand Forks—No trace has been found of Ole Osmundson, aged 21, who disappeared on March 18. He was a student at Grand Forks college and went to his home at Mallory to spend Sunday. He returned here Sunday evening and that was the last seen of him. He had no bad habits, and his father feels confident he will turn up all right in due time.

W. H. Denny, ex-mayor of Williston and a former prominent banker there, who was arrested at Churchs Ferry several days ago on a warrant issued at Williston, charging him with knowingly buying or receiving stolen horses, waived examination and was held to the district court under $2,500 bond, which he furnished. Denny is charged with a conspiracy to rob the cattle men of Valley county, Mont., of their horses. Through habeas corpus proceedings Denny gained his freedom after Governor Sarles had granted a requisition for his return to Montana. The warrant issued at Williston was authorized by Attorney General Frich.

Cando—A young man named Orr was killed while operating a traction threshing engine near Cando. He lost control of the throttle and the engine backed into the separator, catching Orr in such a manner that a broken rib pierced his heart.

Minot—Judge Goss and the county authorities are determined to break up "blind-pigging" in Ward county, and to this end the judge has just passed a severe sentence upon three young men who have pleaded guilty to the charge of maintaining a common nuisance.

The sheriff and his deputies recently raided several buildings which were alleged to exist in the business part of Minot and arrested E. J. Barlow, Cyril Mott, Tony Ennis and John Wilson. The three last named, when arraigned in court, entered pleas of guilty and Judge Goss imposed a sentence of ninety days in jail and a fine of $1,000 in each case.

The fine was ordered to stand as a lien against the property where the alleged blindpigs were said to be maintained. The owner of the property will therefore be obliged to pay $3,000 in fines for renting property to the piggers.

SOUTH DAKOTA.

Pierre—The Northwestern road has filed in the local land office plats for two of its new towns west of the Missouri. One is on section 27, township 2 north, range 26 east, in Lyman county, several miles west of Bovine, and the other on the line between sections 5 and 6, in township 3 north, range 29 east, near Leon in Stanley county.

Sioux Falls—The members of the Odd Fellows' lodges have completed arrangements for the erection of a fine lodge hall. The building will be three stories fronting on Main avenue. The Masons are just completing a new temple at a cost of about $70,000.

Rapid City—The women's clubs are the "Lone Tree" which has come to be one of the landmarks of Rapid. A bench and a small fence will be put around it.

Deadwood—Subscriptions to the San Francisco relief fund aggregate $1,242.80. Chinese of the Black Hills, many of whom have relatives and friends in San Francisco, have subscribed $100.

English Spavin Liniment removes all Hard, Soft or Callous Lumps and Blemishes from horses, Blood Spavins, Curbs, Splints, Sweeney, Ring Bone, Stifles, Sprains, all Swollen Throats, Coughs, etc. Save $50 by use of one bottle. RAILROADS

PASSENGER RATE FIGHT

Central Association Meeting May Be Beginning of a Row.

Road Calls Off Special Rates to San Francisco.

The next meeting of the Central Passenger association will be held before the middle of the month, and the statement is now made that it will bring about one of the sharpest fights that has been seen in railroad business in years. The information comes from the East that the joint passenger agreement is now a dead letter, and that the railroads are only awaiting an opportune time to fly at each other's throats.

The Eastern men make the statement that at the last meeting of the association open threats were made that certain lines are paying commissions to steamship agents, one of them being the Erie road. The same authority says the reason the Erie has not taken action on the question of the differential rate announced by the Grand Trunk was that it has been secretly protecting itself on immigrant business by rebates to the steamship agents.

It is also said that the Grand Trunk, in addition to taking a differential, has been paying commissions to the steamship agents, and that the Wabash has been forced into the same action by the Grand Trunk competition, and that the burden has been lessened by the fact that Eastern railroads have been accepting their proportion of the reduction.

Attention is called to the fact that the Erie said it could not decide on meeting the Grand Trunk rates until President Underwood returned from California. At the same time it is said that President Underwood has been in the East for the past two weeks and no action has been taken even looking to a conference of the executives on this rather tangled problem. It is feared that the real fight will develop about the time of the year when passenger business on the lines most directly interested is the heaviest.

CALLS OFF SPECIAL RATES.

St. Louis Road Holds No Inducements for San Francisco Travel.

The special passenger rates to San Francisco have been called off by the St. Louis railroad. The city declines to receive outsiders except laboring men, and the peculiar situation is presented that the railroads are hustling as many persons away from the coast as they can carry, taking them for nothing if they have no money. This is being done at a time when specially seductive rates are usually offered to induce the public to travel westward.

The result is expected to be this summer that roads reaching north coast points will have all the tourist business they can carry, especially so if the several conventions slated for the summer are diverted to Portland and other north coast points, as is now expected.

As far east as Denver laboring men are offered free fare to San Francisco. They are needed in building up the new city. This demand has not reached as far east as Duluth, but if the necessary supply of hands is not secured before the Far West labor market is satisfied, it is likely that transportation will be offered half way across the continent.

NOT OPPOSED TO CANAL.

E. H. Harriman Talks Before Meeting of Seattle Business Men.

Seattle, May 1.—E. H. Harriman, president of the Union Pacific and allied lines, addressing an audience of Seattle business men last night, denied that he is opposed to the Panama canal, but warned the people against what he termed the "anti-railroad" agitation, which is now so pronounced throughout the country. He said that while water transportation had been encouraged, the people must not forget land transportation, which is of great importance. This is Harriman's first public utterance on the subject of the Panama canal.

He promised the Seattle shippers that the Union Pacific would reach the city as soon as the necessary franchises are granted to enable it to come, adding that construction would be commenced at this end of the line the moment opportunity offered.

Mr. Harriman yesterday, previous to the evening meeting, declared that his road, in entering Seattle, would demand the same concessions that have been granted other lines, and that unless he got them, he would defer building. With an expenditure here already of between $8,000,000 and $10,000,000, Mr. Harriman said his plans in Seattle represented a total expenditure that would mean an annual interest charge of $600,000. But unless he gets franchises satisfactory to the road, he will hold his real estate and refuse to extend.

Incidentally, Mr. Harriman denounced the real estate speculators on the sound who had held up his road, and declared that rather than do any more business which gave speculators a chance to hold up the line, he would wait ten years for the legitimate property valuations. Harriman wants an entrance to his passenger depot over Fourth avenue, which would involve a slight curve to reach the property.

City officials have been trying to keep railroads off this street, and suggested two other thoroughfares. Double and sharp curves, involving difficult operating problems would ensue. Mr. Harriman declared positively that he would not commence building until all the franchise matters are settled in Tacoma and Seattle. Within a year after these grants are had, Mr. Harriman said he will have his line completed.

In Probate Court, Special Term, April 20th, 1906.

In the Matter of the Estate of John W. Van Sant, Deceased:

Letters testamentary on the estate of John W. Van Sant, deceased, late of the County of Scott, State of Iowa, being granted to S. R. Van Sant and N. G. Van Sant,

It Is Ordered, That three months be and the same is hereby allowed from and after the date of this order, in which all persons having claims or demands against the said deceased are required to file the same in the Probate Court of said County, for examination and allowance, or be forever barred.

It is Further Ordered, That Monday, the 6th day of August, 1906, at 10 o'clock A. M., at a General term of said Probate Court to be held at the Probate Office in the Court House in the City of Duluth, in said County, be and the same hereby is appointed as the time and place when and where the said Probate Court will examine and adjust said claims and demands.

And it is Further Ordered, That notice of such hearing be given to all creditors and persons interested in said estate by publishing this order once in each week for three successive weeks in The Duluth Evening Herald, a daily newspaper printed and published at Duluth, in said County.

Dated at Duluth, Minnesota, this 30th day of April, A. D. 1906.

By the Court,
J. B. MIDDLECOFF,
Judge of Probate.

ORDER TO SHOW CAUSE ON FILING PETITION TO SELL LAND—State of Minnesota, Count of St. Louis —ss.

In Probate Court, Special Term, April 30th, 1906.

In the Matter of the Estate of John W. Van Sant, Deceased:

On reading and filing the petition of S. R. Van Sant and N. G. Van Sant, executors, setting forth the amount of personal estate that has come into their hands, the disposition thereof, and how much remains undisposed of; the amount of debts outstanding against said deceased, as far as the same can be ascertained; the legacies unpaid, and a description of all the real estate, excepting the homestead, of which said diseased died siezed, and the condition and value of the respective portions or lots thereof; the persons interested in said estate, with their residences; and praying that license be to them granted to sell Lot 3, Block 76, in Endion Division of Duluth, Minnesota; and it appearing, by said petition, that there is not sufficient personal estate in the hands of said executors to pay the expenses of administration, and that it is necessary for the payment of such expenses, to sell all of said real estate;

It is therefore ordered, that all persons interested in said estate appear before this Court on Monday, the 28th day of May, 1906, at ten o'clock A. M., at the Court House in Duluth, in said County, then and there to show cause (if any there be) why license should not be granted to said executors to sell so much of the real estate of said deceased as shall be necessary to pay such expenses.

And it is further ordered, that this order shall be published once in each week for three successive weeks prior to said day of hearing, in the Duluth Evening Herald, a daily newspaper printed and published at Duluth, in said County.

Dated at Duluth, Minn., this 30th day of April, A. D. 1906.

By the Court,
J. B. MIDDLECOFF,
Judge of Probate.

A CURIOUS INDIAN TALE.

Kuroki, the Jap, Declared to be Sir Hector MacDonald.

Bombay, May 1.—A curious tale is going the rounds of the bazars in India. It is believed by every native that Gen. Kuroki, the marvelous Japanese commander, is no other than Sir Hector MacDonald. Many persons have never believed that the brilliant English general is dead, and not long ago there appeared in the London Times an offer of a reward of $5,000 to any one who had seen his dead body. It is also a fact that Sir Hector was once invited to go to Japan to train the Japanese army, and he actually mentioned it to Lord Roberts. No honor has ever been publicly bestowed on Kuroki, who appears to have vanished as suddenly and mysteriously as he appeared. Even the Japanese, with all their reticence, confessed to a correspondent that Kuroki had much foreign blood in his veins, and one United States journalist declared he was a Dutchman.

Rudyard Kipling first lifted the veil, showing a little of the mysterious workings of the Indian bazars. The celerity with which they spread rumors of events taking place at a great distance is familiar to all Anglo-Indian residents, but invariably baffling to them. The mutiny of the Sepoys was known throughout India almost as soon as it occurred, and it has been an unexplained mystery up to today how the information was so rapidly disseminated.

Broken Through

All old fashioned ideas of beer as a beverage, the athletic and healthy girl of today has, and she finds that after a spin on her wheel, or a game of golf, or in the daily routine of home life, there is nothing that will act like a charm in restoring new life and vigor when weary, as a bottle of our pure and refreshing Moose Brand Beer.

UNION TUGS ARE TIED UP

The Towing Business Comes to a Standstill in Duluth.

Thousands of Men May Soon be Affected by Strike.

According to the orders they received, the firemen of the tugs belonging to the Union Towing company quit work at 6 o'clock last evening and the tugs tied up. This means a cessation of the towing business in Duluth until the strike is settled. It is not known, of course, whether the tug company will try to put in non-union firemen. If the attempt is made, it is probable that the masters and engineers would refuse to work with the non-union men. Capt. Herbert Vrooman, manager of the Union Towing company, had nothing to say about it, except that it seemed a shame to have the tugs tied up on such a night as it was last night with the seas rolling high and the ships outside having difficulty in entering the canal with the current which was running. No other tugs in the harbor are affected, but will do no towing during the strike.

Late yesterday afternoon the steamer Ball Brothers of the Tomlinson fleet left the harbor, beginning a new round trip. This was the first case reported since the strike was called in which a vessel has started a round trip. It is understood that of the Tomlinson fleet several more will leave today and tomorrow. The only question is that of unloading at lower lake ports, where the dockmen are better organized than at the Head of the Lakes. With the Tomlinson boats, the mates are under contract, which enabled the Ball Brothers to leave. Whether or not any of the other mates will break their contracts to take part in the strike is as yet unknown.

The organization of the dockmen at Lake Erie ports and of the elevator men at Buffalo is claimed to be almost perfect and it is expected that there the tie-up will be. The Lake Carriers claim that they are going to operate their boats, but just how they plan to do it is not yet shown.

The longshoremen, it is said, have not figured on tying things up by action here, and have depended solely on the lower ports. At Duluth, affiliated with the longshoremen are the grain trimmers, the lumber shovers and the freight handlers. Of these, the lumber shovers are not affected because of the agreement of the Lumber Carriers' association to recognize the mates' union. At any rate, it is likely that they would not be affected for the further reason that their contract with the Lumber Carriers extends over three years and has still a year to run. The grain trimmers and the freight handlers are said to have only a small organization and are not called out for the reason that there are enough non-union men here in the same business to make the calling out of these union men prove abortive in the way of tying things up.

The coal dock men are not organized at all and claim that it is unnecessary for them to be organized for the reason that they are getting union wages and hours and as that has been the whole bone of contention heretofore, they have been satisfied.

However, it is expected that the tie-up will be complete enough by action at the other end of the route. It is claimed that this stoppage of transportation will be immediately felt in Duluth and the iron country for it means the cessation of work for thousands of men here who are not involved in the principle at stake—that of the Lake Carriers recognizing the mates' union. Such are the ore dock men, the steam shovel men and miners of the range, extra train crews carrying ore down to the ore docks, probably the freight handlers and ore trimmers, and numerous other lines of workmen. This will naturally affect business in Duluth, and merchants and other business men are figuring accordingly.

It is not believed that the strike will be of short duration for the reason that the matter over which the strike is taking place is not a question of wages and hours, which could be compromised or adjusted, but is the principle of recognition of the mates. Both sides are jealous of their rights in the matter and it is given out and believed that each side is prepared to fight to a finish. The longshoremen, who are fighting for the recognition of the mates, have given out the ultimatum that this recognition must take place or no work is to be done. The Lake Carriers on the other hand have practically replied:

"Then, if necessary, no work will be done."

PENGE NOT COMING.

Seamen's Union Not Involved or to Become Involved.

It is believed that the dispatch received from Detroit yesterday to the effect that Secretary Penge of the Seamen's union was coming to the Head of the Lakes in regard to work on the lumber boats, was a case of wrong information given there. The agent of the union at Superior has not yet received word, and says that he is quite positive that Mr. Penge is not coming here, as he has no reason to come, the contracts having been made with the lumber carriers and the lake carriers too, for that matter, and the union proposes to live up to those contracts.

The same dispatch said that the seamen are incensed over the lumber carriers recognizing the mates affiliated with

SMITH IS DEAD.

Outlaw Was Shot Before He Could Draw a Weapon.

Oregon City, Or., May 2.—Frank Smith, the desperado, who killed Policeman Hanlon, of this place last week and who later killed Sheriff Shaver and Capt. Henderson of the Oregon National guard, was killed yesterday in the woods south of New Era, Clackamas county. Smith was surprised in a thicket where he had hidden, and was shot through the head before he could use his weapons.

Harry Draper, of Spokane, had two bloodhounds in leash which were leading him through the woods on the trail of the outlaw. The dogs led Draper within three feet of Smith, who was crouching behind a log.

"Are you Smith?" demanded Draper.

"Yes," was the answer.

Both men reached for their pistols, but Draper was the quicker.

Smith appeared in Canby early yesterday and begged for bread at a bakery. He left immediately but within a short time a posse of fifty men was organized and following his trail.

PLACES OF BUSINESS

Are Rapidly Reopening Throughout City of San Francisco.

All Conditions of Life Are Gradually Becoming More Normal.

San Francisco, May 2.—Conditions of life are gradually becoming more normal in this city, and the work of clearing up the wreck in preparation for rebuilding in the downtown section of the city is going on more rapidly.

Business is being rapidly resumed by retail tradesmen of every description throughout the destroyed districts of the city. George Wittman, chairman of the committee on retail trade, reports that the following places of business are open:

Forty-four butchers, 29 restaurants, 22 bakeries, 22 fruit and vegetable stands, 71 dairies and 15 refreshment parlors, 53 groceries and 71 miscellaneous establishments, including tailors, plumbers, dry goods stores, druggists and cigar stands.

The commission firms located along the water front are doing a thriving business. Yesterday's receipts showed a marked increase over the preceding day, and the prices of dairy goods and some lines of green goods were lower. The business of receiving and dispersing of consignments is running along as smoothly as can be expected under the circumstances. In less than two weeks the garbage question will be

ESCAPES PRISON AND THE ASYLUM

Poisoner, Acquitted on Ground of Insanity, is Paroled.

Fergus Falls, Minn., May 2.—Nels Grenberg, who was tried in the district court in this city in January on the charge of poisoning Halvard Nyman and acquitted on the ground of insanity, was paroled from the insane hospital here yesterday.

The hospital authorities find he is not insane, and have referred the question of his complete discharge to the board of control.

Grenberg confessed that he gave Nyman poison in order to secure his farm, but as Nyman was very low at the time, there was some question as to whether the poison caused his death. The defense also raised the question as to whether Grenberg was mentally responsible at the time he committed the crime.

It was shown that he was hounded by creditors, that Nyman, whom he had a life contract to support, was cross and disagreeable, and the jury, disliking to convict him and feeling some doubt as to his mental responsibility, decided to find him insane. He has been in the hospital three months and fifteen days.

TWO CENT RATE

For International Postage Is Rejected by Convention at Rome.

Rome, May 2.—The committee of the International postal convention, now in session here, has rejected the proposal of the delegate of New Zealand for the establishment of a universal 2-cent postage rate. The proposition was supported only by the delegates of Egypt and the United States.

A motion of the Japanese to reduce the international postage rate to 4 cents was rejected by a majority of three.

Arthur Bingham Walkley of Great Britain, had presented the same proposition, which was abandoned, and instead he proposed to maintain the present rate of international postage, but establishing, after the first fifteen grams, a scale of 2 cents for every fifteen successive grams, which was adopted by a majority of one.

ELECTION ROW

Causes Pat McDonough of St. Paul a Trip to Hospital.

St. Paul, May 2.—(Special to The Herald.)—Pat McDonough, 335 Commercial street, was beaten during an election row in the Connemara Patch, yesterday afternoon, so badly that he had to be taken to the city hospital.

The cause of the row has not been clearly defined. McDonough's version of the actual hostilities was as follows:

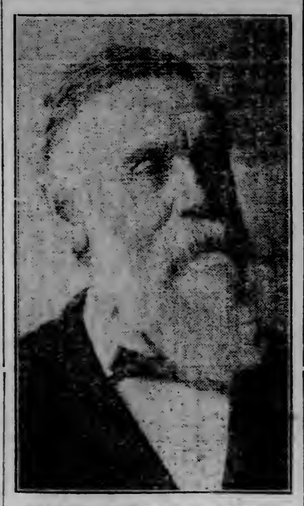
"They picked me up and thrun me down and kicked me in the 'slats' an' mug. When I gets up they knocks me down again, an' when they thinks I'm dead, they skedadles."

McDonough was carried home, and the police ambulance called. Although his injuries were not serious, Acting Surgeon Barton thought it best to take him to the city hospital.

CAUGHT JUST IN TIME.

St. Louis, May 2.—John W. Waterhouse, who came here from Seattle in February and was arrested on the charge of forgery and found guilty, was yesterday sentenced in the criminal court to five years' imprisonment. When Judge Bishop pronounced sentence Waterhouse sprang towards an open window and was just jumping through when a juror leaped from the box and seized him by the coat tail. Deputy sheriffs dragged Waterhouse from the window and a lively fight ensued before the prisoner was subdued.

IS RE-ELECTED THE MAYOR OF ST. PAUL



MAYOR ROBERT A. SMITH.

BUILDING AT A STANDSTILL

General Strike of Structural Iron Workers Begins in Chicago.

Chicago, May 2.—A general strike of structural iron workers took place here today, and building operations, particularly in the business section of the city, are almost at a standstill. About 3,000 men are out. The men demand $5 a day and have been offered a compromise of $4.60 for four months, and $4.80 for the remainder of the year. This offer was refused by the union as was also an offer to arbitrate the questions involved. It is estimated that work aggregating $15,000,000 in value in the central portion of the city has been stopped. The strike has also been made effective against elevated roads, which have been rebuilding and extending their lines.

The strike of the molders begun yesterday has in some measure subsided about one-half of the men being back at work, the employers having in the majority of cases signed the wage scale. A number of the larger employers, however, are in favor of a finish fight, particularly on the question of the "open shop."

CONDUCTOR KILLED.

Run Over by the Engine of His Own Train.

Fairmont, Minn., May 2.—John Uischner, a Northwestern freight conductor, aged 44, was run over by the tender of his train while switching at Fox Lake station Monday evening, and died in this city as a result of his injuries at 4:30 yesterday morning. The left leg was crushed from the knee to the groin. A special train brought his wife from Mason City three hours after the accident. Uischner remained perfectly conscious and gave full directions as to the disposition of his affairs. He leaves a wife and five children and has run on this division since the road was built in 1899.

DEMOCRATS IN CONTROL

Will Continue to Rule St. Paul for the Next Two Years.

Robert Smith Re-elected Mayor by a Plurality of 1,411.

St. Paul, May 2.—(Special to The Herald.)—The Democrats will continue in control of the city government for the next two years. Robert A. Smith, the Democratic candidate, was re-elected yesterday by a plurality of 1,411. This is the smallest plurality Smith has had since 1902, when he went in over Doran by 1,819. Smith's total vote was 13,648.

The following ticket was also elected:

Comptroller—Louis Betz, Democrat.

Treasurer—Otto Bremer, Democrat.

Police judges—John W. Finehout, Republican; Hugo O. Hanft, Democrat.

Assembly—E. C. Mahle, Republican; H. Keller, Republican; H. G. Haas, Democrat; Wm Powers, Democrat; R. D. O'Brien, Democrat; J. J. Regan, Democrat; Frank Yoerg, Democrat; Dr. Whitcomb, Democrat; Charles Kartak, Democrat.

Aldermen—First ward, C. E. Nyberg, Democrat; Second ward, W. J. Menz, Republican; Third ward, F. J. Hebl, Democrat; Fourth ward, F. J. Huber, Democrat; Fifth ward, O. W. Rohland, Democrat; Sixth ward, J. M. Furlong, Republican; Seventh ward, F. L. Tiffany, Republican; Eighth ward, C. H. Gerber, Democrat; Ninth ward, W. J. This shows that the Republicans have a slightly better showing in the common council than they had, but the Democratic control will be supreme.

TWO STRUCK BY A TRAIN

One Man Killed, the Other Badly Injured at St. Paul.

St. Paul, May 2.—(Special to The Herald.)—Otto McGentry of Madison, Wis., was badly injured and a companion, whose name is unknown, was instantly killed, in the Omaha yards, near the Arcade street bridge, shortly after midnight by a freight train. McGentry met the man a short time before the accident. He did not learn his name.

The two men were walking through the yards, when an engine and a caboose backed down upon them. The men did not see it until too late.

Both were struck, McGentry's right leg was cut off, and he suffered numerous contusions and bruises. His companion was decapitated, and his body badly mangled. McGentry's companion was about 35 years old. Both men are laborers.

COUNT WITTE IS DOWN AND OUT

His Enemies Succeed in Removing Him From the Cabinet.

St. Petersburg, May 2.—The resignation of Count Witte as premier has been accepted. He will be succeeded by M. Goremykin, former minister of the interior. The official announcement of the change in the cabinet will be made tomorrow.

FIVE MINES AT ELY ARE CLOSED

And Twenty Railroad Men Laid Off Owing to Lake Strike.

Ely, Minn., May 2.—(Special to The Herald.)—The Chandler, Pioneer, Zenith, Savoy and Sibley mines, being practically all the mines working steam shovels here were closed down this morning for an indefinite period, owing to the strike on the Great Lakes, with instructions to ship as little ore as possible from the pockets. About twenty men employed by the Duluth & Iron Range railroad in the yards here were also laid off.

William Le Beau, chief of police here for the past five years, resigned Monday, and Peter O'Connor was appointed to fill the position. John Lamuth and Alex Winchester were appointed night police by Mayor Densmore.

FATALLY STABBED.

Muscatine, Iowa, May 2.—In a drunken row between Italian laborers working on the Rock Island extension, and inmates of a houseboat, Walter Kiefner was stabbed by an Italian. Kiefner is in the hospital and will die. The Italian made his escape. A posse is scouring the country for him.

Prices Badly Smashed at Opening of the Stock Market.

Heavy Sales Indicate Liquidation of an Important Character.

New York, May 2.—Prices were smashed at the opening of the stock market today as a result of the continuance of the heavy selling which began yesterday afternoon. The rush to dispose of securities seemed to indicate that liquidation of an important character was under way and speculative holders of stocks generally became alarmed and made a precipitate rush to get out of the market this morning. Forced selling was caused by calls for additional margins over night from brokers, to which responses in some cases were lacking or unsatisfactory. Congested selling orders resulted in some wide variations in prices on simultaneous sales at the opening, and orders to sell at the market in other stocks found no bids but at concessions of many points.

At the stock exchange it was believed that the opening break represented further liquidation by certain large operators who were caught in last week's slump. This together with short selling by prominent traders and the absence of support by the big banking interests especially in such stocks as United States Steel, Copper, St. Paul and other active issues accelerated the decline. Toward 11 o'clock the market rallied sharply and some shares sold above last night's prices. The early rate for call money was 8 per cent.

The first hour on the exchange was marked by scenes of wild confusion. The opening attendance was unusually large and most brokers had selling orders. Many of these were at the market and others had stop loss orders. A great many of these orders were uncovered in the first 15 minutes. As usual much of the selling was for out of town account and Boston is reported to have figured to no small extent. The excitement was greatest around the United States Steel, Amalgamated Copper, Union Pacific, St. Paul and Reading trading posts, these stocks largely bearing the brunt of the early attack. The noise and confusion was so great as to be heard almost a block away and the visitors gallery of the exchange was soon filled with sightseers.

TO FIGHT MACHINE

Many Kansas Republicans Oppose Slate Fixed by Bosses.

Railroads Said to Have Arranged Ticket Headed by Hoch.

Topeka, Kas., May 2.—Kansas Republicans met here today in convention to name a full state ticket. Before the gathering was called to order by W. R. Stubbs, chairman of the state central committee, there was every indication of a struggle between the so-called machine element in the party, which had made up a slate, headed by Governor E. W. Hoch, and a faction led by Chairman Stubbs, who opposed the slate, at least for those officers below that of governor. Mr. Stubbs, who has been under the care of an oculist, attended the convention against the orders of his physician. At an anti-machine caucus, last night, he indicated an intense opposition to the slate, but refused to say positively that in his speech today, in opening the convention, he would include Governor Hoch in his attack on the ticket, but also refused to say that he would omit the governor's name when the time came to attack the others. The ticket, the speakers at the caucus asserted, had been selected by the railroads. Governor Hoch, as a matter of fact, is not a "machine" man, but the sentiment expressed was that if the balance of the slate went, he would have to go with it. The caucus selected Samuel S. Benedict for temporary chairman, to popose Abraham W. Smith, previously selected by the machine element, and the first test of strength was expected over the election by the convention of this officer.

W. Y. Morgan, one of the leaders of the slate already prepared, expressed confidence that Governor Hoch and the others on the ticket would be named finally.

Among the other candidates for governor, the most prominent is Judge Ansel B. R. Clark.

EXPLOSION IN TUNNEL INJURES EIGHT MEN.

New York, May 2.—Eight unconscious men were taken out of the McAdoo tunnel under the Hudson river, connecting Jersey City and Manhattan island today, after an explosion in the depth of the tunnel. Five of them were removed to hospitals in Jersey City and four were not expected to recover. The explosion was supposed to have been caused by gas.

BITTERNESS IS INTENSE

On the Part of Miners Toward the State Constabulary.

Trouble Liable to Break Out at Mount Carmel Any Time.

Mount Carmel, Pa., May 2.—Quiet continues here, although trouble may break out at any time owing to the intense bitterness of the residents to the constabulary. All of the people who were shot during the rioting on Monday are alive, although several are expected to die. Despite the threats of the citizens that another battle would result if any of the troopers entered the town, four squads of Capt. Page's men made their appearance on the streets early today. They were all mounted and had their carbines unslung, as they rode slowly through the place. Hundreds of persons gazed on them with astonishment, as no one dreamed the constables would venture into town in such a small force. Burgess Penman and other local authorities quickly passed word for everybody to remain orderly and not insult the troopers. The latter kept a keen watch on all persons, and were ready to use their guns if anyone attempted to use fire arms. The troopers remained here about fifteen minutes, and then proceeded to Locust Gap.

During last night the territory surrounding the Sayre colliery was free of stragglers and angry miners. The captain arranged a system of patrols, such as obtains in the regular army, and the first men out of the stockade to begin the investigation of adjoining territory were the squads passing through this place. These troopers will visit towns and villages within a radius of fifteen square miles, and pay particular attention to the topography of the ground surrounding coal breakers, so that they can procure good positions to repel attacks of mobs in case the latter should attempt to raid non-union men, who, the coal officials say, will be put to work as soon as possible after the Scranton convention, in case that body declares for a strike.

The constabulary are greatly encouraged over Governor Pennypacker's declaration that they acted right in defending themselves here in the two fights with the mob. The officials of the United Mine Workers who have been busy the past forty hours influencing the foreign element of the union to be orderly left today for the Scranton convention after making a final plea to the men not to provoke the constabulary and thus lead to another fight.

Sheriff Sharpless is keeping close watch on the situation and will lose no time in asking for state troops if more serious trouble occurs. Five carloads of strike breakers from the Clearfield region arrived here early today and it is reported that five additional carloads from the same region will reach here later in the day. The men are said to have state miners' certificates entitling them to work in the hard coal fields. Fourteen carloads of men from the soft coal region were run into the Philadelphia & Reading Coal & Iron company's storage yards near Mahoney City. The cars containing the strike breakers are fitted up so that the men can live in them. The cars are guarded by details of coal and iron policemen. In case no strike is declared the Clearfield men will be shipped back home.

GREAT VICTORY FOR AMERICANS

Athletes Take Eleven Out of Twenty-Nine Events at Athens.

Washington, May 2—President Roosevelt is in receipt of a cablegram from James Sullivan, the manager of the American athletes at the Olympian games at Athens, Greece, informing him of the success of the American team in those games. The cablegram reads as follows:

Athens, May 1, 1906. Hon. Theodore Roosevelt, Washington: Americans won hurdle half mile and standing jump today. Final score for stadium events:

American 11 first, 6 seconds, 6 thirds. Total 75 points. Great Britain and all her possessions 4 firsts, 6 seconds and 3 thirds, 39 points.

Greece and Sweden tied for third place. Great athlete victory for America. SULLIVAN.

Athens, May 2.—The Olympic games committee published today, prior to the presentation of the prizes, a full list of the winners. The American took 11 firsts, 6 seconds and 5 thirds out of 29 events, in many of which however, the Americans did not compete. The 3,000 metre walk of the Olympic games was decided today. Stantis, Hungary, won. Time 15 minutes 18 3-5 seconds. Muller, Germany, was second, and Saridakis, Greece, third. Wilkinson, England, was again disqualified for running.

BLOW OF MAN'S FIST KILLS AN IOWA MAN.

Fort Dodge, Iowa, May 2.—Will Church, aged 35, was struck by a bartender named Al Fecht, with the bare fist yesterday afternoon and instantly killed. The men were quarreling over the price of six glasses of beer. Church wanted six for a quarter and the bartender insisted on having 30 cents. Upon his refusal to pay the extra 5 cents Fecht attempted to put Church out of the saloon. Church resisted and Fecht struck him a terrible blow on the point of the jaw, killing him instantly.

SUCCESSOR OF M. WITTE

Has Taken a Prominent Part in Russian Political Life.

Never Mentioned as a Likely Victim of the Terrorists.

St. Petersburg, May 2.—Privy Councillor Goremykin, who succeeds Mr. Witte, was minister of the interior from 1895 to 1899 and has taken a prominent part in Russian political life, especially during the revolutionary period of the last few years. He is greatly interested in agrarian subjects and in April 1905 Emperor Nicholas appointed him chairman of the special commission formed in an endeavor to investigate the agrarian movement, which was causing considerable disturbance in the Caucuses.

M. Goremykin worked industriously with this commission and in many instances made personal investigations instead of relying upon reports. The question was so vast, however, that up to the present time, no definite report has been made by the commission although it was rumored in October, 1905, that a measure had been drafted providing for the distribution of state lands to the peasants on easy terms.

In May 1905, M. Goremykin was mentioned as likely to be the successor of M. Moloff, the minister of agriculture who resigned on the 17th of that month, and for the last two months M. Goremykin has been mentioned several times as likely to succeed Count Witte as premier.

The administration of M. Goremykin as minister of the interior was not marked by any of the harshness which had been so prevalent during the administration of several of his predecessors, and his name has never been mentioned as one of the likely victims of the terrorists, who assassinated two of his immediate predecessors.

APPROACHED THE RECORD

But Two Aprils at Duluth Warmer Than the Last.

But two Aprils since the weather bureau at Duluth began keeping records, thirty-six years ago, were warmer than the one just closed, and apart from those two, not another was as warm.

The mean or normal temperature for the month was 45 deg. In 1900 there was a mean of 45 deg, and in 1878 of 44 deg. The mean for the month during the thirty-six years has been 38.6 deg. The warmest temperature recorded during the month was 75 deg. on the 17th, and the coldest 24 deg on the 1st.

The month was not a wet one, having a total precipitation of 1.51 inches, against a monthly average of 2.10 inches. The accumulated deficiency in precipitation since Jan. 1 has been 1.09 inches.

Prevailing winds were from the northeast, and the total movement was 11,382 miles, with an hourly velocity of 15.8 miles, and a maximum of forty-eight miles an hour on the 21st.

There were 11 clear days, 13 partly cloudy and 6 cloudy.

MANY STRIKERS RETURN TO WORK

The City of Paris Has Again Resumed Its Usual Appearance.

Paris, May 2.—The city has resumed its usual appearance, the military and police patrols have been withdrawn and most of the labor organizations, including the striking jewelers, have resumed work. Several arrests for interfering with liberty to work were made.

About 1,500 painters have struck, but on the whole the strike is breaking up.

The agitation increased during the afternoon, especially in the neighborhood of the labor exchange. Groups of strikers gathered on the Place de la Republique, but were dispersed.

The printers have decided to continue the strike. The carriage makers are holding a meeting to discuss the situation and probably will continue the strike.

The stonemasons will, it appears, return to work if their demand for an eight hour day is granted.

Traffic and other means of communication are proceeding as usual. The authorities believe that the vigorous action of the police and the military yesterday has had the effect of completely breaking up the revolutionary movement.

Some of the individual trades will probably seek to prolong the period of unrest, but the general nature of the movement no longer causes any alarm.

BONAPARTE POISONED.

Washington, May 2.—Advices from Baltimore this morning were to the effect that Secretary Bonaparte rested easily during the night, but will not be able to return to his duties here for some time. The physicians are now agreed that his illness is the result of ptomaine poisoning.

DEFENDANTS MAKE ANSWER

Attorneys File Papers in a Number of Cases.

This was the opening day of the May term of the district court this morning and several of the attorneys took advantage of their presence at the courthouse to file their answers to the complaints entered in various cases.

C. S. Wilson, who represents the defendants in three personal injury cases for trial this term, filed answers in the cases of William Hintalla against the D. G. Cutler company, Emil Kallio against Swallow & Hopkins, and Emil Karkkainen against the Cass Mining company. In all three answers general denials to facts alleged in the complaint are entered and contributory negligence is charged.

S. T. and William Harrison, who represent the Connecticut Mutual Life Insurance company, which has been sued for over $4,000 damages by Mrs. Nora Reilly for injuries received in falling in a hole in front of the company's property during some sidewalk building, alleges that it awarded the contract to a carpenter named Benjamin Low and if there was any negligence in providing for the safety of the public it was the contractor's fault, not that of the owner.

Through its attorney, John Martin, the W. T. Bailey Lumber company has filed answers to the suits brought by N. G. Johnson and Peter Nelson, woodsmen, to recover wages for working in a camp. It is alleged that the men were hired to stay until the spring of 1906 at wages of from $30 to $35 per month, the understanding being that they were to be paid at the rate of $26 a month if they did not stay until spring. The lumber company says the men were unable to do the work for which they were hired and were discharged last January, being paid off at the rate of $26 per month.

REPORT ON OIL INVESTIGATION

By Commissioner Garfield Has Been Made to President.

Washington, May 2.—President Roosevelt, Attorney General Moody and James R. Garfield, commissioner of corporations today discussed the report which Commissioner Garfield has prepared on the operations of the so-called oil trust. The investigation was under authority of a house resolution. It has been in progress several months. The final report of Mr. Garfield was presented to the president today. The conference today concerned particularly the special message which the president is to send to congress, with Commissioner Garfield's report on Friday.

The president's message, it is expected, will contain a sharp arraignment of the methods of the trust, but no intimation of its precise contents has been given.

Festival Concert at Swedish M. E. Church Well Received.

A festival concert took place last evening at the First Swedish M. E. church, corner of Twentieth avenue west and Third street. This was arranged, conducted and taken part in by the old and young women of the church and the building was packed to the doors. It is claimed that few if any entertainments given by the church have been as successful financially or in the way of entertainment.

Following the program refreshments were served by the men of the church and they say that the coffee made by County Commissioner John Sundeca was a marvel for aroma and richness of taste.

Miss Alice Sjoselius sang two numbers and had to respond to a hearty encore for each. The ladies' choir gave three numbers, the ladies' trio two numbers, a piano solo was given by Miss Violet Smith and a piano duet was given by Miss Esther Anderson and Ida Broman. Each of these numbers was well received.

EXCUSES IN COURT.

Some Plausible Enough to Clear Defendants of Charges.

London Globe: To frame excuses that will melt the magisterial heart requires the skill of an artist, and is, indeed, a fine art—unless it is a science—and one in which a genius alone can hope to succeed. Conventional excuses are of little avail, and yet a cursory study of the examples here given will show that the successful excuse should be at least plausible, for totally irrelevant pleas are rarely accepted.

A foreign lady, poor but dishonest, for instance who entered a temporarily vacant house, annexed tablecoth, clock, lamp and the provender provided for the meals of the real occupants, on being arrested and brought before the judge, addressed him as follows, but without avail: "M. le Juge d'Instruction, your face is beautiful, bland, and benign. It reminds me of my deceased husband, a man always gay and smiling, who would never have refused a favor to a distinguished woman. I am the authoress of a novel, 'My Angel.' Release me and I promise to immortalize you in my next work. I demand my liberty." The judge, however, was ungallant enough to doubt her sanity, and the case—unlike that which was persually defended by a young lady, who stated that she had bargained for a piece of tapestry with figures worked "as handsome an appearance as my Lord the president there; but the plaintiffs palm me off with figures as ugly as that of monsieur the plaintiff's advocate" — was lost.

A man who some time ago was charged at Bow street with being drunk and disorderly on being asked what he had to say was discharged when he put forward the following trite excuse: "It's in a nutshell, your worship—too much liquor, no solids, collapse and consequences." This was very much to the point, especially when compared to the reply of a woman aged 82, who was charged at Lambeth with the same offence shortly afterward. "Ah! your worsalp," she explained, "I'm the mother of twelve children, that's what I am. And the last time it was twins—here they are now—and that was only seven weeks ago." Presumably, his worship considered the infliction of twins as a sufficient extenuation for the offence, for he told her to go away and not do it again.

The plea of a boy burglar when recently brought up at Harlesden for having entered a house and stolen a water can was somewhat unique. Having confessed to breaking into the house by forcing the back window catch, he stated that all he did to the house was to wind the clocks!

Some little time ago a man found in possession of two rabbits offered as an explanation the statement that he saw five rabbits in a ditch, that he fell on them and killed two by breaking their necks. The magistrate decided that the story, though picturesque was unconvincing.

When some little time ago a milkman was called upon to explain at Lambeth why his wares contained 6 per cent of water, he remarked: "It was raining Heaven's hard, and the sample was taken in the middle of the street," an explanation that was considered sufficient, but the loitering individual who gently suggested that a formidable jimmy found hidden in a secret pocket of his coat was his kitchen poker failed to get the benefit of the doubt that did not exist.

Ingenious, too, was the plea of a man tried at Kidderminster for coining and uttering counterfeit coin, but asked that his wife should be acquitted on the ground that when married she was told to love, honor and obey, and that she had only acted up to her marriage vows.

The man who said he stole two fowls in order to see if his nerves were sufficiently braced up to permit his passing a constable without trembling with fear made a splendid effort to get away from the conventional, but "the most ingenious defence" the magistrate at Marlborough street ever heard, according to his own statement, was pleaded in 1901 by a laborer charged with stealing a fur necklet from a shop. Said he: "I plead guilty of having it on my arm, but the winds blew in there. The man in the shop said it was, nis, and I said, 'All right; take it.'"

PEOPLE WHO EAT CLAY.

Chicago News: Clay eaters are found in the West Indies, Honduras and some of the regions round the Orinoco. They are not necessarily of any particular tribe, for even whites have fallen victims to this degrading and fatal habit. The habit is contracted at as early an age as 12 years, and the craving once acquired appears to be irresistible. Confirmed clay eaters will lie down and lick the earth where the edible clay is found.

They suffer from chronic dyspepsia and emaciation; but, in spite of the pain and weakness, they cannot do without the clay any more than the confirmed drunkard can do without his alcohol. In some localities this clay is whitish gray, sometimes yellowish pink. There appears to be lime in it, and also the remains of minute organisms. It is sometimes eaten baked and sometimes raw.

A confirmed clay eater will take four, five or even six pounds a day. Water is drunk with it. At length the habit seems to give an aversion not only to other kinds of food, but also to alcoholic drinks. As soon as this stage is reached the eating of clay invariably causes death.

AN UNIQUE PLEASURE.

Los Angeles Times: A. J. Drexel Biddle whose book on Maderia is one of the standard works that deal with the island had been talking about the trouble which has arisen between Germany and Portugal over the German sanatorium at Funchal.

"Maderia is a delightful place," he said. "One of its greatest, one of its strangest delights is coasting. You coast down the steep mountain sides in a wicker basket with wooden runners, and so fast do you go that sometimes your runners smoke, sometimes they even burst into flame.

"This coasting in Mederia's May-like weather is a strange pleasure. I can't describe its strangeness. It reminds me——"

He smiled.

"It reminds me in its strangeness of a Christmas gift that was sent last month to a certain maiden lady.

"The gift was sent to her by her nephew, and afterward he described it thus:

"'At first I could not think of anything to give Aunt Mary for Christmas, and then, suddenly, I remembered that she was an old maid, wholly unacquainted with the grand passion, and so, in order to give an unique pleasure,

AN ISSUE OF BONDS

For $200,000,000 to Rebuild City is San Francisco's Plan.

Would Have the Payment Guaranteed by the United States.

San Francisco, May 2.—Victor H. Metcalf, secretary of commerce and labor, who is here as the personal representative of the president, will be requested to lay before President Roosevelt and the cabinet upon his return to Washington the plan proposed by Former Mayor James D. Phelan of having the government guarantee a large municipal bond issue by San Francisco to rebuild the city. This action, it is said, was unofficially decided upon at a conference held last night at Fort Mason between the finance committee, of which Mr. Phelan is chairman, and the mayor.

It is proposed that San Francisco shall issue municipal bonds in the sum of $200,000,000 to run a series of years and the payment of which is to be guaranteed by the United States. To issue such a loan it will be necessary to amend the city charter and have the legislature remove any other obstacles.

All able-bodied men must work or leave the city. This is the dictum of Chief of Police Dinan, which, it is said, he will strictly enforce. The relief work and distribution of food and clothing is attracting a certain element to the city which does not desire to labor, while some here prefer to live on the generosity of the others rather than work. Chief Dinan has determined that those who apply for relief and refuse to work when it is offered them shall leave the city or be arrested for vagrancy.

The police judges have suggested the establishment of a chain gang and putting all vagrants and petty offenders at work clearing up the ruins.

Perhaps never in the history of the city has there been so little crime in San Francisco. With the saloons closed, Chinatown, the Barbary Coast and other haunts of criminals wiped out, and soldiers and marines on almost every block in the residence districts there have been few crimes of any kind. It is the opinion of the police that most of the criminal element has left the city. The saloons, in all probability, will remain closed for two months yet. The absence of liquor is controlled by the board of police commissioners. Some of the officials have intimated that they will not permit the saloons to open and liquor to be sold until the present armed forces in the city are withdrawn and normal conditions are entirely restored.

ROOT-CURED BABIES.

New York Globe: The "newly discovered" roof cure for pneumonia which the Presbyterian hospital is said to be applying to its sick babies is not as new as one might at first imagine. It is simply a variant of the general belief always held by physicians that good air is healthy and bad air is unwholesome. Housedoom or hospital-ward air, which the doctors for many years supposed to be sufficiently clean, is now known to be nothing more than a sort of lung cesspool, even with fairly good ventilation; so that if the conclusion is warranted (as it is) that a healthy man requires a certain amount of outdoor air to remain healthy, how much more essential must such clean lung food be to the man or child with a crippled respiratory tract.

For the last fifty years a considerable number of physicians have been constantly booming the virtues of fresh air, not only as a medicine, but even more as a preventive of disease in the healthy. This finally culminated some years ago in the so-called open-air treatment of consumption, of which it is worth noting, however, fresh, clean air is but a part. Fresh air is no more of a specific for any disease than is clean water. Both promote health and help to obtain a cure in case of disease. They are, however, simple matters of hygiene, and not drugs in any sense of the word.

There is no systematic disease which is not in some degree benefited by fresh air, from typhoid fever to tuberculosis, and no disease which can be cured by fresh air alone. There is little doubt that if all the hospital patients in all the city hospitals—broken leg and typhoid cases as well as pneumonic babies—could live and sleep on the roof, they would get well more rapidly than if kept in the usual wards. To this general theraputic effect, rather than to any specific action on pneumonia, must, it seems probable, be attributed the success of the Presbyterian's "roof cure" of the babies.

Ashland Connection.

The Duluth, South Shore & Atlantic road now has connections with Ashland, Wis., for passengers arriving at or departing from Duluth. The South Shore passenger trains, one a day each way, connect with the Omaha Twilight annex, at Bibon. RECEIVER APPOINTED.

Chicago, May 2.—Application for a receiver for the American Reserve Bond company was made and granted here today by Judge Bethea in the federal court. The Western Trust and Savings banks was appointed receiver in bonds of $20,000. The application for the receiver was made by Wm. E. Humphrey, United States commissioner. The company has already been stopped from doing business in three states, and has, for some time, been under investigation by the postal authorities.

FIGHT OVER TWO POSTS

Poplar Stakes Worth Ten Cents Cause Dispute in Court.

Neighbors Both Wanted Street Right of Way for Garden.

"There seems to be something in the balmy breezes up around this Superior View addition to Duluth, that causes neighborhood quarrels every spring," said Assistant City Attorney McKeon in the municipal court this morning, at the conclusion of a legal controversy lasting two hours, regarding the malicious destruction of two poplar fence posts valued at ten cents.

"Sometimes it is cows, and other times chickens cause the quarrels, and now it is a fence."

The controversy was the outcome of the arrest of James Pescel on a warrant sworn out by Edward Bernhardt, a dairyman. Pescel was claimed to have wilfully and maliciously chopped down some fence posts belonging to the complaining witness.

It developed from the evidence, that the dispute was the result of a scramble to secure a piece of vacant property and fence it in for a garden. Part of the property in question was the right of way for a street. Pescel and his family started to fence it in for a garden patch, but the stakes were torn up by Bernhardt.

A few hours later Bernhardt drove in some stakes and began to put up a fence, and Pescel appeared and pulled out the posts., Two, which he was unable to pull out, he chopped down. Bernhardt went to the office of the city attorney, and swore out a warrant for his arrest, on the charge of malicious destruction of property.

Pescel was represented by J. D. Holmes and each side had half a dozen witnesses.

The witnesses for the defense claimed that Bernhardt had fenced in most of the streets and avenues in the district, and was using practically all of the vacant property up there as pasture and garden.

"The prisoner is technically guilty," said Judge Windom after the witnesses had gone into the harrowing details for more than two hours. "He had no right to destroy the posts even if they were on the street or the alley. He should have applied to the proper city authorities to open up the right of way.

"But I think that Mr. Bernhardt would know better than to open up a case like this. He evidently has all the streets and avenues up there fenced in, and when he stirs up a quarrel like this he is bound to be the loser. I should think he would try to get along just as peaceably as possible, and that he would have made no objection when Mr. Pescel fenced in this little piece of land for a garden plot.

"I'll fine the prisoner $1 and costs and remit the statutory costs. That is as light as I can make it."

If we advertised this and other of our all-the-year-around bargains, as $1.25 or $1.50 shirts for say 99 cents, we would perhaps create more of an immediate demand, but we prefer the slower and more laborious way, which begets lasting confidence and lasting customers.

As it is, our factories cannot turn out shirts enough to supply the demand, and we sell them as quick as a shipment is received. So, please, don't come all at once.

Another shipment of Manhattan shirts is on the way to Duluth, and should arrive any day.

The EVENING STORY.

A SACRIFICE TO BAAL

By Allen Upward.

(Copyright, 1906, by Joseph B. Bowles.)

Lusias ran gaily along the banks of the yellow river, his curls blowing about his forehead. At every few steps he stopped to pick the flowers of the Sicilian springtime, the tall asphodel and white narcissus, and the crocus with its cup of gold.

In his headless course Lusias had not marked how near he was coming to the walls of the Punic town. He had been strictly forbidden to stray beyond the lines of the Greek camp; but tomorrow was the commander's birthday, and the youngster had stolen away to gather flowers for a chaplet, which he meant to hang outside his general's tent before he woke. Lusias worshiped the general, who had come over sea from glorious Lakedaimon, in answer to the prayer of the Dorians of Gela for a leader to deliver them from the power of the Canaanites.

The boy was in the act of kneeling down, where the crocuses were thickest, when he heard a dry twig crack sharply. He turned in terror, crossing himself instinctively, and beheld a tall, dark-browned foreigner standing close behind him. The representatives of the two hostile races and religions gazed at each other steadily.

On his side the Greek boy had time to mark the hooked nose of the Canaanite priest, the cruelty of the eyes, and the swarthy cheeks gashed with forbidding scars.

The priest meanwhile devoured Lusias with the glance of a vulture about to swoop on its meal.

The lad's white skin, with the blue veins showing through it, bore witness to the purity of his Hellenic blood. His dark curls betrayed the tender care only bestowed on the children of the rich, and his open gaze declared that he was of free birth.

The Canaanite's lips parted in a smile that turned Lusias cold.

"Come with me," he said.

There was that in the tone which caused the boy to utter a wail, as the other stretched out a hand to take hold of him. Lusias made a movement to flee, but the dark, sinewy fingers squeezed his wrist in a grip so fierce that he winced under the pain.

As they passed under a narrow stone arch, a group of armed men with dark Oriental faces gathered anxiously round their high priest.

"What have you there?" a dozen voices demanded in the Punic speech.

Barmel set his youthful captive on the ground in their midst.

"Behold what the Divine Mother has given us in answer to my prayer," he said in a tone of solemn conviction. "Fear no longer; the wrath of the moon's husband will be appeased."

The townsfolk fell back on each side, trembling, and the minister of Baal passed onward to the temple, leading Lusias by the hand.

As soon as the boy Lusias was missed, a party of Greek soldiers, by order of the commander, went to search for him. On their return, grief and shame fell on the camp, for the little trumpeter had become the soldiers' pet, and his father, Timotheus, was beloved by the citizens of Gela.

But bitterest of all were the shame and grief of Phalaris the Spartan. When he knew that the search party had come back without tidings, he sent a herald to the Phoenicians to offer them whatsoever ransom they should require.

But the Canaanites, who were on the wall, sent the herald away, denying that they knew anything of Lusias.

The same day, as soon as it was dark, while Phalaris sat alone in his tent, he heard a scrambling outside the tent cords. And when he turned his head he saw the light of the lamp on his table flash on the edge of a knife blade thrust in through the canvas of the tent, about a foot above the ground.

The next moment a hand lifted the tent cloth, and a naked man squirmed halfway through the opening, holding the knife between his teeth.

The man turned his face towards the light, and said in a whisper, using the broken Doric of the slaves:

"I am a friend. Are you Phalaris, the commander?"

"Yes. Who and whence are you?"

"I am a Sikeliot, by name Merix, and an enemy to the Phoenicians."

The Spartan picked up the stranger's knife and bade him come in.

The Sikeliot crawled through the hole he had made, and stood up. His skin was fairer than that of the Canaanite invaders of Sicily, who had enslaved the ancient population of the island, though he was dark beside the Greeks.

"I have come here, sent by the Sikeliots who are within the town," he announced, "to bring you in by a secret way which only we know of."

"Why?" the Spartan asked distrustfully.

"Because we hate the Phoenicians for their cruelties, and we believe the Greeks will treat us mercifully."

"You are a spy," said Phalaris, frowning.

The Sikeliot shook his head earnestly.

"I know what has become of the young boy whom you sent a herald to enquire for," he declared.

The commander's eyes caught fire.

"Speak!" he cried eagerly. "If you can restore that boy to me unhurt, I will give you your freedom and a talent of silver."

"He was found yesterday at noon, in the grove of Astarte, by the high-priest Barmel. And tonight they will offer him in sacrifice to the Melek."

One hour after Merix, the Sikeliot had stolen into the camp of the Greeks the whole army of beslegers was walking in single file, its weapons bound round with grass to prevent any jingling of steel, along a narrow sunken path that ended in a clay pit just without the city wall.

It was the night of the new moon, and the goddess of the Canaanites seemed to have stolen forth to listen to the vows of her adorers. From the heart of the besieged city arose the wild chant of the moon-worshipers as they swarmed towards the temple of the moon's husband, the Melek, who ate his children.

The votaries of Baal thronged the outer court of the temple, and flowed through into a cavernous hall, lighted by a single torch. All at once a dull red glow struggled through the copper shell of a huge bull-headed idol, enthroned at the upper end, causing the Melek to stand out before his worshipers like an image of blood.

The fearful howling, which was part of the ritual of the god, burst forth from a thousand throats, and woke the Greek boy who lay asleep in the priests' quarter, behind the shrine.

As Lusias sat up and rubbed his eyes, the high-priest came into his chamber and offered him a cup filled with some warm brew which gave forth a sickly, intoxicating scent. Lusias dared not refuse to drink. When he had swallowed it his senses became clouded; the marble floor rocked under his feet, and the marble walls wavered round him like curtains in a draught of air.

Barmel took him by the hand, and placed an arm round his shoulders to steady him, as he drew him gently out of the cell. They passed two sweating temple-slaves, who were blowing with bellows at the furnace whose flames passed up a flue into the body of the idol, illuminating it. A bronze grating allowed the flames to ascend freely, while preventing the victim from falling down into the coals.

Too dizzy and confused to tell what he was doing, Lusias was brought to the foot of a flight of steps between the knees of the idol, which led up to a small platform in front of its belly.

It was at this moment that Phalaris, the Spartan, saw the moon-crescent glitter overhead, as he stood upright within the city wall on the bottom of a low tunnel, and grasped at a wooden ladder let down from above.

Like a procession of ants his earth-stained soldiers rose out of the ground, finding themselves in a weed-grown garden over which a few huts and pigsties straggled in all the disorder of wretchedness and savagery.

The solemn pillars of the temple front showed pale in the dim moonlight. A rush through the court, a few cries, and the flushed Hellenes burst in upon the Canaanites at their worship.

The vision that met the straining eyes of Phalaris, the Spartan, was a boy in a white tunic and red vest, barefooted, with flowers in his hair, standing aloft like a cameo cut against the blood-red shape of the colossal Baal, whose belly gaped suddenly in a hell of spouting fire.

Leaving the work of massacre to the troops and their Sikeliot helpers, the general leaped to the front and snatched Lusias by the foot just as he was giddily swaying toward the furnace.

Gathering the child in his arms, he turned and saw a tall, dark priest in a leopard skin robe, struggling in the grasp of three of his soldiers. Without uttering a word, Phalaris pointed to the open door of the furnace. The Greeks gave a loud cry of exulting comprehension, and dragged the high-priest up the steps to the platform, from whence they hurled him headlong into the flaming belly of the Melek.

Then the bronzed door clanged down, and, as the shriek of the sacrifice rang forth from the idol's mouth above, it seemed to be the hideous bellowing of the god.

THE WRONG LEG.

Los Angeles Times: Miss Gould praised the long and arduous course of study and practice that a nurse must take.

"I have no sympathy," she said, "with amateur nurses. A surgeon once told me a story that illustrates well the amateur nurse's skill.

"A young woman had taken some sort of correspondence course—nursing in three lessons—and thereafter went about looking for accidents, train wrecks and runaways, wherein she might distinguish herself.

"Her search, one snowy afternoon, succeeded. Hurrying up to a crowd, she found a man prostrate and groaning. He had fallen on a hidden slide and broken his leg.

"At once she took the entire business into her own hands.

"'A cane!' she said, and the bystanders quickly gave her one. She broke it in pieces for splints. She tore up her skirt for bandages. By the time the ambulance arrived, the injured man, pillowed on overcoats and bandaged in snowy linen, looked as though he had been under a great physician's hands.

"The ambulance surgeon, examining the patient, looked greatly impressed.

"'Who,' he said, 'bandaged this limb?'

"'I, doctor,' said the amateur nurse, blushing.

"'Well,' said the surgeon, 'it is admirably done. But you have made, I find, a slight error.'

"'What is that, doctor?' she asked.

"'You have bandaged,' he answered, 'the wrong leg.'"

AGE OF BIRDS.

New Orleans Times-Democrat: The doctrine of vegetarianism appears to be slightly shaken by the result of an investigation that an English newspaper has made into the subject of the longevity of birds. With one notable exception, the carrion or meat feeding birds are the longer lived. The exception is the swan. The average ages of some of the best known birds are given in the following: Blackbird lives 12 years; blackcap, 15; canary, 24; crane, 24; crow, 1100; eagle, 100; fowl, common, 16; goldfinch, 15; goose, 50; heron, 60; lark, 13; linnet, 23; nightingale, 18; parrot, 60; partridge, 15; peacock, 24; pelican, 60; pheasant, 15; pigeon, 20; raven, 100; robin, 12; skylark, 20; sparrow hawk, 40; swan, 300; thrush, 10, and wren, 3 years. The average age of the boarding house variety of chicken is still undetermined.

INSPECT FIRE DEPARTMENT

Tour of Fire Halls Will be Made in Automobiles.

The annual inspection of the Duluth fire department will be held one week from today.

The fire commissioners have invited the city officers, the members of the city council, the committee from the board of underwriters, and a committee representing the jobbing interests to be present.

It is expected that there will be about fifty visitors in all, and they will make the tour of the halls in automobiles. At each hall the firemen will give an exhibition of their work and the apparatus and equipment will be thoroughly inspected.

Land Office Receipts.

During the month of April the Duluth land office disposed of 11,580 acres of land, and the fees and commissions resulting from this amounted to $1,547.20. The sales of public lands, which disposed of 3,787 acres, brought in $7,361.65. The fines for depredations on public lands, amounting to $20, brings the total receipts of the land office for April up to $8,928.85.

PAYMENT OF THE CLAIMS

Of State of California Against Government Asked of Congress.

Petition Submitted to Senate and Referred to Committee.

Washington, May 2.—At the beginning of today's session of the senate, Mr. Perkins presented a telegraphic petition from Governor Pardee of California for the payment of the claims of that state against the government for the settlement of which bills are now pending. The text of the petition was as follows:

"Will congress, in California's present great need, pass our 5 per cent public lands claim, amounting to about $1,000,000; also our war of rebellion claims, aggregating $4,000,000; also our Indian war claims, originally $660,000, on account of the destruction of $300,000,000 of San Francisco property, which represents one-fifth of the assessed valuation of the entire state? Our state funds, including maintenance of asylums, penitentiary and repairs of public buildings, injured and destroyed by earthquake, will all be greatly hampered unless congress can see its way clear to pass these claims, the justice of which has never been seriously questioned. We are under great obligation to congress already, but we venture to ask for this further aid."

The petition was referred to the committee on claims. The senate then passed, without debate, the house joint resolution, extending the thanks of congress to Gen. Horace Porter for his services in locating the burial place, in Paris, of John Paul Jones.

Mr. Newlands presented a joint resolution directing the senate committee on finance, and the house committee on ways and means, to investigate the feasibility of the government's guaranteeing bonds to assist in the rebuilding of San Francisco. The resolution recites the recent disaster, and says that under the powers of the general welfare clause of the constitution, congress should come to the aid of San Francisco.

The Newlands' resolution was referred to the finance committee. Mr. Tillman's resolution relative to the Mrs. Miner Morris incident went over until tomorrow. The railroad rate bill was taken up, and Mr. Daniel resumed his speech.

IN THE HOUSE.

Washington, May 2.—Mr. Wadsworth (N. Y.), immediately after the approval of the journal of the house, called up the agricultural appropriation bill.

The house at 2:30 p. m. completed the appropriation bill and Mr. Wadsworth demanded a roll call on the free seed amendment which was ordered. The amendment was adopted, yeas 153, nays 82. The agricultural appropriation bill was then passed.

INDIANS SUE FOR $10,020

Which They Gave Gus Beaulieu to Buy Land for Them.

St. Paul, May 2.—(Special to The Herald.)—The supreme court today had before it the case of Ains-Dus-Oke-Shig, Me-Ge-Sus, Ne-Gwa-Ne-Bi, No. 1 and No. 2 respondents, vs. G. H. Beaulieu and Wah-We-Cum-Ig, appellants, all Indians.

The case was submitted on briefs. It involves the possession of $10,020 and grew out of the sale by the government of the landed possessions of the Mille Lacs Indians in the northern part of the state. The tribe realized $40,000 odd from the sale. From the amount $20,000 was divided among the tribe and the balance deposited to their credit in a Stearns county bank. This amount was in the names of the chiefs who are plaintiffs in the case and they turned a check covering it to Gus Beaulieu, a half breed, to buy the tribe a tract of land on Mille Lacs lake. It is charged that Beaulieu did not buy the land agreed upon. It is for the possession of this money that the chiefs are now asking.

OPENS BIDS FOR NEW TUG

Lowest Bid for Government's Craft Complete is $35,950.

Three bids were opened by Maj. Charles L. Potter, this noon for a new steel tug for the government to be used in the Lake Superior district. No action has yet been taken on the bids which were as follows: Racine Boat Manufacturing company, Muskegon, Mich., $35,950; Great Lakes Engineering Works, Detroit, Mich., $59,500; Manitowoc Dry Dock company, Manitowoc, Wis., $55,000.

The boat will be paid for out of the $155,000 fund that is available for the harbor improvement.

The tug, which is to be furnished complete, will be 85 feet over all, with a depth of 11 feet and 6 inches and a 24-foot beam. It will be the largest steel tug on the upper lakes and is planned to be sea-going in any sort of weather, and an ice breaker.

CONSTITUTIONALITY

Of Wisconsin's New Civil Service Law Attacked in Courts.

Madison, Wis., May 2.—Papers were served today in a suit brought by the state banking department attacking the constitutionality of the new state civil service law. Former Senator R. M. Bashford is counsel for the department. The intent of the law is said was to exempt the banking department, but the attorney general held that the department is not exempt. Points urged are that the commission usurps the powers of secretary of state in auditing vouchers, that it employs legislative powers in making rules and by laws and illegally seeks to hold jurisdiction of the banking department. Bank Commissioner Bergh secured leave of the supreme court to bring suit.

Zenith Telephone Company Linemen Present Increased Wage Scale.

The linemen and other electrical workers of the Zenith Telephone company have demanded an increase of the wage scale to take effect May 10. Nothing has been done about it yet by the company, but it is expected that the matter will be settled without trouble. According to the demand made, the pole men are to get $3.25 instead of $3 a day and the drivers are to get $3 instead of $2.75 a day. These men belong to the Electrical Workers' union. The eight-hour day is in force.

The men of the Duluth Telephone company are not organized, so they are not concerned in this demand.

UNION MOLDERS GO ON STRIKE AT MILWAUKEE.

Milwaukee, May 2.—About a thousand union molders employed in eighteen shops controlled by the Milwaukee Foundrymens' association went out on a strike today. The men demand a flat rate of $3.25 per day for 9 hours' work and $3 for coremakers. Under the agreement which expired yesterday floor molders received $3 and bench molders $2.80 for a ten-hour day. The Foundrymens' association claims that a large number of molders did not strike.

NOMINATION BY PRESIDENT.

Washington, May 2.—The president today sent the following nomination to the senate: Secretary of legation at Santiago Chile, Henry L. Janen, Wisconsin.

COPPERS HAVE ANOTHER BREAK

Prices Go Down But Rally Before the Close Comes.

Copper stocks broke again today, but rallied before the close, which was a trifle weaker than yesterday. Some of stocks closed about unchanged. North Butte held its own pretty well. It opened at $85, declined to $83.50, rallied to $84.75, declined to $83, rallied to $85, declined to $84.25, and closed at $84.25 bid and $84.75 asked. Amalgamated opened at $99, advanced to $100.37½, declined to $97.50 and rallied to $100.62½. The closing price was $100.62½ bid and $100.75 asked. Anaconda opened at $234, declined to $232, rallied to $238.50, declined to $227, and rallied to $235. The closing price was $235 bid, about ten points under yesterday. United Copper opened at $57.25 and sold as high as $58.37½. The closing price was $58.50 bid and $59 asked. Butte Coalition was inactive and closed at $31.25 bid and $31.50 asked. Calumet & Arizona opened at $110 asked and closed at $108 bid and $110 asked.

Most of the Bisbees held firm. Calumet & Pittsburg sold at $26 and closed at $26 bid and $27 asked. Denn-Arizona closed at $15 bid. Junction sold at $24 and closed at $24 bid. Lake Superior & Pittsburg sold at $33 and closed at $32.75 bid and $33 asked. Pittsburg & Duluth was a little weaker, selling at $19 and closing at $18.75 bid and $19 asked.

Black Mountain was inactive and closed at $10 bid. Warren sold at $15.75 and closed at $15.0 bid. Keweenaw closed at $11 bid and Copper Queen of Idaho at $2 bid and $2.25 asked. A small amount of Ophir Tunnel changed hands at 20 cents. Little was offered at that price, and the close was 20 cents bid.

TWENTY-SIX MILLIONS

Wanted by the Isthmian Canal Commission for Coming Year.

Washington, May 2.—The Isthmian canal commission met today and decided to ask for an appropriation of $26,348,281 to continue the construction of the canal during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1907.

NOT REAPPOINTED.

Otto Kelsey Succeeds Insurance Commissioner Hendricks of New York.

Albany, May 2.—Otto Kelsey, of Geneseo, hitherto comptroller of the state, today was apointed by Governor Higgins to be superintendent of insurance in place of Francis Hendricks of Syracuse, whose term had expired. His nomination was confirmed by the senate without opposition.

FIVE MEN KILLED BY THE EXPLOSION OF MAGAZINE.

Winnipeg, May 2.—As the result of an explosion of a powder magazine in Gallagher's camp, west of Midway, five Italians and one colored man, were instantly killed. All were engaged on the rock works and the explosion occurred from a missed hole. The verdict was accidental death. A dozen men were injured by flying rock.

DIFFFERENT MACHINES.

Tangle That Almost Ruined a Reputation.

A man who spends his mornings in his flat, writing things for publication—maybe—and using a typewriter for the purpose, had an odd experience lately, says the New York Sun.

On the day before the man's wife had engaged a new maid, a very black young woman. In dusting around the writing man's work room the new maid had watched the manipulation of the typewriter keys with a great curiosity, and, a few minutes later, she inquired of her mistress:

"Lady, whut is yo' husban' dun a-mekkin'?"

The writing man's wife didn't exactly penetrate the meaning of the question, and so she returned an evasive reply.

On the following morning, after the mistress had gone off to do the marketing, and while the writing man was tearing off language on the typewriter, the flat bell tinkled. The new black maid answered the ring. The writing man paused and heard a man's voice say something about "a machine." The maid servant made reply to this by saying:

"Yessuh, dey got a machine heah—de gemman o' de house he dun uses it."

"That so?" the writing man heard the male voice say in a tone of some surprise. "Uses the machine himself, does he? Is he in?"

"Yessuh, he's in," the black maid replied, and then the writing man went out into the hall and found a garrulous young man standing at the door.

"Good morning, sir," said the talkative young man. "Your servant tells me that you use a machine—use it yourself."

"Sure," replied the writing man, trying to frame up words with which to dismiss the visitor. "Yep, I use a machine, but I'm perfectly satisfied with the one I've got."

"Is is up-to-date?" inquired the loquacious young man with businesslike chirkiness.

"Up to date as I need," said the writing man in a hurried tone. "And it's as up-to-date as I'm going to get for some time to come, considering that I only got through paying for it the other day."

"Bobbinless?" inquired the young man.

The writing man looked puzzled. "Bobbinless?" he repeated. "Well, I don't know just what you mean by that, but it has most of the new attachments and I guess it fits all right with 'bobbinless.'"

"Got tucking and felling and quilting attachments to it?" pleasantly inquired the young man in the hall.

Again the writing man looked bothered by the technical nature of the questions. "Oh, it is a bully manifolder—sure," he replied, and then the young man in the hall looked surprised. But he went ahead:

"Has it got the embroidering attachments?"

"Oh, for the tabulating stunts—sure, it has all those marks," said the writing man. "It does any old thing that I need to do on it, anyway."

"Excuse me for asking the question," said the young man then, "but does your wife like your machine, too?"

"Oh, she doesn't use it at all," replied the writing man. "I'm the only one that touches it. She never learned how to operate it. Wish she would. It'd save me a lot of grinding."

The young man in the hall looked baffled.

"Well," he said after a pause, "I've been selling machines now for nearly ten years, and, dye know, you're the first man I ever met up with that makes his wife's clothes?"

The writing man came close to falling down right there, but he pulled himself together, dragged the garrulous young man to his den, showed him the typewriting machine, asked him if he thought it looked anything like a sewing machine, and thus straightened the thing out.

"Gosh!" he said to himself when the talkative young man had gone. "I'm glad I flagged that. I'd hate to have it get around that I made my wife's clothes."

ALL HE COULD STAND.

Los Angeles Times: Andrew Carnegie, whose love of music is well known, told at a dinner party a musical story.

"There was a young Scot," he said, "who went to London, and learned there to play the 'cello.

"Very proud of his accomplishment, he brought the 'cello back to the village with him on his vacation.

"And, immediately on his arrival, he took the instrument out of its bag and played two or three times for the edification of the family.

"When he was done, he looked up expectantly. All were silent. Finally, from his seat by the fire, the old grandfather spoke up.

"'Eh, mon,' he said, 'it's a mercy there's no smell wi' it.'"

LOST A CHANCE.

Boston Herald: Several years ago there lived in Milltown, N. B., a unique character who always went by the title of 'Capt. Ab.' His greatest peculiarity was that he was always on the opposite side, no matter what the question was. At a town meeting one day, after the chairman had called for the "yeas," which showed the vote was almost unanimous, he called the "contra-minded." John Farnham, one of the citizens, rose and said: "Mr. Chairman, he has just gone out." The "captain" had left the room a moment before.

DOCTRINE IS OF LOVE

Judge W. G. Ewing Lectures at Lyceum on Christian Science.

Says Religion He Advocates is the Voice of God.

Judge William G. Ewing of Chicago lectured on Christian Science before a large audience at the Lyceum last evening. He characterized Christian Science as the star which keeps holy ground, "the sweet voice of God speaking in love and kindness," and declared it a religion of deeds and not of words. Its doctrine, he claimed, is to love God by loving your neighbors; to do acts of kindness, such as to carry a glass of water or a flower to the sick.

Treating of the health views of the Christian Scientist, Judge Ewing claimed that the church does not quarrel with the physicians. He argued that since God gives health and immortal life, why go to the doctor or the druggist for that which can be given by the Lord. He claimed that persons in the hour of sickness should turn directly to the Keeper and the giver of life.

Judge Ewing said no fault was to be found with the apostles' creed on which thousands of theologians stand, but if it is such a good thing, why, he argued, did not Christ suggest it?

Judge Ewing said the general impression has gone out that Christian Science has for its sole purpose a physical cure, but that in truth physical healing is but an incident of the religion. He argued that it is a religion pure and simple, the religion of the Bible, of our forefathers, without prefix or suffix, without apology or excuse, the religion that Jesus Christ came to establish, and the religion that He established among His people everywhere.

He asserted further that Christian Science appeals to the understanding, the common sense of men, and asked that people try it by the same rule that they would test the curative property of a drug to determine its merits.

"I submit this simple proposition," said Judge Ewing: "If, as intelligent men and women, you may determine the virtues of material medicine by experiment; if, by human observation and experience, you may ascertain satisfactorily to your reason the efficacy of a given drug, by a percentage of cures effected by its use, then is it not clear beyond controversy that the same test will measure with equal accuracy the medical virtues of Christian Science? And in common fairness, and by the logic of the axiom that 'things equal to the same things are equal to each other,' are you not driven by relentless logic to accept the hundreds of thousands of closely observed tests of the merits of mental medicine in forming your judgment of the curative force of Christian Science?"

Judge Ewing said Christian Scientists are simply trying to live the life that Christ lived. His mission was not only to preach the gospel, but to heal the sick. He wanted it understood, however, that Christian Scientists do not heal or pretend to heal through any power of their own, but by virtue of the power of God. He said that the pathway of Christian Science has not been smooth and carpeted with flowers, but has been beset with crosses and thorns.

"Christian Science," said Judge Ewing, "meets tonight, and for thirty years has met, the ecclesiastical antagonism that every new phase of religion or new thought of God has been compelled to encounter; but sooner or later, in God's own time, the clouds will break and, cleared and glorified, the truth will be seen like a star dwelling apart in its own glory."

He held that the Christian Scientist does not complain, in the bitterness of the opposition his religion has met, but said that intellectual integrity is not easily attained, and Christian Scientists, although it may be difficult, must show their neighbors that they are honest in their belief.

Judge Ewing claimed that because Christian Science is the product of a woman's thought there must be two conclusions, one is that it is absolutely honest, and the other that it is absolutely pure.

BRIEF TELEGRAMS.

All building operations where union men were employed have ceased at Oshkosh, Wis., all union carpenters of the city, about 150 in all, going on strike Tuesday. The demand is for a minimum wage of 30 cents an hour.

Correspondence so far exchanged relating to the second Hague conference indicates that the meeting will be postponed until next spring, in order to suit the convenience of the Netherlands.

William H. Brewer, Jr., of New York, the former president of the Washington Life Insurance company, under arrest on indictments charging perjury and making false statements, Tuesday pleaded not guilty before Recorder Goff. A week was allowed for his counsel to prepare motions.

The fact that many of the churches in San Francisco and other points on the Pacific coast were demolished by the earthquake alone, which precludes their receiving any insurance, has led the Presbyterial board in New York to send out an appeal to all the ministers of their denomination, asking for building funds.

Another executive session of the senate, lasting nearly two hours, was held Tuesday in an effort to confirm the nomination of Benjamin F. Barnes, now assistant secretary to the president, as postmaster of Washington. A quorum was lost during the discussion, and no vote was had.

"The Man With the Hoe," the famous painting by Millet, which was reported to have been burned with others in the Crocker mansion on Nob hill, was saved.

The Hardin county, Iowa, Republican convention Tuesday censured Senator Elkins for long-range interference in Iowa politics. Similar action against Secretary Shaw was voted down after a heated debate.

Mrs. Earl Lindsay found a man under her bed at Kokomo, Ind., Tuesday night, confronted the intruder with her husband's shotgun, and when he tried to escape, shot him in the back. The man was arrested and identified as James Wilson, said to be wanted in several Indiana towns for burglary.

It has been discovered that in the vicinity of Woodbridge, Cal., the Mokelumne river has fallen twelve feet, the bed of the river having dropped from the effects of the recent earthquake. As the waterway has overflown frequently, farmers along the stream are highly pleased with the change, since it can carry far more water than heretofore and not endanger their lands.

Lightning struck a handcar containing six men on the Northwestern at Woodbine, Iowa, Tuesday night. Fred Ulmer was instantly killed and four others were badly shocked. About three inches of rain fell in two hours.

The number of semi-annual saloon permits issued in Chicago Tuesday under the new $1,000 ordinance has passed all previous records for May 1. The total was 497, giving the city a revenue of $248,500. Last year on the corresponding day there were issued only 110 licenses, although the fee was only one-half the present rate.

The Amalgamated Copper, North Butte and Butte Coalition Mining companies Tuesday granted a strictly 8-hour day for all employes. The scale of wages remains unchanged. About 10,000 men are affected.

As a result of pending litigation over the control of Zion City's financial affairs, the college and kindergarten are to be closed indefinitely. Wilburg Glen Voliva, the present dictator of the colony, made this announcement Tuesday night. Funds for the support of the institutions cannot be secured owing to the court injunction and bankruptcy proceedings.

LIQUID

Simply to please friends of my old liquid form of Dr. Shoop's Rheumatic Remedy, you can now get either the tablet form, or the liquid. I changed from the liquid to the tablets, simply to satisfy a large contingent, who believed and quite correctly, that a tablet is more convenient to carry and to take. But thousands have written me since August, 1904—when the change was made—vigorously protesting. They have plead unceasingly for Dr. Shoop's Rheumatic Remedy "liquid form." And finally, to fully satisfy all, I have at last granted the request. Both tablets and liquid can now be had from your Druggist. He may be out of liquid remedy, but can easily secure it for you. Show him this announcement. The contentment that will now naturally exist because of the change, will in itself prove gratifying to me as well.

CASS LAKE FIREMEN

Appoint Committees to Take Charge of Tourament in June.

Cass Lake, Minn., May 2.—(Special to The Herald.)—At an enthusiastic meeting of the fire department held Tuesday evening, the tournament of the Northern Minnesota Firemen's Tournament association, which will be held in Cass Lake on June 20, 21, 22 and 23, was discussed and the committees that will have charge of the affair were appointed as follows: Reception—Dr. George C. Gilbert, president village council; E. R. Sundberg, Charles Argall, Charles Fedford, Albert Marshik, George E. Reed and Prof. P. M. Larson. Entertainment and privileges—Charles E. Leeman, A. G. Rutledge, P. D. Winship, C. F. Nelson. Decorations and arrangements—Dr. George C. Gilbert, Alex McLain, Samuel Sutor, John Osborn, William Moehlenbrook, Albert Marshik. Music and dance—Charles Argall, Pat Cain, John Osborn, H. J. Broeker, Dr. D. L. Stanton, F. Theriault. Hotels and accommodations—Dana V. Warder, J. W. Hough, Magnus Johnson. Printing—A. G. Rutledge.

Gus Moehlenbrook has been elected captain of the running team, and the department has decided to give a first prize of $5 to the member of the team who is most regular in attendance at practice and $3 to the second. There will be the low rate of $1 per day charged to the firemen who participate in the tournament for hotel accommodations, and ample accommodations will be made for all. Heretofore there has always been made a rate of one fare and a third to all tournaments of the associations, but it is believed that a better rate can be secured this year. All apparatus is always carried free of charge.

TOWER LUMBER COMPANY

Appeals to Supreme Court From Decision of Judge Kelly.

St. Paul, Minn., May 2.—The Tower Lumber & Boom company is preparing to fight the action of the game and fish commission to restrict it from from floating its logs down Pike river. Yesterday the company appealed to the supreme court from the decision of Judge Kelly of the Ramsey county district court which restricts the use of the stream forever by that company.

Mr. Fullerton, who has just returned from Tower, is not satisfied with the action of the company. Only 1,000,000 pike eggs were caught when the commission had planned to catch 150,000,000. He estimates the loss to the state at $25,000 and the matter will be taken up at the next meeting of the board in consultation with its attorney and it is probable that action will be taken in the courts.

There is a suit pending in the Ramsey county court for about $20,700 damages caused by the company driving logs over the falls during the spawning season last year.

RE-ELECTED PRESIDENT

Rev. A. W. Ryan Again Named to Head St. Luke's Hospital.

Board Reviews Year's Work at Its Annual Meeting.

Rev. A. W. Ryan was re-elected president and J. W. Lyder, secretary and treasurer, at the annual meeting of the hospital board of St. Luke's at the institution yesterday afternoon. Prior to the board's meeting, the annual meeting of the hospital association was held and G. G. Hartley, W. J. Olcott and Rev. A. W. Ryan re-elected to serve for three years.

The board now comprises A. W. Ryan, J. W. Lyder, G. G. Hartley, R. B. Knox, T. T. Hudson, F. L. Gilbert, W. J. Olcott, Mrs. W. R. Stone and Mrs. F. W. Paine. The report of the officers showed the institution to be in good condition. The president called the attention of the board to the gifts to the hospital of Giles Gilbert and Chester A. Congdon. Mr. Gilbert has presented the board with an X-Ray machine with therapeutic attachments. Mr. Congdon's gift was an operating table of an improved type.

The report of the treasurer showed that the total receipts of the year had been $28,543.56, and the total disbursements $28,440.85, leaving a balance of $102.71. The outstanding bills amount to $3,000, which is more than last year, due to the increase in the number of persons cared for. Following is the text of the report of the superintendent, Miss Lydia Brown:

Patients in hospital May 1, 1906, 73. Number of patients during twelve months, to May 7, 1906, 1,357. Number remaining May 1, 1906, 69. Highest number admitted in one month, (May 1906), 129. Lowest number admitted in one month (June, 1905), 100. Largest number in hospital in one day, (May 18), 84. Lowest number in hospital in one day, (December 9), 47.

Of the 1,357 patients 830 were men, 527 women. There were 524 medical cases, 733 surgical cases, 514 operations, 52 births, 116 deaths.

The nationalities of the patients follow: 442 Americans, 338 Swedes, 122 Norwegians, 62 Canadians, 59 English, 31 Scotch, 16 French, 79 Germans, 125 Finlanders, 6 Icelanders, 9 Poles, 7 Danes, 4 Russians, 7 American Indians, 5 Italians, 2 Syrians, 3 Austrians, 1 Belgian and 59 unclassified.

Under the classifications of religion, there were more Lutherans than any other denomination, 589, and 225 of the inmates are registered "no religion."

Y. M. C. A. MEN FORM SOCIETY

Phil Bevis Heads New Organization Formed at Two Harbors.

Y. M. C. A. workers in the northwestern part of the state gathered at Two Harbors yesterday to organize an auxiliary organization calculated to further the interests of the Y. M. C. A. proper and to be composed primarily of members who are actively engaged in the Y. M. C. A. work.

Phil Bevis, general secretary of the local Y. M. C. A., was elected president of the new organization, which has not yet been named. W. W. Benning, secretary of the Two Harbors association, was named as secretary and treasurer. A preliminary constitution was adopted and meetings will be held quarterly. Brainerd and Proctorknott are to be included in the association, although they were not represented at the organization meeting. Those present were:

Phil Bevis; N. D. McLeod, secretary of the boys' department, Duluth Y. M. C. A.; Daniel Cole of Duluth; W. W. Benning, secretary of the Two Harbors Y. M. C. A., and Mr. Stockbridge, his assistant; D. B. Trout of Two Harbors, and Rev. Messrs. J. A. McGaughey and W. E. J. Gratz of Two Harbors.

TO PRISON FOR FORGERY.

Rapid Young Man at Boulder, Mont., Given the Limit.

Helena, Mont., May 2.—After posing as Ray Stannard Baker, a magazine writer, and claiming to be the mining representative of Rothschilds, as well as the husband of the wealthy widow of a former president of Argentine—all of which appears to have given him unlimited credit—J. P. Walker was today sentenced to the state penitentiary at Boulder to ten years for larceny and forgery.

Walker cut a wide swath around Boulder for several months, winning the confidence of the people and being placed in charge of the Baltimore mine, employing a number of men. A few months ago he disappeared, leaving behind a string of unpaid debts, including $1,200 for boarding men.

He was arrested in Milford, Utah, and brought back on a charge of stealing $55 from the proprietress of a mine boarding house.

Since his trial began at Boulder it developed that he had forged a check on a Lander (Wyo.), bank, and forgery was also charged.

The jury soon returned a verdict, and when Judge Calloway passed sentence, Walker, in an effort to establish insanity, said he had never acted right mentally for several years. The court agreed with him, but nevertheless gave him the limit.

Postmaster Robbed.

G. W. Fonts, postmaster at Riverton, Iowa, nearly lost his life and was robbed of all comfort, according to his letter, which says: "For twenty years I had chronic liver complaint, which led to such a severe case of jaundice that even my finger nails turned yellow; when my doctor prescribed Electric Bitters; which cured me and have kept me well for eleven years." Sure cure for Billiousness, Neuralgia, Weakness and all Stomach, Liver, Kidney and Bladder derangements. A wonderful Tonic. At all drug stores. 50 cents.

In Fight After One Turned Hose on Her Opponents.

Waterloo, Iowa, May 2.—Mrs. R. H. Chissenger is in the hospital suffering from serious stab wounds inflicted with a pair of scissors and Mrs. William Snyder and Mrs. Frank Casey are in jail awaiting the outcome of the woman's injuries.

The whole affair resulted from Mrs. Chissenger's desire to sprinkle her lawn. The women reside in the same house, but Mrs. Chissenger claims the exclusive right to the lawn.

Monday evening while she was engaged in wetting down the grass she says the other two women gathered and began making fun of her. She resented their ridicule and turned the hose on them. This enraged the spectators, and it is alleged that Mrs. Snyder attacked Mrs. Chissenger and secured the hose, which she turned upon her, while, it is asserted, Mrs. Casey attacked the prostrate woman with a pair of scissors.

The melee attracted the attention of the neighbors, and the police were summoned. Mrs. Chissenger was carried to the hospital and the other women to jail. The attending physician reported to the officers that Mrs. Chissenger has at least a dozen wounds some of them serious in their nature. She is also suffering from nervousness resulting from the fight and the outcome of her injuries is problematical.

Mrs. Chissenger is a large woman and says that she would have been able to handle her opponents with ease had they not blinded her with the stream of water from the hose.

FIELD AGENTS WANTED.

St. Paul, May 2.—The desirability of having field agents for all of the state institutions, in order that the officials might keep in closer touch with the inmates of various institutions after their discharge, and render them all possible assistance, was discussed at a meeting of the superintendents of various state institutions with the board of control yesterday. The general opinion was that much good would result to both the state and the interested individuals.

Tight Fitting Coats—
One at $9.98, the other $6.50

Both are 22-inch models, of light tan covert cloth, tailored with a precision that gives them style and chicness.

The $9.98 model has a coat collar, has four rows of straps on front and back, with a white pique demi-vest. It's single breasted, satin lined, and is trimmed with bone buttons, and will equal any $12.50 coat in the city—try it and see.

THE $6.50 MODEL is a collarless jacket, with two rows of self-covered buttons, in front and pretty trimmed effect of small buttons. It is lined with sateen and finished in a style that, with its finely tailored seams, gives it a jaunty, smart effect. Compare any $8 jacket with it.

Linene Waists Thursday 98c

Pick what you like from 60 dozen fine linene waists, that you'll find on a big table right in front of the elevator. These are elegant early summer waists, just the thing for early wear. They're spic, span and clean—fresh as a daisy, and we bought them to sell at a special price. There are box pleated and embroidered fronts with stock collars and deep ends, pleated and cut to match the fronts. Splendidly made, and well worth $1.50 —tomorrow 98c each.

Long Mixture Coats

Have you noticed how much worn are these long coats—45 to 48 inches—in swell fancy mixtures? We've been obliged to reorder time and again—the last shipment is "just in." A big variety of new plaids and checks, with velvet collars of green and Alice, and with dainty trimmings of inlaid broadcloth and strappings in contrasting colors on pockets and cuffs. Many are trimmed with fancy buttons, and in each, one sees the finesse of the best tailoring, the smartest cut, the most stylish materials—

Prices $5.98 to $32.00.

A New Suit $22.50

One of the many new ones that have come this past week.

This displays a distinctly new suiting in a new gray shade—a beautiful rich tone. The jacket is a collarless Eton, edged with white moire silk, and trimmed with wide and narrow black silk braid. The sleeves are three-quarter length and the jacket is taffeta lined. The full circular skirt is a beauty and has a wide girdle, giving it the Princess effect. In the high-priced store the price would be $30.00 at least—

Our price is only $22.50.

Splendid News From the Millinery Dept.

Silk and Ribbon Sale Begins Tomorrow Morning, May 3.

Offerings in silks and ribbons which constitute one of the greatest bargains we've ever given you. Offerings at prices made possible through an immense purchase of salvage goods—saved from a fire and water sale of the great stock of Charles Schoolhouse & Sons, the big silk manufacturers.

Here Is How We Bought:

Our New York representative, MR. GEORGE SLOAN, was one of the largest buyers present at the sale; he represents the following houses:

"THE FAIR," Chicago, Ill.
JONES DRY GOODS CO., Kansas City, Mo.
JONES DRY GOODS CO., Topeka, Kan.
FIELD, SCHLICK & CO., St. Paul, Minn.
PANTON & WHITE CO., Duluth, Minn.
CROW & WHITMARSH, Cleveland, Ohio.
W. L. MILNER & CO., Toledo, Ohio.
THE PELLETIER CO., Sioux City, Iowa.
CARSLEY SONS & CO., Montreal, Can.
F. A. PLUMMER & CO., Oshkosh, Wis.
H. G. WENDLAND & CO., Bay City, Mich.
BEN. J. SCHMIDT & CO., San Francisco.

These firms do a combined annual business of over thirty million dollars, and this places him in the front rank as a buyer and large operator, and gives him entree to the best markets everywhere. Besides, his wants are catered to by all, while the little fellow has to pay dearly for what he gets, with no special attention given to his needs. No lot is too large for Mr. Sloan to handle when his houses join hands to save themselves money, and make money for their customers.

The goods were sold at auction on Wednesday, April 11, at the warerooms of Samuel Gans, 143-47 Franklin street, by Field, Chapman & Co., auctioneers, for the benefit of the insurance companies.

Our Share of the Purchase

Amounted to several thousand dollars, in silks and ribbons, and at the prices we would have taken two or three times the quantity could we have gotten them.

MOST OF THE GOODS ARE PERFECT. SOME OF THE GOODS ARE SMOKED A LITTLE. SOME OF THE GOODS WERE WET ON THE EDGES—

A few pieces got pretty well soaked—but we only found one piece that had been burned, and that was only one small hole. They were without doubt the grandest bargains we ever offered you, and the entire purchase is divided into four great lots.

THE ST. PAUL ELECTION.

Although the fight in behalf of Luis G. Hoffman, the Republican candidate for mayor of St. Paul, assumed such aggressive form as to raise some slight doubt of the issue, the results show that the doubt was unwarranted, for Mayor Robert A. Smith, affectionately known as "De Bobs", has been elected, according to the unofficial returns, by a plurality of about 2,500. Apparently St. Paul has the Smith habit, and possesses no very strong desire to throw it off.

The campaign has been one of the most interesting St. Paul has ever had. In a measure it was a test vote on the "open town" plan against the "closed town" idea. Apparently the "open town" is popular in St. Paul, for it unquestionably won at this election; that and the undimmed popularity of St. Paul's ancient but vigorous executive.

A peculiar feature of the campaign was the fact that it was carried on more largely than ever before through newspaper advertising. The Smith forces carried the warfare into the enemy's camp by advertising very extensively in the Republican papers, carrying their arguments directly to all the voters in that manner. The two Republican newspapers, the Pioneer Press and the Dispatch, were at most lukewarm toward the Republican candidate, and gave evidences of a leaning toward Mayor Smith. The business elements of the city seemed to favor him very largely, and the election returns bear this out.

St. Paul's municipal policy is rather unique. It is a wide open town, in the sense that saloons are allowed to remain open after hours with almost perfect freedom. Yet it is a very quiet and orderly city, showing that while much latitude is given the police keep constantly in touch with the situation and maintain thorough control. While St. Paul is said to be the headquarters for a great many crooks and blacklegs, they never operate in that city, but work out into other communities, making St. Paul their home. This is also due to the vigilance of the police department, which gives such gentry to understand that if they are caught working St. Paul it will go hard with them. This may not be particularly generous to surrounding communities, but it protects the peace of St. Paul and safeguards the homes of the community, which is, after all, the proper aim of the police.

So efficient is the police department that no issue whatever was made of it, and the Republican candidate had agreed that if he were elected he would retain in office Chief O'Connor, who has given the department its standing. There are two methods of policing a city, acording to an outside detective who recently visited Duluth. One policy is to run out all crooks promptly, and keep the city clean from them. Duluth is an excellent example of this method. The other is to permit them to remain, but to forbid them to operate within the city limits. This is St. Paul's method.

SURGERY FOR WICKEDNESS.

Medical scientists have shown that many cases of bad temper and surly disposition are due to physical causes, and that they may be cured by right living, exercise and fresh air.

Now comes surgical science to prove that many cases of criminal disposition may be due to lesions and maliormations that surgery can make right.

Philadelphia reports the case of a boy whose skull had been hurt in a fall at a tender age. He had apparently recovered completely from his injuries, and his physical condition was good and his mentality alert and clear. But he was a bad boy, a very bad boy; in fact he was classed as incorrigible, and he was the despair of his parents and the authorities.

Every town has such boys. They are intelligent, healthy, and in other respects normal, but they are bad. They steal, rob hen roosts, play hookey, smoke cigarettes, and are a source of immoral contagion to other boys, whose mothers frown upon association with them.

This particularly boy was going headlong into a career of crime, as fast as could get there. The future before him was clear to every eye. After a few years as a boyish hoodlum he would become a professional crook, and end a criminal life in a penitentiary or upon the gallows.

Then he fell into the hands of a surgeon who had brains and keen insight. He discovered a depression in the skull, from which he figured that a bone was pressing upon the boy's brain. An operation confirmed his diagnosis. The skull was opened, the pressure relieved, and the boy recovered from the effects of the operation.

Also, he was a different boy. His willfulness was all gone, and instead he was kind, affectionate and good. That surgeon had with his skillful knife turned a very bad boy into a very good boy.

Of course it does not follow that all bad boys can be turned into good boys by the surgeons. But it must be clear to everybody that there is some cause for it when a boy spontaneously develops instincts that are thoroughly bad and criminal. It may be congenital mental defect beyond the reach of medicine or surgery. But it is inherent, somewhere, and while such a boy must be handled for the protection of society, the question of the amount of blame that should be attached to him is a difficult one. It may be that his parents or more remote forebears are more at fault for his wickedness than he is.

THE CORRECT METHOD.

The competition of the mail order houses has been a pressing problem with the merchants in small communities for a long time. It has cut into their business, reduced their volume of trade, and bred bitter resentment of the action of their fellow-townsmen in sending out of town for goods in the hope of saving a few cents.

Usually attempts to resist this competition have been confined to having the local newspapers write long editorials appealing to home pride. Patrons of the catalogue houses were told that if they sent their money to Chicago it stayed there, and that if they spent it at home it remained in circulation and lent life to local trade of all kinds. Every word of it was true, and it ought to appeal to the citizens. But it didn't so long as they fancied that they were saving money by buying things from the catalogue houses. Abstract appeals to home pride and loyalty are very fine, but nearly everybody wants the others to practice such principles, while he saves money by buying in the cheapest market.

A merchant down in Red Wing, whose advertisement appears in this week's issue of the Red Wing News, has the right idea. He is fighting the catalogue houses, and he is doing it in the only way it can be successfully done—by showing that he sell goods as cheaply as they can, or cheaper. His advertisement starts this way: "Get your mail order catalogue and compare my prices with ——", naming a well known catalogue house.

Then he gives a list of prices, comparing his own with those of the catalogue. In most cases he offers better prices. In but one case is his price the same as that of the catalogue house. He can compete with the catalogue houses, and he is letting the people of his city know it. Most country merchants can do the same thing, only they do not think of telling their townsmen about it through the columns of the local paper.

It would be very pleasant if it were otherwise, but appeals for trade must be appeals to self-interest. Those whom the advertiser seeks to make his customers must be shown reasons why they should patronize him, and they must be concrete reasons, too, like attractive prices, not abstract ones like patriotism and loyalty to the home community. These are all right in their places, but to be effective they must be backed up by prices, as the Red Wing merchant is doing.

DEFENDING A STEAL.

At last the free seed graft has found a champion who dares defend it upon the floor of the house. The advocate of the pettiest piece of business parliamentary body ever tampered with is John Wesley Gaines, the never-sleeping oratorical Vesuvius from Tennessee, who rose in his seat the other day, after his daily habit, and erupted in defense of free seeds.

His defense is ingenious, and rather interesting. He says there is a seed trust which is back of the attack upon the free seed graft. He has an unerring scent for a trust. It is hopeless for them to attempt to conceal themselves in his presence, for his keen sense of smell spots them every time.

Hon. John Wesley Gaines said that everything the farmer uses, "except the air and agricultural seeds", has been put into a trust, and now there is slyly incubating the "seed trust" whose "awful pall" will fall upon the shoulders of the "bending, toiling, drooping masses".

It is true that the seed houses have interested themselves in the fight against free seeds. But it is also true that it was rather foolish of them to do it. Whether or not they are in a trust, their interest in the matter is purely selfish, of course, and the free seed steal is such a pestiferous nuisance that it would have come to grief without their opposition. Indeed, it is doubtful if their attacks upon it have helped the fight to destroy it.

But that is neither here nor there. Whether dealers interest themselves or not, free seeds are a fraud and a deception. They do nobody any good, they cost a quarter of a million every year, and 75 per cent of them are wasted. Those that are planted are as likely to turn out to be inferior plants as they are to be successful, and instances where vegetable seeds furnished by the government have grown fine crops of weeds are not uncommon.

Even if there is a seed trust, that is no reason why the government should furnish free seeds. If it was going to fight the trust in that way it would have to contract to furnish all the seeds used in the country to make an effective fight against it. And if it is going to fight the seed trust by furnishing free seeds, why should it not attack the oil trust by furnishing free oil, the tobacco trust by furnishing free smoking tobacco to the farmers, the steel trust by furnishing free iron and steel?

One sarcastic farmer has written his congressman saying that if the government furnished free jackknives it would be doing something. That is to the point. If the government is to furnish free things, why not free meals and free clothing, that will do some good, instead of free seeds that will not grow and that do nobody any good?

HOTEL GOSSIP

"Seeding is pretty well advanced in some parts of the Dakotas," said N. D. Harding of Minneapolis, at the Lenox. "In the Red River valley it is still too wet for seeding, but on the higher ground the farmers are getting along in good shape with their spring work, and hope for a large crop in the fall. The farmers in the valleys were troubled the same way last year, and when harvest time came some of them were unable to cut a part of their crops owing to the fact that their land was covered with water. The drainage question is being agitated out there, but it appears to be such an expensive proposition in that district that the preliminaries are not progressing very satisfactorily.

"A number of good towns are to be found through the wheat districts. For its size I consider Fargo the banner town of the Northwest. It is just as citified as Minneapolis, St. Paul or Duluth, only on a smaller scale, of course. A person can get a better livery rig and horse in Fargo than he can in Minneapolis, so far as style is concerned. The people have money, and are not afraid to spend it. A good many outsiders are attracted to the town during the chicken season. Last fall the shooting was poor, because the spring and summer had been so wet, according to old hunters. Farther south, in the sandhills, some very good hunting was to be had, I understand."

"Electricity has come to be so common that it is no longer the wonder of the age," said L. A. Mold of Chicago at the McKay. "We take it as a matter of course. It is becoming more common every day, and it will not be a great many years before virtually all the leading railroads of the country are using it as motive power, according to the ideas of men who have made a study of the question.

"There are few steam railroads which would not find partial electrification of their lines, and in some cases entire electrification a profitable undertaking. Electric traction, of course, is best adapted to suburban and interurban railways, and the general increase in this class of traffic has been enormous since the first of the electrical service."

"Signs of spring are beginning to be noticeable on the Northern Minnesota farms," said G. A. Tracey of Bemidji, at the St. Louis. "As a matter of fact, they have been noticeable for some little time past. More vegetables, grains and grasses will be raised through what are known as the forest districts of Northern Minnesota this year than ever before. More land is under cultivation now than at any time in the past, and the farmers are looking for big crops next fall.

"Beltrami county is pretty well taken up now by farmers, and some of the stuff they raise is remarkable. Cabbages that you can hardly put in wash tubs, and turnips, carrots and other vegetables of the sort that are almost too big for a boy to lift. The market is all that could be desired, and farmers up our way have no trouble in disposing of all they raise.

"Every settler through the North country has his little patch of ground under cultivation, and depends on it almost entirely for his vegetables. His confidence is not misplaced, for it doesn't take a very big piece of ground, properly cared for, to produce enough vegetables to carry himself and family safely through the year. The climatic conditions seem to be better suited to agriculture farther from the lake, for, while there is plenty of rain, many of the days are more intensely hot, and have a tendency to rush the crops through to a harvesting stage more rapidly than is the case on lands near the big lake."

"Fish are running up stream in good shape now," said J. E. Jones of Gordon, Wis., at the St. Louis. "Anyone who doesn't care a hang for the game and fish laws need no: have much trouble getting a good string of fish, for in shallow places they can readily be shot and speared. At this season of the year, fish of the most eatable kind are to be found even in the smallest streams, and a good many people take advantage of the opportunity to get a few for the table. In all cases a few is sufficient, and this is one reason why it has been found necessary to have fish laws and enforce them. There always are men of the hog variety who want more than enough, and who will stack up fish until their arms get tired, if they get the chance.

"The best place I know of for trolling or still fishing for bass or pickerel is at what is known as the flowage, seven or eight miles below Solon Springs. A dam erected at that point has resulted in the flooding of a number of acres of land. Before the dam was constructed the land was covered with timber. It is still standing, and affords a fine lurking place for bass and pickerel. Numerous parties from the city visit the place every summer, and seldom go away dissatisfied. The flowage seems to have an inexhaustible supply of the finny tribe, and probably never will be played out, because the river flowing through it will keep it well stocked."

THE WEATHER

It was a real, old-fashioned northeaster that drenched Duluth with a steady downpour all day yesterday and a good deal of last night; but this morning the wind had switched into the north, and though it was still cloudy and unsettled, it was a change for the better. The weather man expects the wind to get back into the easterly quadrant tomorrow. Last night's lowest temperature was 32 deg., and yesterday's highest was 39 deg. Says Mr. Richardson of conditions:

"The Iowa storm has moved its center to Lake Michigan, causing light to heavy rains throughout the Northwest, Central valleys and lake region, and strong easterly winds Tuesday afternoon and last night in the latter district. The winds have shifted quite generally to westerly, and this morning did not exceed brisk, that velocity occurring on Lower Lake Michigan. Other disturbances overlie Texas and Western Canada, with high pressure areas over Florida, South Dakota and Oregon. Conditions favor mostly fair weather and westerly winds in this locality tonight and Thursday."

Following were last night's lowest temperatures, as recorded by the weather bureau:

Department of Agriculture, Weather Bureau, Duluth, May 2.—Local forecast for twenty-four hours ending at 7 p. m. Thursday: Duluth, Superior and vicinity—Partly cloudy tonight and Thursday. Warmer tonight. Fresh northwesterly winds, becoming easterly Thursday.

H. W. RICHARDSON,
Local Forecaster.

Chicago, May 2.—Forecasts until 7 p. m. Thursday: Wisconsin—Generally fair tonight and Thursday. Slightly cooler in extreme southeast portion tonight.

Minnesota, North Dakota and South Dakota—Generally fair tonight and Thursday. Warmer tonight.

Upper Lakes—Fresh westerly winds on Lake Michigan, causing light to heavy rains throughout the Northwest, Central valleys and lake region, and strong easterly winds Tuesday afternoon and last night in the latter district. The winds have shifted quite generally to westerly, and this morning did not exceed brisk, that velocity occurring on Lower Lake Michigan. Other disturbances overlie Texas and Western Canada, with high pressure areas over Florida, South Dakota and Oregon. Conditions favor mostly fair weather and westerly winds in this locality tonight and Thursday.

Coming.

I.

It's coming, coming, coming—I can feel
It in the air—
I can hear it in the wind's sigh, in the skies so blue and fair;
I can see it in the willows where they nod
and dip and bend,
I can hear it in the melody the feathered songsters send.
And my feet are growing restless just to press familiar ways—
Just to press the paths of summer with its laziness and haze.

II.

I can see it in the dreaming—and there comes the lilting song
Of the drowsy, drowsy Junetime; as I plod the path along
I can see the mesh grass waving, and there comes the subtle smell
Of the freshness of the meadows; I can see the shaded dell
Where the water bubbles sparkling; I can see the glinting dew
On the glories as they smile and whisper
"Howdy'do" to you.

III.

I can see the sprinkled heavens when the night is peaceful, still,
And I hear the night bird yonder call its mate beyond the hill.
I can hear the bees' dull droning as they flit about and slp
From the hearts of laden blossoms stores of nectar—honey drip.
I can feel it stealing softly, necromantic, and to you
All the world will soon be saying: "I'm Miss Summer; howdy-do."

—WILL F. GRIFFIN in Milwaukee Sentinel.

Reflections of a Bachelor.

New York Press: It's high finance when you are lowering other people's funds.

It's lots more useful to run a lawn mower than to write spring poetry.

We here most of our generous impulses at the times when we haven't the means to put them into execution.

When a woman has a ride on a ferryboat she is just as likely as not to tell about the yachting party she has been on.

Some men are so lucky that when they steal an umbrella they find it is one that was stolen from them some time.

Rubbing the Gilt Off War.

Boston Transcript: War is fast losing its glitter. Khaki displaces blue or scarlet. Flags are unknown in battles. The French army has just banished the drum and now there is talk of abolishing the saber. Meanwhile, war songs grow rarer and rarer. Most modern wars are too short to generate songs. All this grieves and scandalizes the painters, the poets and the playwrights, but causes the peace people to rejoice with huge joy. Channing, were he still alive, would share their exultation, for he used to declare that the love of warfare sprang partly, even largely, from the impression made upon small boys by gorgeous uniforms, gay banners, flashing sabers, the throb of the drum and the contagious fervor of war songs. Romance cast its glamour over that dirtiest of jobs, the job of killing. It hadn't the right to. As Charles Dudley Warner put it, we who despised killing in plain clothes honored killing in fancy dress.

Same Old Thing Everywhere.

Pittsburg Dispatch: At Philadelphia the coal roads had an association, at Washington they had an understanding, in New York it is a community of interest and in the Northwest a gentlemen's agreement. But it means the same thing every time.

Remedy for Mosquitoes.

Kansas City Star: A Memphis, Mo., man has discovered a new way to get rid of mosquitoes. He says to rub alum on your face and hands. When the mosquito takes a bite it puckers his buzzer so he can't sting. It sits down in a damp place, tries to dig the pucker loose, catches its death of cold and dies of pneumonia.

Commercial Politics.

Frank M. Eddy in Sauk Center Herald: We are no spring chicken in politics. We have played the game in all departments and played it to the limit. If the convention of Duluth is but a repetition of past conventions we would rather have a pocketful of railroad passes than a headful of brains if we wanted to secure a nomination for a state office. We would rather have a thousand meal tickets on the Spalding hotel, than a good record if we desired recognition. Yet the voters have no right to kick because such a deplorable condition exists. In every county there are clean handed, unpurchasable men, men who love the right, men who believe that rectitude, righteousness and justice should rule and reign. It is up to the voters. Will you attend the caucuses and conventions and see that these kind of men go as delegates, or will you stay at home and let commercial politics rule?

MIRTHFUL REMARKS.

Washington Star: "What are your impressions of America?"

"You are a down-trodden people," answered the European revolutionist. "You not only have laws, but you actualy seem to enjoy obeying them."

New York Tales: Doctor (entering suddenly): "Which of you has waited longest?"

Shears (sulkily): "I; I have waited six months, and you haven't paid me for that last suit yet!"

Philadelphia Ledger: "The last time I saw Rieder he told me he was studying three foreign languages and could speak fairly well in all of them. Is he still at it?"

"Yes, but he has improved wonderfully. He was telling me only today that he knows enough now to keep his mouth shut in all of them."

Chicago Tribune: "What can you expect of a senate constituted like ours?" demanded the orator. "Consider the material that composes it. Ex nihilo nihil fit."

"You're another!" yelled a sturdy and indignant postmaster in the audience.

Philadelphia Press: Tommy—"I heard ma say that new lady in our street is a 'grass widow.' I wonder what that is?"

Elsie—"I think it's a lady whose husband died of hay fever."

Cleveland Plain Dealer: The lawyer: "Do you both live in the same state?"

The applicant for divorce: "Sure. In a state of incompatibility."

Cleveland Leader: Pa Twaddles—"Tommy, if you run away from school today and go fishing, I'll certainly give you one of the worst thrashings you ever had."

Tommy Twaddles—"Pa, would you just as soon give it to me now, so I won't have nothin' disagreeable to look forward to?"

Baltimore American: "Why did brother Dick shoot that poor crow?"

"I think, my dear girl, it was because the crow gave him caws."

Yonkers Statesman: Yeast—"Why does a woman always look worried when she sees a boy coming up the walk to her house with a telegram?"

Crimsonbeak: "Because she doesn't know whether it's prepaid or not."

Smart Set: "The enemy is in great confusion, and this is the instant to attack, sir!" the dusty and breathless aide reported.

"I can't help it," the great general replied. "I have just received a message from the reporters and moving picture men, stating that they had been delayed and wouldn't arrive for two hours yet."

What She Knew.

She read Sanscrit
And knew Panscrit;
Ancient Persian
Was diversion;
But she used to think that Maine
Was a river in Lorraine
That the Mississippi ran
Through Vermont and Yucatan,
And that Christopher Columbus was
The king of Michigan.

All foreign nationalities
And realms and principalities,
With no trace of indecision,
She could name with great precision;
But she used to think Nebraska
Was a river in Alaska,
And she searched for Philadelphia
On a map of Madagascar.

A HORSE APIECE.

Boston Herald: Lon Sanborn will be remembered by the older residents of Lewiston, Me., as a man with a conspicuous weakness for playing practical jokes. He was a truckman. One day he was accosted by a stranger hunting for a tenement, who inquired if he could direct him to any good vacant "rent."

"Yes," said Sanborn; "saw one this morning, a good one. Climb up here. I'm going right up that way."

The stranger allowed himself to be driven through street after street, until at last he inquired if the "rent" was near at hand.

"Oh, yes," said Sanborn, and, standing up in the wagon, he revealed to the astonished stranger a large rent in the seat of his trousers. The stranger smiled a sickly smile.

A few days later Sanborn received an order to move a trunk from a place down in one of the corporation blocks, with further instructions to call with the trunk at a certain store, and there he would be informed of its destination.

The trunk was found to be a very heavy one, requiring extra help to load. Acting according to instructions, Sanborn took it to the place designated. The proprietor said: "All I know about it is that a stranger came in this morning and said that if you brought a trunk here to tell you to take it up to Sanborn's rent."

LIVING IN LONDON.

Los Angeles Times: Mrs. Craigie, as John Oliver Hobbes is known in real life, had finished her lecture at Bryn Mawr college, and now she was surrounded by a number of students. These charming girls, their rose-leaf complextons, bright hair, and clear eyes enhanced by the deep black of their gowns and mortar-boards, questioned Mrs. Cragie with respectful curiosity.

"You live in London, don't you?" one said.

"Yes, I live in London; in Lancaster Gate," Mrs. Craigie replied.

"In Lancaster Gate in the West end?"

"Yes," said Mrs. Craigie, smiling.

"But on account of the fogs and the damp, living in London, even in the West end, is horrible, isn't it?" said a young girl.

"Oh, not at all," said Mrs. Craigie. "If one spends the summer in the country and the winter on the Riveria, London is a delightful place to live in."

MINNESOTA OPINIONS.

Walker Pilot: J. Adam Bede states that times are so good in his district that everybody is making too much money to bother about opposing him for congress. That's all right from Bede, as he is a professional optimist anyway. But why not look at the matter right and say that everybody in the district is making enough money to enable him to run for congress in opposition to Jadam.

Stillwater Gazette: There's a rare case at Brainerd—a plumber has gone into bankruptcy. It is usually the plumber's victim that is obliged to take that step.

Mankato Free Press: Frank Eddy is of the opinion that Andy Stephens' candidacy for the governorship is G. N. No need of a diagram in this instance.

Minneota Mascot: Northern Minnesota should send some level-headed men to the next legislature. Other parts of the state should send there men of brains, liberal, and educated up to the fact that a few thousand put into drainage and road improvements up north will bring better returns than Standard Oil stock—and that's going some.

Virginia Enterprise: Neil B. Morrison has been recommended by Congressman Bede to succeed Jay M. Smith as receiver of the Duluth land office. Some of the politicians led J. Adam a merry chase on this appointment, but J. Adam is seemingly unmindful of the wrath of the political framers.

Lancaster Herald: We never could understand why they call a baseball enthusiast a fan unless it is because he stirs up so much hot air.

Buffalo Journal: The country exchanges, almost without exception, speak very highly of Jacobson for governor. There is no doubt he is the choice of a majority of the voters, but that does not mean he will get the nomination, as politicians may be able to jockey him out of it.

Roseau Region: It is rumored that forty thousand dollars has been contributed towards a campaign fund for Julius H. Block. Who by?

St. Cloud Journal-Press: If the Republicans of Minnesota—or the delegates to the Duluth convention—act on the theory that anybody can beat Governor Johnson, they have a regular Frisco quake coming. It is going to take the right man nominated in the right way to win in November, and this is no foolishness.

Moorhead Independent: That which develops the state is good for the business man, and that which is good for the business man is good for the whole community.

Moorhead Citizen: The new Russian parliament is to be provided with a press gallery and an official copy reader to tell the correspondents what part of the debate they didn't hear.

St. Vincent New Era: The probabilities are that among so many candidates for governor of Minnesota, all loyal men to the party, but neither with enough votes to secure his nomination, that they will, harmoniously, unite on Chief Peace Maker Dunn, and run him into the governor's chair with a rush. Such an eventuality is all that the Johnsonites dread.

True Blue Bourbonism.

Boston Herald: Representative McCleary of Minnesota, a member of the ways and means committee and a standpatter of the true Bourbon type, says "there will be no tariff revision." He admits that "there are a lot of people in my district who are talking about a revision of the present Dingley tariff," he continued, "just as there were plenty of people who talked free silver a decade ago;" but he says: "I took my stand early in the free silver fight, and let my constituents know it. And just so I shall this time tell them of my position and my explicit reasons for opposing tariff revision, as the campaign goes on."

The idea of comparing support of a dishonest dollar with the advocacy of a repeal or reduction of unjust, unnecessary and monopoly-breeding tariff duties! Here is a tariff which the great apostle of protection, William McKinley, declared five years ago might well be reduced in certain of the schedules, and under which our "protected" industries are selling abroad millions of dollars' worth of their products at lower prices than they exact from the helpless home consumers. And Representative McCleary says it shall not be revised. Speaker Cannon says it will not be until the people "force" the Republican party to revise it. The time to do the forcing will be in the elections this year. And if the Minnesota Republicans have the independence that they manifested in former years, they will turn out the Bourbons and elect representatives who will represent them.

A Toast to Wine.

H. R. in New Orleans Harlequin: Wine, the distilled poetry of the hills and the sunshine, the heart-blood and the passion of the grape! Wine, the Lethe of lover and madman! Wine, the wee small god that creeps into men's veins and carries them higher than the skies; the wee small fiend that creeps into men's veins and carries them lower than the mole. Wine, the wizard; wine, the all-powerful, the old, the never-ending! Wine, the friend; wine, the enemy. Wine, the only driftwood of heaven and hell that has ever floated to the barren shores of this desolate island we call the world!

Too Much Competition.

Kelton, Wyo., Gazette: The church social last night wasn't much of a success. The attendance was cut down greatly by the opening of Tim Maloney's new saloon.

A Morning Song.

I.

Gone—the shadows o' the night:
Good morning!
Love is blossoming in the light:
Good morning!
Sorrow now fades with the past:
See! the bloom outlives the blast!
Life and love, and peace, at last
Good morning!

II.

Sunlight, after heavens of gray:
Good morning!
Now the heart hath holiday:
Good morning!
Not a thorn to wound Love's breast
Where the valleys sing of rest;
Life and Love are at their best—
Good morning!

MARINE

FEW MATES ON STRIKE

But Four in Employ of Pittsburg Company Go Out.

Vessel Owners Will Stand Pat on the Strike Question.

Cleveland, May 2.—A canvass of the leading vessel owners here today developed the fact that they are practically unanimous in the determination to "stand pat" on the strike question. They declare that no concessionns whatever will be made to the strikers by the members of the Lake Carriers' association in connection with the demand for recognition of the organization of mates and pilots.

It is asserted by the vessel owners that the mates, for whose benefit the strike was ordered, have declined, almost to a man, to leave their boats, or to have anything to do with the strike movement. It is said that only four mates have struck throughout the entire fleet of the Pittsburg Steamship company, the marine branch of the United States Steel corporation, which operates about 125 steamers and barges on the lakes.

Nothing Doing at Buffalo.

Buffalo, May 2.—Since midnight Monday not a freighter has left this port. Aside from the movements of the Detroit and Cleveland passenger boats, navigation is at a standstill here. Work was going on as usual today at three of the ore docks here, namely, the Susquehanna, Lackawanna and Lehigh Valley, and at the dock of the Tonawanda Iron & Steel company at Tonawanda. The ore handlers at all these docks are non-unionists, and they have continued at work since the strike was declared.

Nothing is being done at the Minnesota & Buffalo Furnace company's ore docks, however, the ore handlers there being members of a union which is affiliated with the longshoremen.

No packet or freight handlers have joined the strike as they are non-union and vessels coming in with package freight will have no difficulty in being unloaded, but the trouble will come in endeavoring to get out of port.

Not Affecting Chicago.

Chicago, May 2.—The strike of the longshoremen has not so far, resulted in stopping business in this city to any great extent. At all of the railroad docks in this city, vessels today were being unloaded as though there was no strike. Very few of the longshoremen have been ordered out either in the ports of Chicago or South Chicago.

One Thousand Out at Toledo.

Toledo, O., May 2.—One thousand longshoremen are out here as a result of the general strike. Coal and ore wharves are idle. Tugmen are still working but there are few boats in port.

TUGS FOR SCHOONERS.

May be Compromise for Benefit of Lumber Hookers.

Captains of lumber schooners are finding themselves in a rather embarrassing position for want of tugs. It is next thing to impossible to handle these schooners in anything like a sea without tugs. Taking them in and out of slips, particularly at a place where the inrunning tide from the lake is strong, is a hard job for even the nimble little tugs, and for the steamers which tow these schooners it is almost impossible.

An effort is being made to get permission for firemen to work on one or two tugs, with the understanding that these tugs will be used for towing lumber schooners solely. Whether anything will come of this or not is, of course, problematical.

The Viking Strands.

Sturgeon Bay, May 2.—The steel steamer Viking of the Gilchrist fleet stranded Monday afternoon on a nineteen-foot shoal between the Rock and Poverty islands. She is still fast, but is reported not leaking. The tug John Leatham left yesterday morning with a lighter and crew of men, and it is believed the craft will be released without injury unless a storm springs up. The Viking was on her way to this port from Alpena.

Marine Notes.

The marine strike has not interfered with the wrecking work on the steamer Crescent City, at Lakewood, but the bad weather of the past few days has caused considerable inconvenience. Satisfactory progress is made on the stranded boat, but there is no telling yet when she will be released.

A revision, in colors, of Coast Chart No. 4, Lake Michigan, showing coast from Chicago to Wisconsin state line, has just been issued and is now on sale at the United States lake survey office, 33 Campau building, Detroit, Mich., at 15 cents per copy.

Port of Duluth.

Ocean Steamships.

New York, May 2.—Arrived: Carmania, Liverpool.

MAN'S WEAKER HALF.

The popular belief is that the left side is weaker than the right, and, as in all popular beliefs, there is much truth in this. In most cases, says the Grand Magazine, the right arm is decidedly stronger than the left, the bones are larger and the muscles more vigorous.

When we come to consider the lower limbs, however, we find a precisely opposite state of affairs; the left leg is stronger than the right in the great majority of cases. This want of symmetry is noticeable all through the body. Nine times out of ten we see better with one eye than with the other, and hear better with the left than with the right ear, or vice versa.

Not only so, an injury to the body—a burn or a cut, for instance—causes more pain on one side than it would were it inflicted on the other. Even diseases attack one side on their first onset in preference to the other. Eczema, varicose veins, sciatica, and even tuberculosis begin, invariably, to manifest themselves on our weaker side. A blistering plaster, too, will provoke an eruption only if applied to the right side in certain individuals; in others only if applied to the left side.

The simplest way, apparently, of discovering which is our weaker side is to observe which side we lie upon by preference when in bed, as it is certain that we will instinctively adopt the attitude which is most agreeable, or, rather, which causes the least inconvenience; in other words, we will lie upon the side the muscles of which, being more vigorous, are less sensible to the pressure upon them of the weight of the body.

Statistics and observation go to prove that in about three cases out of four it is the left side which is the weaker, thus giving reason to the popular dictum. Curiously enough, however pneumonia it has been noticed, unlike most diseases usually attacks at first the right—that is to say, the stronger side of the body.

ON SENATOR ALLISON.

Kansas City Journal: As his years go on Senator Allison's reputation for conservatism and guarded utterance increases. Everybody in Washington knows the futility of trying to get the Iowa statesman to commit himself. A day or two ago, so the cloak room story goes, a man met Senator Allison in one of the corridors of the capitol. "Senator," he said, taking out his watch, "What time have you got?" Senator Allison took out his own watch, looked at it, and then inquired softly: "What time have you?"

ACCENTRIC.

Kansas City Journal: It is told of James Lick, the eccentric San Francisco millionaire, who founded the famous observatory bearing his name, that when taking anyone into his service he always asked the person to plant a tree upside down, the roots in the air, the branches under ground. If there was any protest the man was at once sent away. Lick saying that he wanted only men who would obey orders strictly.

HAPPENINGS IN THE DAKOTAS

Fargo Man to Raise Horses on Famous Roosevelt Ranch.

NORTH DAKOTA.

Fargo—The famous Roosevelt ranch, near Medora, Billings county, recently purchased by O. J. de Lendrecie of Fargo, will be made into a horse ranch. The new owner is an admirer of horses and plans to raise some especially fine animals there. The entire ranch will be inclosed with a fence, and new houses and barns constructed.

The selection of a new president of the Fargo college is being considered at a session of the trustees, though no election will be made for a few weeks. The resignation of President Morley has been accepted, and he is in the East making arrangements for an endowment fund for the institution.

Oakes—The 5-year-old daughter of O. H. Frogen of Clement township was bitten in the lips and nose by a dog. The child is in a serious condition, more from fright than the results of the bite. The mayor at once summoned a special meeting of the council to pass an order directing that all unmuzzled dogs found on the streets be killed.

SOUTH DAKOTA.

Aberdeen—The little son of Lenhart Aldinger, a prosperous farmer of Bowdle, met a horrible death yesterday in a stubble fire, started by his father in a field adjoining the farm. When the father went to the field the little fellow followed, and his presence was not noticed until his screams attracted the attention of the father. When the child was rescued, he was found to be unconscious and badly burned. He died a few minutes after being taken home.

Word has been received of the arrest of T. H. Thelan at Butte, Mont., wanted here on a charge of embezzlement. He was at one time bookkeeper for a local brewing company, and it is alleged that his accounts have been found short in various sums, aggregating a total of about $800.

Thelan left Aberdeen more than a year ago, and the shortage was not discovered for some time. Since then the police have been looking for him and asked the aid of other Northwestern cities. Thelan was first arrested at Butte on a charge of burglary, but the prosecution failed to make a case. Then an effort was made to identify him with some other crime, and in that way the authorities found he answered the description of the man wanted here.

Watertown—Patrick Falvey, one of the wealthiest farmers of Codington county, was found dead at his lodgigs. He attended a banquet Sunday night, after which he retired. He died while sleeping. An inquest was held and the coroner's jury brought in a verdict that death was due to causes unknown. The autopsy failed to reveal to the physicians any cause for the strange death.

Deadwood—The Black Hills forest reserve, in comparison with some of the other reserves, has much upon which to congratulate itself. From all points in the West and Middle West come crees from stockmen who have stock grazing on the reserves, that wild animals are causing much destruction among the stock. The animals coming in for the major portion of the blame are the timber wolf and the mountain lion. These animals are no longer plenty in this section, and the loss of stock by them is practically nothing.

The chief difficulty has been on the Wind river division of the Yellowstone reserve, in Wyoming. John Goff, the famous hunter, who acted as guide for President Roosevelt on his recent hunting trip, has been sent by the government to hunt lions in the Shoshone division of the Yellowstone reserve, and Vernon Bally, chief naturalist of the biographical survey, has been transferred to the same district to make a study of the problem. On the Wichita reserve, set aside as a game reserve, those same animals are killing off the other game, and making a nuisance of themselves generally. Thus far there have been no complaints this season in the Black Hills concerning the depredations of wild animals.

LATE DOINGS IN MICHIGAN

Must Remove Slot Machines From Escanaba or Lose Them.

Escanaba—In compliance with an order isued by Judge John W. Stone, it is announced at Escanaba that Sheriff Perrow will seize all slot machines and other gambling contrivances and destroy them. Before leaving the city Judge Stone issued explicit orders to the sheriff to enforce the law regarding slot machines. In his remarks he said: "This is the second time I have notified you about this matter, and do not allow me to be forced to speak of it on a third occasion."

Bessemer—The Colby Iron Mining company has just finished the erection of fifty-five frame dwellings near their mines here. Most of the houses are two stories high and will be occupied by employes at the Colby properties.

Calumet—Mike Kisun, accused of shooting Martin Simmons, last week, is confined in the Calumet jail, awaiting trial on a charge of murder. The outcome of the case is awaited with great interest here.

Kisun acknowledges the shooting of Simmons, but claims the latter was making an attempt to burglarize his home, and that he was therefore justified in shooting. The affair is the talk of the town.

Hancock—A new sawmill in the vicinity of Laird and Allston, this county, will be established soon by local capitalists and Finnish homesteaders living near the two towns named. It is estimated there is sufficient timber on the homesteads in the vicinity to run the sawmill indefinitely. A company capitalized at $25,000 will be organized. The sawmill will be equipped with up-to-date machinery.

Calumet—"Big Louie" Meanen, the young giant, at the Franklin and Michigan's biggest and sturdiest son, has purchased a new hat, possibly the larest ever made for actual wear. It is size 8¾ and measures eighteen inches through its diameter. It is nine inches high from rim to crown, about the size of a peck measure. The hat is the Easter bonnet sensation of the Copper country.

RAILROADS

BUSINESS WAS LARGE

Last Month Broke April Record for Car Association.

Lake and Rail Lines to Fight for Grain Shipments.

The Lake Superior Car Service association did a big business during April, according to the monthly report, as compiled by Chairman James Kelly. The total number of cars handled in the thirty days was 22,022, which is a record-breaker for April. Never before in this month were so many cars handled by the association. The April, 1905, total was 18,997, leaving a gain of 4,025 cars for last month, as compared with the preceding year.

The greatest increase in the class of freight handled was in building materials. A very large amount of building is being done and is going to be done in Duluth this spring and summer, and the railroads are handling a good deal of material for the contractors. An increase is also noted in the amount of certain other kinds of freight. The local jobbers are receiving and shipping more goods this spring than they were last, for one thing.

BOTH WANT THE GRAIN.

Boat Owners and Railroads Are After the Business.

The lake and rail lines are about to plunge into a fight for the control of the grain moving to the Atlantic seaboard from the Northwest, according to reports from Cleveland.

Capt. Edward Smith, president of the Great Lakes Towing company, is quoted as saying that this is the logical and natural outcome of a movement now under consideration by the vessel interests of the Great Lakes.

To avoid the uncertainty attendant upon the opening of the season of navigation each spring, the Lake Carriers' association and the Dock Managers' association are now planning to make contracts with the labor unions for at least three years, and possibly five. This brought about immediately a discussion of the probable outcome. Capt. Smith is quoted as follows:

"The exporting of grain has come to be an immense business, done on a comparatively small margin of profit. Exporters in New York, buying grain from Chicago or Duluth concerns, make their contracts with Liverpool houses in January and February. As soon as the grain is sold, contracts for its transportation are made first with the ocean vessels and then with the carriers to the seaboard. The ocean vessel room having been purchased, must be paid for whether used or not. In January and February the lake vessel interests, under the old system, were never able to assure shippers that boats would start running as soon as the channels are open. To meet their engagements with the ocean vessels and the Liverpool consignees, the exporters have been forced to move their grain by all-rail even at an increased cost of a cent or more a bushel.

"But with the boat labor on the lakes under a long-time contract, vessel owners by the first of the year could make definite contracts with the shippers for the movement of grain, and consequently take a large percentage of it away from the all-rail lines. At the same time, it would give employment to many of the boats now being built and increase the general demand for cargo carriers, thus strengthening the lake freight situation remarkably.

"The competition between the lake and rail lines for the control of this business has always been keen. The comparatively simple matter of making a long-time instead of a short-time contract with the lake labor unions would throw into the hands of the lake vessel owners the commanding position in the grain trade and make the lakes the highway for the movement of the wheat output of our own and the Canadian Northwest."

The effect on rates is expected to be a general lowering of carrying charges. Northwestern millers have been contending for years that the export rates on flour ought to be lower than on grain. The object is to permit the milling of wheat for foreign consumption in this country instead of abroad. It is believed that any such movement in wheat will revive the old question of flour rates. The effect is expected to be an all-year-round reduction in export flour rates, through competition between the United States and Canadian railways. This, in turn, will tend to put an end to the advance of 2 cents a hundredweight on grain rates during the winter, while the lakes are frozen.

EFFECT ON RAILROADS.

The Lake Strike May Bring Them Additional Shipments.

If the lake strike continues more than three or four weeks, the railroads leading out of Duluth eastward will probably benefit by it, for the trouble extended that length of time would mean a large amount of freight business diverted from the lakes to the railroads.

Pending an adjustment of the difficulty, shippers will hold back as long as they possibly can from sending their freight all the way to the Atlantic seaboard by rail. It is much cheaper to ship by water, and the shippers will undergo serious delays rather than pay the extra charges asked by the railroads.

FISHING RATES.

Practically All the Railroads Now Have Them in Effect.

Special summer fishing rates to Delta, Middlebrook and other points along the line went into effect on the South Shore road yesterday. A special rate to Aitkin, Minn., over the Northern Pacific, also went into effect yesterday.

The low rates on the South Shore are effective Friday and Saturday each week during the season, good returning the following Tuesday. The tickets to Aitkin will be on sale daily until Sept. 30. The Great Northern also has fishing rates in force. The Omaha is now selling commutation tickets to Gordon and Solon Springs, and the special round-trip rates for the summer will be announced within the next two or three weeks.

New Switch Engine Here.

Two new switch engines for the Duluth & Iron Range road have arrived at Itasca from the Baldwin locomotive works and will be taken to Two Harbors as fast as possible. They will go into immediate commission. The new engines are similar to the others purchased this year by the road, except that they are better adapted for switching.

Banquet Postponed.

The first semi-annual banquet of the Northern Railway club, which was planned for the evening of May 25, has been called off, owing to the fact that the latter part of May is such a busy time with the members that the club would be unable to do the affair justice. Nov. 23 a banquet will be held, celebrating the end of the first year of the club's existence.

PAYS TRIBUTE TO H. M. BRADLEY

Dr. S. P. Long Has Article in the Minnesota Veteran.

The first issue of the Minnesota Veteran, the official organ of the Northern Minnesota conference superannuated fund for Methodist preachers, has an interesting article by Dr. S. P. Long of Minneapolis, late of Duluth. The following article, which was on Henry M. Bradley of Duluth and was illustrated by his photo, on the front page:

"The subject of this sketch was born in Massachusetts eighty-two years ago and had the benefit of the Christian training given in a typical New England home of that day. Here was laid the foundation for the excellent character since developed. Early moving to the West he entered the lumber business in Michigan, and afterward in Duluth combined with this mining interests. He has had as a business man an interesting and varied experience. He has always been a prominent figure in the business world in which he moved, recognized everywhere as a man of force and foresight.

"He is a gentleman of the old school, a charming host, a loyal friend, a man of strong opinions and great tenacity of purpose, but above all he has been noted for his deep religious convictions; a devout Christian and a loyal Methodist. Years ago he had a remarkable religious experience, and from that time gave himself in consecration to God and to the work of the Methodist church, and the years that have followed have borne testimony to his loyalty to the vows then made.

"Methodist preachers have rarely found a more devoted friend and his gift of $25,000 to the superannuated fund is only one of the many evidences of that fact. His gifts to his own church—First church, Duluth—have always been princely. In addition to the large subscription made when the church was built he gave more than $15,000 toward liquidating the debt, and within the last few months he has given a beautiful and very valuable lot on which is to be erected an $11,000 parsonage. He has also recently given $10,000 toward the new Y. M. C. A. building in Duluth.

"To a remarkable degree has he 'given himself with his gifts,' throughout the many years of his membership in the church. He has not been a 'paying member' only, but as Sabbath school superintendent, Bible class teacher, class leader, trustee and steward he has given proof of his love for the cause.

"In all that he has done he has been ably seconded and encouraged by his devoted wife, whom God called to himself a few months since.

"May he long be spared to see the prosperity of the work which he so loves, and to enjoy the fruits of his labors."

Fortunate Missourians.

"When I was a druggist, at Livonia, Mo.," writes T. J. Dwyer, now of Graysville, Mo., "three of my customers were permanently cured of consumption by Dr. King's New Discovery, and are well and strong today. One was trying to sell his property and move to Arizona, but after using New Discovery a short time he found it unnecessary to do so. I regard Dr. King's New Discovery as the most wonderful medicine in existence." Surest Cough and Cold cure and Throat and Lung healer. Guaranteed by all druggists. 50c and $1. Trial bottle free.

MORE VOTES FOR CUMMINS.

Butler County's Delegation of Fifteen is a Clear Gain.

Sioux City, Iowa, May 2.—Thirty-nine votes were added to the Cummins columns yesterday by the conventions of Butler, Grundy and Calhoun counties. This makes the standing to date: Cummins, 321; Perkins, 93.

The Butler county delgation of fifteen is a clear gain for Cummins, as that county was against the governor five years ago. Cummins also gained two votes in Grundy, as that county formerly divided.

Standpatters were amazed when it was found that a majority of the delegates to the Butler county convention were for Cummins, he having 110 to 55 for Perkins. Col. McClure, who has been leader in the county for many years, had promised the county without condition for Perkins. Early reports after the caucuses Saturday night were that he would control. When the truth was known, the Perkins forces instituted several contests, but without avail.

The selection of a solid Cummins delegation from Calhoun county at Rockwell City was the culmination of a long, hard fight. The railroad influence is strong in the county, the North Western having important shops at Lake City. Nine of the eleven newspapers were against Cummins, yet three-fifths of the delegates were for the governor. Grundy county was conceded practically, and went to Cummins with little protest.

The county convention at Waverly chose eleven Perkins delegates to the state convention. Four-fifths of those in the county convention were for Perkins.

ORRINE SAVED THE HOME.

"For over five years a mechanic, earning $22.50 per week, had not taken a full pay envelope home. He was induced to try Orrine," writes W. K. Schmidt Co., one of the leading druggists of Grand Rapids, Mich. "He was faithful to the medicine, following the directions, and a complete cure followed."

"What appeals most to the thinking person is the prosperity for the family which can be attributed directly to Orrine. The man became worth more to his firm, received an advance in pay, and about a year ago purchased a home on the contract plan. By the aid of a saving wife, he is able to carry out his contract, and when in the store, a few days ago, said in sixty more weeks the home will be entirely paid for."

This shows the good results following the Orrine treatment. The remedy is absolutely harmless, is thoughly scientific, and is so uniformly successful that in every box is a registered guarantee which entitles you to a refund of your money if Orrine fails to effect a cure. Treatise on how to cure drunkenness free on request. Orrine Co., Washington, D. C.

Orrine is in two forms, No. 1, which can be given secretly without the patient's knowledge; No. 2, in pill form, for those who wish to be cured. The price of each is $1, and both are sold under a guarantee. Use Orrine, quit drinking and make wife and family happy and prosperous in their own home.

OLD MAN BREAKS FROM HOSPITAL; KILLS SELF.

Wabasso, Minn., May 2.—William Schaefer, an old and eccentric farmer, committed suicide by shooting himself with a shotgun. He was sick with cancer of the stomach, and had been receiving treatment at the Springfield, Minn., hospital.

He escaped from the hospital, and found his way home, a distance of twenty-six miles. While his wife was outside, Schaefer crept out of bed and dragged himself upstairs, and then committed the fatal deed.

We care not how you suffered, nor what failed to cure you, Hollister's Rocky Mountain Tea makes the puniest, weakest specimen of man or womanhood strong and healthy. 35 cents, Tea or Tablets. Ask your druggist.

FOOTPADS STRIP MAN AND DESTROY TROUSERS.

Chicago, May 2.—When William Stein, 367 West North avenue, was held up at Madison and Halsted streets, early yesterday morning, and forced to surrender his clothing to two highwaymen, he thought the limit had been reached, but when the robbers, after searching the pockets, threw his trousers into the street, and a Halsted street electric car ran over them, severing one leg of the useful and necessary garments, Stein's anger broke all bounds, and he reported the matter to the police.

The police gave him a pair of trousers and, with the rest of his clothing, which he had gathered from telegraph wires and awnings, Stein went home.

SENTENCE OVERRULED.

Man Convicted of Attempting to Bribe Juror is Released.

St. Paul, May 2.—The sentence given Henry Holland by Judge Kelly of the Ramsey county district court for alleged attempt at bribery, was yesterday overruled by the supreme court, and his release ordered. The supreme court holds that Judge Kelly erred in not giving Holland the option of a fine but sentencing him to six months in the county jail.

Holland was convicted of attempting to bribe Dubord, a juror in a damage suit against Tom Hartman against the Soo road. Dubord reported to the court that he had been handed $50 to hold out for a large verdict, and the court then discharged the jury, and tried Holland for bribery.

MOSS DESTINED TO FEED WORLD'S POOR.

Christianla, May 2.—Dr. Hansteen, chief lecturer in the agricultural school at Aas, declares his belief that moss is destined to become the great popular food for the masses, owing to its cheapness and nutritive value.

The common, greenish white moss that is found almost everywhere, was subjected to a chemical process, pressed and cooked. It makes a dish delighting the most blase epicure, and it is equally or more nutritive than the vegetables now used. It also can be ground and used as meal for breadmaking.

Dr. Hansteen says his experiments show that nine ounces of moss, costing the equivalent of 2 cents, will make a dinner for six persons.

ENGAGEMENT BROKEN; IOWA GIRL IS CONSOLED.

Des Moines, Iowa, May 2.—Miss Bertha Shrimplin, the Mount Ayr, Iowa, high school girl, whose engagement was broken with Count Amando de Cespedes of Costa Rica a few months ago, when it was learned the latter had a wife living in Chicago, was secretly wedded to Marcus A. Greenleaf of Pomona, Cal., a week ago.

News of the wedding reached Mount Ayr friends yesterday. De Cespedes explained that at the time the engagement was broken he did not know it was necessary to secure a divorce.

DIED AT NINETY-ONE.

Hokah, Minn., May 2.—The oldest resident of Hokah, Mrs. Martha Eddy, has passed away, being over 91 years of age. Her death resulted from a fall about ten days previous when she broke her hip. She was the last of her family as well as of the family from which she came, and had been a resident of Hokah for many years.

MURDER AND SUICIDE.

Girard, Pa., May 2.—A murder and suicide occurred here yesterday afternoon when Leander Hart shot and killed his wife and turned the weapon on himself with fatal results. Neighbors heard the shots and found the woman crouching behind a gas stove with two bullet holes in her head. A few feet away the body of the murderer lay, a revolver with five empty chambers at his feet.

Interesting Talk by S. F. Boyce on What Makes a Cigar Popular.

The remarkable success of Wadsworth Bros.' Chico cigar in getting into the mouths of smokers in Duluth is astonishing.

Less than a year ago the Chico was unknown here. Today, it is the most popular cigar in S. F. Boyce's large stock.

"Advertising alone will not make a cigar popular," said Mr. Boyce. "A cigar must be good to meet with a sale in this city. I do not know of a town where the smokers are as discriminating as they are in Duluth, and the fact that they have made Wadsworth Bros.' Chico their favorite, speaks volumes for its quality. While it sells for 5c, it is better than the average 10 center, so that it reaches all classes of smokers. It is an all long Havana filled cigar, and a good one, that I am glad to recommend to my customers."

MEMORY OF THEIR DEAD

Duluth Aerie of Eagles Will Hold Services Sunday.

Elaborate Program is Prepared—Keep Dead's Memory Green.

Next Sunday afternoon Duluth Aerie, Fraternal Order of Eagles, will hold services in their hall, in the Folz building, in memory of their dead. This ceremony, like that of other secret organizations, is an annual event, and is conducted in quite an impressive manner. The Eagles keep a roll of their members who have died and endeavor to keep their memory green in this manner, as well as by taking care of bereaved families. The list of the dead members of the Duluth Aerie is as follows, showing the years in which they died:

1903—Ben Marineault, August Saxine, Thomas A. Madden, D. A. E. Levinsen and Michael Long.

1904—Gordon Campbell, F. E. Spring, B. J. Darling, Jack Mullany, Joseph A. Mannheim, W. W. Butchart, Thomas Gaughn, Theodore Thompson, Andrew Mitchell and James J. Kelly.

1906—George Probeck, James H. Walker and Barney Dally.

The program for the afternoon will be as follows:

SHERMAN ESCORT ORDERED BACK

President Curtails the "March to the Sea" by Cavalry.

Washington, May 2.—In response to a dispatch from the war department regarding the report that a military escort had been furnished Rev. Father Thomas Sherman, a son of the late Gen. W. T. Sherman, for a "march to the sea," the war department last night received the following telegram from Brig. Gen. William P. Duvall, commanding the department of the gulf:

"Atlanta, Ga., May 1, 1906.—Military Secretary, War Department, Washington, D. C.: Replying to your telegram of this date, a detachment of the Twelfth cavalry, accompanied by Rev. Father Sherman from Chattanooga to Atlanta, two officers, with eight enlisted men, were authorized by the department commander to go over the line of operations of Gen. Sherman's army, in its movement to Atlanta, and to act as escort for Father Sherman, a son of the late Gen. Sherman, who wished, for historical reasons, to go over the same territory. The officers were selected because of being interested in a study of former operations of army, and were directed to submit a sketch of the country, and to prepare a memoir of their trip, to be read before the officers' school, at their post. Every opportunity is taken advantage of to study Gen. Sherman's Atlanta campaign, and it was deemed a happy circumstance that a courtesy to Gen. Sherman's son could be combined with military instructions. Practice marches, with large bodies, are to be made from now on over the historic fields of Chickamauga and Atlanta by troops from Forts Oglethorpe and McPherson, which officers will study and discuss the operations of Gen. Sherman. The detachment in question was authorized by the department commander, and the commanding officer at Fort Oglethorpe telegraphed, under date of April 30:

"'Lieuts. Campbell and Hunter and eight enlisted men left here this morning for Atlanta. Father Sherman accompanied party.'

"The party is not directed to go over the territory of march to sea, but expected to return to post from Atlanta. Correspondence on subject forwarded by mail.

"DUVALL, Brigadier General, Commanding."

Gen. Bell took Gen. Duvall's report to the White House, and after a conference with the president, the following dispatch, which restricts the distance which the escort was to go, was sent to Gen. Duvall:

"White House, Washington, May 1, 1906.—Gen Duvall, Commanding Department of the Gulf, Atlanta: In view of the misapprehension, seemingly caused by the terms employed in your order, the president deems it best, after the detachment of the Twelfth cavalry has gone as far as Resaca and visited the intervening field of the engagement at Dalton, the officers and men shall return to Fort Oglethorpe, which he directs he done.

"AINSWORTH, Military Secretary."

OMAHA ELECTS A DEMOCRAT

For Mayor for the First Time in Sixteen Years.

Omaha, May 2.—James C. Dahlman, Democrat, was elected mayor of Omaha yesterday over Erastus A. Benson by a surprising majority. The total vote according to unofficial returns, was Dahlman, 10,247; Benson, 7,455, making Dahlman's plurality 2,792. The vote for the Socialist candidate was small. A full set of city officers, including city council, was elected, councilmen being elected at large, and with the exception of two of the twelve councilmen, the Democrats made a clean sweep. The successful Republicans are H. B. Zimmin, at present acting mayor, and W. W. Bingham. This election is the culmination of one of the most animated campaigns Omaha has ever seen. Dahlman is the first Democratic mayor in Omaha in sixteen years.

TRAGEDY AT GRAYLING.

August Priem and Grandson Perish in a Burning Dwelling.

Carlton, Minn., May 2.—In a fruitless effort to save his little 4-year-old grandson from being burned to death, August Priem of Grayling, west of here, was himself consumed by flames, which destroyed the Priem home. Both would probably have escaped incineration had it not been for the fact that alterations recently had been made in the interior of the home, and the aged man became confused in his frantic way to safety through the dense smoke. The bodies were so badly burned as to be scarcely recognizable.

Leaving the child at home asleep on a bed, the Priem family went to the home of Mrs. Priem's father-in-law to spend the evening. An hour or so later they were startled by cries of "Fire!" and discovered their home enveloped in flames. Heeding not the fiery tongues, which darted across every entrance to the building, the aged Priem dashed inside and groped his way toward the bedside of the slumbering boy. A door to the bedroom had been changed in position, and the grandfather perished before he could locate it. His body was found lying where the door was originally located. The black, burned body of the child was found on the bed springs.

The mother of the child was also seriously burned in her efforts to gain admittance to the house through a window. Her hands and arms were gashed by broken glass. The shock and injuries sustained have left her in a critical condition, and she may not recover.

FRANK WAS THIRD

In the Great Marathon Race, Ewry Wins Standing Jump.

Athens, May 2.—The Marathon race which is the big event of the Olympian games, was won yesterday by William Sherring, Hamilton, Ont. The Canadian's time was 2:51:23. Svamberg of Sweden was second, finishing in 2:58:20. W. G. Frank, representing the Irish-American A. C. of New York was third. His time was 3:00:45.

The Greek style discus throwing contest was won by a Finlander, Jervineau, with 35 metres; Georglandas, Greek, was second, with 32 metres, 80 kilometres, and Mudin, Hungarian, third, with 31 metres, 79 kilometres.

The standing jump was won by Ray C. Ewry, New York A. C. Height 5 feet 2 inches.

SPORTS

WHITE SOX REACH CITY

Baseball Team Returns Unexpectedly From Tour of Iowa.

O'Dea Expresses Himself as Well Satisfied With the Trip.

Looking as if they had fared well on their Southern trip, Capt. O'Dea and twelve of the members of the Duluth baseball team, arrived in the city unexpectedly last evening, from Fort Dodge, Ia.

Rainy weather broke up their schedule, and they decided to cut the trip short and come to Duluth. They will play Hibbing here Friday, Saturday and Sunday, weather permitting, and on Monday and Tuesday they will go to Hibbing for return games.

The following players arrived last evening: Livingstone, Lovett, Krick, Pool, Treadway, Ferguson, Hunchle, McCormack, Graham, Baer, Nordstrom and Morton.

Ludwig joined them in Duluth, and in addition to these men, O'Dea is expecting Newman who is now in Chicago, Leighty from Bloomington, Adams, a catcher from Sioux City, and Sam Menelce who is practising with the Maroons of Minneapolis.

The players are disappointed at the weather conditions, but are hoping for an improvement before Friday. The weather in Iowa was warm, although frequent rains broke into the schedule and the cold rain brought by yesterday's northeaster proved an unwelcome change.

Artie expressed himself as well satisfied with the outlook, last evening.

"We have a pretty good bunch," he said, "and I do not expect to take on any of the American association discards. Winipeg is claiming Menelce, but I fancy that if it comes to a show down we can get him again.

"We had a good trip, both from a financial standpoint and as a training tour. Bad weather made us miss a couple of good Sunday games that would have been money in our pockets, but we have no kick coming.

"I can't say just at present, what positions the men will play, and the line up of the team will depend largely on the manner in which they show up during the next two weeks."

EXCEEDING LIMIT.

Complaints to President Price That Pay-Rolls Are Too Large.

Complaints have been made to President Price of the Northern and Copper Country league, that several of the teams arecexceeding the salary limit by from $500 to $800 a month, and a meeting of the board of control will probably be called for May 10 to listen to the protests.

There are several other matters of importance to be decided before the season opens on May 17, and they will be brought up at that time.

BLOOD FLOWED IN PRIZE FIGHT

Gory Battle Pulled Off at Little Falls Saturday Evening.

St. Cloud, May 2.—A prize fight of the real old-fashioned sort took place in Little Falls last Saturday night in the presence of local sports who gathered in Columbia hall, in that city, where Curly Ulrich of Superior, Wis., and Frank Bonsall of Melrose, Minn., fought a ten-round bloody battle in a ring of the regulation size.

The contest was fought with small gloves, and although at the end of the tenth round the bout was called a draw, it was plainly evident that Bonsall was getting the worst of the scrap. His face was literally pounded into a pulp, but the whistle at the end of the tenth round found him fairly steady on his pins, and with a lot of ginger left. The fight was the most quiet, and perhaps most bloody of all the battles with gloves fought in this part of the country.

There have been numerous attempts in this part of the country, during the last few months, to have little fistic encounters for exhibition, but all of the engagements up to this one have been unsuccessful. About a month ago the same two pugs had a date fixed at Melrose, but Governor Johnson was informed of the proposed fight, and he stopped it by sending Sheriff Bernich of this city to the scene of action. The fight at Little Falls was never allowed to pass beyond the circle of the initiated, till it was all over. It is stated that the police and county authorities of the city were completely fooled by the promoters of the fight.

CASS LAKE BALL TEAM

Will Be Strong This Season---The Players Are Selected.

Cass Lake, Minn., May 2.—(Special to The Herald.)—Cass Lake will have a good baseball team this season, and already the players have been selected who will constitute the team. For pitcher, Farrell, who did such good work for the Little Falls team last year, will officiate on the rubber. Flemming, a player new to this part of the country, will catch, and he is said to be a very fast man. Grady, Smith (an Indian) and several other first-class players have been put on the list of eligibles, and the team will be selected and given their permanent positions within a few days. Cass Lake now has splendid baseball grounds, which are fenced in, there being a commodious grand stand, located in close proximity to the business portion of town. It is the intention to have several excursions run into Cass Lake this summer, and the local ball team will play games with visiting teams on these occasions.

Arthur Ludwig, the old Cass Lake baseball player, who made good with the Crookston team of the Northern league last year, has signed to play this season with the Duluth White Sox of the Northern-Copper Country league. He had not intended to play ball this summer, and had turned down offers from Rockford and Burlington, of the Three I league, but has at last decided to chase the leather again this year. Ludwig made a good record last year. He batted .239 and fielded .957.

SHYLOCKS IN TROUBLE.

Many Assignments of Wages Lost in the San Francisco Disaster.

San Francisco, May 2.—The money brokers are confronted with a serious problem, especially those who have been in the habit of advancing the salaries of municipal employes. Yesterday was pay day in many of the departments and the day on which the brokers have usually collected the 2, 3 or 5 per cent commission which they exact.

Between the fire and earthquake many of the assignments have been destroyed and Auditor Horton was besieged by anxious brokers demanding that he accept a substitute for the missing powers of attorney. Horton refuses to give any satisfaction.

"The wages will be given to the persons to whom they belong unless proper documents showing a bonafide assignment are filed," he declared.

Sixty per cent of the city's servants draw their salaries through brokers. The profits had become so great that the privilege of negotiating such loans has become a political plum. To secure is some brokers advanced large sums for campaign purposes with the understanding that the business would be directed to them.

IN NATURE'S LABORATORY.

Buried deep in our American forests, many years ago, Dr. Pierce found a beautiful, blooming plant the root of which possesses wonderfully efficacious properties as a stomach and general tonic, also as an alterative or blood purifier and liver invigorator, having an especial affinity for all mucous surfaces upon which it exerts a most salutary, soothing and healing influence.

This sturdy little plant is known to botanists as Hydrastis Canadensis, but has several local English names, being generally known as Golden Seal. Dr. Pierce found the root of this common forest plant to possess medicinal principles of great potency, especially when combined, in just the right proportions, with Queen's root, Black Cherrybark, Stone root, Mandrake root and Bloodroot, the properties of each being extracted and preserved in chemically pure glycerine of proper strength.

This compound Dr. Pierce named his "Golden Medical Discovery," in honor of the sturdy little Golden Seal plant. So little used was the root of this plant by the medical profession at that time, that it could be purchased in the open markets for from fifteen cents to twenty cents a pound. The use of many tons of this root every year in Dr. Pierce's two leading medicines—for it enters into both "Golden Medical Discovery" and also into Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription as one of their most important ingredients—has caused the price of the root to advance until to-day it commands upwards of a dollar and a half a pound.

DR. PIERCE'S FAITH.

Dr. Pierce believes that in our native forests are to be found an abundance of most valuable medicinal plants for the cure of many distressing and most fatal maladies, if we would only seek them out, test them and learn how and for what diseases to use them. Furthermore, he believes that the vegetable kingdom is the one to resort to for the most harmless remedial agents. They act most kindly upon the human system and are eliminated or carried out of the body by the natural functions without injury, even in cases where it is necessary to make protracted use of them in order to experience permanent cures. Dr. Pierce's medicines being purely vegetable, are perfectly harmless. In other words, while they are potent to cure, being purely vegetable in composition and containing no alcohol, they leave no bad effects behind. This is not generally true when mineral medicines and those containing large percentages of alcohol are taken into the system and their use protracted over considerable periods of time.

Many years ago, Dr. Pierce discovered that chemically pure glycerine, of proper strength, is a better solvent and preservative of the medicinal principles residing in our indigenous, or native, medicinal plants than is alcohol; and, futhermore, that it possesses intrinsic medicinal properties of its own, being demulcent, nutritive, antiseptic and a most efficient anti-ferment.

THEY STAND ALONE.

The fact that neither Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, the great stomach tonic, liver invigorator, heart regulator and blood purifier, nor his "Favorite Prescription" for weak, nervous, over-worked and broken down women contains any alcohol, entitles them to a place all by themselves. They are neither patent medicines nor secret ones either, for every bottle of Dr. Pierce's world-famed medicines leaving the great laboratory at Buffalo, N. Y., has printed upon its wrapper all the ingredients entering into its composition. This is why so many unprejudiced physicians now prescribe them and recommend them to their patients when they would not think of advising the use of a secret nostrum. They know what they are composed of, and that the ingredients are those endorsed by the most eminent medical authorities of all schools of practice.

ALL RIGHTS PROTECTED.

The exact working formula for making Dr. Pierce's medicines without the use of a drop of alcohol and preserving them unimpaired in any climate for any length of time, cost Dr. Pierce and his assistant chemists and pharmacists a tedious course of study and experiments, extending over several years. With the use of chemically pure glycerine, of just the right strength, and with laboratory apparatus and appliances specially invented and designed to carry on the delicate processes employed, Dr. Pierce finally found that all the medicinal principles residing in the several native medicinal roots could be more perfectly extracted and better preserved from fermentation than if alcohol was employed.

Besides the glycerine, of itself, possesses the property of greatly enhancing the efficacy of the several medicinal agents employed, whereas alcohol is well known to be objectionable in any medicine to be employed in chronic or lingering diseases, where, at best, treatment must be continued over a considerable period of time in order to make the cure complete and permanent.

The exact proportion of the several ingredients used in these medicines as well as the working formula and peculiar process, apparatus and appliances employed in their manufacture, are withheld from publicity that Dr. Pierce's proprietary rights may not be infringed and trespassed upon by unprincipled imitators and those who may be piratically inclined.

In favor of Dr. Pierce's medicines is the frank, confiding, open, honest statement of their full composition, giving every ingredient in plain English, without fear of sucessful criticism and with confidence that the good sense of the afflicted will lead them to appreciate this honorable manner of confiding to them what they are taking into their stomachs when making use of these medicines.

A litte book of extracts from many standard medical works of all the different schools of practice, indorsing, in the strongest terms, all the several ingredients entering into Dr. Pierce's medicines and telling what diseases these most valuable medicinal agents will cure, will be mailed free to any address by Dr. R. V. Pierce, of Buffalo, N. Y. on receipt of request for same by letter or postal card.

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets are largely composed of Podophyllin, the concentrated extract of Mandrake root, and they regulate and invigorate stomach, liver and bowels.

OLD ROAD PLOWED UP

Farmers Complain Over Closing of a Hill Road.

Claim Highway From Seventh Avenue East to Piedmont Avenue.

After being used as a public highway for more than twenty years, some city property on Piedmont avenue, north of the intersection of Seventh avenue east with the boulevard, has been fenced in by the owner and plowed. In doing this he has shut up the only convenient means that farmers living on Rice Lake road have of reaching that highway, unless they come as far west as Lake avenue.

Naturally the farmers are very much put out over the closing of their road, for it has been a popular route for them to cut down the hill from Piedmont avenue, for about three blocks to the boulevard, where Seventh avenue east practically ends. The road for the three or four blocks down the hill might be called Seventh avenue east extended.

The city has never opened Seventh avenue east further up the hill than the boulevard. Fourth avenue east and First avenue east are said to be opened, but the farmers do not use them, because the grade is too steep. They are not permitted by the park board to drive on the boulevard with their loads of produce, so that, taking all things into consideration, they feel that they are getting much the worst of it at the hands of the city.

Instead of driving down the hill from Piedmont, on Seventh avenue east to Fifth street, and then west on Fifth, Fourth, Third or Second streets to the main business portion of the city, the farmers are now practically compelled to drive as far west as Lake avenue, and some of them go clear to Mesaba avenue in order to get down town, a route which they claim is from three-fourths of a mile to a mile and one-half longer, and they do not have so easy a grade to ascend or descend.

The farmers, however, are not the only people who feel that they have a kick coming over the closing of the road. The business men on West Fourth street, who have always, up to the present time, enjoyed a good trade with the farmers on the Rice Lake road, complain that they are losing all that trade, and that their old customers are going on down town to do their trading.

Under the state law it is claimed that where a property has been open and used by the public as a highway for six years, without any protest by the owner, and where a municipality spends money improving such highway, it becomes in fact a public highway, and the owner has no authority to close the road. In the case of the short piece of road connecting Seventh avenue east with Piedmont avenue, which runs into the Rice Lake road, it is alleged by several old residents of the city and county that there has always been a roadway where the lots are now closed up. They claim that several years ago the city of Duluth spent a sum of money graveling and improving the road. One farmer from the Rice Lake road says that he can remember driving over the same route with his father twenty-three years ago, when the road was nothing but a trail, that dodged around among the trees. He says that he knows the road has been continually used ever since that time.

The property in question recently changed hands, and it is the new owner who has taken steps to shut the public off his land. Opinions have been had by interested parties from various of the local attorneys, and in every case, so far as known, they have been advised that the owner of the property has lost his right to exclude the public.

MISSING MAN HEARD FROM.

Henry Quesnoy, Located in France, Disappeared From Pittsburg, Kas.

Pittsburg, Kas., May 2.—Henry Quesnoy, a prominent and wealthy Frenchman, formerly of this city, who mysteriously disappeared last year a day or two before he was to appear in the district court as defendant in a divorce suit, has turned up in his native land, France.

It was thought after he disappeared that perhaps he had been murdered because of the fact that he said nothing to his attorney of his intention to leave. When he went away he told parties that he was going to Mineral to collect money which was owing to him upon a property deal. He was heard of there, but no tidings could be had after he left there.

That there were good reasons for his being got out of the way was discussed by his attorney at the time as well as by others who were familiar with his affairs. A search, however, failed to get any trace of him. The information that he was alive and well and was in France came through his son, who lives in this city, and he got his information from a letter direct from France last week.

His wife got a divorce from him one time before, during the pending of which there was a great difficulty in the matter of dividing the real estate between them. But they remarried, and now they are after another divorce. The case will be prosecuted, and if Quesnoy does not return to fight his side of it judgment will be taken against him and everything the wife has asked for will be given her by the court.

ENGLISH WOMAN IS HOME QUEEN

Compared Favarably With Her French Sister by M. Cambon.

London, May 2.—Paul Cambon, the French ambassador in London being dined by the Lyceum club, a ladies' organization, took advantage of the memorable occasion by making some very interesting comparisons between English women and French women, and he succeeded in so deftly holding the scales that his hosts declared they would invite him again.

"There are no ladies' clubs in France," said M. Cambon; "French women have no inclination for clubs.

"London on the other hand, possesses many important clubs for ladies, and some of the most brilliant women of fashion are to be found among the members.

"To discover the real reason for this difference one would have to enter into a comparison of the psychology of English women and that of their French sisters; and on that I will not venture, for I shall probably be told that I know nothing about it.

"I have, however, some fairly precise notions of the nature of an English woman. I have heard some of their confessions. At a dinner party more than sixty years ago a Frenchman said to an English lady, 'Madam, how do you English ladies while away your time?' 'Sir,' she answered, 'we admire our husbands.'

"I do not know whether things have changed since then. In France it is different. There the men admire their wives, and perhaps that is why the French ladies do not feel the want of a club.

"It is no paradox to say that French women play in their homes a part quite different from that of an English woman. A French woman not only attends to her menage and the education of her children, but she also takes an active interest in her husband's business. The husband, on his side, consults his wife on everything, and in most cases takes her advice. Her home is a little kingdom; she finds there all the satisfaction and responsibility inseparable from power, and she has no pleasure in meddling with outside things.

"French women do not in the least mind the laws which put them so much under the protection of their husbands, for they remain above all law. We need try to find no other reason for the small success which attended 'feminisme' in France.

"In England women concern themselves less to their husband's business, but have more freedom to occupy themselves outside the home circle. I do not know whether their husbands admire them more or not, but I find their activity in charitable work quite admirable."

CALL MADE ON PRESBYTERIANS

For Contributions For the Mission Workers of San Francisco.

New York, May 2.—Considerable losses in the earthquake and fire in San Francisco were sustained by the Presbyterian board of foreign missions, which has headquarters here. The board had in the stricken city three large mission establishments, one for Chinese men and boys, in charge of Rev. J. H. Laughlin, at 91 Stockton street; one for Japanese men and boys, in charge of Dr. E. A. Sturge, at 328 Haight street, and a rescue home for Chinese women and girls, in charge of Miss Donaldine Cameron, and the woman's Occidental board, at 920 Sacramento street. The value of these properties was over $50,000.

The repeated telegrams of the board brought no answer till yesterday, when a telegram from Mr. Laughlin announced that the Chinese missions were totally destroyed, and that $800 were needed at once for the personal necessities of those under his care. At the same time the board received a letter from Dr. E. A. Sturge, stating that the fire was checked a block and a half below the Chinese mission, but that the building was considerably damaged by the earthquake, though he thought that $700 or $800 would restore it to proper condition. The adjoining building was totally destroyed.

The rescue home was full of Chinese girls, who had been saved by Miss Cameron from a life of slavery, and who were being sympathetically taught and cared for. These girls and Miss Cameron and her associates are now in great need. Mr. and Mrs. Laughlin also lost everything. Not only was the Chinese church on Stockton street completely destroyed, but all in the large congregation of Christian Christians are destitute. The Chinese pastor, Rev. Nam Art, writes: "All the stores, churches and schools were turned into one large furnace. Both Americans and Chinese left their dwellings and fled to the edges of the city, to Oakland and to Berkeley. All of our earthly possessions are gone, but God has protected us, and His grace, mercy and peace abide with us."

Doubtless the most pressing daily needs of these workers and their wards are being cared for by the relief agencies now in operation, but the Presbyterian board is solicitious for the larger and more permanent needs, in the way of clothing and furniture and the re-establishment of buildings. The Presbyterian church, it is felt by the board's officials, should not leave to other agencies the care of its own missionaries and Chinese families and orphans. Rev. Dr. Arthur J. Brown, the board's secretary in charge of this work, and Dwight H. Day, the treasurer, are urging Presbyterians, either as individuals or as churches, to send contributions for the purpose through the board. These, it is promised, will be promptly forwarded to the thoroughly reliable and experienced missionaries, who are right on the ground. Haste is urged on those who are thus to contribute, as the necessity is most urgent.

PLAIN FACTS

Cleanliness is accepted as a rule of self-preservation in every reputable brewery.

AN experienced brewer would no more boast of the purity of his beer than a gentleman would brag of having washed his face.

Purity signifies nothing more than the absence of foreign matter.

For that reason brewers who do not dare to test the substantial merits of beer always harp on purity.

A really first-class beer must, however not alone be free from self-evident defects, but it must combine all the positive excellencies known to the science of brewing.

THE TRUE TEST IS ALL-ROUND QUALITY which cannot be had without SUPERIOR MATERIALS, PERFECT TREATMENT and AMPLE STORING CAPACITY.

Upon this issue of positive superiority we challenge all competitors.

Of materials we use only the most excellent, regardless of cost. Corn, the one important substitute, which, on account of its cheapness, has been extensively adopted, never enters our brewery.

Our facilities for brewing beer are unequaled.

Our storing capacity of 600,000 barrels doubles any other brewery in the United States, and enables us to store our beer from four to five months.

Facts speak louder than words.

Publicity is the demand of the day.

The consumer is entitled to the truth.

CLEARING HOUSE FOR THE WIZARDS

Sleight of Hand Men Entertain Each Other With "Stunts."

London, May 2.—"The magic circle," a clearing house for wizards, is the latest thing in London. At the last seance, from the moment when Herbert J. Collins began the sleight-of-hand "business" until Nate Leipsic, the greatest of modern card palmers, concluded it, the "Circle of Wizards" sat watching with lynx eyes, trying with experienced minds to fathom the tricks with which their wizard friends were endeavoring to mystify them.

Mr. Collins' agreeable opening was to take a large white handkerchief, extract a red one from a lady's programme, wrap it in the white one, and then shake the white one out, when the red handkerchief was, of course, invisible, while the white one had four diamonds dotted in its four quarters.

After making billiard balls appear from nowhere in an empty egg cup standing on a table, C. O. Williams placed an empty glass bowl on a table and shook his hand over it, when the bowl immediately appeared full of exquisite flowers. Not a wizard in the audience had seen them come into the bowl, and Mr. Williams was warmly applauded.

What Joad Heteb cannot do in the way of Egyptian wizardry is scarcely worth doing. He swallowed flaming paper and emitted ropes of paper "pearls" from his mouth. Then, with his hands tied together, he caught hoops thrown to him—that is to say, caught them on one arm, although both were visibly tied together.

Mr. Haskelyne was loudly cheered for a wonderful exhibition of "plate spinning." He took an ordinary plate, and with his hand made it dance around a table, spinning all the while. He gradually increased the number of plates until he had four all dancing and spinning, and then he added a large washing basin, and kept all dancing together.

Mr. Devant gave two entirely new experiments, the most extraordinary of which was "Diogenes and his tub." He took an empty tub with hollow ends, and fastened them up with huge sheets of white paper. Then he struck the tub with his wand, and out through the paper at one end burst Diogenes an ancient Greek in the costume and whiskers of the period. The best part of the trick was that it deceived the entire wizard audience, for no one saw Diogenes get into the tub, which was never taken off the center of the stage.

But Mr. Devant's most comical effort was to borrow a watch, put it into a bag, and then extract it from an old gentleman's waistcoat, tied with ribbon around the neck of a guinea pig.

The cleverest performance came when Nate Leipsic took the stage. Mr. Leipsic is a young American who has already taken the West end by storm, and is quite the rage at society entertainments. He is said by his brother wizards to be far and away the cleverest card manipulator in either hemisphere and his wizardry justified his reputation. He showed half a dozen amazing tricks.

First, he held his fingers out in the limelight, and little red thimbles appeared on the ends of one or another or all of them, and disappeared with equal mystery. The assembled wizards shouted their admiration of the "trick."

Then he got four wizards to take ing trick completely "in the shade" by changing the top card of a pack merely by passing the palm of his hand over it. He had a committee of expert wizards standing on the stage all around him, and not one of them could see how he deceived them. Then, holding a card out in full view of the audience he wetted his finger and rubbed one of the spots on it. The spot disapeared, but the five became a four.

Tehn he got four wizards to take the four aces out of the pack, and replace them where they liked. He had merely to smack smartly with his open hand—with the four wizards watching closely—and ace after ace appeared on top of it.

More mystifying still was his ability to tell a card which someone had chosen. Someone looked at a card and replaced it in the pack. Then the same person counted the pack out in Mr. Leipsic's hand, and stopped at any card he, the counter, chose. But it always happened that he stopped at his chosen card without knowing it.

Finally, Mr. Leipsic put a coin on the back of his hand. The coin at once began rolling over and over on its side, round each finger, and so on round his own hand, back and front. He put a table knife on someone's hand, and by merely placing his open hand upon it lifted it up. He spread a pack of cards on his palm, and turned his hand over. The cards remained against the palm, and he walked down to let the audience see there was no deception.

SCALPED, BUT HE STILL LIVES

Allen Edwards of Waukomis, O. T., Claims a Unique Distinction.

Waukomis, O. T., May 2.—Allen W. Edwards of Waukomis claims the distinction of being the only man living who was scalped by Indians. There were a number of instances during the days of Indian warfare where the victims of the scalping knife recovered and lived sometimes for years after the operation, but Edwards is the last survivor of that number. He has always been able to work as well as ever, but has had trouble from time to time as a result of the wounds in his head and has lately had to submit to several operations. As he is now 60 years old, this has seriously lessened his earning ability, and he has lately made application for a pension, which is being pushed at Washington by Delegate McGuire. Edwards feels that he really has a pension coming, although he has never been willing to ask for it until he felt that he absolutely needed it, as he was in the government employ as an army teamster, when his scalp was lifted by hostile Cheyennes in 1884.

Edwards is a native of Missouri, and was born in Polk county in August, 1846. His early days were spent on a farm near Bolivar, but when he was still a boy his parents moved to Brownsville, Neb., then a frontier settlement. He was left an orphan early, and after a short period of working for neighboring farmers, he left the farm for Fort Leavenworth, where he sought employment as a plainsman and guide. It was on his first trip as a teamster that the wagon train was attacked by Cheyennes, 300 strong, and many of the teamsters and freighters killed or wounded.

The battle in which Edwards lost his scalp occurred on Walnut creek, near Fort Zarah, about nine miles from the present site of Great Bend, Kas. The wagon train was en route from Fort Leavenworth, Kas., to Fort Union, N. M., and was almost in sight of Fort Zarah when attacked. The lead teamsters whipped up and reached the fort in safety but those in the rear were cut off by the Indian charge, and had to make a stand in their own defense.

Their fight with the redskins began at 9 o'clock in the morning and continued until 4 o'clock in the afternoon. Although very poorly armed, the teamsters succeeded in holding off the Indians all day, and killed a considerable number of them, according to Edwards' story, the exact number being, of course, impossible to ascertain. The horses and mules were finally captured by the Cheyennes and the wagons plundered, before a body of cavalry arrived from the fort to drive the Indians away. Ten of the teamsters were killed outright and five were wounded.

All of the killed and wounded were stripped of their clothing by the Indians, and when Edwards was picked up by the soldiers, he was stark naked, was shot several times, and a scalp, four by five inches, had been taken from the crown of his head. One bullet had struck him in the head, one went through his left arm, near the shoulder, and five entered his body in different places. The next day Edwards was taken to Fort Larned, thirty miles away, and placed under the care of the post surgeon. He had no other clothing during this trip than an army blanket. He remained in the hospital until November following, when he was discharged as well and allowed to return to his home in Nebraska.

By reason of his scalp wound, Edwards was not able to wear a hat for over a year after the fight on Walnut creek. The wound never healed properly, because of a slight fracture of the skull inflicted by the Indian's scalping knife. Although the wound has bothered him at times, it has not given him any great inconvenience until recently, when several operations have been necessary for the removal of tumorous growths resulting from the old wound.

VICTORY FOR THE MACHINE

In Kansas, Its Candidate Being Elected Temporary Chairman.

State Chairman of Republican Convention Denounces the Trusts.

Topeka, Kan., May 2.—In his speech, after calling the Republican state convention to order, Chairman Stubbs said:

"We know that the greatest robber in this country today is the great steel trust, made possible by an unreasonable protective tariff. I believe that reasonable and conservative resolutions should be passed along this line. I think that resolutions should be passed which will commend President Roosevelt for the stand he has taken. We should praise him in the efforts that he has made to curb the trusts of this country. No former president has ever shown the ability along this line that he has.

"I want to see this convention do things that will be heralded over the nation and put Kansas in the first rank. In our fair state we have accomplished more in two years along the lines set by our president than they have in any other state in the union in ten years. Let the Republican party say to Kansas that it is in favor of every man's vote having an equal force and that it recommends a primary election law which will make this possible."

Mr. Stubbs made no direct reference to the slate or to Governor Hoch.

Henry J. Allen, who had been working for Judge Clark for governor, moved, in the interest of harmony, that a committee be appointed representing all factions to select a temporary chairman. This motion finally was tabled. Then upon motion of ex-Governor W. J. Bailey, A. W. Smith, the candidate of the machine crowd, was named. A recess until afternoon was then taken.

OPERATIONS IN FULL PROGRESS

On Water Power Canal at Soo, After Winter's Suspension.

Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., May 2.—(Special to The Herald.)—After the suspension for the winter, operations are again in full progress on the new water power canal of the Chandler-Dunbar corporation's Edison Sault Electric company, and a large force of men is being employed by McArthur Bros., the contractors, in the different branches of the work. It is likely that a good portion of the year will be consumed in the construction of the canal proper and the power house, but there is little question that 1906 will see the entire work completed. The company supplies electric light and power both to the city and private consumers, the electrical current being generated primarily by water power obtained from the rapids. The business has so grown, however, that the original plant proved inadequate, and steam boilers have been added from time to time until the fuel bills made imperative the development of cheaper power. The new power house is located directly to the north of the present building, and about 300 feet distant, the site having been selected further out in the rapids for the reason, largely, that eventually the site of the present plant will be desired by the government for a new lock in the St. Mary's ship canal, or for a new canal leading to a new lock to be constructed further down stream. The materials entering in the construction of the building are concrete, stone, brick and steel, all founded on rock excavated twenty feet below the bed of the rapids. The capacity of the plant will be about 1,500 horspower, but the whole work is so planned and arranged that double this capacity can be secured on short notice. This year the rock and earth from the excavations are being handled by trolley cars instead of the cable system in use last season, and an electric crane recently installed is also facilitating the operations. It is interesting to note that, buried deep beneath the surface of the river bed, curious relics have been found in the clay layer. Old Canadian coins from the Eastern provinces were mixed with Indian articles. Among the latter were two excellent specimens, a copper arrowhead and a stone pipe bowl, the stone showing remarkably good workmanship.

ANOTHER GOES INTO BANKRUPTCY

Property of Independent Telephone Company Sold Under Hammer.

Debris of the wreck of another independent telephone company, operating in Monmouth county, will be in part cleared up in a few weeks when the property of the Red Bank Independent Telephone company will go under the hammer at Freehold.

Damage done by the loss caused through the concern during its brief existence, though, will not be so easily repaired.

One relic of the company is thus described in the Red Bank Register:

"Some complaint has recently been made as to the wires of this telephone company. For several months they have had no oversight. Some of them have fallen down, and there has been a fear that they might cross some of the electric light trolley wires, and so become a source of danger. Application has been made to the governing bodies of the municipalities to have the wires removed, because of this danger, but the power to remove the wires has been disputed, and the wires remain on the poles. This is a bad state of affairs."

But how about innocent creditors and stockholders of the defunct company? They have all suffered.

Municipalities, too, have been victimized. Franchises held by the company, it is stated, are its most valuable assets.

Incidents like this should teach officials and the public to shun independent telephone companies. These companies are in nearly every case a delusion and a snare, and prove harmful to every one connected with them—except the promoters—Long Branch (N. J.) Record.

AN INQUEST

Ordered to Inquire Into the Death of Professor Muenter's Wife.

Cambridge, Mass., May 2.—An inquest into the death of Mrs. Leone Muenter, wife of Erich Muenter, the German instructor at Harvard for whom the police are searching on the charge of poisoning Mrs. Muenter, was ordered today by Justice Charles Almy and is to be held here next Friday. The inquest was asked for by Medical Examiner Swan of Middlesex county, who performed an autopsy upon Mrs. Muenter and who claims to have discovered evidence of arsenical poisoning. The disappearance of Miss Bertha Muenter, sister of the missing instructor, yesterday, which has mystified the police, was characterized today by her lawyer, G. A. Pevey, as perfectly natural. Mr. Pevey declared that it was not a flight at all, but that she had gone to Chicago because she had become weary of the questioning of the police.

ADJUDGED A BANKRUPT.

Remaining Creditors of Iroquois Theater Company Will Get But Little.

Chicago, May 2.—The creditors of the Iroquois Theater company residing in this city today received notice that the company had been adjudged bankrupt in Jersey City.

There are now pending against the company suits aggregating $2,000,000 for damages sustained by individuals in the burning of the theater in December, 1903. Almost all of the merchandise creditors of the company have been paid out of money secured by the sale of the theater to the Metropolitan Theater company. The only creditors to suffer are those suing for injuries sustained and the estates of those who were victims of the disaster.

MANY WILL BE ADDED TO DEATH ROLL AT 'FRISCO

San Francisco, May 2.—Coroner Walsh said today: "When the debris is cleared away there will be at least a thousand additions to the death roll. I would not be surprised if the number reached 1,500."

KING EDWARD AT PARIS.

Paris, May 2.—King Edward has arrived here on a three days' visit and is stopping at the British embassy. He will dine with President Fallieres at the Elysee palace before leaving Paris.

COACH ROAD ROMANCES.

If romance can still cling to a road in spite of motor cars and three speed gears, the Brighton road should retain them.

From the days when coaches first began to run to the obscure fishing village of Brighthelmstone, about 150 years ago, through the gorgeous days of the Regency, when the "strange new eccentricity" of sea bathing had become the fashion, the Brighton road has amassed recollections till there is scarcely a yard that has not some story to tell, writes Charles D. Harper in the London Daily Mail.

The best method of conveyance on the Cuckfield road was by pair horse coaches. These started at 8 o'clock in the morning, and if nothing intervened, proceeded steadily and boldly as far as Preston, where they stopped at the public house—it being a prescriptive right of all coachmen in those days never to pass a public house without calling. The next stoppage was at the bottom of Clayton Hill—the formidable Clayton Hill—where the coachman descended from his box and civilly obliged all the passengers, outside and in, to walk up, on the plea that "the roads were very heavy; it being absolutely killing to the horses."

This walk to the top of Clayton Hill took about half an hour, and was very fatiguing, especially if a man had the gallantry to offer his arm to a fat widow. From Clayton Hill the coach "snailed it on" toward Cuckfield, the coachman not deeming it proper to ask the passengers to walk above three or four times until he arrived at that little town.

There was an advantage and an interest in traveling by coach which traveling by rail can never communicate. In the former you saw men and their faces, and acquired some information; in the latter you learn nothing, except the number of persons killed or injured by the last accident. A young man who entered the coach at 8 o'clock in the morning at Brighton took his seat, perhaps, opposite a young lady whom he thought pretty and interesting.

When he arrived at Cuckfield he began to be in love; at Crawley he was desperately smitten; at Reigate his passion became irretrievable, and when he gave her an arm to ascend the steep ridges of Reigate Hill—a just emblem, by the way, of human life—he declared his passion, was accepted and they were married soon after.

Nothing of the sort ever occurs on railroads. Sentiment never blooms on the iron soil of these sulky conveyances. A woman was a creature to be looked at, admired, courted and beloved in a stage coach, but on a railway a woman is nothing but a package, a bundle of goods committed to the care of the railway company's servants, who take care of the poor thing as they would take care of any other bale of goods. It is said that matches are made in heaven; it may likewise be said that matches more often began in the old stage coaches, and that railroads are the antipodes of love.

In every circumstance Ditchling Common recalls the Crackskull Common of the eighteenth century comedies, for it has a little horror of its own in the shape of an authentic fragment of a gibbet. This is the silent reminder of a crime committed near at hand at the Royal Oak inn, Wivelsfield, in 1734. In that year Jacob Harris, a Jew pedler, came to the inn, and, stabling his horse, attacked Miles, the landlord, while he was grooming the animal down, and cut his throat. The servant maid, hearing a disturbance in the stable, and coming downstairs to see the cause of it, was murdered in the same way, and then the Jew calmly walked upstairs and slaughtered the landlord's wife, who was lying ill in bed. None of these unfortunate people died at once. The two women expired the same night, but Miles lived long enough to identify the assassin, who was hanged at Horsham, his body being hung in chains from this gibbet, ever since known as Jacob's Post.

Pieces of wood from this gallows tree were long and highly esteemed by country folk as charms, and were often carried about with them as preventives of all manner of accidents and diseases; indeed, its present meager proportions are due to this practice and belief.

It is a lonely spot, with but one cottage near at hand; the common undulating away for miles, until it reaches close to the gray barrire of the noble South Downs, rising magnificently in the distance.

SOURCE OF OLD STORY.

Denver Post: "Traveling men, who are chronic storytellers, are funny propositions," said C. H. Churchill, clerk at the Brown hotel yesterday. "They'll make fun of the man who tells an old tale, and then they'll go right ahead and tell stories with whiskers. This morning two drummers were standing before the desk talking with me. One of them told a story. It was one I'd heard several years ago. The other traveling man and I laughed and declared it a good one. When the first drummer went away the other said:

"'Great Scott, Churchill! I heard that story long ago.'

"'It was pretty old,' I replied.

"'I'd be ashamed to go around telling old ones,' said the traveling man. Then he started in and told one that was old enough to vote. When he got through I laughed and laughed.

"'Good one, ain't it?' he asked.

"'Fine,' I replied. Then I added: 'By the way, do you remember where you heard that story.'

"He thought a moment. 'By Jove!' he said, 'I believe I heard it right here in this hotel last year. Didn't—didn't you tell it to me?'

"'I did,' I replied, laughing. 'And do you know where I heard it?'

"'No.'

"'The fellow who told us that old one just now handed it out to me,' I said."

CONCERNING WOMEN

"What shall we do with the Bethel home for women? Shall we close it, or keep it open?"

The above questions are the leading sentences in the editorial upon the front page of the Bethel Record, the little monthly magazine which chronicles the work of the Bethel society in this city. Since the organization of the Rescue Home, substantial interest has been displayed by a few and many were glad to know that such work was being carried on in the city. That the home has not received the financial support necessary will come as a surprise, undoubtedly, and the editorial, appropriately printed in red, will at least be of interest to both men and women of the city.

"The Catholics and Protestants of Duluth and the cities and towns on the ranges must answer the question. The board of directors and a few close friends of the Bethel society have contributed to their utmost capacity to the support of the Home, and there still remains a deficit of $1,400 in the running expenses since Nov. 4, 1904; so the question of what to do with the Home is up to the people. If they want the work to continue, they must answer with a substantial contribution to the running expenses. If they want it closed, they may ignore this appeal and the inevitable result will be a discontinuance of the work. But whatever may be done with the Home we cannot refrain from saying that it would be a disgrace to the people of Duluth and the ranges if a discontinuance of the work should be necessitated for lack of funds.

"In three years 105 girls (saying nothing of the transients) have entered the Home, and the majority of them have been redeemed from the sin and shame into which they had fallen, to lives of virtue, honesty and godliness. Of the 105 girls who have been helped, twenty of them were never identified with any church. Forty-three expressed preference for various of the Protestant church, and forty-two of them were Roman Catholics, and during their stay in the Home they were extended exactly the same courtesies the other girls were extended. No effort was brought to bear on them to get them to renounce the Catholic church, but to the contrary they were allowed to attend their own church and go to confessional as often as they deemed necessary.

"Fifty-eight of the girls who passed through the Home were from St. Louis county. Thirty-seven of this number were from Duluth, and the others from nearby places. Twenty girls were received from the ranges as follows: Hibbing, 4; Crookston, 3; Chisholm, 2; Bemidji, 2; Black Duck, 2; Sturgeon Lake, 2; Eveleth, 1; Mt. Iron, 1; Cloquet, 1; Proctor, 1; Moose Lake, 1. Fifteen were received from Wisconsin and some from the Dakotas, but the majority of them were from Minnesota.

"We do not wish to make capital of the heartrending stories we have heard as told by these unfortunate girls, but we are sure the readers of the Record would help them with financial aid in their struggle to forsake a life of sin, and to fit themselves to fill honorable places in the community, if they could read these stories as they were told.

"As a rule the result obtained by a girl who passes through the Home is a transformed life. Careless, thoughtless, reckless, sinful, ruined, and often seemingly hopeless girls, are transformed into sober, honest, industrious, godly women. Is it worth while to keep this door of hope open to those girls? If it is, help them out with an offering."

Pretty Wedding.

A pretty home wedding took place last evening when Miss Allie Marie Piper, daughter of Mrs. M. M. Hoare, became the bride of Henry J. Jeronimus of this city. The house was pretily decorated in ground pine and palms, and the ceremony took place at 8 o'clock. The service was read by Rev. M. S. Rice of the First Methodist church, and the bride was attended by Miss Ethel M. Forsyth and the groomsman was Charles E. Mattix. The bride wore a dainty gown of white net and carried a shower bouquet of daisies. About fifty guests were present for the ceremony and the informal reception which followed. Mr. and Mrs. Jeronimus left on the evening train for a Western trip of a month. The bride's going away gown was of gray, with hat to match. They will be at home in Duluth after their return.

EXECUTIVE BOARD

Of Twentieth Century Club Meets With President.

A special meeting of the executive board of the Twentieth Century club was held yesterday afternoon at the home of the president, Miss Statham, of East First street. WHAT RETAIL MARKETS OFFER.

Florida grape fruit, 30 cents each.
California grape fruit, 10 cents each.
Pineapples, 18 cents each.
Lake Superior trout, 12½ cents a lb.
Frogs' legs, 15 cents a dozen.

The trout that are lugged from dear old Lake Superior which has been coquetting almost all spring in a suit of old blue with white fringes alternating it on glooming days for a London smoke gray with billows of white, are big and fresh and delightful and nice. They are also not very expensive, not so expensive but that everybody can have them stuffed and baked or fixed in their own favorite way. The market is full of them and if you haven't had all the fish you wanted during Lent try Lake Superior trout right away.

The grape fruit season is nearly passed at least for most people. The Florida fruit which is the last to come are big and firm and delicious and the California variety are not so bad and are one-third the price. The berries are good, however, and make a delicious first breakfast course and a fine desert for dinner, at least for the people who are brought up to eat the fruits in the simple ways without bothering with fussed up things with pie crust and cake that's brief with frills of chastised cream, as the facetious young person says.

Hand Tooled Leather Profitable, Says Woman Expert in the Art

Though hand tooled illuminated leather furniture has been used for several seasons by the wealthy, this is the first year that the price of chairs, etc., has been within the purchasing power of the average housewife. And with this reduction in cost a lot of new pieces has been introduced that sell for $10 and $30, such as waste baskets, umbrella stands, mats for pictures, besides the purely decorative skins for table covers, to hang on the walls. Then, too, there are beautifully made book covers, portfolios and even belts for use with afternoon and reception gowns.

This exquisite hand work, with its rich and elaborate colorings, is a revival of the old time Spanish method of ornamentation that was so cleverly and beautifully done by the monks, and is so little understood or appreciated here. Now, however, that a few women have taken up the work and are putting modern designs into patterns, the general public is beginning to understand the real value of these handsomely wrought pieces and how materialy they add to the effectiveness of a room.

The mere fact that small pieces are made now and sold for reasonable prices has increased the popularity so that demands for the tooled leather cannot be supplied.

According to a woman who, with the assistance of her daughter, has for several years done this kind of work for women in the New York smart set, there is a mint of money in the craft, and comparatively few workers.

"It is really not difficult," she says, "but it is tiresome and tedious, for the tooling takes hard work and means the using of a lot of strength, while to illuminate the leather means desultory work for several weeks, before even one piece is completed.

"Unless a woman wants to make her own designs, to be sure they are original, the actual learning of tooling should not take many months. It is the art of coloring that is most difficult and is, of course, the essential part of the work, for upon the tones given the leather the value largely depends.

"While our work is done along the same lines as that of the monks of long ago, the patterns are modern, less heavy, and for that reason I think more attractive—at least, better adapted to our modern needs in decoration.

"I wonder that more women don't perfect themselves in this art when they know that for some of the large hand tooled illuminated screens they get $700; for drawing room chairs with leather seats and backs the prices range from $30 up. Even the smaller pieces sell for good prices, for an umbrella stand prettily decorated and colored will bring $30 and a waste basket, for a bedroom, sitting room or living apartment, costs $10. The leather cushions for couches, chairs, etc., make a desirable addition to library or den fittings; and the round toadstool foot rests are attractive in any room. The prices of these two range from $10 up.

"Leather mats for pictures can be made delightfully original by carrying out a color scheme that harmonizes with the surroundings or is suggestive of the subject. They can be sold for $10 and will then net a good profit.

"Like pictures, some of these leather pieces with heraldic designs, or with a family crest are stretched over a board frame held down tight with antique nails and hung up to ornament the walls, or a whole sheep skin is gorgeously ornamented and then hung on the wall. The cost of them is from $20 up according to size and the amount of work put on them, both in tooling, staining and illuminating. Book covers and portfolios are less expensive and can be bought for from $2.50 upward.

"There is a small fortune to be made in decorating purses and belts alone, in my opinion, and they are so inexpensive that there would be a ready market for them at $2.50 and upward, particularly because they can be stained in shades to match any color material."

Dainty Gowns for the Girl Who Graduates

Of quite as grave importance to the college girl as her studies during these last weeks of school life is the class day frock with all its attending accessories. That it must be white goes without saying, and the materials and trimmings of the finest and daintiest character possible.

With the fact kept in mind that these class day frocks are to serve as dancing frocks during the coming summertime, serviceable but none the less effective materials are sought for. Of these, the nets, both plain and dotted, soft China silks and sheer French batistes and India lawns, are most satisfactorily, and with the addition of yards and yards of fine lace they are built into the most fascinating creations.

The flounced skirt, embroidered in a blind or eyelet floral design, the flounce edge finished with a deep scallop, is a very girlish skirt model and particularly becoming to slender figures. Skirts all have that graceful swing that clears the ground well, the same seen in the walking models, and the sleeves are all short, finished just below the turn of the elbow with soft full frills.

Some of the very dressiest models are cut with a round neck, the decolleteage finished with a bertha of the dress material or the lace or embroidery with which it is trimmed. Accordion pleated point d'esprit trimmed with insertions and edging of Valenciennes lace with soft satin ribbons forming sash and corsage bow makes a charming dress mounted over a slip of soft silk. White suede pumps with staid bows of the kid are replacing to a marked extent the conventional white satin slipper, though the latter is still good form, it being quite a matter of taste which is worn. Long white silk gloves are preferred to the heavier kid.

To complete the costume there is the lingerie hat and parasol. The hat is a broad-brimmed, girlish affair, made of many ruffles of soft lace or shirred and ruffled chiffon, and as a fitting accompaniment the parasol is of soft silk or chiffon or may be lace, trimmed in a variety of ways. The one in the illustration shows the use of white satin edged gauze pleatings, applied several rows deep from the top and finishing the edges of the very full chiffon flounce.

SALVATION ARMY

Plans the Greatest Meeting Ever Held in this Country.

New York, May 2.—The Salvation Army has arranged the biggest meeting it has ever given outside of London, for Sunday evening, May 13, at the Hippodrome, for the benefit of the San Francisco sufferers. This will be a part of its twenty-sixth anniversary congress, which will be held from Friday, May 11, to Wednesday, May 16, inclusive. Commander Evangeline Booth will conduct the big meeting, and in it will "sing the song of love and tell the story of the broken heart." This has been done before, but will be much extended for the big meeting.

A living cross will be formed as Miss Booth sings, and 260 women, wearing white, will come on the stage at intervals and arrange themselves in the form of a cross. They will be followed by army men in red uniforms, who will be followed by army officers in their dark uniforms, who will form an outer line around the cross.

Sunday afternoon a big open-air meeting, at which the whole local army will be present, will be held in Brooklyn. Monday, May 14, at 3 o'clock the big new Slum Settlement house of the army will be opened. The congress will close Wednesday afternoon, with a tea to the provincial officers.

CHICAGO MILLIONAIRE NEARLY LOSES HIS LIFE.

Chicago, May 2.—Gustavus Swift, one of the members of the millionaire packing firm of Swift & Co., was severely injured in an accident which almost cost him his life yesterday, when the front axle of his carriage snapped and he was hurled twenty-five feet over his horse's head.

The accident occurred at the intersection of Central and Exchange avenues, in the Union Stockyards, as the buggy was passing John S. Cooper's barns, just outside the main entrance to the yards.

The horse—a blooded animal which was highly prized by Mr. Swift—was killed. His driver, Charles Mooney, was also thrown from his seat and was injured.

UNION TUGS ARE TIED UP.

the longshoremen, because the lumber carriers had agreed not to recognize any mates' union, when they turned down the proposition of the Seamen's union to recognize the mates affiliated with that organization. The agent at Superior will say nothing of this matter except that the seamen will live up to their contracts.

Capt. A. R. Sinclair of Duluth, who is a member of the board of managers of the lumber carriers, says there was an error in the dispatch mentioned in regard to the agreement. He says that when the seamen and the carriers met, the recognition of the mates was brought up by the union, but the carriers turned it down. So the union representatives, after trying to get the desired recognition, signed the contract for the season, saying something to the effect that, "well, all right, so long as you do not recognize the other mates."

That is all there was to it, Capt. Sinclair says, and the carriers agreed to nothing about recognition of other mates. But they did not want to become involved in the longshoremen strike, and therefore the recognition of the mates of that organization followed.

FORTY VESSELS

Are Tied Up at Milwaukee and 800 Men Idle.

Milwaukee, May 2.—It is estimated that about forty vessels are tied up in Milwaukee and that 800 men are idle, as a result of the longshoremen's strike. If the strike continues for any length of time, over 5,000 men will have no work to do. Many of the vessels now in port, anticipating the strike, did not go into commission at all this spring.

SILENT AS THE SPHINX.

President Keefe Will Say Nothing Concerning the Strike.

Detroit, May 2.—Although the presidents of the two powerful organizations that have locked horns in the labor dispute involving vessel traffic on the Great Lakes both reside in Detroit, most of the news of the shipping strike originates in other ports. President William Livingstone of the Lake Carriers' association has talked quite freely and has given out the substance of a number of telegrams he has received regarding the progress of the strike, but Daniel J. Keefe, president of the Longshoremen, Marine and Transport Workers' association, under whose order 20,000 men have abandoned their work, has not as yet broken a sphinx-like silence. It was through President Livingstone of the lake carriers that the first news was obtained that President Keefe had ordered the longshoremen to strike.

Dispatches from Lake Michigan and Lake Erie ports indicate that there has been an almost unanimous response among the local unions to President Keefe's strike order. It is impossible, however, to get from the silent officials of the union here even an estimate of the number of men out, but unofficial estimates set the figure at 20,000.

MATES NOT JOINING.

Not Giving Longshoremen Support In Strike Started for Them.

Cleveland, May 2.—Aside from the big passenger steamers from Buffalo and Detroit which came in on schedule time, no vessels entered this port during the early hours of today. The fleet of ore carriers anchored in the outer harbor was largely augmented during the night and this morning; fully twenty-five boats were lying off this port. A number of the vessels of the Pittsburg company, which have arrived here during the past forty-eight hours loaded with ore, have been ordered to Erie, Pa., where the bay affords good protection against storms.

No attempt will be made to unload these boats at Erie, however. A prominent vessel owner pointed out the fact today that, in numerous instances, the mates of vessels are not joining the strike movement. It was the demand of the longshoremen that the organization of the mates be recognized by the Lake Carriers' association that led to the strike. The vessel owners believe that under existing conditions the longshoremen will not continue the strike for many days. The members of the longshoremen's union, it is declared, have generally been idle during the past winter and have thus far this season earned but little money. As a result it is held by the vessel owners that the men are not in a position to make a long fight, especially when it is found that the mates are not a unit on the strike question.

SHAW HIT AGAIN.

Republicans of Iowa County Want Him to Keep Hands Off.

Iowa Falls, Iowa, May 2.—The Republican county convention yesterday adopted a resolution condemning the action of Secretary Shaw and Senator Elkins for meddling in Iowa politics. Resolutions were also passed indorsing President Roosevelt, Governor Cummins and Congressman Birdsall. A delegation instructed for Birdsall was selected to attend the congressional convention at Waterloo on May 9.

The Little Doctor in your Vest Pocket

SEE the thin, round-cornered little Enamel Box below! When carried in your vest pocket it means Health-Insurance.

It contains Six Candy Tablets of pleasant taste, almost as pleasant as chocolate.

Each tablet is a working dose of Cascarets, which acts like Exercise on the Bowels and Liver.

It will not purge, sicken, nor upset the stomach.

Because it is not a "Bile-driver," like Salts, Sodium, Calomel, Jalap, Senna, nor Aperient Waters.

These waste Digestive Juices of the system needed to-morrow, in merely flushing out the Bowels today.

Neither is it like Castor Oil, Glycerine, or other Oily Laxatives that simply lubricate the Intestines for transit of the food stopped up in them at that particular time.

These emergency drugs relieve the immediate trouble, but do not relieve its Cause.

The same trouble will therefore recur again till that Cause is removed permanently.

The chief cause of Constipation and Indigestion is a weakness of the Muscles that contract the Intestines and Bowels.

Cascarets are practically to the Bowel Muscles what a Massage and Cold Bath are to the Athletic Muscles.

They stimulate the Bowel Muscles to contract, expand, and squeeze the Digestive Juices out of food eaten.

Cascarets do this naturally, without purging or discomfort.

They don't help the Bowels and Liver in such a way as to make them lean upon similar assistance for the future.

This is why, with Cascarets, the dose may be lessened each succeeding time instead of increased, as it must be with all succeeding doses of other Cathartics and Laxatives.

Cascarets act like exercise.

If carried in your Vest Pocket, (or carried in My Lady's Purse), and eaten just when you suspect you need one, you will never know a sick day from the ordinary ills of life.

Because, nearly all these Ills begin in the Bowels, and partial Constipation paves the way for all other Diseases.

"Vest Pocket" box 10 cents.

WEST DULUTH

WAS IT DOG SUICIDE?

Street Car Kills Canine Apparently Tired of Life.

August Peterson, Noted Hermit, Dies—Tug Maxwell Aground.

Just about noon today, Car No. 175, bound east, ran over and killed a dog at Thirty-second avenue west. The mere incident of killing a dog is commonplace enough, but the circumstances of the affair add a little vim to the story. The old question of whether or not dumb animals ever take a notion to commit suicide may also be involved.

This car was bounding along with nobody in sight to stop it, but when it arrived at Thirty-second avenue west a medium sized black dog, evidently a spaniel, rushed straight down the avenue and under the car. Nobody seems to have heard him bark or make any noise whatever, nor did he attempt to run alongside of the car as dogs do when they take a notion to "bark it up." His course was straight for the side of the car and under it.

A good many dogs have of late been afflicted with rabies, and this disease sometimes causes them to run in a dead line aimlessly heading for nowhere in particular. This may have been the case with this dog. At any rate he shot under the car and was cut in two. Nobody seems to know who owned the dog and nobody appeared on the avenue near him. The conductor took the names of those on the car in case there should be inquiry.

To say the least the dog's course was unusual and there was some speculation among those on the car as to whether he wished to shuffle off his canine troubles and took this way of doing so.

AUGUST PETERSON DEAD.

Noted Hermit, Passes Away From Cancer of Stomach.

August Peterson, the West Duluth hermit, is dead. He died last night in his hut at 316 Sixtieth avenue west. Cancer of the stomach was the cause. He has been sick for a long time, and yesterday was to have been operated on but his condition was such that the physicians would not attempt the operation.

Peterson was 53 years of age and has lived here for fifteen years. He was a carpenter by trade and has always lived alone in a little house standing by itself. He was a typical recluse, never bothering anybody or asking any favor. He kept to himself entirely and even while at work was noted for minding his own business.

The body will be buried in Oneota cemetery and arrangements will be made for the funeral in a day or two.

Tug Maxwell Aground.

The tug Maxwell, belonging to Whitney Bros. is aground in the St. Louis river, just off the foot of Sixty-first avenue west. She went aground last night while towing a scow up the river, evidently heading for New Duluth for gravel. Two other tugs of the Whitney fleet have been attempting to pull her off, the derrick on the scow being used at the same time, in an attempt to life the tug in order to make the pulling easier. These attempts were of no avail and greater power will have to be used. The tug is out about three feet.

disposed of. An inspection of the reduction works in the Potrero has been made, and it was reported that outside of the 100 feet of the tall chimneys, repairs to the furnaces can be completed in ten days. Men were set to work yesterday on these necessary repairs, and soon there will be established a forced draught, so as to ensure rapid combustion. As soon as this is completed all refuse will be incinerated, as in the past.

Mayor Schmitz has just made the announcement that all time restrictions as to the lighting of dwellings will be removed today, with the suggestion that candles be used exclusively for illuminating purposes until electricity can be resumed. Petroleum for lighting purposes is especially prohibited until the water supply is intact.

The Spring Valley Water company expects to have the city front water supply in commission within ten days. By that time the pipes on the various wharves will have been overhauled, and shipping can be accommodated, as before the earthquake.

The United Railways was yesterday given permission by Mayor Schmitz to operate its cars until later hours in order that the last cars, beginning tonight, will leave all terminals at midnight.

The United Railways has already operated seven lines and with these three additional routes will be covering nearly all sections of the unburned district. The work of inspecting chimneys is proceeding rapidly. The inspectors are all architects or builders and are donating their services for the benefit of householders. Every chimney in every building left standing in San Francisco will be thoroughly inspected before any permits are issued to make fires indoors. The reports will be turned over to the board of fire underwriters, the members of which will make a reinspection, and then in proper cases grant the coveted permission to move the kitchen from the street.

Nearly all the chimneys in the hills are found to be in excellent condition. The chimneys of houses located in the flat sections of San Francisco are practically all out of commission.

Many of the larger factories left unharmed are starting up work with all the rapidity possible under the circumstances. At the Union Iron Works 2,300 men are now employed and the management expects within a fortnight to have the full complement of its force, nearly 4,000 men, engaged. No damage was done to the three new warships being built at these works for the government, the cruisers California and Milwaukee and the battleship South Dakota. The steamer City of Puebla, which was sunk in the bay, has been raised and is being repaired. Workmen are also engaged fixing the steamer Columbia which was turned on her side. The hulls of the new Hawaiian-American Steamship company's liners were pitched about four feet to the south, but were uninjured and only need to be replaced in position.

CAUGHT BETWEEN BUMPERS

Switchman Campau at Superior Has Life Crushed Out.

W. C. J. Campau of Old Superior, a switchman employed by the Northern Pacific Railway company, was crushed so badly between the bumpers of two cars in the yards at Superior yesterday that he died last evening. The yard engine had been switching a number of cars about the yard and had almost completed the work when Mr. Campau attempted to make a coupling. The coupler was displaced and while he was fixing it the train moved back, catching him between the bumpers and breaking four ribs, the ends of which pierced his lungs.

The decedent was well known among railroad man, having resided at the Head of the Lakes for the past twenty-five years. He leaves a widow and six children. Mercedes, one of the daughters, is employed by the Marshall-Wells Hardware company in this city.

WOMAN CUTS MAN'S THROAT.

Robinson, Ill., May 2.—Samuel L. Bennett, a banker and one of the wealthiest men in this county, was attacked early yesterday by Mrs. Nora Plunkett, a domestic. Mr. Bennett was asleep in his room when the woman attacked him with a razor. Two gashes were inflicted in his throat. He will recover. Mrs. Plunkett accused Bennett of being responsible for her downfall, which Mr. Bennett denies.

TERRIBLE ITCHING SCALP HUMOR

Badly Affected With Sores and Crusts—Extended Down Behind the Ears—Some Years Later Painful and Itching Pustules Broke Out on Lower Part of Body—Son Also Affected.

A TRIPLE CURE BY CUTICURA REMEDIES

"About ten years ago my scalp became badly affected with sore and itching humors, crusts, etc., and extending down behind the ears. My hair came out in places also. I was greatly troubled; understood it was eczema. Tried various remedies, so called, without effect. Saw your Cuticura advertisement, and got them at once. Applied them as to directions, etc., and after two weeks, I think, of use, was clear as a whistle.

"I have to state also that late last fall, October and November, 1904, I was suddenly afflicted with a bad eruption, painful and itching pustules over the lower part of the body. I suffered dreadfully. In two months, under the skilful treatment of my doctor, conjoined with Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment, I found myself cured.

"Six years ago my son was laid up with a severe cold, a hard cough, and finally painful eruption all over the body. I procured the Cuticura Remedies as soon as possible, and after his faithful use of same was as well as ever in two weeks, as well as I can recall. He has never had a return of the illness, as far as I know.

"I have always been pleased to commend the Cuticura Remedies, and testify as to their efficacy. I am a veteran of the late Civil War, '61-'65, between seventy and eighty years of age. Yours truly, H. M. F. Weiss, Rosemond, Christian Co., Ill., Aug. 31, 1905."

MONEY SENT BY THE POPE

For the Relief of the Archdiocese of San Francisco.

Certain Provisions of French Separation Law Very Obnoxious.

Rome, May 2.—The disaster in California has of late been the absorbing topic in Vatican circles. Piux X has shown his personal solicitude in many ways, and as soon as the first intimation of the calamity reached Rome, he placed himself in communication with the archbishop of San Francisco, Mgr. Riordan, who was then in Chicago on his way to the meeting of archbishops in Baltimore. The pope asked for full particulars of the damage to California churches. A cable message has just been recieved at the Vatican from Mgr. Montgomery, the coadjutor archbishop, stating that the damage by earthquake and fire to church property in California will exceed the sum of $6,000,000. The most serious loss, it was stated, was sustained by the Jesuit order by the destruction of their church and college, but the archdiocese has also suffered much through the irreparable loss of many churches, religious institutions and the buildings of the diocesan seminary at Menlo Park. The pope is much concerned and has already sent to the archbishop of New York a sum of money which is intended to provide for the most urgent needs of the archdiocese of San Francisco, and for the relief of distress.

It is commonly reported in Vatican circles that the pope has arrived at an important decision regarding the church in France, and that after a conference of the cardinals of the congregation having the matter in charge, he has determined absolutely to refuse to recognize some of the provisions of the law of separation. One of the most important of these provides that all church property in France must be held by lay associations, to be formed for the purpose in every diocese and parish. Some of the French bishops have advised the Vatican that the best interests of the church demand immediate formation of these associations, and as a matter of fact their formation has been begun in a number of places. But the Vatican authorities have decided that the holding of ecclesiastical property by lay organizations is entirely opposed to the spirit of canon law, and that it cannot be tolerated by the church even if greater evils may result from refusal.

The Vatican authorities have been informed by some French bishops that failure to comply with the provisions of the law of separation will unavoidably cause a great loss of property to the church in France, as, under the law, all properties not claimed by such lay associations will become the property of the state, and can be sold or otherwise disposed of. But it is the impression at the Vatican that after what happened in connection with the taking of inventories of French churches, and the firm attitude then shown by thousands of Catholics, the French officials will not dare to close the churches, much less sell them. This impression has been strengthened by the dangerous conditions now prevailing in France, where the usual general strike on the first of May has taken place, and a demonstration against the existing government occurred yesterday. There is no doubt entertained here that much of the present feeling in France against the government is due not only to the labor troubles, but that much of it is the immediate consequence of the irritation caused among all classes of French Catholics by the actions of French officials against the church.

Plus X is keeping well posted on the French situation, and spends every evening several hours scanning the more important papers of Paris in order that he may form an accurate opinion of the conditions. Several of the pope's secretaries are kept busy clipping from the French papers articles which have a bearing on the French situation, so that the pope is able to keep himself posted in the matter without unnecessary loss of time.

Father Ruggero Freddi of the Jesuit order was chosen by the pope to be vicar general of it until a successor to the late general, Father Martin, shall have been chosen. The election will be held during the coming summer, when all the provincials of the order will come to Rome for that purpose. It is the opinion here that the immense progress made by the order in America, in the last few decades, renders it imperative that the new general shall have intimate knowledge of the position of the order in the United States, and many predict that the new general will be an American. There seems no doubt that the selection of a general from other than the Latin race will prove popular with the members of that order, the majority of whom are convinced that the order's best interests can be served by a member connected with its American progress.

Speaking of religious orders, it is intimated that the pope will soon call together all the superiors of the orders of the church in a council, to discuss several matters relating to the policy of the church and the welfare of the orders themselves. The recent troubles in France, and the probability that some measures against them will be adopted by the Spanish and other European governments, render it advisable that some measures of self protection should be adopted. It is suggested that principal among these should be a more conciliatory attitude towards the several governments. It is the general impression in the Vatican that much of the trouble of the orders in France could have been avoided had a less defiant attitude been assumed, and the meeting of the superiors, over which the pope himself will preside, is sure to adopt some plan to prevent future breaches between the religious orders and the officials of the countries in which they are established.

There was a sensation in Rome one morning last week when three gala papal carriages were seen on their way to the railroad station. Rumors were rife that the pope intended to come from the Vatican and visit the afflicted Vesuvian district. It was even asserted that Pius X was seen at the station taking train for Naples, and the report caused great excitement throughout the city. But nothing of the kind had happened. The papal carriages were merely being shipped to the International exhibition at Milan, which has a section devoted to traction, where will be shown many gala carriages, including the splendid ones belonging to the archdiocese of Pisa. The three papal carriages have each a history. One is the vehicle in which the late Pius IX made his tour of the papal states in 1860. Another is the carriage which brought him back to Rome from his temporary exile at Gaeta, and the third, the most elaborate, is the carriage which was used by the pope before 1870 on all solemn occasions.

Several foreign pilgrimages have recently come to Rome, the members being received in audience by the pope. First was a pilgrimage arranged by Belgian newspaper men, who brought to the pope a large sum for the Peter's Pence fund. Then came a pilgrimage of representative Australian Catholics, under the guidance of their two bishops. They were greeted by the pope with much cordiality. Just now there is in Rome a large Bohemian pilgrimage, which brought as a present to the pope a magnificent crucifix of silver and ebony, the work of the famous Bohemian artist, Myselbeck. This same crucifix has been exhibited in many Austrian and German cities and has attracted wide attention. The season of pilgrimages will not end, according to information received at the Vatican, until a large number of American Catholics have come to Rome and have been received by the pope. It is intimated that large numbers of Americans will arrive here in June or July, and they are to be shown the utmost courtesies by the Vatican officials.

STATE BOARD OF HEALTH.

New Code Makes the Board a Law Unto Itself.

St. Paul, May 2.—At a special meeting of the state board of health yesterday, an opinion was read from the attorney general in which he holds that the board has ample power to make such rules and regulations relative to the health of the community as was delegated to it by the legislature at the last session. There was doubt in the minds of the members of the board whether they had the power to make the rules and regulations, as outlined by the new code. Under this ruling the state board of health is made one of the most powerful boards in the state. It can regulate absolutely all matters regarding the health of the community. It could make any city in the state filter its sewerage by the installation of septic tanks, and wipe any industry away which it regarded as a nuisance to the public health. In a word, the board is now a law unto itself.

SWITCHMAN IS KILLED BY CAR

Missed His Footing While Stepping on Footboard of Engine.

While attempting to step on the rear footboard of a yard engine, Lorenzo E. Chase, a switchman employed by the Northern Pacific railroad, was almost instantly killed in the yards near Fifth avenue west, yesterday afternoon.

Chase, who was a member of the engine crew, made an attempt to swing on the rear footboard as it passed him. He slipped and was crushed under the wheels of the box car attached to the engine.

He was 35 years of age, and is survived by his wife and two children, who reside at Twenty-third avenue west and Seventh street.

He was a member of the Switchmen's union and had been employed by the road about three years. A brother lives at Staples, and will arrive today to attend the funeral.

Got Blows for Payment.

Mrs. Joseph Cobelli of Hibbing has sued Jacob Kitz of that city for $5,000 damages. She alleges that Kitz, who is a merchant, subjected her to the indignity of being beaten and ejected from his store. This treatment is claimed to have followed Mrs. Cobelli's attempt to collect $4.50 for scrubbing the store. Kitz is alleged to have refused to pay more than $3 and became angry when she insisted on being paid the full amount. Mrs. Cobelli is represented by V. L. Power of Hibbing.

SORES AND ULCERS

TROUBLESOME-OFFENSIVE-DANGEROUS

Nothing is more discouraging than to have an unhealthy sore or ulcer resist one treatment after another, sometimes scabbing over and apparently getting well, then returning with renewed energy and becoming worse than before. Sores and ulcers are not due to outside causes; if they were, salves, plasters, lotions, etc., would cure them. They are kept up by a diseased and polluted condition of the blood brought on by the absorption of refuse and waste matters of the body into this vital fluid. These accumulations find their way into the blood, usually because of an inactive and sluggish condition of the system. Nature intends that they shall be carried off through the usual channels of waste, but the different members failing to perform their duties properly leave the matter to sour and ferment. The blood then, in its effort to keep the system healthy, absorbs these poisons and at the first bruise, cut or wound the sore is formed, and the constant drainage of foul matter through it keeps the place open and irritated so it cannot heal. Another cause for old sores and ulcers is the polluting or weakening of the blood from the remains of some constitutional trouble or the effects of a long spell of sickness. S. S. S. begins at the fountain-head and drives out all poisonous matter and germs, and makes a lasting cure. As soon as the system gets under the influence of S. S. S. the inflammation gradually leaves, the flesh takes on a healthy color, and soon the place is permanently healed. Book on sores and ulcers and any medical advice without charge.

WHEAT HAS A DECLINE

Good Weather in Southwest and Big Receipts Cause It.

Flax is Very Quiet, While Prices Are Slightly Higher.

Duluth Board of Trade, May 2.—Good weather in the Southwest and heavy receipts in the Northwest had a tendency to depress wheat in the American markets today and there were declines everywhere on this side of the Atlantic except in the May options in Chicago and St. Louis and in Winnipeg, which were slightly higher. The July was weaker than the May in all markets. Liverpool closed unchanged to ½d higher. Berlin and Budapest ¾c lower, and Paris and Antwerp unchanged.

The May option declined ⅛c in Duluth and Minneapolis, ⅞c in New York, ¼c in Kansas City and was ⅛c up in Winnipeg. The July option closed ½@⅝c off in Duluth and Kansas City, ⅝c in Chicago and St. Louis, ½c in Minneapolis and New York and ⅛c in Winnipeg.

Corn was weaker, the July option closing ¼c off in Chicago. Corn was ¼d to ⅝d higher in Liverpool. July oats were a shade off in Chicago.

Car receipts at Duluth were 54, against 5 last year, and at Minneapolis 158, against 103 last year, making a total for the Northwest of 212, against 108 last year. Chicago received 1, against 17 last year.

Primary receipts of wheat were 286,000 bus; last year, 258,000 bus. Shipments, 194,000 bus; last year, 194,000 bus. Clearances of wheat and flour aggregated 142,000 bus.

Primary receipts of corn were 554,000 bus; last year, 110,000 bus. Shipments, 375,000 bus; last year, 500,000 bus. Clearances of corn, 250,000 bus.

Wheat was fairly active in the Duluth market. Most of the trading was in the July option. May wheat opened ¼c lower at 78⅞c and advanced to 79c. The closing price was 79c, a loss of ⅛c from yesterday. July wheat opened ¼@⅜c under at 79¼c, declined to 79⅛c at 10:25, advanced to 79¼@⅜c at 10:55, declined to 79c at 11 o'clock and rallied to 79½c at 12:30. The closing price was 79⅛c, a loss of ⅛@⅜c from yesterday. September closed ½c lower at 78c.

Trading in flax was the lightest in a long time. Prices became steadier. Flax was unchanged in London and Antwerp. A small amount was worked for export. May flax opened ¼c lower at $1.15¾, advanced to $1.16, declined to $1.15¾, and rallied again closing at $1.16⅛, a gain of ⅛c over yesterday. July opened ⅛c lower at $1.17½ and advanced, closing at $1.17⅝, a gain of ⅛c over yesterday.

September flax was inactive at the opening, sold at $1.17½ and closed at $1.18, a gain of ⅛c over yesterday. October flax opened unchanged at $1.15¾ and advanced steadily to the close, which was $1.16¾, a gain of ⅛c over yesterday. The coarse grains were unchanged.

THE CHICAGO MARKET.

Active Selling by Pit Traders Causes Easiness in Wheat.

Chicago, May 2.—The wheat market opened easier today on active selling by pit traders. The chief depressing influences were good weather in the Southwest and heavier receipts in the Northwest. Offerings were rather light. July wheat opened ⅛c to ¼c lower at 79c to 79⅛c and declined to 78¾@79c. Minneapolis, Duluth and Chicago reported receipts of 213 cars against 177 cars last week and 125 cars one year ago.

Prices continued to decline until July reached 78c. During the last half hour the market became steadier on covering by shorts, and part of the losses were regained. The close was steady, with July down ⅝@⅞c at 78½@⅝c.

The corn market was fairly steady the chief influence being the weather as was the case with wheat, the predictions of continued clear weather depressing prices somewhat. July corn opened unchanged to a shade lower at 46⅜@⅝c and for a time held within these figures. Local receipts were 94 cars, with 31 of contract grade.

The market was weak all day. The low point for July was at 46⅛c. The close was easy, with July ¼c lower at 45½c.

There was very little doing in oats, but prices were steady despite the fact that local receipts were larger than had been estimated. The July option opened unchanged at 31¾@⅞c and sold at 31¾c. Local receipts were 111 cars.

Provisions were easier. Pork was 10c lower at $16.75. Lard was down 2½@5c at $8.70 to $8.72½. Ribs were 2½c lower at $8.65.

Minneapolis Flour.

Minneapolis, May 2.—The flour market is steady. The firmness in wheat has caused a little better tone to the domestic demand and caught a few export orders, but millers do not look for any permanency in the trade. Shipping directions a little better. Shipments, 28,519 barrels. First patents, $4.10@4.20; second patents, $3.90@4; first clears, $3.50@3.60; second clears, $2.45@2.55.

Grain Gossip.

Logan & Bryan, Chicago: Wheat—The best that we have anticipated in this wheat for a short time is a good trading market, in which there is plenty of opportunity for profits by those who study pit conditions and the weather map carefully. By this we mean that there are no predominating influences in the wheat trade at the moment on which, in our opinion, prices can be based. The July price covered a range of better than 1c today, and closed about ⅝c lower. The volume of trade is now practically all in the new crop months. The market turned easier this morning under two or three natural influences, the much demoralized Wall street and the promise of brighter weather in some quarters. The bull interests were eliminated yesterday and local sellers did not find ready buyers. So far as the crop reports went, they were less bullish than yesterday. The Far Southwest claims that the rains of the last few days insures large yields. The advanced condition of the wheat plant in nearly all the Southern states is commented on as a bear feature. It is a market in which we may expect good swings like those of today, until something more positive is known in regard to the growing crop.

Corn—Chicago had corn receipts of only 94 cars today. The estimate for tomorrow is 185 cars. People closest in touch with the shipping sections of this state and west do not pretend to claim that there is any free offerings of corn, such as to create a liberal movement at this time. The big end of the Chicago corn supply has gone down the lakes. If there is to be any great urgency about Eastern shipments it will be because of an urgent demand which may possibly pay rail rate to get the corn, if the strike should continue.

Chicago Tribune: St. Louis wired that the prospects for the wheat crop in the American bottoms in the southern part of this state indicated that there would not be half a crop raised. Other reports from the Southwest said the wheat plant in many places was turning yellow and that it did not act right. There are also claims of damage by hail and rain in Indian territory.

AN INTERRUPTION.

Los Angeles Times: Prof. G. A. Hill of the National Observatory was describing the duties of an astronomical corps during an eclipse.

"The eclipse," he said, "may last only five minutes. Each man in the party has a certain line of work mapped out for him during those precious minutes. One man makes hurried pencil sketches. Another man photographs. A third takes observations, while a fourth jots down his remarks.

"And so it goes. An astronomical corps during an eclipse is a very busy body. An interruption would be as unwelcome to it as it once was to a young friend of mine in Elizabeth.

"My friend, according to the story, was calling on his sweetheart, who lived on Elizabeth's outskirts.

"As the young man was taking leave for the night, his voice, as he stood on the plazza, rose passionately in the still air.

"'Just one,' he said, 'Just one.'

"Then the young girl's mother interrupted, calling from her bedroom window:

"'Just one? No, it ain't quite that yet. But it's close on to 12, and so I think ye'd better be goin' just the same.'"

MISTOOK THE SOURCE.

San Francisco News Letter: By the side of a certain portion of a suburban railway stands a glue factory which sometimes gives out a particularly offensive smell. A lady who was obliged to travel on this line quite often always carried with her a bottle of lavender salts. One morning an old farmer took the seat beside her. As the train neared the factory the lady opened her bottle of salts. Soon the whole car was filled with the horrible odor of glue. The farmer put up with it as long as he could, then shouted: "Madam, would you mind puttin' the cork in that 'ere bottle?"

Seemed to be No Support Except by the Shorts.

Sharp Recovery in Afternoon and Prices Had a Rally.

New York, May 2.—No attention was paid to the small rise in Americans in the London market, and stocks were poured upon the opening stock market here today from all directions, causing violent breaks in prices. The declines throughout the list ran from a fraction to a point. The more violent losses were: Anaconda 1¼, Northern Pacific 5, M., St. P. & Soo and Smelting 2¼, Sloss-Sheffield Steel, Great Northern preferred, Delaware & Hudson 2, and St. Paul, New York Central, Amalgamated Copper and General Electric 1½ to 1¾. The first sale of Union Pacific was of 300 shares at 142, compared with 142¾ last night, but this was immediately followed by running sales of 5,000 shares from 142 down to 140. The trading was accompanied with great excitement on the exchange.

There were a few further disorderly breaks after the opening, but for the most part the liquidation seemed to have spent itself in a spasm, and there were violent recoveries. Support in St. Paul had an encouraging effect on sentiment, and from a decline of 1¼ it recovered to ⅝ above last night. Northern Pacific rebounded 4½ and Anaconda 6⅛. Extreme declines in Pullman reached 7½, Minneapolis, St. Paul & Soo 4½, and Great Northern preferred 3½. Declines of 1 to 3 were made by the majority of stocks. The demand flattened out on the rally before the end of the hour.

The bears desisted from buying as the advance in prices reduced their profits, and quotations crumbled again. In some stocks vigorous support appeared above previous low levels, but in others the pressure broke through the support. The new selling came in a steady stream and was less spasmodic than at first. Anaconda's slump reached 20, Texas Pacific Land Trust 10, Great Northern preferred 9, Lackawanna 7¾, Lead 7, Northern Pacific 10, Colorado Southern second preferred 4¾, Smelting 4½, Union Pacific and Locomotive 4, Railway Steel Spring 5, Louisville & Nashville 3⅝, and Reading, United States Steel preferred, Amalgamated Copper, the Republic Steel stocks, American Car and Steel Foundries preferred 1½. Prices were slipping away rapidly at noon. Bonds were weak.

During the noon hour prices rallied from 1 to 2 points. Great Northern preferred, Northern Pacific and Anaconda rebounded 5¼ top prices afterwards weakened again on 15 per cent money. Before the rally declines reached were: Great Northern preferred 10, Westinghouse Electric 2, Cleveland, C. C. & St. L., Louisville & Nashville, Public Steel preferred 4, Tennessee Coal 3½ and Delaware & Hudson, International Pump 3, Reading dropped 4½ below last night before 11 o'clock, but others did not get back to the lowest.

The rally proceeded to considerable length and carried St. Paul and Atchison a point over last night and Pennsylvania, Southern Pacific, Canadian Pacific, Northwestern Copper, Brooklyn Transit and the Smelting stocks varying fractions. Reading made another downward plunge to 5¼ below last night and unsettled the rally. Westinghouse Electric lost 11 and Toledo, St. Louis ⅞ Western preferred 3½.

Another rally set in in the final hour. The indications that the liquidation had spent its greatest force prompted the bears to cover shorts on a large scale. Prices rose to the best of the day and substantial recoveries were made in many stocks. Illinois Central and Canadian Pacific got 1 above yesterday, Northwestern 1½, Brooklyn Transit 1⅝, St. Paul 1⅜ and Reading rallied 3¼ from the lowest. There were some recessions in the final dealings, but the close was active and unsteady.

Stock Gossip.

Logan & Bryan to Paine, Webber & Co.: The market closed irregular and in most cases with quite a substantial rally from low points. Volume of business extremely large, something over 2,000,000 shares up to 2 p. m. Notwithstanding a firmer London market, prices on this side started to decline right after the opening, and up to the noon hour the market at times bordered on demoralization. Money rates, ranging from 6 to 12 per cent, contributed to force liquidation. The rally after the noon hour was but a natural one, following the sharp setback of yesterday and again this morning. We are inclined to look for some further recovery, on which we feel stocks should be sold. We do not think the buying power is of the right kind to hold prices at this time. The short interest is large and confident, and will take advantage of the rallies to put out more stocks.

New York to Pringle, Fitch & Rankin: Commenting at length upon Secretary Shaw's effort to facilitate gold imports the National City bank in its May circular emphasises the fact that under the new arrangement the American bankers have great advantages in securing the metal, not only in London or Paris but in Australia and South Africa, and it is assured that this institution will continue to bring to this country such gold as may be available in the markets of the world, with the assistance and co-operation of their banks with international connections.

The advices received by the home insurance company from its San Francisco adjusters that the total loss to the insurance companies would exceed $125,000 is considerably in excess of conservative estimate.

Walker Bros. to Paine, Webber & Co.: The market had another sharp break today. There seemed to be no support except by the shorts. In the afternoon there was a sharp recovery and prices rallied, but the buying was mostly by shorts, and the market continued very feverish up to the close. The liquidation has been going on for so long that it seems that the end must be nearly reached. The good investment rails like St. Paul, Louisville & Nashville, Union Pacific certainly look good on the declines, but it may be some time before the market gets over this enormous liquidation.

The Cotton Market.

New York, May 2.—The cotton market opened quiet and steady at unchanged prices to an advance of 3 points, in response to steady cables. Prices eased off after the opening to a net decline of about 2@3 points, under scattering liquidation induced by unsettled conditions in the stock market; but the pressure was not aggressive and the market rallied to about the previous high point during the middle of the morning, when prices were 2@4 points net up. Trading was very quiet.

Cotton spot closed quiet, middling uplands, 11.75; do gulf, 12.00. Sales, none. Futures closed quiet and steady. May, 11.14; June, 10.56; July, 10.94; Aug., 10.77; Sept., 10.48; Oct., 10.40; Nov., 10.32; Dec., 10.41; Jan., 10.45; Feb., 10.48; Mar., 10.51.

THE PRODUCE MARKETS.

The following prices, with the exception of those on hay, feed and meats, are the official quotations of the Duluth Produce exchange, and shippers can rely upon them as being correct. The list is corrected daily by the secretary, and it shows accurately the market condition up to 12 o'clock on the date of issue. The weekly market letter, published on Fridays, is not an official statement of the exchange, but the information is gathered personally from the different dealers.

LOOKS ARE DECEIVING.

Champion Boxer Appeared at Track Disguised as a Dude.

Washigton Star: "That axiom about our inability to judge a man by the clothes he wears is an old stager, but it doesn't lose any of its truthfulness as the years slip by," observed a trainer of race horses just in at Bending from New Orleans. "I saw it illustrated at the fair grounds track in New Orleans only a few days ago.

"I noticed the man who figures in the story after the racing had begun that day. He was undeniably a lovely piece of work, viewed from any and all angles. I first noticed him in the interval between the second and third races, when he started from the fair grounds clubhouse across the brick 'lawn' in front of the grand stand to the gate leading to the field where his tallyho coach was anchored.

"He wore a pale green cutaway suit, closely buttoned; a greenish, flat-bottomed stiff hat (the Epsom Downs pattern, bloime me); natty shoes of greenish leather, with greenish gaiters to match; hunter's green gloves, with a field glass incased in a green case slung over his shoulder by a green strap.

"Any piker could see that he was a detonating swell all right. The coarse groundlings through and among whom he strolled nudged each other and furtively pointed him out with their thumbs.

"'That's for me,' I heard a squash-nosed regular mutter, looking up from his dope charts, as the reverberating toff swung by. 'I don't see how I kin lose after gittin' a flash at that.'

"Finally the dude reached the gate leading to the tallyho anchorage. A lot of owners and trainers and silent, straw-chewing stable hands and wise regulars were grouped near the rail, close to the gate. They surveyed the crescendo D

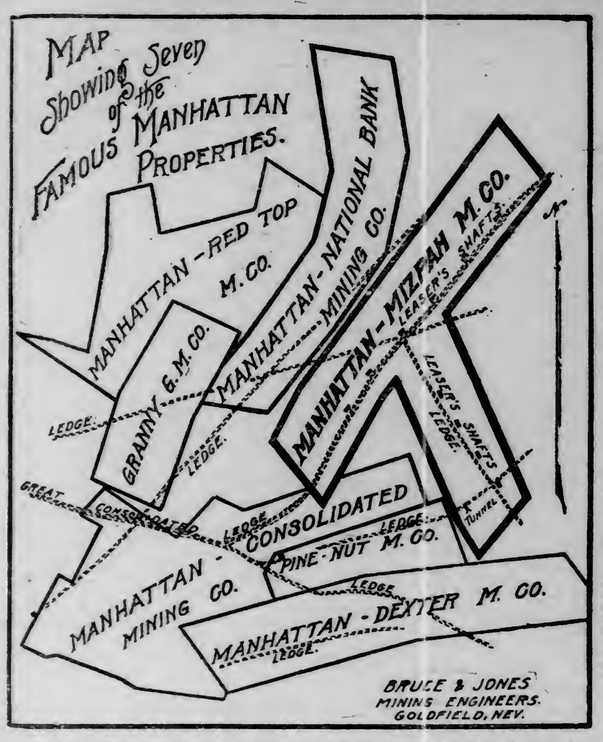
A Great Gold Mine Right Next Door to the Richest Mine in All Manhattan!

THE MANHATTAN MIZPAH MINING CO.

Owning the Kentucky, Captain Sam and Arkansas Claims.



Side Lining the Great Manhattan Consolidated End Lining the Dexter and Pine Nut.

The same great gold bearing ledges which have made the Manhattan Consolidated famous, can be traced by bold surface croppings across the property of the Manhattan Mizpah. These ledges have been opened at a dozen points on the Kentucky, Arkansas and Captain Sam claims, revealing uniform shipping values.

The Pine Nut ledge is traceable for 800 feet across the Captain Sam. This marvelous deposit of gold-bearing ore, ranges from 15 to 20 feet in width, and gives a general assay value of $75 per ton. A four-foot ledge has been opened at six places on the Kentucky giving a uniform value of better than $100 per ton. This ledge is the same vein from which sensational values are being taken on the Consolidated. At every point where these ledges have been opened on the Kentucky and Captain Sam they have stood the most exhaustive tests and given values of from $75 to $100 to the ton. The vein on the Kentucky has been proven to a depth of 80 feet and has broadened out and become richer with depth. On the Arkansas two ledges, averaging from four to six feet in width, reveal values of better than $100 per ton.

The Manhattan Mizpah Mining Co.

Capitalization, $1,000,000. Par Value, $1.00 Per Share.
400,000 Shares in Treasury. Fully Paid, Non-assessable.
President—J. F. Mitchell, Mining Engineer.
Secretary—Harry Coffee, Merchant.
Vice President—J. E. Barsness, Mine Operator.
Treasurer—J. M. Upham.
Assistant Secretary—John M. Fairfield.
Directors—James G. Sweeney, Attorney General of Nevada; Frank Genôron, Original Locator of Claims; J. F. Mitchell, J. E. Barsness, L. M. Upham, Harry Coffee and J. M. Fairfield.

Ours Are Aristocratic Neighbors.

The claims of the Manhattan Mizpah are surrounded on all sides by the greatest mines in the Manhattan District. The Kentucky claim side lines the great consolidated, admittedly the richest of all Manhattan gold mines. Four months ago its stock was selling at 15c. It is today in active demand at $2.00 per share. The Captain Sam claim end lines the Dexter and the Pine Nut. Dexter is selling at $1.00 per share and Pine Nut for 50c per share. Five leasers are working on the three claims and have opened up immense gold-bearing ledges, and the property will soon join the list of shippers of high-grade ore. EXCEPTIONAL STOCK OFFERING—a Gold Mine for the price of a prospect.

25 Cents per Share.

25c per Share.

This remarkable offer cannot and has not been duplicated in the Manhattan district. Not only is the Mizpah Company's ground the cream of all Manhattan, but it embraces a large acreage—three claims—or about 60 acres. Its territory is as large as the Consolidated, and three times that of the Pine Nut. It has a continuation of the Consolidated ledges. All along these great ore deposits on the Mizpah company's ground the leasers have opened up the veins. On the Kentucky one set of leasers alone have opened up a four foot ledge for four hundred feet, which averages straight across shipping values; or values of more than $100 per ton. Almost an equal amount of work has been done on the Captain Sam. The Pine Nut ledge crosses this claim and has been proven for a distance of 800 ft.

DIVIDENDS FOR YEARS.

In making this offer to the public we will add another to the long list of successful companies that we have launched toward the dividend paying estate. The immense ore bodies that have been opened up, even at this early date in the history of the mine, insure dividends for every shareholder for many years. For shares in the Manhattan Mizpah Company are most attractive to either the small or large investor. Any person familiar with the condition at Manhattan will know at a glance at the map in this ad. that no better property could be purchased—it is the best in the district. The Consolidated mine is the

MARVEL OF THE MINING WORLD.

The scores of engineers who have expected it pronounce it one of the greatest mines in Nevada. As the Consolidated is a great mine, so is Manhattan a great camp, one for which there is scarcely a parallel in the annals of Western mining operations. The Manhattan Mizpah

WILL BE AS GREAT AS THE CONSOLIDATED.

There will be no second offering of this stock. It will be oversubscribed many times. It is beyond any question the cheapest stock to which public subscription has been invited, since the first fabulous values were found at Manhattan. This firm has a REPUTATION TO SUSTAIN.

In Goldfield and Bullfrog it has made a distinctive success of its every mining enterprise, and thousands of our clients who purchased stocks upon our advice have coined money through their investments. In Manhattan we were first on the ground, and each of our five companies in that camp are MAKING GOOD WITH RAPID STRIDES.

The stock of the Manhattan Mizpah is easily worth 50 cents per share. Any broker who sees the accompanying map will tell you as much. The Pine Nut Company, owning a fraction adjoining the Mizpah ground, put out its treasury shares at 50 cents, and the allotmentwas oversubscribed several times within a few hours.

STOCK IN THE MANHATTAN MIZPAH WILL BE WORTH FIVE DOLLARS A SHARE WITHIN TWO YEARS.

Remember our prediction. Make a memo. of it, and consult the stock quotation sheets at the end of twenty-four months.

NEW TERM IS OPENED

Judge Dibell Presides Over Court Calendar for May.

Grand Jury Organizes and Gets Down to Work.

The May term of the district court, with promise of being one of the busiest in some time, opened this morning, with Judge Dibell presiding over the calendar.

A call of the calendar developed eighty-eight civil actions ready for trial, of which six are new cases moved on the calendar this morning. Of the total number of cases, only a small percentage are for trial by the judges. This means a long siege for the petit jurors. Only thirty-three of these have been served with summons for duty, and Judge Dibell has issued a special venire for thirty-six more, in order to have enough to keep the court going without delay, when the jury cases begin next Monday.

Eleven cases were stricken from the calendar. Of these there were four or five cases where the attorneys made no appearance. Only five cases were continued over the term.

This afternoon Judge Dibell is hearing a number of motions to have cases put at the foot of the calendar. About a dozen attorneys made that request when the calendar was called.

The court was to announce, this afternoon, the setting of jury cases for trial next week.

Tomorrow morning all three judges will take up the divorce cases, of which there are twenty-five for trial. Two new divorce cases were moved on the calendar this morning.

The grand jury assembled at 11 o'clock, and was sworn in by Judge Dibell. J. N. McKindley was chosen foreman. Eighteen of the grand jurors responded at the roll call, sixteen of them constituting a quorum. The grand jury began its work immediately, and will probably make its report tomorrow morning.

The first criminal case for trial will be that of the state against "Muckless" McLain of Hibbing, who is indicted for assault in the first degree. McLain will be tried next Monday. It is charged that he struck a man named Conway on the head with a piece of lead pipe, on the evening of Dec. 23, 1905. Conway appeared to be seriously injured, but afterward recovered and disappeared. McLain disappeared after the trouble, but was finally apprehended on a homestead in the northern part of the county, where he was in hiding. He was kept several weeks in the county jail, and was released, pending trial, on $250 bail. Since he left jail McLain is said to have been suffering with rheumatism, and the trial of his case was postponed at the March term. It is not known definitely who will defend him.

IS BOUND OVER TO GRAND JURY

John Roddy Must Stand Trial for Picking Woodsman's Pockets.

Charged with stealing $30 from the pocket of Carl Anderson, a woodsman, John Ryan Reddy was arrested yesterday afternoon, after a long chase, by Sergeant Fritz, and was this morning bound over to the grand jury to await his trial for grand larceny.

Roddy and Anderson had been drinking in a saloon, and Roddy is claimed to have picked Anderson's pockets. Anderson gave the alarm, and Sergeant Fritz took after the fleeing man, overhauled him and placed him under arrest.

Judge Windom fixed his bonds at $500.

CHICAGO'S CITY HALL CONDEMNED

Pronounced Very Unsanitary and Should be Vacated at Once.

Chicago, May 2.—The city hall was condemned today as dangerous to the health of its occupants, and Chief Sanitary Inspector Hedrick said that it should be vacated at once. Several months ago the county building, which adjoined the city hall on the east, was torn down to permit the erection of a new structure, and because of this the walls of the city hall settled several inches, causing much of the plumbing to become disjointed. Inspector Hedrick said today that the building was so filled with poisonous gases that it is dangerous to health. The improper sanitation now existing in the city hall, he declared, would not be tolerated for a day in any other building in the city.

THREATEN GENERAL STRIKE.

Hamburg, May 2.—The locked-out participators in the May day demonstration here threaten to inaugurate a general strike. At a meeting of merchants, shipbrokers and representatives of coal firms today, it was decided not to modify the action which they took yesterday, when they voted to discharge, until May 11, all longshoremen who did not appear for work May day.

AETNA WILL LOSE $2,700,000.

Hartford, Conn., May 2.—A statement has been issued by the Aetna Fire Insurance company of this city on its liabilities from the San Francisco fire and the net loss of the company is estimated at $2,700,000. The total amount of insurance carried by the company in the burned city was $4,400,000.

GOLD POCKET KNIVES.

For most people a pocket knife with a bone of ivory handle suffices, but there are people who like something different and for them are made gold pocket knives, which can be found in a great variety of styles, says the New York Sun.

Many of these gold pocket knives are made with handles very thin and perfectly flat so that they can be handily carried in the waistcoat pocket, and many of them have at one end of the handle a ring by which they can be carried as a charm on the watchchain. Still others are of regulation size and style.

The blade and other equipment for use in these knives—all made, of course, of the finest steel—might include a pair of scissors or a cigar cutter. It would commonly include a nail cleaner or a nail file, or both.

A novelty among gold pocketknives is one that can be opened without touching the blades. The blade rivets are made to project a little, on one side, and through them is run a little gold ring, which, when not in use, folds flat against the knife handle. Raised, the little ring serves as a handle with which the blade to which it is attached can be thrown open.

Some of the very thin gold pocket knives are made with handles not only perfectly flat but perfectly plain, and then some of these flat knives may be found with handles engraved. Among the gold handled knives with thicker, heavier handles may be found knives with their handles beautifully carved. The lightest of the gold handled knives weighs less than a bone handled knife of corresponding size; the heaviest of them weighs more.

Some gold handled knives are jewelled. One of the thin rounded type, a knife, say, with a Roman finish, might have set in one side a single diamond. Another knife has set all over both its sides tiny sapphires and diamonds.

Here is a knife of another style in whose handle are set stones of larger size, these two sapphires and two diamonds. Here are knives with little sapphires and rubies set in upon the ends of the knife rivets, forming jewelled rivet heads. Here are found knives variously jewelled.

Taking them altogether gold pocket knives would be found in about 150 different styles, and they range in price from about $10 to $110.

First and last such knives are sold in considerable numbers. The greatest demand for them comes at Christmas time, when they are bought for gifts, and for gifts of fiftieth, or golden, anniversaries. There is a sale for them at other times as well, to men who like that kind of knife.

ON THE MOUNT.

Harper's Weekly: The newest batch of recruits from the infant class in a Sunday school in a Michigan town seemed hopelessly incapable of remembering the simplest question in the "quarterly." Among other theological problems about which they were extremely hazy was the question of the personnel of the disciples accompanying the Savior when he ascended the mountain. In order to sharpen their wits, the teacher tried the "aid to memory" game. A well-known and highly-respected local citizen had three stalwart sons bearing the requisite Apostolic names. So the teacher said, brightly: "Now, boys, if you just think of the names of the three older Danhof boys—remember, now, the three older ones—you can't forget the names of the disciples."

On "review" day, the urbane superintendent quizzed each class in turn. At last came the query: "Can Miss Lewis' class tell us what disciples were with Christ on the mountain?" The answer was a unanimous response: "All the Danhof boys but Hank!"

NO MORE LANDS CAN BE HELD BY FOREIGNERS IN MANCHURIA, SAY CHINKS

Chinese Are Asserting Their Rights in That Province.

The Decision Is Not at All Agreeable to the Powers.

First Manifestation of This Falls on the United States.

Washington, May 3.—China is asserting her dignity and rights as to the province of Manchuria, wrested from Russian control as a result of the war, in a manner that is not entirely agreeable to all of the powers, and the first manifestation of this falls upon the United States. Partly to sustain the Chinese claim to sovereignty over the province and also to secure the open door as against either of the parties to the great combat, the state department early in the quarrel took steps to establish consulates at Antung and Latungkow and Mukden and Dalny and when the troops were withdrawn to install the American consuls.

The Chinese government, it is understood, is now determined to make a stand against any extension of foreign land holdings in China, and finds the opportunity to make the issue in connection with the establishment of foreign consulates in Manchuria. While the Chinese government is willing that these great trade agencies should be established, they wish to permit it only on condition that the necessary lands for the foreign occupants of the towns shall remain in the ownership of the Chinese government and that foreigners be permitted to live thereupon only under thirty year leases. The plan is regarded with disapproval in some quarters, because the great appreciation in value of the lands under foreign occupancy and improvement would probably make is impossible for the original lessees to renew their leases on any terms within their power to meet. But the Chinese government has already inaugurated this new policy of foreign exclusion in the important city of Chin Fu by prohibiting the connection of foreigners with any of the public utilities and the same principle is being applied to the construction of railroads so that unless there is an alignment of the powers against Chinese assertion as to the Manchurian consulates, the end of foreign land holding in China is believed to be at hand.

Governor of Kansas, Who Was Renominated By Republican Convention.

AMERICANS IN MEXICAN PRISON

Fishermen Are Locked Up and Refused Communication With Consul.

Pensacola, Fla., May 3.—In a Mexican prison, on scant rations, and their bodies reeking with vermin, is said to be the condition of the captain and crew of the Pensacola fishing smack, Sallie Stein, which was captured by a Mexican war vessel off the coast of Yucatan, April 6, according to a letter just received from Capt. Malfil-ano. The letter was writen in Italian and was translated by Italian Consul Cafiero, a certified copy thereof being sent to Senator Mallory for transmission to the state department. The letter states that the vessel was captured near Grand Reef island, the cause of the seizure being that the vessel had no license to fish in Mexican waters. It was towed to Progresso, where the crew was jailed without an opportunity to communicate with either the American or Italian consuls. The schooner was placed in charge of soldiers. The letter further says: "Monday while the strong northeast wind blew, we left off fishing and proceded to the island, 30 miles distant, for shelter. In the meantime, we went over to the lighthouse keeper to get some bread and a little flour. He gave us about ten pounds of sea biscuits. After the second day, we went out in order to proceed to the same place. We left off fishing and about 8 or 9 o'clock we were taken in charge by the Mexican man-of-war. We were out from the island. Fortunately we had no fish on deck, and were not fishing, or they would have sent us to the penitentiary for life."

Washington, May 3.—The action of the Mexican government in stopping American fishing vessels off the coast of Yucatan island is the subject of telegraphic correspondence between the state department and the American embassy at the City of Mexico. Mr. Thompson, the American ambassador, has telegraphed as follows:

"Information so far received from Progroso so indefinite that it is of little value. Three vessels are now under arrest in Progroso. The Mexican government says that American poachers have long been working in Mexican waters and have been warned ineffectually, making their arrest necessary. Trying to arrange for the release of the vessels on bond, pending investigation."

A WILD TIME AT SAKHALIN

Belated News of Frightful Orgies of the Convicts.

St. Petersburg, April 22.—(Correspondence of the Associated Press.)—Belated letters from Alexandrovsky Post, North Sakhalin, arriving in the first mail after months of interrupted communications bring a wild picture of the three weeks' orgies of murder, arson and loot following the proclamation of peace and the evacuation by the Japanese of the northern half of the island. The wilder spirits among the prisoners, criminal and political, who form practically the entire population of Alexandrovsky Post, broke loose from all restraint, applied the torch to public and private buildings, drank themselves into a wild fury and vented their passions in pillage and murder. Owing to the fierce October storms, the ships containing the troops dispatched to take possession of the island from the Japanese were driven off the coast and Col. Valyuyeff, the military governor, landed with an escort of only fifty men, a scanty force with which to face hundreds of desperate convicts during the three weeks before further troops were able to land.

The convicts prepared a warm welcome for the new governor, setting fire, the day he landed, to the police headquarters and the great Alexandrovsky prison, ten separate buildings with accommodations for thousands of prisoners. These were completely consumed, the Japanese having allowed the fire engines to become useless, but by the strenuous exertions of the Russian and Japanese soldiers, who worked side by side and patroled the city to prevent further incendiarism, the fire was finally checked. The next day the Japanese troops retired, having first sold their accumulated stocks of provisions and liquor at incredibly low prices, casks of "sac" ordinarily sold for $5, going for 10 cents, cases of tinned meats, containing 75 pounds, for 50 cents, and 275 tons of rice and buckwheat being disposed of

PLURAL VOTING

Will be Prevented by Bill Introduced in Commons.

London, May 3.—Lewis Harcourt, Radical, introduced in the house of commons yesterday a bill prohibiting plural voting. Hitherto the practice in this country has been for a voter to exercise the franchise in perhaps half a dozen different localities or wherever he was qualified to do so. The proposed law limits him to a vote in one constituency. Those entitled to several votes must select once yearly the constituency in which they desire to exercise the privilege of voting. If discovered voting elsewhere they will be punishable under the corrupt practices act. The measure, if it becomes a law, will mainly affect the land owners' vote.

Foreign Minister Grey, replying to a letter of inquiry from the Manchester chamber of commerce as to the status of the so-called republic of Counani, declares that the state of Counani is purely fictitious and that its political existence is not acknowledged by Brazil or any other country.

ELY MINES WORKING.

REMARKABLE TUNNELING

By Armenian Revolutionists to Rob Magazine at Baku.

Dug 700 Feet But Were Caught at the End.

Baku, Caucasus, April 18.—(Correspondence of the Associated Press.)—A daring plot of Armenian revolutionists to rob the magazine arsenal here, guarded by the Salivanisk regiment, and containing over 1,000,000 rifle cartridges, the entire reserve supply for all the regiments composing the garrison, has been accidentally discovered, when the conspirators were already on the very verge of success. They bore a tunnel, 700 feet long, in the direction of the arsenal. It was one of the most pretentious examples of subterranean work in revolutionary annals since the days of the terrorists of the '80s. From the basement of an Armenian hut, revolutionists worked their way under several intervening residences at a depth of twenty feet. They constructed a completely sided tunnel, roofed it with planks, and provided it with electric light and an electrical bell service, connected with the stations of the several revolutionists on watch. Owing to a slight miscalculation, the tunnelers, in burrowing upwards, entered, not the magazine, but an adjoining storeroom in the arsenal, containing uniforms. Before they had time to rectify their mistake, the revolutionists were accidentally discovered by an officer, the alarm was given, and a cordon of troops was immediately thrown around the adjoining houses. But owing to the length of the tunnel, the Armenian house from which the conspirators started, was not surrounded, and they had ample time to escape. The entrance of the tunnel was eventually discovered by volunteers, who entered it from the storeroom and traced the subterranean passage to its source.

IRON MOULDERS OF THE TWIN CITIES ON STRIKE.

St. Paul, May 3.—All of the iron moulders in the Twin Cities went out on a strike yesterday morning and every foundry in both St. Paul and Minneapolis is now tied up. The strike will throw 200 men out of work, while seven foundries will be affected.

According to the foundrymen, the strike is due to a demand made by the Iron Moulders' union for a "closed shop." They also make a demand for an increase in the wage scale, but this the employers are said to have agreed to.

"UNCLE SAM IS ALL RIGHT," CABLES THE PRESIDENT.

Athens, May 3.—President Roosevelt has telegraphed to James R. Sullivan, manager of the American team at the Olympic games, as follows:

"Hearty congratulations to you and the American contestants. Uncle Sam is all right.

"THEODORE ROOSEVELT."

RUSSIAN CABINET

Will be Made Up Largely of Colorless Bureaucrats.

Future Policy of the Government is Carefully Guarded.

St. Petersburg, May 3.—The immediate organization of the new cabinet is now anticipated. All the ministers are understood to have placed their resignations in the emperor's hands. Besides M. Goremykin as premier, the slate is said to include M. Stolypin, the governor of Saratoff, for minister of the interior; M. Kokovsoff, for minister of finance; Prince Galitzin, professor of physics at the academy of sciences; minister of ways and communications; M. Von Kaufman, a member of the council of the empire, minister of education; Prince Sherinsky Shakmatoff, procurator of the holy synod and M. St. Chegloveroff, minister of justice—all bureaucrats, but rather colorless.

The future policy of the government is so carefully guarded that the papers are non-plussed as to whether Count Witte's downfall means a reversal of the lever or the possibility of reaching a common ground in parliament. The majority of the papers attribute the fall of the cabinet to the bad reception of the draft of the fundamental laws, and it also involves the withdrawal of the latter, which is believed to be a hopeful sign.

The Strana says: "The passing of Witte, with whom parliament could not work, opens the door to a possible rapproachment of the representatives of the people."

The Novoe Vremya thinks the emperor has no intention of entirely dispensing with Witte's services and expresses the opinion that Witte will take the reins of the council of the empire and block radical action on the part of the lower house.

The Nasha Shisn, while very suspicious, thinks it premature to imagine that Witte's departure is a declaration of war against parliament. It says: "The government, never bold, has always been given to procrastination. With honeyed words it seemed to postpone a declaration of open hostilities as long as possible."

The Slovo regards the downfall of the Witte ministry as the natural sequence of the unanimous protest of the press against the draft of the fundamental laws.

GIRLS TRY SUICIDE AS PARTING NEARS.

St. Louis, May 3.—Mrs. Grace De Wolf and her sister-in-law, Miss Doris DeWolf, of 339 Lucas avenue, each 18 years old, mutually distressed at the thought of separation, attempted to carry a suicide pact by swallowing chloride of mercury.

Their cries attracted the attention of a neighbor, who burst in the locked doors and summoned a physician, who saved the sufferers. The girls were chums in Dallas, Texas.

When Miss DeWolf's brother married her companion, she was inconsolable, and when DeWolf wired his wife to join him in Jacksonville, Fla., the girls decided to end their lives rather than be parted.

PRESIDIO HAS FIRE

Hospital Laundry Building and Contents Are Totally Destroyed.

Main Hospital Only Few Yards Away Was Saved.

San Francisco, May 3.—A fire which threatened the destruction of the general hospital at the Presidio, in which were more than 700 patients, started at 4:15 o'clock this morning in the hospital laundry. A general alarm was sounded and besides the regular post fire organization hundreds of soldiers turned out to fight the fire. The laundry building and content were totally destroyed, but by tremendous efforts the fire was limited to that building and did not reach the hospital buildings, only a few yards away.

The medical department of the regular army has been putting into practice the experience gained in the camps established on the Atlantic coast during the Spanish-American war. Surgeons and assistants who attended the dying and sick when typhoid fever and other maladies decimated the regiments in camp, have been safeguarding the health of San Francisco's stricken thousands ever since the earthquake and sanitary regulations have been provided in accordance with the bitter lessons taught during that period. As a part of the general system of army relief there has been established a complete regimental field hospital, probably the first that has ever

INSURANCE DIRECTORS MUST NOW DEFEND SUIT.

Albany, N. Y., May 3.—The appellate division of the supreme court today affirmed the interlocutory judgment ordered by the special term against James H. Hyde, in the action brought by Mary S. Young, of Saratoga Springs, against the Equitable Life Assurance society and its directors.

Mrs. Young brought the action as a policyholder and as the owner of one share of stock, to recover for all the sums wasted during the three years prior to 1905, it being alleged that such waste occurred either by the affirmative acts of the directors or by their negligence. Judgment is asked that they be compelled to account and restore such sums to the treasury. The various defendants demurred and the special term of court overruled this plea which action is now affirmed in all respects. The directors will now be compelled to join issue on the facts or allow judgment to pass by default.

NECK WAS BROKEN.

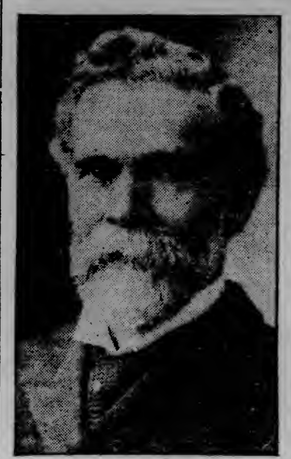
Fort Dodge, Iowa, May 3.—An autopsy held by physicians on the body of Will Church, killed with a blow of the fist by Albert Kecht in a saloon brawl, showed that his neck was broken. Physicians say his death was caused by striking his head on the floor. Under the circumstances, Kecht will be charged with manslaughter instead of murder.

GENERALLY BELIEVED THE ANTHRACITE MINERS WILL DECLARE A STRIKE

Convention With Over 600 Delegates Assembles at Scranton.

The Counsel From Mitchell Will be Against a Strike.

Matter May be Referred to Unions for Referendum Vote.



WILLIAM LIVINGSTONE,
President of the Lake Carriers' Association.

Scranton, Pa., May 3.—Six hundred and thirty delegates, representing districts 1, 7, and 9 of the United Mine Workers, covering the hard coal field of Pennsylvania, assembled in joint convention here today, their national president, John Mitchell, presiding. There will be but one controlling element against the feeling of strike in evidence among the delegates, and that will be the counsel from Mitchell, for many of them, perhaps the majority, have been advised by their locals to be guided by his advice. Here in the metropolis of the anthracite region, the people are about reconciled to the fact that the convention will declare a strike, and the only thing they believe can possibly avert it may be the recommendation, that instead of the convention taking positive action, it refer the matter back to the locals for a referendum vote.

The general public was admitted at opening session, which was held in the courthouse. After the appointment of various committees, a recess was taken until 1:30 this afternoon.

The appearance here yesterday of Dr. Charles P. Neill, the United States commissioner of labor, has given rise to much conjecture among the delegates. They are of the opinion that he came as an emissary of the White House, and that he will report to President Roosevelt the views of John Mitchell on the possibility of adjusting the differences with the operators without a strike being declared to force them to terms.

The secret nature of the commissioner coming to Scranton, and his conference with the mine owners' leader have outweighed the statements of Dr. Neill, that he did not represent President Roosevelt.

Governor Pennypacker's proclamation has had the effect of arousing the radical element among the delegates. They say that they were not surprised that he should have tried to intimidate them by such a manifesto, but the possibility of the entire National Guard of the state being again ordered into the hard coal fields does not alarm them.

THE STRIKE FIZZLES OUT

Troops Continue to Occupy Strategic Positions in City.

Paris, May 3.—The general strike shows further evidence of disruption, but a number of trades are still refusing to return to work until their demands are granted. A squadron of dragoons is drawn up in the court yard of the Prince Eugene barracks on the Place de la Republique, prepared to respond to the call of the police. The latter continue to be massed in force in the neighborhood of the labor exchange and occasional arrests are made but there is no disorder.

The Place de la Republique, the late storm center, is today transformed into the regular Thursday flower market, with acres of violets and geraniums, the crowds of women buyers far exceeding the strikers in numbers.

A representative of the Associated Press today visited the headquarters of the confederation of labor and found it virtually deserted. M. Delsalle, the acting secretary said:

"French labor movements are entirely different from American. Yours are completely centralized and organized, whereas with us the dependence is almost entirely on the individual. This morning, all our mail and telegrams were stopped by orders of the government. Therefore I am unable to state how far our branches are continuing the strike. I only know that about one hundred and twenty delegates, representing a large number of trades, held a secret meeting last night and adopted a manifesto which will appear in the Vois Du Peuple tomorrow, denouncing the arrests and the efforts to suppress the movement."

The center of the city is entirely normal but detachments of troops continue to occupy strategic positions. The basement of the bourse is occupied by a squad of soldiers and the military are in charge of other public places. Pickets of Republican guards are also scattered through the suburbs and others are stationed at street corners at Passy and other residential quarters as a precaution against the appearance of scattered bands of strikers. The latter, however, are relatively quiet. The minor disorders reported are confined to the outlying factory districts.

HOCH NOMINATED FOR GOVERNOR OF KANSAS.

Topeka, Kan., May 3.—The Kansas state Republican convention yesterday nominated the following ticket:

Governor, Edward Hoch, Marion; lieutenant governor, W. J. Fitzgerald, Dodge City; secretary of state, Charles E. Denton, Attica; state auditor, James M. Nation, Erie; state treasurer, Mark Tully, Independence; attorney general, Fred S. Jackson, Greenwood; state superintendent of public instruction, E. T. Fairchild, Ellsworth; justices of supreme court, (six year term), William A. Johnston, Minneapolis; R. A. Burch, Salina; (four year term), Silas Porter, Kansas City; Charles B. Graves, Emporia; railroad commissioners, George W. Kanavel, Frank Ryan, Charles A. Ryker; insurance commissioner, Charles W. Barnes, Osage county; state printer, Thomas A. McNell, Topeka.

The so-called machine slate supported by the present state administration, was successful over the reform faction, led by W. R. Stubbs.

BLACKSMITH SHOP BURNS.

Chicago, May 3.—Fire in the blacksmith shop of the Illinois Steel company's plant at South Chicago today caused a loss of $50,000. A number of valuable dies and models were destroyed.

POSTMASTERS ARE ON UNEASY SEAT

Acting as Delegates in Congressional Convention May Cost Jobs.

Topeka, Kan., May 3.—The thirty-nine postmasters who attended the Sixth district Republican congressional convention as delegates may lose their positions. The department has ruled that postmasters must not attend conventions as delegates. The postmasters of the Sixth district were aware of the department's ruling, but thought that it was a rule made to be broken. The department has shown that this is not true by notifying Ewing Herbert, of Hiawatha, that he cannot attend the state convention as a delegate and hold his place. The department added that this rule will be strictly enforced.

Not only were thirty-nine of the 128 delegates to the Sixth district convention postmasters, but one of their number, W. H. Nelson of Smith Center, was chairman of the convention. Postmasters were on every committee and took leading parts in the work of the convention. It is said that the postmasters are badly frightened.

Congressman Reeder will be depended upon to protect the postmasters who attended the convention and voted and worked for his renomination, but if the department decides to make an example of the thirty-nine men who disobeyed its ruling, the congressman probably will be unable to help them.

NEW POSTMASTERS

And Rural Carriers Have Been Appointed for Minnesota.

Washington, May 3.—(Special to The Herald.)—The following Minnesota postmasters have been appointed: Leaf River, Wadena county, Frederick W. Kiebs, vice Albert Nelson resigned; Turtle River, Beltrami county, N. A. Otterstad, vice A. O. Johnson, resigned.

Samuel H. Longfellow has been appointed regular and Preston J. Manbeck substitute rural carrier on Route No. 3, at Little Falls.

MORE VOTES FOR CUMMINS.

Le Mars, Iowa, May 3.—L. W. Fields was temporary chairman of the Republican county convention here yesterday afternoon, at which a solid Cummins delegation of sixteen for Plymouth county in the state convention was chosen. Cummins had 124 delegates and Perkins 21. The resolutions indorsed Cummins, Doliiver, Allison and Roosevelt.

AUNTY'S INFORMAL SECOND BAPTISM.

Owensboro, Ky., May 3.—Despite the fact that she was baptized more than forty years ago, Aunt Mary Washington was baptized at the First Christian church.

Aunt Mary is an aged colored nurse, employed by Rev. R. P. Crossfield, pastor of the church. She took the Crossfield child to church, and it was the first time she had been in the edifice.

One of the ushers directed her to the nursery. Aunt Mary misunderstood the directions and entered the door to the baptismal pool. It was very dark in the room, and she plunged headfirst into water four feet in depth. The congregation was suddenly startled by a loud splash, accompanied by screams for help.

Circuit Clerk Bedford was the hero of the occasion. He ran to the baptismal room. He ruined a new suit by wading in the pool and rescuing the corpulent negro woman. She was removed to the dressing room and quickly revived.

As the Christian church does not believe in infant baptism, the members of the congregation are congratulating Mr. Crossfield on the fact that the nurse did not have the infant in her arms when she plunged in the pool.

JOHNSON & MOE

Big West End Department Store Celebrates Fifteenth Anniversary.

Johnson & Moe, the big West End Department store, is celebrating the fifteenth anniversary of a very successful business career. The firm enjoys an established and constantly increasing trade that places it in the rank of the foremost business houses in Duluth.

As a fitting celebration and mark of appreciation to its many patrons, the firm announces in today's Herald a sale of seasonable merchandise that is exceptional in the quality and value of its offerings. Mr. Moe, the managing owner, has always taken pride in the truthfulness of his advertisements, a fact that is largely responsible for the store's splendid growth and the confidence it enjoys among its patrons throughout the entire city and surrounding territory.

TO CAPTURE OUTLAWS.

Manila, May 3.—Next week a force of constabulary, acting in conjunction with Governor Juan Schalck of the province of Cavite, will begin a movement to capture Montalon and his band of outlaws now located south of the Taal volcano. The authorities predict that it will be impossible for the bandits and their leaders to escape on this occasion.

BIRDSALL RENOMINATED.

Waterloo, Iowa, May 3.—Congressman B. F. Birdsall was chosen by the Republicans of the third district here today to succeed himself. Governor Cummins was endorsed in resolution, as were also the Iowa delegation in congress and President Roosevelt. The Cummins resolution called for the support of the district for the governor.

MANY GET DIVORCES

Three District Court Judges Grant Sixteen Applications.

Drunkenness, Cruelty and Desertion Are Chief Grounds.

Drunkenness, cruelty and desertion were the chief charges in the eighteen divorce cases that were heard by the three judges of the district court this morning, out of a calendar of twenty-five actions of the same nature. Decrees of divorce were granted in sixteen cases, one was continued for further evidence and one was held open for a time to permit the filing of some papers. There was no appearance of a defendant in any of the cases.

In Judge Dibell's room Frank C. Dunn was divorced from Emma Dunn, E. Leinon from Ottelgama Leinon, and John Hill from Sana Hill on the grounds of desertion. For drunkenness and desertion, Lena Rasmusson was divorced from August Rasmusson and Mary Dailey from Edward A. Dailey.

Judge Ensign severed the marriage tie between Ina Smith and Alexander Smith for drunkenness and desertion, between Sophia and Ambrose Norske, Susan G. Rice and Frank W. Rice, for drunkenness, cruelty and desertion, and between Louise Harsen and George Harsen, C. M. McIntyre and M. A. McIntyre, for desertion.

Judge Cant granted Annie Florman a divorce from B. M. Florman on the grounds of drunkenness and cruelty, and legally separated Frank Vesel from Helen Vesel on the grounds of desertion.

In granting a divorce to Nettie Anna Twaddle from Joseph Twaddle, Judge Dibell gave her the privilege of resuming her maiden name of Schulenberg.

It was expected that the judges would finish the divorce cases this afternoon and begin hearing some of the court cases tomorrow.

MINNESOTA FORGER IS MISSING IN THE SOUTH.

Fergus Falls, Minn. May 3.—News was received from Atoka, I. T., yesterday, that a shortage of several thousand dollars has been discovered in the Citizens' National bank there, and that a warrant has been issued for President Allen, who is mysteriously missing.

The news is of decided interest here, as Allen was engaged in the real estate business at Perham until about two years ago. He was a ready penman and it was no trouble for him to obtain signatures to deeds, even though the persons purporting to sign them were long since dead.

A half dozen indictments for forgery led him to remove to the Indian Territory, where he established the Citizens' bank. Sheriff Sawyer followed him and brought him back, but he forfeited bail to the amount of $1,000 in the district court a year ago, and as his bondsmen turned the money into court he was not further disturbed.

If you have some money "tied-up" in something, see if a Herald want ad. will not "untie" it.

MESSAGE BY PRESIDENT

Explains Attitude of Government On Foreign Gifts to Frisco.

Recommends That the Congress Pass a Resolution of Thanks.

Washington, May 3.—A special message was sent to congress today by President Roosevelt, in which he explained the attitude of this government regarding the offer of contributions to the San Francisco fire and earthquake sufferers from foreign countries. The president says that where the contributions were made to this government he did not feel warranted in accepting them, but where they were made to the citizens' relief committee of San Francisco, no official action was or could be taken in regard to them.

The message indicates that the governments of the entire civilized world promptly responded in messages of sympathy and many of them with contributions or offers of contributions.

The text of the message follows:

The senate and House of Representatives—Immediately after the disaster at San Francisco, many offers of assistance in shape of contributions were tendered by foreign individuals, corporations, governments and municipalities. The Canadian government with an instant generosity peculiarly pleasant as a proof of the close and friendly ties which knit us to our neighbors of the North, offered to pass a resolution appropriating $100,000 for the relief of the sufferers by earthquake and fire. With a generosity equally marked and equally appreciated, the republic of Mexico, our nearest neighbor to the South, voted to appropriate $30,000 and the republic of Guatamela voted to appropriate $10,000 for the same purpose. The empress of China in addition to sending money to be used for the Chinese who suffered in San Francisco, offered to send more than double as much to be used for the inhabitants generally. The Japanese government immediately offered to send across the ocean one of their beautiful hospital ships to be used in any way for the sufferers and also offered 200,000 yen to the relief committee, in addition to more than 100,000 yen sent by Japan subjects.

The government of far distant New Zealand voted $25,000. The government of Martinique voted 1,000 francs, the municipality of Edmonton, Can., $1,000. Many municipalities, corporations and individuals in England, Germany, France, Japan, Cuba and other countries immediately proffered aid. Where those offers of aid are made to the private relief committees organized to deal with the distress in San Francisco I have, of course, no official action to take concerning them. Where they were tendered to me in my official capacity I did not feel warranted in accepting them. But I am certain I give utterance to the feelings of all our countrymen when I express my lively appreciation of the warm hearted generosity and eagerness to help us in the time of our affliction shown by the governments, the municipalities, the corporations and the individuals mentioned above. We are deeply grateful to them and we are deeply grateful for the way in which they showed in such practical fashion the growth of the spirit of brotherhood among the nations.

Most kind and welcome messages of sympathy also were promptly sent to us by the emperor of Austria, the king of Belgium, the president of Bolivia, the prince of Bulgaria, the president of Brazil, the president of Chile, the president of Cuba, the king of Denmark, the president of the Dominican republic, the khedive of Egypt, the president of France, the German emperor, the king of Great Britain, the king of Greece, the president of Guatemala, the king of Italy, the emperor of Japan, the emperor of Korea, the president of Mexico, the prince of Monaco, the queen of the Netherlands, the president of Nicaragua, the king of Norway, the president of Peru, the king of Portugal, the czar of Russia, the king of Servia, the king of Spain, the president of the Swiss republic, the king of Sweden, the sultan of Turkey, the president of Venezuela, the president of Brazil, France, Guatemala, Hayti and other countries; by the ministers of foreign affairs of Chile, Greece, Nicaragua, Portugal, Paraguay, Guatemala and Russia; by the viceroy of India and the governor general of Australia; by the governors of Ontario, Hong Kong and Bermuda, Natal, the Azores, the Iwate prefecture of Japan; by the premiers of New South Wales, Victoria, South Australia and New Zealand; by the national assembly of Salvador, by the Cuban house of representatives; the national assembly of Guatemala, by the mayor, senate and house of Bremen; the mayor and president of the senate of Hamburg, the mayors of Adelaide, Queensland, Hobart, Madrid, Osaka; by the chambers of commerce of Nagoya, Japan and Calcutta, Bengal, by the tea traders and silk fabric guild of Yokohama and Ashibi; by the Canadian Manufacturers' association of Toronto and the Latin union of Havana; by the prime minister of England, the lord mayors of London, Liverpool, Bristol, Leicester and Shrewsbury; by workingmen's councils, religious associations, and by a multitude of other associations, organizations and private individuals.

Appropriate expressions of gratitude to all these friends have been returned by the state department, or by myself, but it seems to me that the real debt of grateful feeling awakened in our people, shown by all these evidences of genuine sympathy and friendship, should be expressed, also, by formal action of the supreme legislative power of the nation.

I recommend the passage by the congress of an appropriate resolution to that end.

GIDDING DISPLAY

Of Outer Garments for Women Attracts Much Attention.

It is seldom indeed that one gets so good an opportunity as is offered Duluth women at this time in the purchase of high-class apparel, and the busy store of the Gidding firm shows conclusively that the women are taking advantage of it. Mr. Gidding's recent purchase in the Eastern markets was one of the most advantageous he has ever made, due in part to the San Francisco affair, whereby many makers were left with materials purchased for the trade there. When the news of the disaster came, orders were naturally cancelled. Mr. Gidding was there at the time, and bought many lines that he thought suitable for his trade. They began to arrive the fore part of the week, and will continue to arrive from day to day until the orders are complete. That is why they are able to offer such very splendid values at this time. ***

ALBERTSON'S

WALSH HELD TO THE GRAND JURY

Former Bank President Bound Over in Sum of $50,000.

Chicago, May 3.—John R. Walsh, former president of the defunct Chicago National bank, was today held to the federal grand jury in bonds of $50,000 by United States Commissioner Mark A. Foote. When Mr. Walsh appeared before the commissioner, Assistant United States District Attorney Childs said that the government was ready for the hearing. Attorney Ritcher for Mr. Walsh, said that inasmuch as the federal officers had not yet concluded their investigation of the statement of facts submitted some time ago by Mr. Walsh, and as the federal grand jury will go into session May 15, he believed it best for the interests of his client that he waive examination. Commissioner Foote then said he could do nothing else than hold Mr. Walsh to the grand jury, which was done, the bonds being fixed at $50,000. The bonds were at once furnished by Mr. Walsh.

REGULAR STAMPEDE.

Entire Male Population Assembled Today at 419 West Superior Street.

Nearly every man on Superior street today wore a beautiful carnation, and every one carried with the compliments of W. A. Wagner, on the occasion of the opening of his magnificent new saloon at 419 West Superior street.

Probably very few cities in the United States can boast of a finer buffet. The fixtures are mahogany and the furnishings are the most modern and expensive obtainable. In fine liquors, a specialty is made of the celebrated Grommes & Ullrichs goods, and in beer of the famous Anheuser Busch.

Telegraphic reports state that yesterday was one of the busiest days ever known on Wall street, but it is doubtful if the scene there presented a more animated appearance than that witnessed all day at 419 West Superior street. The repast served by Mr. Wagner would have done credit to the most exclusive club in the land. Today's opening augurs well for the success of Mr. Wagner's new buffet.

BLOWN UP BY HIS OWN BOMB

Russian Killed While Carrying Deadly Package in French Forest.

Paris, May 3, 5 p. m.—A bomb explosion occurred in the forest of Vincennes, at 2 o'clock this afternoon, killing a Russian, named Strie, and dangerously wounding a companion, named Boussnoff. The two men were proceeding through the woods, each carrying a bomb, with the evident purpose of hiding them for future use. While so doing the bomb which Strie carried exploded, killing him instantly. Boussnoff was struck by fragments of the bomb and badly lacerated.

The police have not yet been able to establish the identity and the connections of the men.

The remaining bomb has not yet been examined, owing to the danger of handling it.

WILL BE HARD TO CONVICT HARRIS.

Chicago, May 3.—Owen Harris, the negro who was arrested in St. Louis yesterday on suspicion of being the murderer of Mrs. F. E. Mize, on Aug. 21, 1905, returned here today in custody of a police officer. He came willingly, and without requisition papers. Police Inspector Hunt said today there is not a great chance of fastening the crime upon Harris, unless he can be induced to make a confession.

RAILROADS

LABORERS ARE LIKED

Railroads Prefer Men Employed Here to Any Others.

Faster Service Between Duluth and Minneapolis Asked for.

The Chicago, St. Paul, Minneapolis & Omaha Railroad company likes the brand of railroad laborers it gets from Duluth. In placing an order with G. S. Richards of the National Employment company for a crew of surfacers at Hudson, Wis., and a steel gang at Spooner, one of the officials of the company remarked that he preferred placing his orders in Duluth to any other city, because the men engaged here were of a much higher class, giving better satisfaction to their employers.

The Omaha road is now well started with its summer work of repair and reconstruction. Several extra gangs are employed along the Duluth-Chicago and the Duluth-Minneapolis lines, and more men are being added to them almost daily. The other roads are also putting on extra gangs. The wages range from $1.75 to $2 a day.

Contractors along the survey of the Lake Superior & Southeastern have standing orders for laborers with the local employment agencies. Grading has been going on along the new line in the vicinity of Solon Springs and Gordon, Wis., through the sand districts, for two or three weeks past. On the upper end of the line no grading has as yet been done. A contract for nine miles of grading on this part of the road was let one day this week, and another grading contract will be awarded within the next day or two, it is expected. Several crews are clearing the right-of-way on the Duluth end of the work.

The Alger-Smith railroad extension is calling for a number of extra men just now, and Foley Bros. and Larson & Co. have standing orders in Duluth for men for railroad work in the vicinity of Fort William, Ont. They will give employment to all the men sent them. Not many laborers are being sent out for work on the extension of the Duluth, Rainy Lake & Winnipeg line. The ground is said to be so wet along the survey that full crews will not be employed for a few weeks yet. A good many have already been sent out on the work, however.

WANT FASTER SERVICE.

Better Time Over Northern Pacific Asked Between Duluth and Minneapolis.

According to the Minneapolis Journal, Minneapolis business interests working with allied interests at Duluth and Superior and along the Northern Pacific's Duluth short line and branches are back of a movement to bring Minneapolis at least forty-five minutes nearer Duluth and intermediate points along the short line. The Journal says:

"The plan is to cut out the slow run to St. Paul and the wait now necessary and to utilize the cut-off between Minneapolis and White Bear which is now seldom used, and thereby to give Minneapolis a direct connection with the main line without being compelled to run around two sides of the triangle formed by the two cities and White Bear.

"Those who are interested in the plan do not care how the railroad may arrange its schedules. They want the quicker, better and more direct service which it is felt the Minneapolis business has a right to demand. Trains may be made up at St. Paul and come through Minneapolis, using the cut-off to White Bear to reach the main line, or White Bear may be made a junction where the Minneapolis and St. Paul sections can connect and separate. Either plan would benefit the heavy travel in and out of Minneapolis.

"Under the present system all Minneapolis passengers for Duluth and intermediate points on the short line and the Taylor Falls branch must waste at least forty minutes because of the slow run to St. Paul and the station wait there leaving and returning. The resorts along the line have been well patronized by Minneapolis, but would be better patronized with a more convenient service. Permanent business interests on the lines, with connections in Minneapolis, are increasing every day, and they want the change.

"The demand has been taken to the officials of the railroad with little success, but the fight is to be kept up with the aid of new allies. The Commercial club and the heavy shipping interests of the city are to be appealed to, and a more formidable demand made. Minneapolis interests generally will be benefited by the change, in addition to the convenience to travel. Business will be brought here that is now going elsewhere because it will be able to secure better accommodations and facilities in Minneapolis than elsewhere."

HONEST MEN AND WOMEN WHO ENDORSE PE-RU-NA

Recommends Pe-ru-na Highly.

Miss Marie L. Meunier, 913 Ontario street, Montreal, P. Q., Can., writes: "I take pleasure in stating that I have been cured of catarrh by Peruna. This disease made my life miserable, especially in the morning, when I had to cough and spit and make every effort to clear by throat and air passages. This remedy cured me promptly and I recommend it most highly to persons afflicted with this terrible disease."

The Utmost Confidence in Pe-ru-na.

Hon. C. C. Brooks, Mayor of Sunbury, Ohio, also Attorney for Farmers' Bank and Sunbury Building & Loan Co., writes: "I have the utmost confidence in the virtue of Peruna. "It is a great medicine. "I have used it and I have known many of my friends who have obtained beneficial results from its use. "I cannot praise Peruna too highly."

Health Restored By Peruna.

Miss Della Stroebe, 710 Richmond street, Appleton, Wis., writes: "For several years I was in a run-down condition, and I could find no relief from doctors and medicines. "I could not enjoy my meals and could not sleep at night. "I had heavy dark circles about my eyes. My friends were much alarmed. "I was advised to give Peruna a trial and to my joy I began to improve with the first bottle. "After taking six bottles I felt completely cured. "I can not say too much for Peruna as a medicine for women in a run-down condition." The large number of homes in the United States alone, in which Peruna is used as a household remedy, can scarcely be estimated.

Pe-ru-na For General Debility.

Mrs. M. W. Seffel, 212 Matagorda St., San Antonio, Tex., writes: "I have used Peruna for general debility and have found it very beneficial." Mr. William H. Switzer, 325 E. 33d street, New York City, writes: "I was troubled with catarrh of the throat particularly and suffered considerably as a result thereof for a period of about five years, and my general health was affected. "Three years ago I was forced to give up business and took up my residence in the Western country, looking for relief in a change of climate as well as a change in the method of treatment for my ailment. "I had known of Peruna before, but my relief seemed to lie in private treatment. "After much expense, both here and in the West, I was induced by a friend in Chicago to try Peruna. "I began the use of same whilst there and continued it for about five weeks, at the end of which time I returned to New York, both well and happy. "I am now no longer taking Peruna, but, if the necessity should again arise, I shall remember its friendship. "Furthermore, I will always be pleased to speak a word in favor of this excellent remedy."

Recommends Peruna.

Miss Theresa A. Lund, Secretary Alpha Lodge No. 1103, M. B. A., Marinette, Wis., writes: "I have used your Peruna for catarrh and have found it to be all that you claim for it. I cheerfully recommend Peruna to any one suffering from catarrh as I believe that as in my case, it will prove a sure cure."

Gives Pe-ru-na Credit.

Mr. James D. King, Alamo Hotel, Colorado Springs, Col., member Youmans of America, writes: "I had to come here on account of lung trouble and found that my recovery was very slow. "A friend suggested that I try Peruna and I did so. I began to improve very rapidly and I kept right on using it. In four months my lungs were all healed and my cough all gone. "I feel that much of the credit is due to Peruna and I am pleased to endorse it."

Colds in Head, Throat and Chest.

Mrs. Lucy Hoey, 574 6th Ave., Brooklyn, N. Y., writes: "I am thoroughly convinced that Peruna is everything that it is said to be. "It cured me of a cold which hung on for over two months and which had me greatly worried. Peruna, though, acted like magic and I earnestly recommend it to all sufferers."

Pe-ru-na Recommended for Coughs and Colds

Prince Jonah Kalanianaole, 1522 K street, N. W., Washington, D. C., Delegate in Congress from Hawaii, writes: "I can cheerfully recommend your Peruna as a very effective remedy for coughs, colds and catarrhal trouble."

Probably no other physician has received such a volume of enthusiastic letters of thanks as Dr. Hartman for Peruna.

Mr. Abner N. Kepp, Vineland, Ontario, Can., writes: "For over twenty years I was a sufferer from catarrh and had tried almost everything I could hear of. I doctored with physicians and specialists, but did not get relief. "Finally I decided to try Peruna. One bottle of it gave relief. After taking five bottles I was sound and well. I am eighty-two years old and feel as good today as when I was in my thirties."

Neglected Catarrh Becomes Chronic.

Neglected Catarrh Becomes Chronic.

THERE are some things which are as sure as fate, and can be relied on to occur to at least one-half of the human family unless means are taken to prevent.

First, colds not promptly cured are sure to cause catarrh.

Second, catarrh improperly treated is sure to make life short and miserable.

The Destructive Power of Catarrh.

Catarh spares no organ or function of the body.

It is capable of destroying sight, taste, smell, hearing, digestion, secretion, assimilation and excretion.

It pervades every part of the human body, head, throat, stomach, bowels, bronchial tubes, lungs, liver, kidneys, bladder and other pelvic organs.

Curative Power of Pe-ru-na.

There is probably no fact in popular medical science better established than that a teaspoonful of Peruna before each meal will surely lessen the danger of catching cold.

Now, since this is true, and experience bears it out most forcefully, thousands of lives would be saved, and tens of thousands of cases of chronic catarrh prevented by this simple precaution within the reach of everyone.

Peruna is not simply a palliative to relieve some of the distressing symptoms. It brings permanent relief.

Gained Thirty Pounds in Weight.

Mr. John C. Russell, 810 County St., Portsmouth, Va., writes, regarding his wife's case, as follows:

"I thought I would be doing but justice to your great medicine to tell you what it has done for my wife.

"Two years ago the doctor called at our house on an average of three times a week in attendance upon my wife, who was suffering from acute indigestion.

"While on a visit to some friends she had an attack and I prepared to go for the doctor when our friend proposed Peruna.

"I gave her a dose, repeating it in a half hour and her pains passed away. Since that time my wife has gained thirty pounds.

"We are never out of Peruna. When the children or I have a cold we take some of mamma's Peruna.

"I find that it has cut my doctor bills down to almost nothing."

Keep Pe-ru-na On Hand.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Klee, 215 E. 4th street, Topeka, Kas., write:

"We are both very much pleased with Peruna and do not hesitate to praise it.

"My wife took Peruna for liver trouble and a rundown condition incident to the same.

"A few bottles built up her health and strength.

I took Peruna for a cold which settled in my kidneys, giving me much pain.

"In two weeks I was much better and in a few months I was well.

"We keep it on hand all the time, in case we take cold."

Revised Formula.

"For a number of years requests have come to me from a multitude of grateful friends, urging that Peruna be given a slight laxative quality. I have been experimenting with a laxative addition for quite a length of time, and now feel gratified to announce to the friends of Peruna that I have incorporated such a quality in the medicine which, in my opinion, can only enhance its well-known beneficial character.

The city ticket and passenger office of the Duluth, South Shore & Atlantic road is displaying a fine picture of one of the two new passenger steamers of the Canadian Pacific & Atlantic Steamship company, which will be put in service for the first time this month. It is the "Empress of India."

The following members of the Masonic lodge went to Virginia Tuesday evening to attend the installation of the lodge in their new hall: J. C. Poole, Samuel Treugrove, R. Rossiter, Dr. F. Barrett, B. O. Greening, W. J. Smith, R. M. Cornwall, G. A. Whitman, S. E. Helpe, R. Blight, S. Owens, Arthur Sisson, D. P. McIntyre and F. Garske.

Louis F. Daniel of Minneapolis spent a couple of days here this week.

The 4-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. David Simon is ill with pneumonia.

The old city hall is out on the street at present being moved to its new location, and excavations are well under way for the new one by the contractor, Ed. Jackson, of Duluth.

Mrs. George Mulligan and Dr. J. V. Johnson are entertaining their mother, Mrs. J. O. Johnson, and a sister, Mrs. Herman Marks, of Stevens Point, Wis.

If you had all the wealth of Rockefeller, the Standard Oil magnate, you could not buy a better medicine for bowel complaints than Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. The most eminent physician can not prescribe a better preparation for colic and diarrhoea, both for children and adults. The uniform success of this remedy has shown it to be superior to all others. It never fails, and when reduced with water and sweetened, is pleasant to take. Every family should be supplied with it. Sold by all leading druggists.

OPEN PIT MINES CLOSED DOWN

Marine Strike Forces Companies to Curtail Their Iron Output.

Unless the marine strike ties up navigation so successfuly that it is impossible to secure carriers, the chances are that the underground mines on the Minnesota iron ranges will not be obliged to shut down.

Several of the open pit mines on the Mesaba are already idle as a result of the strike and operations cannot be resumed until the boats begin running as frequently as of old.

"Some of the open pit mines have been shut down as a result of the strike," said J. H. McLean, assistant general manager of the Oliver Iron Mining company, this morning. "The underground mines are still running, but how long they will be kept going, I am not prepared to say. If boats can be secured with reasonably regularity, the underground mines can be kept in operation."

BACK FROM WEDDING TRIP.

Edward G. Carrol and Bride Arrive at Eveleth From Chicago.

Eveleth, Minn., May 3.—(Special to The Herald.)—Mr. and Mrs. Edward G. Carrol have arrived here from their wedding trip to Chicago and points in Michigan. They were married at Aberdeen, S. D., on April 18. At present they are guests of Mrs. Carrol's sister, Mrs. N. B. Arnold, but expect to go to housekeeping soon at the Fayal in the house recently vacated by the Boudoin family.

Mrs. Harry S. Sherman is spending a month visiting her parents at Elgin, Minn.

Charles Adams, who formerly held a position at the Fayal, visited Mr. and Mrs. R. Cudlip Monday and Tuesday. Mr. Adams has been living at Detroit, Mich., the past two years, but was on his way to accept a position at Hibbing. Mrs. Adams will join him later.

N. F. Marion, the contractor, who has spent most of the past two years here, moved to Biwabik Monday morning, where he will begin the erection of the Bray hospital.

Mrs. James A. Robb and two children returned last evening from San Jose, Cal., where they have been the past three months. Mr. Robb met them in Duluth, and accompanied them home. Mrs. Robb expresses herself as being very much pleased to be again in Minnesota, as the slight earthquake shocks which they have suffered ever since the terrible one of last month kept them in a state of nervous dread. On the day they left there were four distinct shocks. There was not a building or residence in San Jose that was not partly demolished.

HAPPENINGS IN THE DAKOTAS

Florida Sheriff Comes After Young Man Who Caused Girl's Death.

NORTH DAKOTA.

Minot—Deputy Sheriff Williamson of Ames county, Florida, passed through here on his way to get Lester Swain, who is wanted on a charge of having caused the death of a young woman by fright. Last Hallowe'en a party was given at the home of Miss Ivy Nicholas, a young lady in the southern city from which Sheriff Williamson comes. As is the custom on such occasions uncanny tales were told and ghostly pranks indulged in until the midnight hour. Just as the time for breaking up the party arrived, Swain is said to have decided to perpetuate a joke upon Miss Nicholas. The house in which the Nicholas family lives is an old one, full of rambling passages. To enter Miss Nicholas' sleeping apartment, it was necessary to go through a long hall. At the end of this hall is a sharp curve and here Swain arranged a dummy, draped it in white and placed on it a hideous face smeared with phosphorus. After their guests had gone, Miss Nicholas and a younger sister went upstairs to their room. The minds of the young women were still filled with the ghost stories, and, coming suddenly upon the "ghost" Swain had arranged, they were terror-stricken. Miss Ivy screamed, and fell to the floor, while her sister ran for assistance. Doctors were summoned, but Miss Nicholas went from one spasm into another for several days, finaly losing her reason altogether. Last month she died. Swain remained in Florida until the strain upon his nerves became too great and then came north. On the young lady's death he was charged with being its cause and a warrant issued for his arrest. When Swain heard of it, he telegraphed the sheriff to come on as he was willing to return and would not resist extradition.

Glasston—Only one general store and two other small places remain of the business section of this place, which was swept by a fire which started in a drug store. It is not known how the flames originated.

The drug store was entirely destroyed and an adjoining butcher shop shared its fate. The postoffice building and fixtures burned, but the greater portion of the mail and all of the stamps were saved. The fire destroyed several other business structures and then spread to the lumber yards, where it burned itself out.

The total loss will be close upon $18,000. Among the heavier losers are J. W. Arnold, who owned the lumber yard, $3,500, and Quigley Bros., general store, $1,500. The insurance was only partial.

Wahpeton—Joseph Patterson, a Wahpeton banker, and E. L. Kinney, a Hankinson banker, and Wesley Merrifield of Hankinson sustained severe injuries in a runaway at Hankinson. They were driving a pair of young horses, which ran away, overturning the rig. Mr. Patterson's leg was broken below the knee; Mr. Kinney had three ribs broken, and Mr. Merrifield sustained severe injuries about the head and shoulders.

Larimore—Chief of Police Padden has placed under arrest a man, who gave teh name of Mills, and who the chief believes was one of the gang who robbed the postoffice at Cavalier and the bank at Niagara.

SOUTH DAKOTA.

Verdon—Fire in the kitchen of the Southwick home Tuesday threatened for a time to spread and destroy the house. The family was asleep, but the smell of smoke aroused Mrs. Southwick, who found the kitchen full of smoke. Calling for help, she poured all the available water on the flames, and with the assistance of neighbors, the fire was put out after wrecking the kitchen. It started from an overheated stove.

Rev. A. J. Tiffany of Aberdeen arrived here from a visit to neighboring towns in Brown county, where he went to organize Sunday schools. He organized seven last month and expects to start one here in a few days.

Belle Fourche—"Tom" Hulett crawled into a wolf den for the purpose of capturing some wolf cubs, and found the old wolf at home. He was severely bitten on the wrist and had his clothing torn to shreds.

Eureka—Gopher hunting is no longer an industry controlled by men and boys. Women are now taking part in the shooting of the flickertail, and although to them it furnishes sport, they are making pin money from the bounty offered by the county. Many of these female Nimrods are expert with their rifles. Miss Mabel Murray Tuesday made a quick shot and killed a gopher at fifty yards.

A hunting party of women has been formed which will take the field as soon as the weather permits. Gopher shooting has reached such proportions in this vicinity that bounty records are expected to be broken before the season is closed.

Yankton—J. C. O'Brien was before United States Commissioner E. T. White, charged with passing counterfeit coin. He had passed a quarter on Nic Blasius, a barber, and was arrested by Marshal Hickey and Jerry Carleton, deputy United States marshal. After the examination of several witnesses, an expert was put on the stand, and, to the astonishment of the court, pronounced the quarter genuine. He said it had evidently been through fire, which gave it a strange appearance.

The incident has caused much amusement at the expense of the officers, but O'Brien breathed a big sigh when told he was a free man. Had not the expert been present he would at least have been held to the grand jury.

PAT CROWE IN A PISTOL DUEL WITH THE POLICE.

Omaha, Neb., May 3.—Pat Crowe, the kidnaper, again broke out of bounds Tuesday night and had a pistol fight with the Omaha police and escaped after a dozen shots had been fired at him. He is thought to have been wounded, and the police are searching for him.

The trouble arose over Hazel Montgomery, a pretty blonde, who became infatuated with Crowe at his trial for kidnaping young Cudahy. After the trial Crowe paid close attention to her, but she tired of him as soon as the publicity wore away.

Crowe has been searching for a week for Miss Montgomery, who feared for her life, and left home, taking refuge with friends. Late Tuesday night Crowe went to the residence of George Warner, where Miss Montgomery was supposed to be, battered down the door, pounded the house with his pistols and searched the premises, but failed to find the girl. He then warned the family to have the girl at the house befcre morning, saying he would return and kill them all otherwise.

Before daylight, yesterday morning, Crowe returned, but Warner and three police officers were in waiting. He was refused entrance, and was battering at a door when the police began shooting through it. One officer upstairs raised a window and began firing down at Crowe. Crowe made for a window, supposedly to break through, but was met with a hot fire there, and then turned and ran down the street.

The police and Warner chased him down the street, firing as he ran, but the fugitive outdistanced them and escaped in the darkness. Whether he will give up or fight is a question. The entire police force is searching for him.

MARINE

FIRST OF THE STRIKE

Firemen Quit Steamer Socapa—Only Desertion Here So Far.

Rumor About Mates Denied—Independent Tugs in Game.

The first breakaway of the marine strike which has occurred here since the firemen of the Union Towing company went out, took place last night when the firemen, oilers and water tenders of the Tomlinson steamer Socapa struck.

The steamer Socapa is at the Missaba ore dock. It is not likely that she will be loaded or sent out for a few days at least; although it is understood that an attempt will be made to get firemen. G. A. Tomlinson is still absent from the city and until he is heard from nothing will be done in the matter.

It was rumored here today that the mates of the Anchor line steamer Susquehanna had struck while the steamer was at the Great Northern flour dock at Superior. However there seems to be nothing to this story. J. H. Hearn, representing the mates at the Head of the Lakes, says the rumor is unfounded. He add that while he cannot say what the plans of the mates are, no strike of mates would occur at the Head of the Lakes for the reason that they will make their round trips and possible then act after they have completed the requirements of their articles.

An officer of one of the fleets here said today that almost all of the mates employed by those comprising the Lake Carriers' association have signed uniform contracts in which they declare that they belong to no organization which might cause a tie-up of navigation. To sign this in good faith, he points out, none of them could belong to the mates' union. He also declared that Buffalo harbor of mates, the largest harbor of the union, has only about seventy names and that it has about seventy name and that it has know, that many of these names are put on the rolls without the knowledge of the men.

Only six boats have arrived in the Duluth harbor in the last 24 hours and the passages at the Sault and at Detroit today show a decided dropping off.

The bay front is as quiet as a graveyard and the strike seems to be putting dope into business.

A number of independent tugs of the Jeffrey line have been open for business yesterday and today, and others are said to be preparing to go in. So far they have handled only a few lumber schooners, and their business has been very slight.

APRIL'S BAD RECORD.

Twenty-One Accidents in First Fifteen Days of Navigation.

Mention has heretofore been made in The Herald concerning the number of mishaps to vessels which have occurred since the opening of the season. It will be remembered that the fleet did not get started until April 15, and most of the boats started after that; but, nevertheless, April has run up a record of twenty-one accidents for the last ifteen days of the month, which are serious enough to delay the boats concerned and to have the underwriters figuring on them.

Nineteen vessels went aground, most of them in rivers, and it is claimed that the low water was the cause. In most cases the stranded vessels had to lighter, and many of them will have to go into dry dock for repairs. The most serious accident was the collision between the Zimmerman and the Saxona, in the Sault river in which both were sunk. The Zimmerman is still on the bottom and the Saxona is in drydock in Buffalo.

All the vessels that were in trouble were steel boats with the exception of three. The following is a list of vessels that were in trouble last month:

Steamer L. C. Waldo, aground at Bar point.

Steamer D. M. Clemson, aground in Bar point.

Steamer Zimmerman, in collision in Sault river.

Steamer Saxona, in collision in Sault river.

Steamer Umbria, aground in Sault river.

Steamer F. Widlar, aground in Sault river.

Steamer F. C. Ball, aground in Sault river.

Steamer S. J. Murphy, aground in Sault river.

Steamer Donacona, aground in Sault river.

Barge John Smeaton, aground in Detroit river.

Steamer Malletoa, aground in Sault river.

Barge Bombay, aground in Detroit river.

Barge Baroness, aground in Detroit river.

Barge A. Krupp, aground in Detroit river.

Steamer Clyde, aground in Sault river.

Steamer J. T. Hutchinson, struck in Sault river.

Steamer Iroquois, struck in Sault river.

Steamer H. B. Hawgood, aground at Port Huron.

Steamer Daniel Whitney, aground at Port Huron.

Barge Chattanooga, aground in Detroit river.

Steamer W. D. Rees, ashore on Poe's reef.

Schuyck Held By Strike.

Sheboygan, Wis., May 3.—The big collier R. E. Schuyck has been held at this port as a result of the marine strike. The steamer Stewart which is unloading has not been affected by the trouble.

SITUATION UNCHANGED

Neither Side Shows a Disposition to End the Lake Strike.

Majority of Strikers Are Remaining Away From the Docks.

Cleveland, May 3.—So far as could be learned today there was no disposition of either the Lake Carriers or the officers of the Longshoremen's union to take any step with a view to terminating the present marine strike, which has resulted in the almost total suspension of commerce on the Great Lakes.

Along the river and lake front docks there was little sign of life today, the strikers evidently believing it best to remain away during the continuation of the struggle.

Of the big fleet of steamers, which was lying outside yesterday, comparatively few remain, the boats being generally ordered to Erie bay during the pendency of the strike.

NO SIGNS OF WEAKENING

Shown by Either Side of Lake Strike at Buffalo.

Buffalo, May 3.—The strike situation at this port is practically unchanged and neither side shows signs of weakening. No effort has been made to work the boats with non-union men.

Fred Becroft, secretary of the local lodge of the Lake Pilots' Protective association says that out of forty-six boats in Buffalo and vicinity there are only five carrying men who have refused to come out.

NO DIFFICULTY

Experienced in Milwaukee in Loading or Unloading Boats.

Milwaukee, May 3.—While the strike of the marine firemen, oilers and water tenders and longshoremen's unions has been called in Milwaukee, all boats coming into this port meet with no difficulty in unloading or loading or in clearing. This is due to the fact that the crews on the boats have signed articles for the round trip, and have received instructions from headquarters to finish their trip before walking out. In this case a boat coming to Milwaukee from a port down the lakes will not be deserted by the men until it is returned to that port.

W. L. Fulton, business agent of the local grand lodge of the Lake Pilots' Protective association said today:

"All the mates on our boats that are union men will be allowed to return to Erie ports if articles have been signed for the round trip, but if the mates are not union men, the firemen have received instructions to have the boat at once. It is the desire of the Pilots' association to live up to its agreements."

The Henry Smith Launched.

Lorain, May 3.—The steamer Henry E. Smith, building for W. A. and A. H. Hawgood, was launched here yesterday. The new ship which will carry 10,000 tons, was christened by Mrs. Henry B. Smith of Bay City, wife of the man in whose honor the boat was named. The Smith will be completed May 20 and will be sailed by Capt. C. C. Balfour.

The Mather Injured.

Detroit, May 3.—The steamer William G. Mather which was injured in a collision with the steamer Midland Queen at Amherstburg yesterday, will be at the Recorse yard several days for repairs. The damage is on the port side of the water line and five plates will be removed. The vessel will not have to be docked, but a small cofferdam will be placed around the injury.

NOT CAUGHT NAPPING.

Steel Corporation's Vessels Are Moving All Right at Chicago.

Chicago, May 3.—(Special to The Herald.)—The big steamer William E. Corey, unloaded 10,500 tons of iron ore at the Illinois Steel company's plant at South Chicago and got away last night. Today the cargo of the H. Colby is being taken out. It is not stated what the Colby did for firemen, but recruits were found in some way and the steamer was not delayed.

There are ample signs that the United States Steel corporation has not been caught asleep by the longshoremen, particularly at South Chicago, and it is now stated that the movement of vessels will not be seriously delayed there.

Ocean Steamships.

Slasconsett, May 3.—Steamer Baltic, from Liverpool for New York, was reported by wireless when the vessel was 110 miles east of the Nantucket lightship at 5:20 a. m. She will probably reach her dock about 3 o'clock Friday morning.

THE ASTOR-SHAW WEDDING OCCURS

Young Couple Quietly Married at All Souls Church, London.

London, May 3.—Mrs. Nannie Langhorne Shaw, of Virginia, and Waldorf Astor, eldest son of William Waldorf Astor, were quietly married at All Souls' church, Langham Place, London, this afternoon, by the Rev. Francis Scott Webster, M. A., the vicar.

Neither William Waldorf Astor nor Mr. Langhorne, respectively, the fathers of the bridegroom and bride, were present, both being too ill to attend the ceremony.

After the ceremony, which was the simple one of the Church of England, Mr. and Mrs. Astor drove to the office of William Waldorf Astor on the Victoria Embankment, where Mr. Astor is lying ill, to receive his congratulations. Later a reception was held at the residence of Sir Charles Drummond, on Eaton Place. Mr. and Mrs. Waldorf Astor will spend their honeymoon at Ford Manor, Surey, lent to them by Mr. and Mrs. Spencer Clay. Later on they will go to the continent.

The newly married couple received many handsome presents, including the beautiful Cliveden estate, which Mr. Astor presented to his son with all its contents as a wedding gift. Mr. Astor also gave the bride a tiara in which is set the famous Sancy diamond, weighing 53½ carats and valued at $75,000. The bridegroom's present to the bride was a necklace formed by three rows of superb pearls.

The wedding originally was for late in May but as neither the father of the bride nor William Waldorf Astor were likely to be able to go about for some weeks, both oddly enough suffering from severe attacks of gout, they urged the young couple to fix an earlier date and today finally was selected.

UNFILLED RAIL ORDERS LARGEST IN HISTORY.

New York, May 3.—The unfilled tonnage on the books of the various rail mills is estimated between 3,400,000 and 3,500,000 tons, the largest in the history of the iron and steel industry. The United States Steel corporation, Pennsylvania Steel company, Lackawanna Steel company, Cambria Steel company and other large mills have booked orders for more than 2,500,000 tons, while the unfilled business of the Tennessee Coal & Iron company, Colorado Fuel & Iron company and miscellaneous concerns brings the total near the 3,500,000-ton mark.

It is estimated that about 250,000 tons of the business booked represents rails for delivery next year. As is generally known, a large percentage of the 1906 rail business will be carried over into 1907, owing to the inadequate capacity of the mills. New rail business this week will reach about 30,000 tons.

MONEY FOR CONTRACTS

City Has Plenty of Cash for Pending Street Improvements.

Treasurer's Report Shows Big Balance in the Revolving Fund.

With a balance of more than $200,000 in the permanent improvement revolving fund, there will be no lack of money to go ahead with the improvements now under contemplation.

The treasurer's monthly report, prepared today, shows a balance of $157,-897.81, but that amount has been increased to more than $200,000 since the first of the month.

Of this amount about $68,000 is pledged to contracts now under way, but there will be nearly $140,000 available for the Second street, Seventeenth avenue east and Greysolon road improvements.

Including this $200,000, and a balance of $156,000 in the sinking fund, and the $95,-000 which has not yet been paid to the Modern Steel Structural company, the city has a total cash balance of nearly $600,000. In spite of the large apparent balance, however, close economy is necesary as all of the funds are running rather close to the danger line.

Following is a summary of the treasurer's report:

TRAINING A BEAUTY.

Modern Way of Making a Belle in Society.

New York Sun: "Just think of training a child to become a professional beauty," said a pretty young woman, gossiping softly at a woman's club. "That is my job.

"They say that the training of a lady should begin one hundred years before her birth. This isn't always practicable, so I've gone into the business of training girls until they are ready to make their bow to society.

"The little girl of nowadays doesn't sit at grandmother's knee spelling out her Mother Goose. She walks and talks, rides and drives and is an important young creature generally. She isn't forward nor pert but just ladylike.

"Does it pay to teach her the beauty tricks? Well, I should say so. At 19 she is lovely; at 21 she is glorious; at 18 she beggars description; at 20 she captures a duke. That is the way it works out.

"I teach the young millionairess the things she ought to know. Of course I don't tell her she is going to be a beauty because she must be quite simple and unaffected. But I teach her many other things and she absorbs the beauty proposition—sort of drinks it in—with all the other fads.

"I teach her not to frown. And this is a good thing for the grownup beauty to learn. Don't scowl.

"Nine children out of ten frown when they talk and when they read and nearly every grown person is the possessor of a deep scowl. But it isn't necessary to have it. I constantly tell my pupils not to frown. Learn to look closely without scowling.

"Sleeping with a light in your eyes makes you scowl; sitting facing the light makes you pucker your brows; reading by strong electric light makes you squint. I teach the little millionairess how not to do this.

"I teach the small girl who is going to rule society some day to cultivate repose. There is something beautiful about perfect repose. The person who possesses it is sure of a standing in society.

"I teach my millionairess how to have an air about her. I teach her how to go up and down stairs. Not that there will be much stair climbing for her to do in her life, but it is well to know how in case she should have to climb.

"When she goes upstairs I teach her to throw her shoulders back and her head up and to incline her whole body forward as though she were rising for a jump.

"When she comes down stairs I teach her to settle back as though she were landing in the jump. It is a little like hurdling anyway, this precipitating your body up and down stairs.

"I teach her how to be seated prettily. It is a valuable thing to know how to sit down well.

"Watch the next roomful of people and observe how few, how very few, do it nicely. Most persons flop down; others fall down; still others seem to hitch into the chair as though they were not comfortable. Very few, indeed, sit down well.

"Here are the principles just as I learned them in Paris from a school of acting which pretends to be the superior of the delsarte. To begin with, select your chair well.

"If you are short choose a little chair; don't perch yourself upon a high stool with your feet dangling. If you are tall take a high chair. Tall women usually sit upon the smallest chair in the room in the effort to look a little smaller, and short women sit on high chairs hoping to look a little taller.

"Both methods are wrong. Sit upon a chair that suits you naturally, a tall chair if you are tall, a little chair if you are little. Trust to your grace for the rest.

"Don't try to sit down in your chair too soon; that means that you will land on one side of the chair and look awkward; on the other hand, don't sit all over the chair by throwing yourself into it with abandon.

"Sit down in the middle of the chair. When you go to seat yourself be careful Here is where the trouble comes. You lose your balance and fall into the chair.

"That is a great mistake. Bend slightly but do not double up. And, when you bend, manage to throw all your weight upon one foot.

"This gives you the other to fall back upon. Practice throwing your weight all on one foot as you seat yourself, and you will see the point. It is the secret of being graceful. All actresses do it.

"When once you are seated, don't loll. We teach our small charges to sit rather stiffly upright, just touching the back of the chair. We never let them lean forward or to one side.

"And of course we do not let them double one foot under them. Doubling your foot under you means temporary comfort for the short girl, for it makes her a little higher. But it is a very ungraceful thing to do.

"We teach our little millionairess how to enter the room, how to bow and be seated; and then we teach her something about how to lift the teapot and pour it without nervousness, and we show her how to manage the tea tray. The hostess who cannot pour a cup of tea and sweeten it without embarrassment can never hope to shine in society.

"We teach the children what to eat and how much to eat. Children are eternally hungry and few know how to select.

"We teach a child things she ought to know about salads and sandwiches, and we are very careful in the matter of sweets. By giving her all she wants of them at other times she isn't so eager to get them when she is in company.

"We instruct children in the complexion diet. The complexion diet is a wonderful thing, as good for the grown up as for the child. It is the diet that is taught in Berlin, and society women pay little fortunes to learn it.

"The complexion diet is founded upon one simple law. Eat when you are hungry.

"Hunger makes wrinkles in the face. Don't go hungry. But eat the right thing. If you ask the promoter of the complexion diet of Berlin what are the right things to eat he will tell you that they are grapes in the fall, raisins in winter, strawberries in spring and fresh fruits and vegetables all summer. A box of raisins and a box of prunes should always be kept on hand.

"The philosophy of giving a child all the fruit she wants is a sensible one. It is comfortable internally, and a child that is comfortable is polite—and so with the grownup. Diet is a great deal.

"Among the social arts we teach a child how to flirt. This is a very broad assertion, and needs to be qualified.

"But we teach her how to be at ease and smiling; we teach her that it is not pretty to be shy. We teach a girl that one should be just shy enough, but by no means too shy; shyness is out of style.

"We teach the girl the mysteries of a well appointed dressing table. There are countless new things for making one beautiful, and we show the child how to use them.

"We teach her about perfumes and beauty baths and all things which she will want to know later. We instruct her in the art of using a mirror, and how to dress for a back view as well as a front view.

"Once in the dressing room of a French beauty, I was struck with the fact that she had no mirror placed conspicuously where she could see her face. All the mirrors seemed to be behind her.

"There were mirrors at the sides and overhead, and even a mirror set into the floor. But none in front. 'How is this?' I asked.

"'Why,' said she, 'one sees one's face anyway, by habit, if nothing more. But I like to see my back. A well dressed back is interesting.' And the curve of hips and waist showed that she had gazed into her mirrors to good advantage.

"We teach color, and this is a thing which very few people know at all. A little girl who has been through a color class knows a great deal.

"Last season I had a Newport woman of 50 in the color class, and this year there is a woman from the West who has recently come into her millions, and wants to know something about dressing well and furnishing well.

"The millionairess, when she makes her bow to society, will be fullfledged. None of your simple little things in white with blue ribbons. She will know a thing or two about society.

"But it pays. Why waste two or three seasons learning the things that might have been learned beforehand? That is what society women are saying. And then they look to their daughters to carry out the idea."

nteresting Facts About Cigars and How They Are Made.

Kansas City Star: "There is an interesting story in the tobacco business, following the plant from the field to the cigar store counter, and few men know it," said Lewis Lewkowitz, at the Coates House. "In fact you can find something good to talk or write about in nearly evedy man's occupation. Mow many men really know anything about the cigars they smoke? Men will ask for one brand for awhile and then change to another, and two-thirds of them can't detect the difference if you 'switch cigars' on them. Some men will smoke anything that costs 10 cents, and would have a fit if you offered them a box of 5-centers as pleasant to smoke, although not so good. Two-thirds of the men couldn't tell which it was if you gave them a 5 and a 10-cent cigar to smoke without a distinguishing mark on either.

"Ever notice how many sizes and shapes of cigars are made now? Some brands are made in twenty-five shapes and grades from 5 cents to $1 each. There are 'panatelas,' the slim size that fits the mouth so comfortably; there's 'clubhouse' shapes that wouldn't fit anyone's face; short cigars for after breakfast; 'panatelas' for luncheon; big, black, husky cigars for after-dinner smokes and all the intermediate stages, too.

"Cigars are made to sell for 1 cent each, 1½, 2, 2½, 3, 4, 5, 6, 10, 12½, 15 and 25 cents and of course, the higher priced goods, too. Then there are stogies and cheroots for kindling, outdoor smokes, and many other brands.

"The culture and handling of tobacco have been reduced to a science. Cuba, for instance: Men have spent months studying the conditions of temperature and climate in that country, conditions which are ideal for tobacco culture and for bringing out the best there is in the leaf after it has been separated from the parent plant. The result of this study has been the perfecting of a system of handling American tobacco, grown under conditions closely similar to those in Cuba. Cuban temperature and humidity are exactly duplicated in the field warehouses, where the raw leaf ferments; in the 'stemmeries,' where it is scientifically treated and made ready for manufacture and in the big 'humidors,' where the finished cigars are preserved until ready to be sold.

"Cuban tobacco owes much of its excellence to the climatic conditions under which it is handled after having been harvested, and the duplicating of those methods and conditions is aiding wonderfully to the aromatic qualities of American-grown tobacco. Immediately after the harvest the tobacco goes to the field storage houses, where the plants are suspended on poles until evaporation has removed all greenness and most of the rankness. It stays there for several weeks and gradually changes from a vivid green to a rich brown of varying shades. The tobacco is then packed in boxes or bales and stored in rooms where a certain temperature must be maintained until the natural fermentation is finished. This takes several months.

"There is no hurry in making cigars. The tobacco has to be kept in storage usually for two years before it is really matured. Did you know that? The best leaf is kept by itself, not packed against a medium or ordinary grade where it may absorb undesirable qualities.

"A 'stemmerie?' That's the branch standing between the curing barn and the factory as a new and scientific means of improving the quality of the tobacco and insuring uniformity. The tobacco is blended there. Ordinarily a workman takes a few bits of leaf from two or three piles and rolls them into a cigar; that's mixing, not blending, and it makes the difference between a perfect smoke and a poor one.

"The standard of workmanship in regard to cleanliness, healthfulness and intelligence is improving all the time; it has reached a high plane today in most of the big factories. Cigars are made by hand, but in all other particulars modern methods have done away with all handling whereever possible. A trip through an old-fashioned cigar factory or familiarity with conditions that once held will make a man appreciate what this cleanliness means."

There are men in Kansas City who have their cigars made to order. Charles W. Armour smokes a "panetela" cigar made of Havana tobacco. They are made just the size and weight he likes. Sold in a store these private cigars would cost 15 cents each; they are good enough for Mr. Armour, but he keeps a fine stock for his friends.

W. H. Winants, vice president of the National Bank of Commerce, smokes six domestic cigars a day, but has a box of heavy Havana grown stock on his desk to give to people who call on him. They're very choice, but one is enough to make the ordinary visitor see things. Mr. Winants is a "tidy" smoker, drops no ashes on his waistcoat and never lets a cigar go out till its mission has been accomplished.

A SHOCK.

Los Angeles Times: A western congressman was talking about Quonah Parker, chief of the Comanches, who has been lying ill at his ranch in the Witchita mountains.

"Quonah Parker," the congressman said, "is a rich man and a polished man. Despite his eight wives, a moment's conversation would convince you of the intelligence, culture, and wit of the chieftain.

"I once heard an ignorant commissioner make in Quonash Parker's presence a remark derogatory to the Indian race.

"The chief bit his lip, smiled, and said:

"'Your remark shocks me greatly. It shocks me as an old man in New York was once shocked.'

"Quonah Parker then went on to explain that the shock came to the old man as he lay dying. He was stretched out on his death bed. His pale, wasted hands picked at the coverlet. His family wept at the bedside. Finally his grandson, a boy af 9 or 10, was brought in.

"'Your grandpa is extremely ill,' murmured the boy's mother. 'Say something to him.'

"The child thought a little, and then said in a loud, clear treble:

"'Grandpa, would you like to have soldiers at your funeral?'"

"Put your best foot forward" in a Herald want ad. and the next step will be easy.

MAXIMUM TERM FOR FRANK O'NEIL

Degraded Father Gets Ten Years for Ruin of Daughter.

Frank O'Neil, convicted of the ruin of his 16-year-old daughter Frances, was yesterday sentenced to a term of ten years in the Wisconsin state prison at Waupun, by Judge Smith of the superior court in the city of Superior. O'Neil was found guilty, after the jury had deliberated seven minutes. The court gave him the maximum term for the offense charged, and regretted his inability to make the punishment more commensurate for so revolting a crime.

The girl testified that her father wronged her when she was but 13 years old, and that he afterward married her and forced her to lead a life of shame for his own profit. O'Neil admitted the illicit relations between himself and the girl, but claimed she is not his daughter.

Owing to threats that he made after receiving his sentence, the authorities believe O'Neil intends to commit suicide, so he is being watched until placed in the state penitentiary.

CLEANING DAY WELL OBSERVED

Many Piles of Rubbish Burned in Spite of Rain.

Tuesday's drenching rain interfered somewhat with full compliance with the mayor's request to clean up yesterday, but in spite of the wet weather the cleaning day was generally observed.

The numerous bonfires seen yesterday showed the interest taken in the movement for a cleaner city, and the fine weather today should allow all those who have designs on their ashpiles to complete the good work.

Because of the rain, an additional day or two will be allowed, but before the end of the week the city must be free of unsightly rubbish heaps, or those responsible will find themselves in trouble with the city authorities.

The Elks having disposed of the property to the association, and secured another site for the new building, the Second street lot is no longer needed.

The meeting of the board was well attended, and a number of business matters were gone over. Treasurer How read a report on the finances of the local association.

GOULD THROWN FROM AUTO.

New York, May 3.—Kingdon Gould, eldest son of George Gould, had a narrow escape from death yesterday when his automobile turned a complete somersault on a curve on the broad turnpike at Mamasquan, N. J., thirteen miles from his home in Lakewood. Young Gould was thrown thirty feet and barely missed crashing into a telegraph pole. The boy was badly bruised and shaken up, but no bones were broken. The chauffeur was rendered unconscious by his fall from the car. The accident was caused by a wheel giving way.

NO GENIUS FOR FINANCE

Leading British Sculptor Arouses Indignation by Business Methods.

Peculiar Defense of Sir Alfred Gilbert Advanced by Artists.

London, May 3.—Does the possession of artistic talent of the highest order absolve their possessors from the obligations of common honesty, which are held to be binding on ordinary mortals? That is the interesting question which has been raised here by the exposure of Alfred Gilbert's dealings with one of his clients, Mrs. Frankau, better known to the literary world as Frank Danby, whose book, "Pigs in Clover," sold remarkably well on both sides of the Atlantic.

Mr. Gilbert is probably the most gifted of living British sculptors. Some of his countrymen place him higher even than Rodin in the ranks of great present-day artists. His statue of Queen Victoria at Winchester is regarded as one of the finest of modern times. He He has been engaged for some time on the memorial to the duke of Clarence in the Albert Chapel, Windsor—a design of extraordinary beauty, which is, however, still incomplete.

Mrs. Frankau gave Mr. Gilbert a commission to execute a monument to her deceased husband, which he accepted with alacrity, readily promising to complete it within six months. The price agreed upon was $3,000. It was arranged on Mr. Gilbert's suggestion that he should receive $750 on the signing of the agreement, $250 per month for four months on his certificate that the work was progressing satisfactorily, and the balance on the delivery of the monument. On the strength of his monthly reports he received $1,000. Within eight weeks of the time when he had undertaken to complete the monument, he wrote that his work "is progressing even better than I had expected." But when the time arrived for its delivery, according to the terms of the contract, Mrs. Frankau discovered that it had not advanced beyond the stage of a rough little clay design. Of the bronze, marble and granite, for which payment in advance had been demanded, there was no trace. Mrs. Frankau's requests for the return of the $1,750 she had paid him on account were disregarded. She could get neither her money back nor the monument. When threatened with exposure, Mr. Gilbert virtually confessed that his monthly statements of satisfactory progress had been untrue, by acknowledging that he had been unable to make any headway with the work because of his inability to satisfy his "artistic instincts and artistic conscience."

When the correspondence was published, several men distinguished in the realm of art, rallied to Mr. Gilbert's defense. That defense rests on the broad assumption that honor and honesty have no place in the exalted sphere where the true artist lives and moves and has his being, and takes his fees. According to the Gilbertian school of ethics, as they expound it, an artist's undertaking to produce a certain work in a certain time, can have no binding force, because the artistic faculty is not a machine that can work to order, and is entirely subject to the dictates of the artistic conscience. They hold, in effect, that the artist is entitled to make, not only promises which do not bind him, but statements which are not true, in order to obtain cash in advance from his patrons. On these principles the party to blame in the transaction described is not the artist who obtained and still holds $1,750, for which his patron got nothing, but the woman who, in her ignorant Philistinism, attempted to reduce her relations with a man of genius to the level of a commercial bargain, and now supposes herself aggrieved at the loss of her money.

Meanwhile, as Mr. Gilbert lives in Bruges, he is outside the pale of British law. He is a Royal Academician, and a member of its council, but when appealed to in the matter, Sir Edward Poynter, the president of the academy, took the ground that it has "no right to interfere in the private affairs of its members."

in a lump for $100. Everybody became drunk, and with provisons enough for the winter and no necessity for working, many of them kept up the debauch for weeks.

To protect the city, with his little garrison and the prisons destroyed, the governor had to resort to extraordinary measures. The soldiers were ordered to make free use of their weapons and for petty offences the cudgel or knot was resorted to, thieves getting first twenty-five lashes, later fifty and finally a hundred. This sufficed but the criminals, leaving Alexandrovsky retired to places in the interior, and the governor was forced to divide his fifty men, sending an officer and fifteen men to Pogibi, five men to Arkovo, where the Japanese had left large stores of provisions and three men each to Onor and Rykovo. The remnant stood guard day and night but the convicts were able nevertheless to set the torch to the chancellery of the governor, the club, the residence of the chief jailer and many other buildings.

During the raging storms, four steamers and a schooner, including a 3,000-ton vessel from America, the German steamer Surabaja, with a crew of sixty-seven men, and the Vladivostok, with twenty-three men, which were endeavoring to bring supplies to Sakhalin were wrecked on the inhospitable winter coasts of the island and all on board were lost.

Finally after twenty-two days, ships with several thousand soldiers arrived and restored order. The new troops were without quarters, however, owing to the destruction of all the crown buildings and many other houses, and suffered extremely from the severe cold until they could build barracks.

The correspondents describe the unlicensed convicts as more like beasts than men, but say that they stood in wholesome fear of the Japanese during the Japanese occupation, the population then being able to sleep with doors and windows unlocked though hundreds of convicts were roaming the streets.

FURNACES HAVE SUFFICIENT ORE

To Last From Six to Eight Weeks Without Additional Shipments.

Cleveland, Ohio, May 3.—The Iron Trade Review says: The strike of the Longshoremen's union has resulted in the temporary paralysis of lake traffic. As the lake carriers, two years ago, established their position in opposition to their representatives, the captains, being members of another union, and as the mates are assistant captains, the attempt to force the mates into the union will be resisted. The vessel owners will fight for what they regard a very important principle, and will soon begin the operation of docks with non-union men, confident of the justice of their position and of their ability to break the strike. Very few mates have shown any disposition to sympathize with the strike. Fortunately nearly all of the furnaces are prepared to continue in blast from six to eight weeks, and some could run three months without an additional ton of ore. While the amount of ore shipped this month will undoubtedly be reduced, it does not seem probable that the manufacture of iron will be interfered with to any great extent. The final outcome of the strike promises to be a much more satisfactory relation of employers and employes.

All the information obtainable in regard to conditions in San Francisco indicates that the demand for structural material will not be felt to any appreciable extent for several months. Insurance is now being adjusted, and it is not expected that any contracts will be made prior to July 1.

About the only orders received to date for small tonnage of merchant's pipe and roofing, which will be promptly filled. It is estimated that 10,000 tons of structural material cannot be used for a number of months, and as the total production of these shapes for this year will be about 1,500,00 tons, the demand growing out of the earthquake and fire can be easily met. A single modern mill, with a capacity of 800 tons per day could soon roll all the shapes which will be required.

The Tennessee Coal, Iron & Railroad company has taken orders for about 200,000 tons of open hearth rails for delivery next year at $29. Three large Western steam roads have placed contracts for 100,000 tons for 1907 delivery. The St. Paul has ordered 10,000 tons, the Northwestern 50,000 tons, and the Northern Pacific 40,000 tons.

HOSMER BLOCK SOLD.

John Hoffman of Kalamazoo, Mich., Purchases It for $50,000.

Publicity is given one of the recent sales of business property by the filing yesterday of a deed transferring the Hosmer block at 13 and 15 East Superior street from A. L. Ordean to John W. Hoffman of Kalamazoo, Mich., for $50,000. Mr. Hoffman has been an investor in Duluth real estate for some years.

The property comprises a stone and brick two story building with a frontage of fifty feet on the uper side of Superior street. It is occupied by O'Leary & Campbell, the grocers.

Mr. Ordean has owned the property for about twenty years.

Files Large Trust Deed.

A trust deed covering the property of the Duluth, Missabe & Northern Railway company to secure a loan of $1,600,000 for railway extension, was filed with the register of deeds yesterday. The loan will be applied toward building the line from Alborn to Bovey. The mortgage bears 5 per cent interest, payable semi-annually, and it is due in 1941. Provision is made for the payment before that date if desired.

GROWTH OF LABOR UNIONS

St. Paul, May 3.—The labor commissioner is compiling reports on organized labor and their organizations in Minnesota. Julius Moersch, the statistician, is busy at work classifying the various reports. Complete returns have been received from Duluth, which show that there are 48 labor organizations with a membership of 3,082, as against 42 with a membership of 2,860 in 1904, when the last report was made.

The indications are that there has been a general increase in the membership of the various organizations. At present the department has no means by which to ascertain how the money, which is collected by the various organizations, is disbursed. From the meager returns the commission has, it is shown that large sums of money pass through the hands of the officers of the unions each year.

TROUBLE OVER PERMIT.

Building Inspector Says A. W. Deetz Has Not Complied With Ordinance.

Trouble has arisen between Building Inspector Kelley and A. W. Deetz, owner of a new brick building in First alley near Fourth avenue east, and the case may be taken into court, on a quasi criminal proceeding.

Mr. Kelley claims that the owner of the building has never taken out a permit, and that he has not complied with the ordinance in regard to the thickness of the walls of the new building. Mr. Deetz has applied several times for a permit, which has been refused him, on the ground that the building was not properly constructed.

been erected in this city. A detail of 100 men under command of Capt. H. H. L. Gilchrist, constitutes the administrative force and the hospital has now a capacity of 500 patients, although but eighty have been received to date. A consignment of odorless excavator troughs, which are pronounced the highest type of sanitary convenience, has been received. The system will be installed at once. Every effort is being made by the health committee to concentrate the hospital work at as few points as possible and as rapidly as the patients from smaller emergency hospitals can be made comfortable at the larger ones, the small ones are being abolished. This serves a double purpose, concentrating the work and at the same time permitting scores of physicians, who until now have been giving all their time and attention to this work to give some thought to their own interests.

Twenty-six of the drug stores in the district not wiped out by fire were decided upon yesterday by the health committee as locations for free dispensaries. Within three days at the most each of these stores will be supplied with drugs and will be placed in charge of competent druggists. The supplies will be secured from the main drug supply station at the Presidio and at any one of these dispensaries it will be possible to have filled, free of charge, all physicians' prescriptions.

The commercial banks belonging to the Clearing House association have arranged to open for new or "special" business. The arrangement is to receive all deposits that customers may desire to make on new accounts.

The depositors may check out these new balances without restriction or limit. The plan for new or special business was adopted in Oakland and other parts of Alameda county and so successful was it in its operation that the banks have now resumed regular business and are receiving more money than they are paying out. The savings banks are most anxious to resume business but they are unwilling to jeopardize the interests of their depositors by opening their vaults a moment before it is quite safe to do so, the contents of several vaults (not savings banks) prematurely opened having been destroyed.

A large portion if not a majority of the business men who were thanking their lucky stars during the big conflagration that their valuables were inclosed in fire proof vaults have wakened to a desperate realization of the unquestionable force of the San Francisco fire. Within seventy-two hours there have been 576 safes and vaults opened in the district east of Powell and Market streets and in not more than 60 per cent of these instances were the contents found intact. In many cases a pile of ashes represented thousands of dollars' worth of accounts.

The city government yesterday began the work of paying out April salaries to its employes. The sum of $200,000 was transferred to the Western National bank, where yesterday the members of the police force received the money due them. In this way $90,000 was added to the currency in circulation.

While it is difficult to give exact figures as to losses and insurance in connection with the fire which has devastated such a large portion of San Francisco, close estimates have been compiled which show that the actual property loss to the city is close to $350,000,000. Trolley cars were operated on Market street between Ferry and Valencia streets, and a little later they will run as far west as Castro.

Auditor Horton has filed his estimate of receipts and expenditures of the city for the coming fiscal year. He figures the latter will amount to a total of $8,648,400.

The estimation is made on an assessed valuation of $600,000,009. The receipts are figured at a rate of $1 on $600,000,000 and $2,228,400 from other sources, making a tax rate with seven cents for the parks of $1.07. The fire, however, has reduced the value of assessable property and the expenses will be greater than the auditor estimates, so that it is stated that the taxes will be nearly $2.50 on each $100 of valuation.

The water company has been authorized to deliver water to every laundry in the city, provided the chimneys have been inspected. Eight or nine laundries have opened within two or three days. Two or three laundries have been opened for the use of the hospital service.

The local Japanese have undertaken systematically the care of Japanese refugees. Out of 10,000 Japanese affected by the fire and earthquake approximately 5,000 have been sent to the interior. Of the remaining 5,000 about 3,000 are at the various relief camps in San Francisco and 2,000 at Oakland. The Japanese government has wired a contribution of $25,000.

FOR FALLEN WOMEN.

The Herald last night published an appeal from the Bethel society for the preservation of the Bethel home for women, and it is an appeal that Duluth can hardly fail to heed.

It is stated that there is a deficit of $1,400 in the running expenses since Nov. 4, 1904, and that if that deficit is not made up the home must close. Some arrangement will have to be made, too, for carrying on the home in the future. It is an institution that is sadly in need, shame though it is to American manhood that this should be so, and Duluth can hardly afford to permit the suspension of an institution with such noble aims as this one has.

According to the statement issued by the Bethel society, in three years 105 girls—saying nothing of the transients—have entered the home, and the majority of them have been redeemed from the shame into which they have fallen, and led into paths of virtue, honesty and usefulness. The institution is absolutely non-sectarian. Of this total twenty girls were never identified with any church, forty-three were Protestants and forty-two were Catholics. The character of their treatment in the home has never been affected by their religious preferences.

Not all of these girls came from Duluth. Fifty-eight of them only were from St. Louis county, and of that number thirty-seven were from Duluth. The remainder came from surrounding communities and neighboring states, fifteen coming from Wisconsin, some from the Dakotas, but most of them from Minnesota. Says the Bethel society in its statement:

> We do not wish to make capital of the heart-rending stories we have heard from these unfortunate girls, but we are sure the public would help them with financial aid in their struggle to forsake a life of sin, and to fit themselves to fill honorable places in the community, if they could read these stories as they were told. As a rule the result obtained by a girl who passes through the home is a transformed life. Careless, thoughtless, reckless, sinful, ruined and often seemingly hopeless girls are transformed into sober, industrious, godly women. Is it worth while to keep this door of hope open to these girls? If it is, help them with an offering.

This home is doing a great work. It goes into the maelstrom of sin and shame that swirls in the stream of life, and rescues sinking souls that are being dragged into defilement and disgrace. It offers the poor girl who has sinned a foothold upon an honest life, and it shields her and guides her until she is able to stand alone. Without such an institution, hope is denied the fallen, for to fall means to stay down. It is inconceivable that Duluth will calmly see such an institution perish for want of sympathy and support.

SHORT WEIGHT SCALES.

The Herald has received a circular from a manufacturer of scales which contains some very interesting revelations. It concerns, mostly, the scales made by a competing manufacturer, and the ingenious bids made by the latter for the patronage of tradesmen.

Here is what purports to be a circular sent by him to the butchers, advertising a "butchers' scale" which appears to be distinctly a "butchers' scale", all right, as distinguished from a consumer's scale:

> Can you do this on your scale? Buy twenty pounds of pork loins at 9 cents a pound, retail them to your trade at the same price, and get your money back? We can on our scale and make you 3 per cent profit besides. If your business amounts to $10 a day we can earn you 30 cents in fractions you don't get now. Thirty cents a day means that you buy this scale every 180 days. How long have you been in business? How many have you bought in that time? Think of it. One scale lost every six months. Let our man prove this.

It isn't very hard to see into this. This manufacturer, apparently, appeals to buyers on the ground that his scale will enable the butchers to almost invariably "stick" the consumer for a small fraction on every purchase. It is what gamblers would call a "percentage in favor of the house". It doesn't amount to much, only 3 per cent or thereabouts, or 30 cents on every $10 taken in, but honesty is not gauged by quantities.

No showing is made as to how many butchers have been attracted by the allurement of this circular, and purchased scales with a percentage in favor of the house, so we are left with the privilege of believing, if we can, that not many of them did.

This isn't much of a steal, the one made by this scale that works for its owner unerringly and persistently, but it is a steal, nevertheless, a petty theft with petty profits attendant upon it. It is unfair competition with the merchant who uses an honest scale, and it is unfair to the customers who rely upon the honesty of the merchant and his scales. Another point, made by the scale manufacturer who is exposing his competitor, is this: "The use of a dishonest scale corrupts the morals of the young clerk. He is led to look lightly upon stealing. If he robs the public, may he not soon rob his employer?"

This is worth thinking upon, certainly. Very likely there is no tradesman in Duluth who would ascend to such methods, but there must be in other towns, or the manufacturer of crooked scales would have to go out of business. Such tradesmen should remember that they are setting a very bad example to their employes, who may think that if the tradesman can steal from the consumers, the clerk may as well rob the employer's till.

INDEPENDENT VOTING.

Secretary Shaw, who is down in Iowa trying to rally the "old guard" of Republicanism against Governor Cummins and to prevent the party organization from falling into the hands of the modern Republicans who are beginning to care more for the country and its people than for a mere party name and the prosperity of the party bosses, has been saying things about "independent voters".

He does not like them. He belongs to a class of politicians that never will like them. He regards them as an evil, and as a menace to party stability. They upset the calculations of the bosses. They render null and void attempts to carry an election by cracking the party whip. So he does not like them.

He says he does not advocate party loyalty regardless of principle. What he insists on is loyalty to party for the sake of the principles it promotes when these are believed to be correct and salutary.

Very good. Nobody believes it to be a merit to bolt a party simply for the sake of bolting and of being "independent". When a party's principles are good, according to Secretary Shaw and others of his ilk, it is the duty of those who hold allegiance to that party to stick to it through thick and thin.

But who ever heard of a party whose principles were not good? Who ever heard of a party, in this country, advocating crime and violence? Nobody. Party principles are always good. At least they sound well, anyway.

But the people are slowly coming to see that they need something besides nice party principles. They need party practices, too, and party accomplishments. When a party with the noblest principles anybody ever imagined has them for platform purposes only, and does nothing with them when it gets into power, and, indeed, shows no disposition ever to do anything with them, it no longer has the right to call upon party loyalty. If it wants loyalty it must earn it by practicing the principles upon which it has sought and gained popular votes.

The trouble in Iowa seems to be that Governor Cummins, whom Secretary Shaw and the organization are trying to beat, really wants to practice some of the fine principles of the Republican party. So they are out to hang his hide on the fence, to use a term that is a favorite with practical politicians, and unless the people of Iowa keep their eyes open they are going to do it.

Party loyalty is all right so long as a party, by its practices as well as its principles, deserves loyalty. When it no longer deserves it, loyalty to party must be at a sacrifice of loyalty to country.

A FINE SPIRIT.

There is nothing, as a rule, colder and less emotional and more merciless than business run upon a business basis. Strict business rules omit consideration of sentiment, and though it often creeps in with exceptional circumstances, as a general thing it is regarded as "poor business".

Therefore some of the things that have happened in the business world since the San Francisco affliction shocked the country are all the more remarkable, and show to what an extent the thoughts of suffering humanity at the Golden Gate have stirred to the depths the emotions of mankind, bringing up from long-forgotten corridors of the mind an over-flowing sympathy that has even erased the strictest rules of business. For instance, here are some extracts from a letter written by a Philadelphia business house to its San Francisco customers:

> We send you by this mail our spring price list, supposing those sent previously to have been destroyed. We figure a manufacturing profit of 10 per cent on our goods. In all orders you send please deduct this 10 per cent. We will not take 1 cent of profit until you are fully recouped. Also please note that our ordinary ninety days' credit is extended to two years, and if that is not sufficient make it two hundred. Incidentally we note that all orders sent you since Feb. 1 are standing on our books against you. We presume your books have been destroyed. Let us assure you that so far as any charge against your firm is concerned, our books also have been destroyed.

Isn't that fine? Don't you suppose that the glow of hope and warmth that that letter brought to the soul of the San Francisco customer made it worth while?

Doesn't it make you feel a lot better to know that after all business is not so hard that it is incapable of experiencing the effects of sympathy, most noble of emotions?

There are people that will throw cold water by saying that it was done for advertising purposes, that the wholesaler has knit the retailer's business to him with "hooks of steel" and that it was, therefore, merely good business tact. Don't you believe it. It has too sincere and honest a ring for that. The wholesaler won't lose anything; he will gain; but he didn't think of that when he wrote that letter.

Such manifestations of the possibilities of human sympathies, which ordinary life covers up, serve to almost make worth while even such a grievous calamity as the destruction of a great city. Morally and spiritually the country is infinitely better for the San Francisco trouble.

HOTEL GOSSIP

Frank T. Lally of St. Paul, traveling passenger agent for the Burlington, who was registered at the Spalding recently, is said to be the poet who is responsible for the following account of what the railroad man who has to do with the freight department may expect in the next world:

A coal man went to heaven one day,
As coal men seldom do;
And they gave him a job with princely pay,
Of running a coal train through
To the Kingdom of Hell; with instructions to haul
From the fiery brimstone bars
All the railroad men whom he could recall;
But they gave to him no cars.

So a message was sent to the realms of hell,
For the railroad men to be
On the watch for his train—and he rang the bell
With a chuckle of fiendish glee.
And the men lined up as they writhed in pain,
On the fiery brimstone bars;
But when the coal man showed up with his train,
By Gosh!!! HE HAD NO CARS!!!

Still back and forth with never a load
That coal man has to go,
'Tis reported now that remarkable road
Is leased by the B. & O.
And still it runs from the Pearl Gates' verge
To those fiery brimstone bars,
Where those railroad officials are chanting their dirge,
"NO CARS!!! NO CARS!!!! NO CARS!!!!!"

And so through the endless cycle of years,
The railroad men line up,
With hope despelled; with groans and tears;
As they drain the bitter cup.
While the coal man makes his run on time
From the gates of pearl to the fiery bars;
And the railroad men in anguish chime,
"NO CARS! NO CARS!! NO CARS!!"

A certain Duluth young man called on two girls last Sunday evening. The girls suggested that a part of the evening be spent in church. The young man was agreeable. He hadn't been to church for some little time past, and thought the experience wouldn't do him any harm. So it was agreed that the three should go, and they went.

The sermon was a good one, and the other features were not at all tiresome, so that when the services came to an end the man was in a pleasant and agreeable frame of mind. He reached for his hat. When he pulled it from under the seat he gazed at it in amazement. What slight-of-hand trick was this? He had placed a new, $5 derby on the bent wire when he first took his seat, and the hat he now held in his hand was old and battered, looking very much as if it had seen several years hard usage.

The unfortunate individual, holding the disreputable headgear in his hand, tried to figure out how anyone could have removed his hat and replaced it with the other. They certainly couldn't accomplish the feat from behing, the way the seats were constructed, and it was also certain that they couldn't do it from in front or sides. And then who would think of exchanging hats in a church?

The man disliked to leave the building without his hat, and he didn't feel like appearing on the street with the specimen he found in its place. He called the matter to the attention of his friends, and they assisted him in a search of the surrounding seats and aisles, but all to no avail. The hat could not be found. By this time all the congregation had left the church, and the ushers and minister joined in the search. Still the missing top-piece failed to appear.

Finally the hunt was given up in despair and the young man, very much ruffled in temper, forgetting the peace and quiet of his mind a few minutes before, left the building with the sympathetic girls and started on the homeward way. He remained in a gloomy frame of mind until the house was reached, and proved anything but an interesting and entertaining companion.

"I wouldn't wear the blooming old hat to a dog fight," he had declared, but he wore it on the street, nevertheless.

The three had barely entered the house before the stern voice of the young ladies' father was heard.

"Girls," it said, "girls, have you seen my hat anywhere? I have been wanting to go out all the evening, and couldn't find it upstairs or down."

The young man's mind acted quickly. He looked at the hall tree. There hung his hat, where he had left it three hours before.

"I believe I must have taken it by mistake," he said, sheepishly. "Is this your hat, sir?"

It was.

"The government estimates of the pine that has been sold and is being cut on the Chippawa reservations, under the Morris law, will overrun 30 per cent, or nearly one-third greater than these estimates," said William O'Neil of Cass Lake, superintendent of logging for the government, at the St. Louis. "According to the terms of the contract under which the timber was sold, the successful bidders were to remove the pine in four years' time. The government will undoubtedly extend this time limit another year, in view of the fact that the cut is overrunning the estimates.

"The fact that the cut is above the estimates will not help the lumbermen any, beyond the fact that they will get so much more timber at fixed prices, for the timber is sold on the bank scale. It looks now as if the Indian owners would get 30 per cent more for their timber than was originally expected.

"It would be a good thing if Duluth people could prevail on the secretary of the interior to have that timber north of Rena and contigious to the Great Northern road turned into lumber on the reservation when it is sold. There is about 250,000,000 feet of pine there that is to be sold, and the secretary of the interior, according to law, may provide that the lumber when sold shall be manufactured on the reservation. Thus 500 men would be furnished employment in the district for eight or ten years to come.

THE WEATHER

Summer again this morning. In the early hours there was a smart shower, amounting only to a tenth of an inch by the weather bureau's guage, but strong while it lasted. And this morning the wind was from the land, warm and soft, and the sun was shining most of the time. The weather man looks for unsettled conditions, with southwest winds, showers and possibly thunderstorms, and cooler weather tomorrow afternoon. Last night's lowest temperature was 46 degs., and yesterday's highest was 54 degs. Says Mr. Richardson of conditions:

"The storms central Wednesday morning over Lake Michigan and Western Canada have moved to the New England coast and Lake Superior, respectively, causing showers throughout the Northwest and from the Mississippi valley eastward to the Atlantic coast. Temperatures have risen in the Northwest and North Atlantic states and have fallen over the Ohio valley and southeastern lake region. Barometric pressures continue high over Gulf states and Oregon. The Lake Superior disturbance favors showery weather and strong southwesterly winds in this locality tonight and Friday."

Following were last night's lowest temperatures as recorded by the weather bureau:

Department of Agriculture, Weather Bureau, Duluth, May 3.—Local forecast for twenty-four hours ending at 7 p. m. Friday: Duluth, Superior and vicinity: Showers or thunderstorms tonight and possibly Friday. Slightly warmer tonight. Cooler Friday afternoon. Brisk to moderately high southwesterly winds.

DE WHITE-WASH MAN.

A Put-You-to-Sleep Lullaby.

BY ELLIS B. HARRIS.

De white-wash man is comin' wid his brush,
Gush, gush.
De muck rake man is goin' wid his slush,
Blush, blush.
An' all will be sublime,
Wid a coat ob kalsomine,
Fo' to cover up de crime,
O baby hush.

O baby I's been reading magazines,
Tush, tush.
Dey sho did give yo' mam' de badest dreams,
Mush, mush.
But de white-wash man he came,
An' he see dem in der game,
Den he put dem all to shame,
O baby hush.

De muck rake man, dey say, is stren-uus,
Push, push.
De way he am is really he-ne-us,
Brush, brush.
But he sho am goin' to fail,
Fo' de white-wash man, an' pail,
Dey will cover up de tale,
O baby hush.

De muck rake man dun paint my baby sho,
Slush, slush.
Yo' mamuy see 'im comin' in de do',
Tush, tush.
But she tell de white-wash man
Fo' to come ez fas' he can,
Jes' to spoil de muck rake plan,
O baby hush.

Yo' am yo' mammy's little Jimmie Crow,
Hush, hush.
I 'spects to see yo' soon as white as snow.
Tush, tush.
Fo' de white-wash man he write
Dat he come some darksome night,
An' he change yo' colo' white,
O baby hush.

His Plea of Justification.

But had you seen the little lady there,
Within the cozy corner half reclining,
Dimpling—her dimples are beyond compare—
Laughing at me, her pretty gray eyes shining—
Ah! had you been there, had you seen her then
You must, I think, have felt about the same.
Some things are past the strength of mortal men.
Was I to blame?

I took her hand. A ring I much admired.
I pressed it, and she was not cross nor pettish.
Her blush was all that could have been desired;
Her smile demure, and just a bit coquettish.
My heart beat fast, and closer yet I drew.
I thought I heard a sound, but no one came,
And so—well, you would, if it had been you.
Was I to blame?

I know that you have got a level head;
Your self-possession no one ever doubted;
I lost mine, I admit, but on the dead.
Perhaps I wouldn't, if she hadn't pouted.
But when I think of those sweet lips I fear
I cannot find a proper sense of shame.
Were I too prudent when such lips were near
I were to blame.

Keeping Tab on Senators.

Portland Oregonian: Will all this debate in the senate over the railway rate bill really change a vote? If any man now on the side of the people gets on the other side of the fence, will it not lend a color of suspicion that some influence more potent than oratory has been at work?

TWENTY YEARS AGO.

Taken From the Columns of The Herald of This Date, 1886.

The partnership existing between Jay W. Anderson and Lambert O. Wile, under the firm name of Anderson & Wile, has been dissolved by mutual consent, Mr. Wile retiring.

The following real estate transfers have been recorded:

W. G. Nichols to John E. Nichols, lot 37, East Fourth street, $1,900.

F. Clark to Jacob T. Brewer, lot 11, East Third street, $1,300.

The magnificent steamer, the United Empire, was discernible yesterday moving about fifteen miles off the harbor entrance, ploughing her way through the ice. In the afternoon it became evident that she had "laid to" and abandoned the field. Today she was estimated to be at a distance from Duluth of about twenty miles.

Five houses on Fourth street were visited by burglars last night. The houses of Mr. Johnson, the grocer; Mr. Wall of H. W. Pearson & Co.; Mr. Webster, the laundryman; S. L. Smith, and the Sisters of Charity were all entered, but Mr. Webster was the only one who suffered any loss, $12 being taken from a pocket of his trousers.

M. Fink returned Saturday from an extended Eastern trip, during which he visited Halifax, N. S., near which city he is interested in a gold mine. Mr. Fink brought back several fine specimens of gold quartz which he is exhibiting to his friends.

A. Miles left this morning for Chicago.

Superintendent John B. Chichester of the gas works returned last evening from a two weeks' vacation in Chicago.

Wiard's Cosmopolitan theater and museum opened to the public today.

The Minnesota Electric Time company has been incorporated at St. Paul. The company will construct and operate telegraph and telephone lines by which to furnish at different points correct standard time by means of electric clocks and dials throughout Minnesota, Wisconsin and Dakota. Among the incorporators are H. H. Bell, R. S. Munger and John Flynn of this city.

D. E. Roberts, county attorney of Douglas county, is expected to return home to Superior this week.

Capt. Holt left this morning for Detroit and Bay City for a few days.

LAUGHING LINES.

Chicago Tribune: Cervantes was revising the proof sheets of "Don Quixote."

"Because," he explained, "my publishers can't afford to hire a knight editor."

Then, remembering that he had to be his own horse editor as well, he corrected a typographical error in the name of Rozinante.

Cleveland Plain Dealer: "The policeman says you were acting like a crazy clown."

"Yes, your honor. I was giving an impersonation, sir."

"What were you impersonating?"

"I was impersonating an officer, sir."

Philadelphia Press: Miss Knox—Yes, he actually said your cheeks were like roses.

Miss Passay—(coyly delighted)—Oh, come, now, that's laying it on pretty thick.

Miss Knox—Yes, he remarked that about it, too.

Washington Star: "Think of the men of genius who lacked the necessities of life," exclaimed the studious young woman.

"Yes," answered Mr. Cumrox, "and in nearly every case it was because they didn't know how to advertise."

Cleveland Leader: "Why don't you marry?"

"Don't need a wife—I got oodles of money."

"But how can money take the place of a wife?"

"Well, it talks, doesn't it?"

Brooklyn Life: Jinks—How's your wife?

Binks—My wife is lost to sight, to memory dear.

Jinks—Why, my dear fellow, I never heard your wife was dead.

Binks—She isn't. I'm paying her $50 a week alimony.

Louisville Courier-Journal: "It's nice to be happily married," argued he.

"But it is no longer stylish," retorted she.

And that settled it.

Philadelphia Press: "Do not despair," began the moralist, "you know, as the old saying goes, 'opportunity knocks—'"

"Yes," interrupted the pessimist, "opportunity knocks; at least it has never boosted me."

Chicago Tribune: Police Magistrate—This is not the first time you have been before me, but you have given a different name from the one you gave me the other time.

Vagrant—Dat's all right, y'r honor. When de wind changes its direction it changes its name, doesn't it?

Lover's Lane.

It goes beneath a checkered arch
Of leaf and sunlight, oak and larch;
Athwart a mead of meadow sweet,
A field of lily bordered wheat;
Through groves of bridal birch it turns
And mossy hollows, deep in ferns;
Then up a hill and down a glen,
From Nowhere out and back again;
And many feet have worn it plain—
That errant way of Lovers' Lane.

There, unafraid, the wood-folk play;
There wanton briers dip and sway
To catch and keep whatever comes
And make much work for clumsy thumb
Of loosing tress and lacing shoe—
Such tasks as lovers love to do.
Of tales there told with eye or tongue
I need not tell—if ye were young—
Nor yet of castles reared in Spain
By architects of Lovers' Lane.

If Lovers' Lane ye wander through,
That roadway's rule is "two by two,"
Although the path is wondrous straight;
For here's a hedge, and there's a gate,
A brook, a stile, a quaking moss
The strong must help the weak to cross;
Then, deep in shade ere set of sun—
Its dells are never safe for one—
Still (must the sorry truth be known?)
In Lovers' Lane I walk alone!

—ARTHUR GUITERMAN in Scribner's.

A Confession.

I love to cuss
The octopus,
The plutocrats condemn;
But if I had
A chance, egad,
I would be one of them!

How Not to Write.

Sacramento Bee: Some newspapers have a practice of publishing from day to day, at the top of their editorial columns, a wise thought or a useful moral, for the benefit of their readers. The Troy, N. Y., Press is one of these, a recent number of that journal containing the following at its mast-head:

"Man's primitive nature-consciousness is characterized by two correlative sets of conceptions; conceptions occasioned by sensations, and synthetizing objects and persons indifferently as sentient powers, exerting and acted on by quantitatively undetermined influences; and conceptions occasioned by emotions, and mythicizing the more impressive of existing or traditional objects and persons, or their distinguishing characteristics, as also those of events, as supernal (not as yet supernaturally beings, exerting and acted on by similarly undetermined influences; and the intuition of universal interaction manifested in these correlative forms may be termed panzoism.—J. S. Stuart-Glennie."

This must be left to speak for itself. If any reader of the Bee understands it, he may flatter himself that he is one of a very small minority. Probably it would puzzle Stuart-Glennie himself to put the meaning of that tremendous sentence—if it has a meaning—into plain and simple English. But as an example of a good style of writing to avoid, the above is not without its uses.

The Unanswered Question.

Louisville Courier-Journal: The manufacturers of the United States in 1905, as we are informed by a government volume, exported iron and steel to the amount of $135,000,000 in value. Ten years before, the exports of these articles amounted to no more than $22,000,000, so there has been an increase of more than a hundred millions in a decade. This certainly gives a good view of the increase of our trade, but it also suggests an inquiry. If we can sell abroad $135,000,000 worth of iron and steel in competition with all the world, what is the need of a duty on these articles to make Americans pay more for them than foreigners are required to pay?

The Tariff's Faithful Friends.

Indianapolis News: There will be no tariff legislation this session. The most its friends will now have time to do will be to outline an elaborate program of future action expressly for stump use this fall.

MINNESOTA OPINIONS.

Cloquet Independent: The muck rake promises to be in existence in Minnesota politics again this year.

Windom Reporter: There is a very large element of Republicans who say to themselves that the Republicans elected Johnson, who has proven to be a good governor, with a clean record, with everything to the good, and that the men of our party who elected him should take another two years of him, while many of the guilty ones are still of the opinion that Johnson should be retained because they elected him.

Lake City Graphic-Sentinel: Will there be any receptions held for the returning congressmen and senators when congress adjourns? It should be a hot time in the old town for some of them. It is believed that they will steal quietly into their home towns and take a vacation waiting for the indignation of the people to die down before they make a stir.

Fergus Falls Journal: Senator Platt, who represents the United States Express company in the senate, announces that he will retire at the close of his present term in 1909. The country would feel even more relieved if he could be induced to retire immediately.

Anoka Free Press: It wouldn't be at all surprising to see Bob Dunn nominated for governor at the next Republican convention. Not that Bob is in any sense a candidate, but it may dawn on the convention that this will be the only way in which to reunite the disrupted Republican party in Minnesota.

Mankato Free Press: There is an endless chain of gubernatorial candidates.

Le Seuer News: The amount of love a candidate for office holds for the dear people is best tested after his election, by his official acts.

Faribault Journal: State development ought to have a place in every political platform. It should be the aim of our public men. It should be the text of the addresses of our political speakers. It should be the aspiration of every patriot.

Long Prairie Leader: From present indications, the people should prepare themselves to be loved more this campaign than usual.

Crookston Times: Some scientist with a real desire to be practical should discover a method of controlling earthquakes and crack a fissure across Panama. It would save a lot of time, some money and much discussion.

Red Lake Falls Courier (Dem.): It is impossible for the Republicans to arouse enthusiasm this year. The people are satisfied with the manner in which Governor Johnson is conducting the affairs of state. They are not willing to exchange a good man for an unknown quantity. They are not interested in the bickerings of office-seekers. The lethargy in political affairs this year is easily accounted for. The voters intend to give Governor Johnson another term.

Princeton Union: It would be better for Hon. J. F. Jacobson if the soreheads and traitors were not so prominently identified with his candidacy for the governorship.

Ada Index: The Republican state convention may yet summon its strongest man—Peter E. Hansen—to lead them to victory next fall. He is not a candidate, but he could not refuse.

Leaders in the Crisis.

Springfield Republican: There are undoubtedly 100 officers in the United States army who would have acted as promptly, energetically and efficiently as Gen. Funston did in the crisis of earthquake and conflagration, but that fact detracts in no measure from the credit due Funston. He was there, and it appears that he rose to the occasion. This is said with the more pleasure because the general has not always excited one's admiration. Nor, at this time, should it be forgotten who was mayor of San Francisco. There has been nothing in the dispatches thus far to indicate that Mayor Schmitz, "the labor union mayor," failed in the terrible emergency that confronted him. The police and fire department were under his control, and if they co-operated with the United States soldiers without serious friction, credit belongs to Schmitz as well as to Funston.

Love's Last Dream of You.

Is it the May, a-murmur
In blossoms bright with dew,
That haunts me like an echo
Of Love's last dream of you?
But I listen in life's Maytime,
And where the bleak years meet—
In vain, in vain I listen
For Love's unreturning feet!

No more the moon gleams golden—
Some silver lacks the sun;
No more the rills in music,
To kiss Love's footprints run;
And May is like December,
And not one note rings true;
And all that I remember
Is Love's last dream of you!

When tempests toss the branches,
And fleck the sea with foam,
The ships, star-steered, seek harbor,
The storm-beat birds fly home;
But far from land and love-word
A starless heaven I view,
Alone—alone with Memory
And Love's last dream of you!

—FRANK L. STANTON in Atlanta Constitution.

They'll Count in the Vote.

New York Press: Every contribution to the railroad debate makes more conspicuous the vacancies created by the election to the senate of Platt and Depew.

Horse Still in the Lead.

Cincinnati Enquirer: The automobile has not discouraged that useful animal, the horse. Official reports show that the equine is still paramount. In 1905 there were 17,057,702 horses in the United States, against 14,213,837 in 1890. The export price averaged $308.90 last year, against $174.60 in 1892. The horse is flesh, blood and intelligence, and people of natural and practical predilections can have an affection for him. He has the graces of instinct, and if he gets proper attention is a thing of beauty and satisfaction. The spread of the automobile is amazing, but it is still, to a great degree, a fad and a toy.

In the Clout!

New York World: John Sharp Williams missed the point in his tariff speech. If there were no tariff, how would the Republican committee collect a campaign fund from protected industries in order to make sure that the tariff would be revised only by its friends?

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE CURE.

At Least, It Cured Folks of Telling Their Troubles.

New York Sun: "I'm no Christian Scientist," said the patient looking man to the drug store man, "but I think Christian Science is doing a whole lot of good in the world."

"How," growled the drug store man. "What good is it doing? Spoiling honest men's business."

"But it's bringing a whole lot of peace and happiness into the world, too, Doc, take my word for it."

"Thought you said you weren't a Christian Scientist? How is it bringing peace and happiness into the world?"

"By shutting off the poor health bore. Why, the peace that I've had in my family since my folks took up Christian Science would put the peace conference out of commission.

"Fact," said the patient looking individual, "I've been married thirty-three years, and I don't believe there has been a week during all that time, until my wife went into Science, that she didn't tell me every day about her headache or her backache or her nerves or her dyspepsia or her cough. Then there was my mother-in-law; she had sciatica, and my Aunt Jane had consumption. My partner had indigestion, and he did love to talk about it. Old man Jenkins, my next door neighbor, had rheumatism, and I never could get him around to talking about fixing up the line fence or repairing the paving, because he was that absorbed in telling me about his rheumatism. Our hired girl was subject to neuralgia, our butcher had liver complaint, and the school teacher that boards with us, suffered with insomnia; and I tell you the plain truth, Doc, that between the lot of them I was plumb ashamed to mention my little attack of bronchitis that kept me abed for most a month this fall.

"If one of 'em wasn't at it the other one was, and our house was that filled up with liniment and cough medicine and mustard plasters and pill boxes that there wasn't room for anything else."

"Yes," said the drug store man mournfully; "yes, you folks used to be right good customers."

"Good customers," yelled the patient looking individual. "Good customers! Well, I should smile. Every dollar I made went for doctor bills and medicine. If there was anything left over, we ate. If there wasn't, we sat around the table and talked about our ailments. Oh, it was great sport, all right. If we didn't discuss ma's headache we talked about Alviry's neuralgia, or Aunt Jane's cough, or the teacher's insomnia, and if those subjects failed there was always grandma's sciatica to fall back on.

"Sometimes, when I got a little bit tired hearing all about the home symptoms I went over to call on Neighbor Jenkins, and he regaled me by telling me his, and his wife, Susan, a mighty nice woman, would tell me all about her nervous trouble, and what a number of diseases her father had, and what a lingering death he had died.

"Sometimes I didn't sleep very well nights, and then when I went down to the office in the morning there was my partner lying in wait for me to tell me all about how his dinner had disagreed with him the night before."

"Well," said the drug store man, "didn't you sympathize with them?"

"Sympathize with 'em? I sympathized with 'em until I was nothing but skin and bone."

"Well, what happened to stop it?" asked the drug store man.

"A Christian Science lecturer struck our neighborhood. A lot of the folks went to hear him and he put it up to them that it was a rank sin to scatter disease thoughts through the world by talking about it. He said that every time they mentioned a symptom or a sickness it not only gave it a fresh hold over them, but it gave old Mr. Disease a brand new lease of life so's he could rush out and tackle some other unfortunate. He allowed that if we'd all stop talking and thinking about diseases for a while diseases would vanish from the world and we'd all be well and happy.

"Well, sir, you'd just ought to see the change that's come over our neighborhood. Every time grandma begins to discuss sciatica she chokes up like she'd swallowed her front teeth and goes to talking about the weather. Ma, she's just about forgot that she ever did have headaches, and Alviry has stopped telling about her neuralgia and has got a new beau.""

"Huh," said the drug store man scornfully. "Did this Christian Science racket cure 'em?"

"I don't know whether it did or not," said the patient looking individual, helping himself to a cigar, "but it did me."

VISCOUNTESS' ROMANCE.

Kansas City Journal: When Viscount Aoki, the new Japanese ambassador, makes his bow at the White House, he will appeal strongly to the American lover of romance. The viscountess belongs to an aristocratic German family and has been his wife for more than thirty years. She suffered social ostracism in her own country for being married to an Oriental. Her father was a minor court official at Berlin when the Viscount Aoki was an under secretary of the Japanese legation. The marriage was the result of love, but the iron chancellor refused to let her be received at court and the viscount was recalled to Tokio. He is now close to the emperor and one of the most influential statesmen in the kingdom. In the American capital the viscountess need have no anxiety about the manner of her reception. But it will be interesting to note the attitude of the German embassy staff.

"SETTLES DOWN."

Kansas City Journal: Since his marriage the German crown prince has turned over a new leaf and is settling down strenuously. He is full of plans for developing his princely estate at Oels and has promised to double the salaries of his employes if they produce the best wheat and rye in Silesia. He talks of cultivating beets and manufacturing sugar on his own land and has started building model cottages for his tenants. He says himself he "is neevr so happy as when he has more work than he can get through," and that without work he "begins to rust." He has no taste whatever for military life, but takes an immense interest in social questions. He is devoted to the crown princess, who exercises the greatest influence not only on him but on all the court.

HIS OWN BILL.

Kansas City Journal: After much persuasion Sir John Astley allowed himself to be put forward, some years ago, as a Conservative candidate for parliament from Lincolnshire. He confessed he knew little about politics, but entered into the campaign as rare sport. One day he addressed a meeting of electors at a village in the Isle of Axholme, and, when he had finished, boldly challenged his hearers to fire questions at him. Presently there came the query: "What do you think of Sir Wilfred Lawson's liquor bill?" For a moment Sir John was nonplussed, but only for a moment. Pulling himself together he replied, "I cannot answer for Sir Wilfred Lawson's liquor bill, but I do know that last year my own was a deuced sight too big!"

UNKNOWN MAN'S BODY

Found in Brush Near Missabe Tracks—Probable Suicide.

Had Burned All Papers—Carbolic Acid Bottle Found.

An unknown, one-armed man was found dead this morning in the brush near the Missabe tracks, back of West Duluth, and it looks like a clear case of suicide by the carbolic acid route. It is believed that the man has been dead four or five days.

The body was found by Joseph Himple, a herder of cows. Himple saw the man lying there last Monday, but supposed that he was drunk, and was merely sleeping off the stupor, so did not disturb him. This morning, while Himple was passing there with his cows, he saw the man lying in the same position, and discovering that he was dead, notified a section crew near there, and some members of the crew notified Lieut. Briggs of the West Duluth police. Lieut. Briggs and Undertaker M. J. Filiatrault went to the place where the man was found, this morning, and returned with the body about noon. The coroner has been notified, and will probably investigate the matter today.

The body was found at a point about 300 feet south of the Missabe tracks, and about 600 feet west of the bridge over which this road crosses the Bay View Heights incline railway. It was in the brush, and near it was an empty whisky bottle, which, however, does not smell of liquor, and a bottle of carbolic acid, about half empty. This bottle of carbolic acid is a 4-ounce bottle, and bears the label of the Metropolitan drug store, at 616 West Superior street. Close to the body was found the remains of a small fire, and in it are the cinders of papers, evidently letters which the man burned before he took the fatal step. No papers or letters were found on the body by which he might be identified, he evidently wishing that his identity should not be discovered.

The man was one-armed, his left arm being off at the shoulder. He was about 40 years of age, and was bald headed, but had followed the fashion of some bald headed men in allowing the hair on one side of the bald spot to grow long in order to cover the baldness after a manner. His face was freckled, his features clean cut, and he wore a sandy mustache, neatly trimmed close to the upper lip. He was dressed in good clothes and shoes and a black shirt. The material of his suit was of the invisible check variety. He also wore a black derby, and was altogether of a rather well dressed and neat appearance. He weighed about 135 pounds, and was about 5 feet 7 inches in height.

In his pocket he had a lead pencil, bearing the advertisement of the Strothman Iron works of Superior, Wis. Nothing is known of the man. The police are endeavoring to find out who he is, but say that no missing men have been reported lately, and they have no clue.

BURNED AT OVENS.

Roy Pearce Painfully Burned While Cleaning Burners.

Roy Pearce, a laborer at the coke ovens, was painfully burned last night, about 10:30, while cleaning out the burners. His mustache, eye-brows, eye-lashes and most of his hair were burned off, and his face was somewhat marred also. There are several scars, fortunately none of them very deep, so that with treatment he will not show many marks. It seems that while he was cleaning the burners, a man passed with a lantern. The flame from the lantern ignited the gas from the burners, there was a puff and the lantern exploded. The other man was not hurt.

Night before last Rudolph Anderson, whose mother lives at Twenty-fourth avenue west, had his right leg broken, just above the ankle joint, by being run over by a meat wagon. He is 12 years of age. He was playing with a number of other boys of his own age in front of the house of his brother-in-law, Victor Munson, on Fifty-sixth avenue, with whom he lives, when he was run over by the wagon. His injuries consist only of this break and a few bruises.

It is Dangerous to Neglect a Cold.

How often do we hear it remarked: "It's only a cold," and a few days later learn that the man is on his back with pneumonia. This is of such common occurrence that a cold, however slight, should not be disregarded. Chamberlain's Cough Remedy counteracts any tendency of a cold to result in pneumonia, and has gained its great popularity and extensive sale by its prompt cures of this most common ailment. It always cures and is pleasant to take. For sale by all leading druggists.

ESTRANGEMENT GROWS GREATER

War Between Colombia and Venezuela is Freely Talked.

Washington, May 3.—Colombia and Venezuela are more estranged than ever before as a result of refusal of Vice President Gomez of Venezuela to receive Dr. Herrera, the minister plenipotentiary who went to Caracas three weeks ago to perfect a treaty with Venezuela for the settlement of navigation and frontier questions.

War is being freely talked in South American diplomatic circles. The insult to Colombia is regarded by some of the diplomats here, as one she cannot well overlook, especially since this is the second time the Castro government has refused to receive a representative of Colombia.

Clan Stewart Meets.

Clan Stewart held its regular meeting last evening and initiated a new member. It was announced that the royal certetary, Peter Kerr, would visit Duluth on May 20, and a committee was appointed to secure a class of new members to be then initiated, also to arrange for a reception and entertainment in honor of Mr. Kerr. The clans throughout the country were contributing to a fund for the benefit of clansmen in San Francisco, and Clan Stewart voted $25 from its funds for this purpose.

A Plea for the Kindergartens.

To the Editor of the Herald:

It is very pathetic to me to note the low salaries paid to the kindergartners in our public schools.

Where is the trouble? They hold an equal if not the most responsible position in any of our departments of education.

Does our board of education consider the kindergarten mere child play, which requires but little ability or preparation to teach, where the children are simply kept amused so as not to be in the way at home, or have the results of our kindergartens not been satisfactory? Surely that cannot be said of some of our worthy workers.

There are many things, however, that might make our kindergartens a failure. Overcrowded rooms, lack of supplies, unsuitable environments, and of course, greatest of all, an unqualified kindergartner.

In kindergarten, as in all good work, there is the false and the true. There are those who have the outward appearance but not the inner thought, who simply entertain and play with the children with no underlying principle to govern that play and the results are listless, careless, irresponsible children who have no power to get knowledge for themselves or to be a help to anyone around them. But the true kindergartner is very different. She leads the child to know himself, to be master of himself. She gives him a taste of the best things of life. She guides his natural instincts in the right direction and trains all his senses so he can see quickly, think quickly and act quickly. She teaches him to be helpful not only to himself, but also his neighbor. There he gets his first insight concerning his place and mission in the world. He sees not only his relations to his immediate family but to the Father in Heaven. So the result will be children who are thoughtful, careful, quick and ready to help, and most all lawful, not lawless.

One of our best kindergartners has said a real kindergartner must be a physician, an artist, a teacher, a poet, a philosopher, and a priest.

I wish I might plead with our board of education in the name of humanity, to investigate and consider this great work of the kindergarten. No one is capable of judging any good thing by outside comment or by observing a few of the followers. To get the real truth you must go to the author, the instigator, and in Froebel only will you get the whole worth and truth of the kindergarten. A MOTHER.

Piles Cured Quickly at Home

Why Suffer Agony Any Longer When You Can Get a Quick, Sure Cure for Your Piles by Simply Sending Your Name and Address?

Trial Package is Sent Absolutely Free, in Plain Wrappers to Everyone Who Writes.

Surgeons themselves consider a permanent cure of piles by a surgical operation as very doubtful, and resort to it only when the patient has become desperate from long continued pain and agony. But the operation itself is every bit as excruciating and nerve-racking as the disease. Besides, it is humiliating and expensive, and rarely a success.

The wonderful Pyramid Pile Cure makes an operation unnecessary. You cure yourself with perfect ease, in your own home, and for little expense.

Pyramid Pile Cure gives you instant relief. It immediately heals all sores and ulcers, reduces congestion and inflammation, and takes away all pain, itching and irritation. Just a little of the treatment is usually sufficient to give a permanent cure.

Pyramid Pile Cure is prepared in the form of suppositories so that they can be applied directly to the parts without inconvenience, or interrupting your work in any way.

We are sending a trial treatment free of charge, to every one who sends name and address. We do this to prove what we say about this wonderful remedy is true.

After you have tried the sample treatment, and you are satisfied, you can get a full regular-sized treatment of Pyramid Pile Cure at your druggist's for 50 cents. If he hasn't it, send us the money and we will send you the treatment at once, by mail, in plain sealed package.

Send your name and address at once for a trial of the marvelous quick, sure cure. Address Pyramid Drug Co., 4839 Pyramid Building, Marshall, Mich.

HAIR VS. WIG.

Boston Herald: Several years ago the publishers of the well known novel, "Cape Cod Folks," were sued for libel by some of the persons who were used as characters in the book and were called by their real names in the first edition. Among the plaintiffs was "Grandpa Fisher," one of the leading characters, who was said to have dyed his hair on Sunday mornings. The case was tried in Plymouth county, and the counsel for the plaintiffs was the late James Brown of Taunton, who had yellow hair of a peculiar shade, while the counsel for the defendants was the late Charles G. Davis of Plymouth, who wore a wig.

Mr. Brown, in his opening address to the jury, contended that his client, "Grandpa Fisher," was held up to ridicule by the statement that he dyed his hair, and that they should take that fact into account in awarding damages.

Mr. Davis, in addressing the jury, made light of that contention, and continued as follows: "But, gentlemen, it isn't anything against a man that he dyes his hair. It oftentimes improves his personal appearance. Take my brother Brown, for instance. He might dye his hair to good advantage."

This caused quite a laugh, but the court room was convulsed when Mr. Brown, in making the closing argument, retorted as follows: "Gentlemen, I know my hair is a mighty mean color, but there is this difference between my hair and Brother Davis': Mine grew where you see it, and his didn't."

DID THE WATCHING.

Boston Herald: Dick Smith, a quick-witted and somewhat eccentric farmer, lived in Brentwood, N. H., and was known by every one in that vicinity for his quaint and original expressions, and also for his aversion to the church, which he was never known to attend, although he did not object to his wife and children doing so. The following story concerning him was related by Deacon Kimball of the Baptist church in that quiet old farming town.

A new minister had just been settled over the parish, and, being very zealous in his work, had started out to make some pastoral calls and get better acquainted.

Driving up to Mr. Smith's house, he found the farmer standing in his yard, and said to him, by way of introduction, that he was the new minister, and would like his permission to have prayers with the family, and would be glad to have him join them.

The old farmer replied, with a twinkle in his eye: "Yew know, elder, the Bible says we must 'watch and pray.' Now I'll tell ye what we'll do. Yew go in the house and pray, and I'll stay out here and watch."

MOTHER AND SONS IN JAIL.

Goods Believed Stolen From Railroad Car Found in House.

Beaumont, Tex., May 3.—Mrs. Jack Nolan is confined in the county jail and her three sons, Jack Nolan, Jr., Bob Nolan and a younger son, are in the city jail. The sons are charged with theft and the mother is charged with receiving stolen goods. The event that led up to the arrests was the robbery of a railroad car in the Southern Pacific yards about eight months ago.

Police Officers Conant went to the house of Mrs. Nolan, having what he considered evidence that the missing goods were concealed there. In the effort to make a search of the house he was attacked by Mrs. Nolan, her daughter and three sons. Canant succeeded in arresting the three sons on charges of assault after a hard struggle, in which he was badly used up. The next day a large quantity of cut glass and silver believed to be stolen from the road was found.

There was also a number of fine handdrawn doilies. A number of the things first found were placed in the hall by the officers while they continued their search of the house. In other parts of the house they located different stuff. Upon returning to the hall they were amazed to find two boxes of lamp burners gone. They could find no trace of the goods. Complaints were filed against the three boys, the oldest of whom is about 21, and the youngest about 14. Mrs. Nolan was placed under arrest charged with concealing stolen goods. Deputy Constable Eldridge happened to step in the back yard and under a little bridge over a ditch he saw two bundles of lamp burners which had been stolen from the hall.

MAN ESTRANGED

By Intercepted Letters Would Remarry His Wronged Wife.

Indianapolis, Ind., May 3.—Letters intercepted by relatives caused the separation and divorce of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Cox of Tipton twelve years ago. Now that the husband has discovered the deception he is anxious to find his former wife and remarry her. He called at police headquarters and asked for assistance in finding her, as he believed her to be in Indianapolis.

"It wasn't her fault, after all," he said. "I've looked for her many times. The last time I heard of her she was in Indianapolis last summer. The story came to me indirectly and was to the effect that she had married again. Then I heard again not long ago that she is still single, so I came to make another effort to find her."

In explaining to the officers Cox said that he had fallen heir to a large estate in the northern part of the state. At the time of his marriage some of his relatives opposed the wedding, but he disregarded their wishes. Very soon afterward he was led to believe that Mrs. Cox was unfaithful to him. He left her and within a year obtained a divorce from her. He said that he has not seen her since the day the decree of divorce was granted.

Recently a relative confessed to him, so he says, that he had intercepted letters passing between them. He said he had learned also other things that made him certain that all their troubles had been due to the activity of the relatives who had opposed their marriage. He believes if he could find the woman who was his wife he could explain everything to her and that she would consent to marry him again.

Ashland Connection.

The Duluth, South Shore & Atlantic road now has connections with Ashland, Wis., for passengers arriving at or departing from Duluth. The South Shore passenger trains, one a day each way, connect with the Omaha Twilight annex, at Bibon. A person may leave here over the South Shore at 6:20 p. m., arrive at Bibon at 9:28 p. m., board the Twilight annex a minute later, and arrive at Ashland at 10:15 p. m. On the return trip he may leave Ashland at 3:05 p. m., arriving at Duluth at 6:45 p. m.

MAN WHO DESERTED

His Blind Wife and Babies Returns Old and Poor.

Whitestown, Ind., May 3.—Almost fifty years ago John Myers married the daughter of Richard Mills, near Northfield, in this county. Five years later Mr. Myers, then the father of two boys and one daughter, mysteriously disappeared, and no tidings of his whereabouts were ever received. His wife lost her sight nearly a year before his disappearance.

Myers recently returned to Zionsville, this county, finally going to his brother in White county. This brother communicated with the children, who returned answer that they would welcome their father, and he was received at the home of his son, near Slabtown. All of the children are living, but the mother is long since dead.

Myers is now a decrepit old man of 73 years, and he has been living in the Soldiers' Home at Marion. It is supposed that his brother in White county was cognizant of his whereabouts at least part of the time during his forty-five years' absence. His daughter, Mrs. Sarah Pyke, lives in Indianapolis.

ALL COALS YIELD COKE

St. Louis, May 3.—Of all the industries exhibited at the World's fair in 1904 the least attractive to the non-scientific eye and one of the most beneficial was the coal testing plant established in the mining gulch, on the western border, by the the geological survey of the United States. Dr. Joseph A. Holmes, who was in charge of the mines and metallurgy building during the World's fair period, is largely responsible for having the government locate this plant on the World's fair grounds, where it is still in operation, though the ivory city has been razed.

Here coal from eighteen states has been tested, and samples from 170 different mines are being experimented with. That the work accomplished has given satisfaction is evidenced by the hundreds of letters received daily from engineers, miners and big corporations using large quantities of fuel, all expressing approval of the work already done, and praying for a continuance of the experiments. Under the grant allotting Forest park for World's fair purposes, it will be necessary to remove the plant to some other location this summer. The question of where is still to be determined. Chicago business men, appreciating the value of the tests already made, want it transferred to that city. Indianapolis has made a bid for it, as has also Cleveland and half a dozen other cities. It is doubtful, however, if its removal from the center of the great coal fields will be permitted, and it is generally believed that it will simply be transferred to a point a mile or two farther west of its present location. If transferred to a point away from the coal fields, the scientists who have already accomplished so much will be greatly hampered.

Two things at least of supreme importance have thus far been accomplished. One is the utilizing of all waste from mines by manufacturing into briquettes the slack piled mountain high at the mouth of every coal pit in the country, at a minimum cost. The briquettes manufactured are exceptionally good. They have been exposed to the rain and snow of two winters and are today as firm and solid as when first taken from the moulds. They are of convenient size, easy to handle and the cost of their production is infinitesimal.

The second important discovery is that, practically speaking, there is no such thing as a nonoking coal. Heretofore it has been contended that Pennsylvania and West Virginia alone furnished coal which could be transformed into coke. The steel trust and iron founders generally were greatly exercised over the probable exhaustion of these Eastern coal fields, which meant that a substitute would have to be devised for coke, greatly increasing the cost of operating iron mills. Experiments carried on here, however, have been productive of great results, and it is found that the judicious mixing of one coal with another makes it possible to turn out an excellent quality of coke. There are 110 piles of coke at the works, each made from coal which heretofore has been supposed to be nonoking. Preparations are now making to use this coke in a cupola and it is firmly believed that it will prove the equal of the best product of Pennsylvania—every test thus far made justifying this belief.

Speaking of the work of the geological survey in making the coal tests, Dr Holmes said:

"The tests made have been most satisfactory, very gratifying. I am pleased to note that our work here is receiving the indorsement and approval of the best known scientists and engineers in the country, who by every mail are urging us to continue our work and extend it to embrace building stone as well as coal and cement. The work done here is of public benefit—not in the interest of any corporation, mine owner or railway company, but of the people, all the people.

"While not a prophet or the son of a prophet, I am convinced that the tests we have made here will eventually cause all the electric light and power plants to remove from the cities and establish their plants at the coal mines, where fuel will be constantly accessible, no freight bills to pay, no labor required to handle the coal except to shovel it into the furnace, one handling as against three. Then, too, they will be able to utilize all the waste at the mines at a minimum of cost, and transmit the electric current to the cities by wire. This would prove of great benefit to the cities, aside from the economy of operation and lesser cost of power and light, as it would do away with the clouds of smoke which render city life so unpleasant as well as unhealthy. How soon this change will be made, of course I cannot say, but ere many years, I believe.

"In anticipation of the miners' strike, we have laid in enough coal to run us about six weeks. Our bins are all full and you see it piled up alongside the railway track. Should the strike continue more than six weeks, we will be unable to procure any lump coal and will turn our attention to working up the slack into briquettes and coking all the surplus we have, of which there is considerable on hand for that purpose. In the manufacture of briquettes, ordinarily we use about 4 per cent of pitch to hold the slack. We are experimenting with other substances, but as yet the results obtained have not been entirely satisfactory. However, we will continue our experiments and hope ultimately to find what we want.

"Our plant here consists of a washery, coke ovens, briquette manufacturing house, gas producer, gas generator, foundry and half a dozen coal bins capable of holding 1,000 tons. Every piece of coal used, every drop of water, is weighed and recorded, so that we can tell absolutely the amount of heat in a given quantity of coal of any kind, how many pounds of steam is obtained from so much water—nothing is left to chance."

Dr. Holmes, the fuel testing expert who is in charge of the entire plant, has a corps of able assistants, scientists and specialists in their chosen line of work. They are: C. T. Malcolmson, who has had practical charge the past year, supervisor of briquette making; J. S. Shafer, Chicago, in charge of the washery, with John D. Wick as his assistant; Prof. L. P. Brackenridge, mechanical engineer, University of Illinois, supervisor of the work of the boilers, assisted by W. T. Ray. Robert E. Fernold, chief mechanical engineer Washington University, has supervision over the gas producer, assisted by Capt. John A. Laird, and the coking ovens are in charge of A. W. Belding, as Eastern expert.

Last year congress appropriated $200,000 to carry on the work. This year an appropriation of $260,000 is asked—$50,000 of this to be used in transferring the plant. Should congress make the appropriation asked, it is proposed to extend the tests to building stone as well as coal and cement. With the railroad facilities, this will place the plant close to the principal quarries of the country.

The tests thus far made show that many coals of little value as fuel, owing to the quantity of sulphur contained therein, can be converted into gas at a nominal cost, thus reducing the fuel bill of manufacturers 50 per cent.

The following shows some of the results obtained by the present investigation:

More than 1,600 chemical analyses have been made, involving more than 7,000 chemical determinations.

In the gas producer and gas engine 85 tests have been made, each extending over two or three days, of coals, lignites and peats, from eighteen states.

In the steam boilers 253 tests have been made, each of nine to eleven hours' duration, of 150 coals from eighteen states.

In the coke ovens 110 tests, each of forty-eight to seventy-two hours' duration, of ninety-five coals from sixteen states. Of these coals a large portion have heretofore been considered nonoking coals.

In the washery plant it has been shown how the quality of forty-three coals from thirteen states and several samples of coke breeze could be greatly improved by washing, at a nominal cost of from 3 to 10 cents per ton.

In the briquetting plant a number of new possible binding materials for coal briquettes have been investigated, and a few of these have proved sufficiently satisfactory to warrant their more extended use, at a cost considerably less than the pitch. A number of lignites, representing both the extreme Northwest and the Southwest, have been briquetted under high pressure without the use of binding materials, and it has been shown that the cost of briquetting such materials should not exceed 50 cents per ton. Furthermore, it has been shown that in the use of certain briquetted coals for railway and domestic uses the increase in the efficiency of the coals used in the briquetted form is more than sufficient to cover the cost of briquetting operations.

The power-gas investigations have shown the suitability of the different American bituminous coals, lignites and peats for power purposes in the gas producer and the gas enghne. While there remain difficulties in the way of the general introduction of this new form of power, yet the results of these investigations have already contributed in an important degree toward the overcoming of these difficulties, and are serving as a basis of plans for new power developments in many parts of the country.

The advance made in simplifying and handling the gas-producer equipment at the plant here has so increased its efficiency that the average bituminous coals recently tested have yielded in it 2.6 times the amount of power they have given under steam boilers of similar capacity (250 horse-power), and in several cases this difference in favor of the gas-power has been considerably greater.

The report furnished by the experimenters concludes as follows: "A not unimportant result of this work is educational, through the awakening of the coal producers of the country to a more careful study of their coals and of possible methods of improvement in quality by washing, etc.; and, secondly, the recognition by manufacturers and other coal consumers of the need of using their fuels more efficiently and of purchasing them on a basis which indicates their true heating value, rather than on some general and indefinite trade name or classification."

CONCESSION FOR BEMIDJI

Regarding Sewage Made by the State Board of Health.

St. Paul, May 3.—In a letter to the council of Bemidji, the state board of health declares that its position in regard to the contamination of streams and bodies of water in Minnesota can only be construed in one way, and that is that the board is against such contamination under any conditions. While the city is given the right to dispose of its sewage in a stream running between Lakes Irvine and Bemidji, the board specifically states that this shall not be construed to mean that the board will countenance the pollution of lakes and streams, and the board reserves the right to compel the city of Bemidji to install filter beds for the purification of the sewage at any time.

The question is of vital importance to Minnesota, as health boards in other states have allowed streams and lakes used as water supplies to be contaminated by the promiscuous disposal of sewage. In the permission granted to Bemidji, it is specifically provided that the city must install a septic tank in connection with its system, which will partially purify the sewage before it is emptied into Irvine or Bemidji lakes. The tank must be so constructed that in time filter beds can be installed so as to further purify the sewage. It is estimated that the sewage will be 50 per cent pure before it reaches the stream between the two lakes.

This decision comes as a great boon to Bemidji which has been wanting a sewer system for the last three years, and several serious epidemics of typhoid resulted from the lack of an adequate system of sewage disposal. The declaration was made before the recent meeting of the board of health that, unless the city was allowed to build a system at once, a serious epidemic would break out which would result fatally to a number of residents.

No systems will be permitted by the board in the future which do not have septic tanks to partially purify the sewage. The board intends to protect the lakes and streams when it costs the state practically nothing to do so. Other states are now spending millions to purify their water supply after having allowed it to be contaminated by unrestricted sewage disposal.

FROM GLOBE DISTRICT.

R. H. Rose Visitor in Duluth---His District Rapidly Developing.

R. H. Rose, a mining engineer of Globe, Ariz., is in the city. Mr. Rose like all Arizona people is very confident of the great future of his state, and is particularly satisfied with the outlook of the Globe district. The copper there is found in veins and not in deposits as in the Bisbee district and can be followed in most cases from the very grass roots downward. The mining development there is just beginning, and new and large interests are coming in.

As is quite well known to Duluth people, H. B. Hovland and H. A. Smith have taken a large number of claims there and Mr. Rose says they have some of the finest ground in Globe, claims they were very fortunate in securing. Their ground almost surrounds the Old Dominion and Arizona Commercial properties and ought to have fine values in copper, he says.

Globe has a fine advantage in having silicious ores, says Mr. Rose. These are in great demand for use in making the proper flux in the furnaces and ores of this quality are shipped from Globe down to Cananea in Mexico to the Greene Consolidated, to Bisbee and to other places. These silicious ores will always be in great demand and Globe will profit greatly by having them to supply.

Arizona is having rapid railroad development also and seems to be on the eve of a great awakening in this respect, the railroads appreciating now as never before the possibilities that lie there.

BONDS ARE DEFEATED.

Chisholm, Minn., May 3.—Once again the proposition to bond School District No. 40, including this village, has met with defeat. The election, held in the village hall, resulted in a majority of seven against the plan, out of a total of 168 votes cast. The reasons given by the leaders of the opposition for the defeat of the bond question are that the present members of the board of education, D. Mitchell, C. R. Wood and F. Marion are all appointees, and they desire to wait until after the next regular election in July, so that members chosen directly by the people may handle the money.

Charged with annoying pretty Lucy St. Lawrence, 16 years old, so that the girl was compelled to resign her position in the postoffice here, Con Sullivan, aged 34, was arrested today on a complaint sworn out by the girl's mother, Mrs. Dominice St. Lawrence. The case will come up before Judge Freeman in municipal court next Monday. Sullivan is out on $100 bail.

Miss Bertha Whiting has been appointed clerk of the newly established municipal court by Judge Freeman. Miss Whiting has been employed as stenographer in the law office of Village Attorney C. R. Woods. She is popular here and the appointment meets with general approval.

WISCONSIN COMMISSION

Visits the State Capitol at St. Paul to Get Pointers.

St. Paul, May 3.—O. H. Ingram of Eau Claire, F. W. Johnson of Milwaukee and T. Van Cleve of Marinette, members of the Wisconsin capitol commission, made an official visit to St. Paul yesterday for the purpose of looking over the new capitol. Chairman Seabury took the commissioners over the building. Each commissioner spoke in high terms of the building.

The commissioners of Wisconsin, in the erection of their state capitol, are confronted with a different proposition from what the Minnesota commissioners faced. The site of the present state house, which was partially demolished by fire is to be used. One wing will be built at a time, and the departments will shift from one part of the building to another until the last portion is built. The commissioners intend to build above and about the present state house without disturbing the offices to any great extent and then the portions no longer needed will be torn down.

POLICE WERE BUSY.

April Broke All Records of Department for Number of Arrests.

The largest number of arrests reported in any one month in the history of the Duluth police department was made during April, according to the monthly report, completed yesterday afternoon.

The total number was 366, of which 198 were for drunkenness.

There were twenty gambling cases, and seventen cases of grand and petty larceny. Vagrants and disorderlies constituted a large percentage of the remaining cases.

FIRST CROP REPORT

Issued by the Northern Pacific for the Present Season.

St. Paul, May 3.—Following is a summary of the first crop report issued by the Northern Pacific:

St. Paul and Duluth division: Seeding of grain is about 75 per cent completed; season being one week later than last year. In some localities seeding is finished and farmers are plowing for corn and potatoes. Light rains on the 28th put ground in excellent condition. Acreage of all crops will be about the same as last year.

The report on all the other divisions over the Northern Pacific shows that crop conditions are very good, except perhaps on the Minnesota division west of Hawley, where rains have retarded seeding. A large decrease in wheat acreage with increase in acreage of later sown crops is noted.

BRIEF TELEGRAMS.

Edward K. Wallace, the Yale student who suffered a fractured skull from a fall from his motorcycle last Sunday, died Wednesday night at Fordham hospital, N. Y. He did noa recover consciousness.

Gen. Duvall, commanding the department of the gulf, telegraphs the war department that he has ordered the recall of the cavalry detachment which started with Father Thomas Sherman from Fort Oglethorpe to Atlanta.

Charles S. Shank, president of the Windber local, United Mine Workers of America, was arrested late Wednesday night on a charge of arson, by Sheriff J. C. Begley of Somerset county. Shank, it is alleged, set fire to a double tenement house owned by the Berwind-White company, which was entirely destroyed.

Minnesota, Dakota & Pacific Railway company Wednesday filed with the secretary of state, North Dakota, a mortgage for $50,000,000, which runs to the Central Trust company of New York, and bears interest at 4 per cent.

Huntington and Mansfield, Ark., were visited by a violent wind and rain storm Tuesday night. Telegraph and telephone wires were blown down and the streets flooded to a depth of two feet. Houses were unroofed and a number of buildings demolished.

BREAKING OF FLY WHEEL

Puts Mansfield in Darkness and Stops Running of Street Cars.

Mansfield, O., May 3.—The breaking of a twenty-ton fly wheel followed by the bursting of the main steam heater in the power house of the Mansfield Railway & Light company yesterday afternoon, caused damage to the plant aggregating many thousands of dollars and put the city in darkness last night as well as suspending street car traffic both here and on the interurban lines going out of this city. Three engines were wrecked and huge pieces of machinery were hurled through the roof of the building. Three employes were hurt, none seriously.

FOUR HENS

And Rooster Lay Seven Eggs in Twenty-Four Hours.

Le Sueur, Minn., May 3.—George J. Diener of Le Sueur and his father-in-law, John Oliver, who lives with him, are both telling, with every appearance of honesty and sincerity, the biggest hen story ever heard in these parts. George says:

"Night before last, way after dark, I took four brown Leghorn hens and a rooster and put them by themselves in a new coop I had just built for them, wishing to obtain pure-blood descendants of this excellent strain.

"The next day I went out to the coop in the afternoon to gather the eggs I hoped they might have laid, and to my astonishment and the astonishment of Father Oliver, there we found seven eggs that we know, and which I swear were laid by those four hens in that coop that day—seven eggs laid by four hens in one day, is what I asseverate on my sacred honor to have been the product. There is no humbug about this, nor any juggling with the figures, and no possibility of a mistake. The hens are not for sale. I would not sell them for $5 apiece. We do not believe that the rooster laid an egg, but even if he did, there are two of those hens that are wonders."

Malta-Vita

"The Perfect Food"

Little children like Malta-Vita but that isn't the best reason for letting them have it. Malta-Vita provides them with all the nourishment their young bodies need, and in such a form that they digest it easily. This perfect malted whole-wheat food is the ideal food for children. It makes them healthy and robust.

There is nothing else so delicious, so satisfying as a bowlful of Malta-Vita with milk or cream. It's good for the children whenever they are hungry. Always ready to eat. No cooking. No inconvenience. All grocers. Now 10 cents.

Sciatica Cured After Twenty Years of Torture.

For more than twenty years Mr. J. E. Massey of 3322 Clinton street, Minneapolis, Minn., was tortured by sciatica. The pain and suffering which he endured during this time is beyond comprehension. Nothing gave him any permanent relief until he used Chamberlain's Pain Balm. One application of that liniment relieved the pain and made sleep and rest possible, and less than one bottle has effected a permanent cure. If troubled with sciatica or rheumatism, why not try a 25-cent bottle of Pain Balm, and see for yourself how quickly it relieves the pain. For sale by all the leading druggists.

HER SUITOR IS GONE, AND SO IS HER $165.

Sidney, Neb., May 3.—Miss Otteman is employed at the Union Pacific hotel, where she receives good wages. From her allowance she managed to save up a goodly sum each month in spite of the investments she made in ribbons, silks and other feminine finery.

When C. W. Boone became acquainted with her she had over $200 laid away.

Boone was employed at the Union Pacific roundhouse as night hostler. They went out together and Boone was generally regarded as her best fellow.

Several days ago Boone suddenly disappeared. Inquiries were made regarding his whereabouts, but he could not be located.

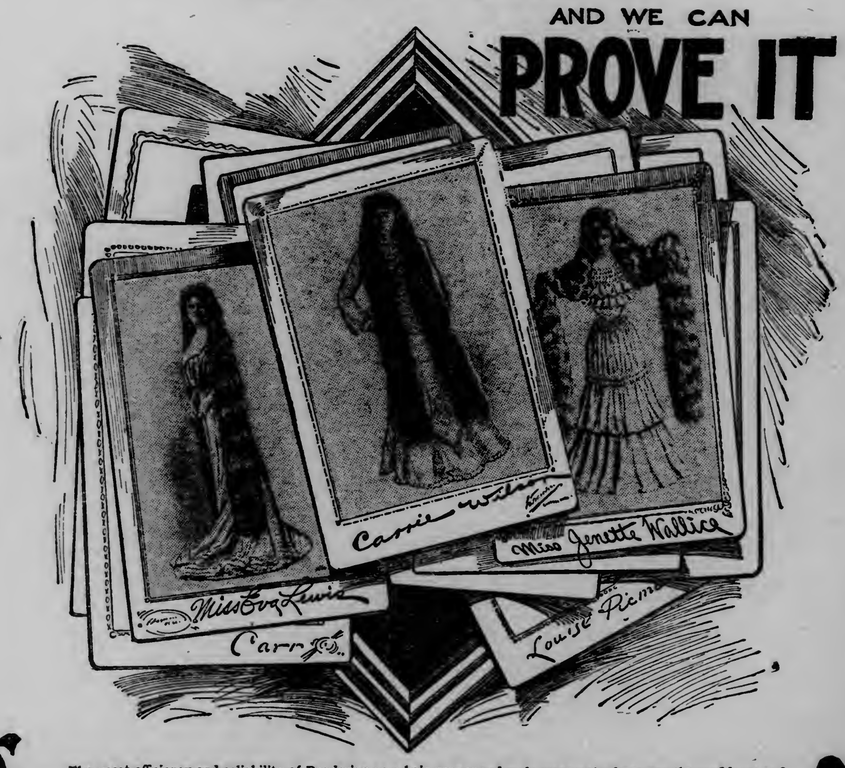
Miss Otteman appeared to be most worried when it became known that Boone had gone. It transpired that during the short courtship he had borrowed $165 from the young woman.

While mourning the loss of her money, Miss Otteman is philosophical enough to believe that the loss of an unfaithful suitor is a matter for congratulation.

Danderine

GROWS HAIR

AND WE CAN PROVE IT



The great efficiency and reliability of Danderine as a hair grower and scalp regenerator have won the confidence and patronage of millions and millions of people throughout the United States. It has attained a larger sale and is more generally used than any other article—toilet or medicinal—that has ever been sold or handled by the Drug trade in this country.

DANDERINE makes the scalp healthy and fertile and keeps it so. It is the greatest scalp fertilizer and therefore the greatest hair-producing remedy the world has ever known. It is a natural food and a wholesome medicine for both the hair and scalp. Even a 25c bottle of it will put more genuine life in your hair than a gallon of any other hair tonic ever made. It shows results from the very start.

NOW at all druggists in THREE SIZES, 25c, 50c and $1.00 per bottle.

FREE To show how quickly Danderine acts we will send a large sample free by return mail to anyone who sends this advertisement to the Knowlton Danderine Co., Chicago, with their name and address and ten cents in silver or stamps to pay postage.

NINETEEN AVAILABLE

Big List of Candidates for Positions on Duluth Team.

Old Duluth Player Says New League Will be Faster.

No less than nineteen players are available for the Duluth team of 1906, and strings are out for others, who may be added if it is thought necessary.

The weeding out process will be begun early next week, and the list will be cut down to about twelve or thirteen men. Probably not more than twelve men will be carried by the Duluth club this year. This will allow three pitchers and a utility man.

The following players will all be in the city before the end of the week: Pitchers, Morton, Erick, Ferguson, Pool, Nordstrom and Treadway; catchers, Hunchie and Adams; first base, O'Dea; second base, Livingstone; short stops, Leighty, Graham and Newman; third base, Lovett; outfielders, Baer, Menelce, McCormick and Ludwig.

Treadway will probably have to be turned over to Winnipeg, but five good twirlers will still be left. Ferguson is hailed as one of the coming pitchers of the league, and is looked upon as a find. Morton's work is well known in the Northern league towns and he can be relied on to deliver the goods. Pool is a young, left hander from Ashland, of whom big things are expected this season. Krick is an excellent utility man, and can play almost any position, in addition to pitching good ball. Nordstrom, the other twirler, was picked up at Boone, and little is known of him. He has not yet worked out with the team.

Hunchie has been catching regularly for the team, and he is a steady, reliable man apparently, although he has been very unfortunate in being crippled most of the time. Adams, the other catcher, was added to the team at Sioux City, and will be given a trial.

The work of O'Dea and Livingstone is well known, and needs no comment.

At short there are three candidates. Graham has been playing the position on the trip, but Leighty of last year's Crookston team and Newman, a former Duluth player, are also to be given a trial.

Lovett, the third baseman, is an American association discard from Toledo, and has been playing good ball on the trip.

There are four candidates for the outfield. Menelce, according to O'Dea's claim, can be brought back when required in spite of Winnipeg's claim to him. Ludwig is another old Northern league player. Baer is from Omaha and McCormick comes from Chicago.

These are the men who will be seen at Athletic park next Saturday and Sunday afternoon. The Friday game has been called off.

The men took a rest yesterday afternoon, but weather permitting they will work out today.

"The fans are going to see just about twice as fast an article of ball this year as they did last," said Jack Corrigan, the old Duluth outfielder, who was in the city yesterday on his way to Calumet, where he will join the Aristocrats.

"You may think that is just talk, but it isn't. If these western teams are going to play ball with the Copper country towns, they have got to put up a faster game than they did last season, and it looks to me as if they were going to do it. You will see the ball played this year just about as fast again as it was last season."

SHELLS ARE LAUNCHED.

Duluth Boat Club Members Take First Practice Row of Season.

Perfect weather conditions prevailed for the first practice row of the season yesterday, and about twenty men were on hand.

An eight and a four-oared shell were launched, and covered a short course.

The work of training has now commenced in earnest and from now until the regatta the shells will be out every evening that the weather permits.

SIR HUON WINS THE KENTUCKY DERBY.

Louisville, May 3.—Sir Huon, started for the first time as a 3-year-old, won the thirty-second Kentucky derby yesterday. He was always the favorite and won with apparent ease. The Ellison entry, Lady Navarre, finished second. It was the opening day of the spring meeting of the new Louisville Jockey club and over 25,000 spectators saw the race, which had a guaranteed value of $5,000 to the winner. Three favorites, a second choice and an outsider won.

Sporting Briefs.

The Glen Avon team defeated the Hunter's Park nine yesterday afternoon by the score of 22 to 13.

• • •

The Central high school team will meet the Blaine team of Superior, Saturday afternoon, in the first game of the high school league schedule.

• • •

Yesterday's fine weather attracted the golfers, who were out in force on the links of the Northland Country club. The season is now in full swing.

W. H. ELSON CHOSEN.

Former Superior School Superintendent Elected Head of Cleveland Schools.

W. H. Elson, formerly superintendent of schools in Superior, has just been elected superintendent of schools of Cleveland, Ohio, at a salary of $5,000. His engagement is for three years. Mr. Elson has, since leaving Superior, been superintendent of schools at Grand Rapids, Mich., and his term there expires on June 1. Supt. R. E. Denfeld of Duluth was a passive candidate for the position of superintendent of schools of Cleveland. Mr. Elson was selected unanimously last Monday. The Cleveland Plaindealer says of the matter:

"In the selection of Elson the local board has hit upon a man who, in the opinion of many of the recognized educational authorities of the country, takes rank with the best school superintendents in the United States. Prior to his service at Grand Rapids, beginning several years ago, he was superintendent of schools at Superior, Wis., and in each place brought the schools to a high standard of excellence. His reputation has been made, to a considerable extent, upon his ability as an organizer and executive head of the teaching forces, although on the other hand he is said to have a wonderful personal insight into educational matters."

Mr. Elson is quite well known in Duluth.

MINNESOTA WOMAN DROWNED IN KANSAS.

Phillippsburg, Kas., May 3.—Simon Mattison, a newspaper writer of this city, and Miss Louise Keene, a trained nurse, whose home is in Olivia, Minn., were drowned while boating on Rock Island lake near here last night. Miss Nora Simmson, who accompanied them, was in the water clinging to the overturned boat for some time before she was rescued and she sustained a shock from which she may not recover.

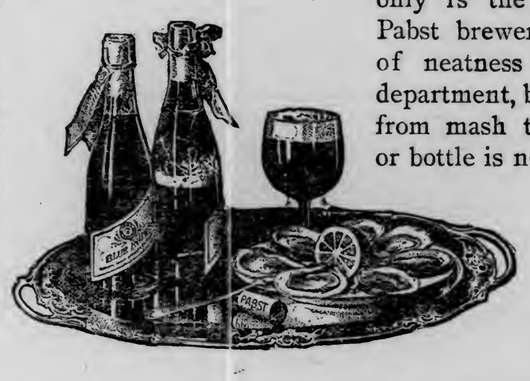
Rheumatism Cured in 24 Hours.

T. J. Blackmore, of Haller & Blackmore, Pittsburgh, Pa., says: "A short time since I procured a bottle of Mystic Cure. It got me out of the house in 24 hours. I took to my bed with Rheumatism nine months ago and the Mystic Cure is the only medicine that did me any good. I had five of the best physicians in the city, but I received very little relief from them. I know the Mystic Cure to be what it is represented and take pleasure in recommending it to other poor sufferers." Sold by all druggists.

Pabst Beer
A Clean Food

Purity and cleanness are essential for healthful beer, just as they are essential for any other healthful food. And purity and cleanness are watchwords in the great Pabst brewery at Milwaukee. Only the finest of malt and hops are used. A most important feature of the Pabst brewing process is the Pabst method of making malt. It requires eight days and doubles the expense of the old four-day method, still used in many breweries, but the eight-day Pabstprocess is the only process by which perfect malt can be made.



Next in importance to eight-day malt is cleanness, and we might very well say just as important, for not only is cleanness desirable but necessary in brewing the best beer. And in this again Pabst excels; not only is the mammoth Pabst brewery a model of neatness in every department, but the beer from mash tub to keg or bottle is never touched by human hands. It passes through sterilized tubes and pipes into hermetically sealed sterilized tanks, and every known safeguard is established to prevent any possible contamination.

The ingredients of Pabst Beer are the purest and best money can buy, and it is given to the public only when science and the test of time show it to be perfect in age, purity and strength; the best beer brewed.

Movements Compare Favorably With Similar Periods Last Year.

Washington, May 3.—(Special to The Herald.)—Internal trade movements for the first quarter of the current year compare very favorably with those for corresponding periods in 1905 or 1904.

Aggregate grain receipts at fifteen important interior markets during March, 1906, as reported to the department of commerce and labor, through its bureau of statistics, amounted to 54,438,776 bushels, against 67,337,303 in March, 1905, and 65,236,333 in 1904. For the same month the shipments totaled 29,782,356 in 1906, 40,149,897 in 1905, and 36,446,696 in 1904. During the current year to and including March 31, receipts of grain at Chicago amounted to 51,468,063 bushels; at Minneapolis, 35,484,710; at St. Louis, 18,817,558; at Kansas City, 12,699,599; at Milwaukee, 11,594,709; at Omaha, 11,138,400; at Peoria, 8,961,330; at Duluth, 8,852,521; at Cincinnati, 5,562,629; at Louisville, 5,963,162; at Detroit, 4,695,667; at Cleveland, 3,132,962; at Toledo, 2,966,940; at Indianapolis, 2,292,925; and at Little Rock, 1,650,000, making ga total of 184,200,750, against 167,710,251 for the corresponding months in 1905, and 176,892,378 in 1904. Aggregate shipments for the first three months of 1906, which amounted to 127,843,536 bushels, were nearly 25,000,000 greater than for the corresponding months in 1905, and almost 22,000,000 in excess of those for 1904.

Live stock receipts at Chicago, Kansas City, Omaha, St. Louis, St. Joseph and St. Paul during March totaled 3,164,326 head, against 3,059,298 in March, 1905, and 2,963,441 in 1904. During the first three months of the current year 4,425,429 head were received at Chicago, 1,758,768 at Kansas City, 1,354,568 at Omaha, 1,133,564 at St. Louis, 955,274 at St. Joseph, and 409,390 at St. Paul, a total of 10,081,033, compared with 9,550,650 for the corresponding months in 1905 and 9,590,857 in 1904. Of the total 1906 movement, 1,891,040 head were cattle, 112,332 calves, 5,269,705 hogs, 2,558,205 sheep, and 149,581 horses and mules, showing slight increases in all classes over the first three months of 1905. Cars required to handle the inbound movement of live stock at these six markets during the first three months respectively, of 1906, 1905 and 1904, numbered 159,412, 1,811 and 173,22.

Receipts of packinghouse products at Chicago during March amounted to 68,888,939 pounds, against 104,583,832 in March, 1905, and 69,048,681 in March, 1904, while shipments for the same month were 226,702,300 pounds in 1906, 231,911,722 in 1905, and 231,353,667 in 1904. During the first three months of the current year similar shipments aggregated 693,513,634 pounds, of which 12,623,409 pounds were beef; 41,042,175, canned meats; 197,785,514, cured meats; 278,240,165, dressed beef; 5,838,909, dressed hogs; 46,236,115, hides; 102,910,065, lard, and 8,823,000, pork. During the corresponding months in 1905 the shipments totaled 608,280,738 pounds, and in 1904, 672,940,077 pounds.

Receipts of spring wheat at Minneapolis, Milwaukee, Duluth and Chicago during the present crop year from Aug. 1 to March 30, aggregated 137,661,864 bushels, 14,914,014 greater than for the corresponding months in 1904-5, and 8,650,687 more than in 1903-4. Of the season's movement 79,558,540 bushels were received at Minneapolis, 6,107,379 at Milwaukee, 33,498,885 at Duluth and 18,355,939 at Chicago. At Toledo, St. Louis, Detroit and Kansas City receipts of winter wheat from July 1, 1905, to March 31, 1905, totaled 59,888,891 bushels, against 52,185,198 during corresponding months of the preceding crop year, and 67,478,955 during 1903-4. The current season's movement was divided into 4,523,200 bushels received at Toledo, 19,092,000 at St. Louis, 1,156,981 at Detroit and 34,386,800 at Kansas City.

Wheat consumptionat reporting mills in the Northwest in the thirty weeks ending March 31 amounted to 60,915,000 bushels, as compared with 65,911,000 for the corresponding period in 1905. Of the current season's total 43,463,000 bushels were consumed at Minneapolis, 3,063,000 at Duluth and 23,089,000 at 54 outside mills. During the same period the flour output amounted to 9,658,380 barrels at Minneapolis, 680,625 at Duluth and 5,120,770 at 54 outside mills. The total output for the corresponding weeks of 1905 was 13,182,355 barrels.

The eastbound trunk-line movement of grain from Chicago and Chicago Junction points during March amounted to 13,473,000 bushels, falling below that of March, 1905, by over 2,000,000, but exceeding the March, 1904, shipments by nearly 1,000,000 bushels. Similar shipments for the first three months of the current year, which aggregated 41,144,000 bushels, were over 8,000,000 in excess of those for the corresponding months in 1905, the heavy gains made in January and February more than offsetting the losses incurred during March. The total grain shipments from these points during the first three months of 1904 amounted to 31,177,000 bushels. Flour shipments amounted to 812,468 barrels during March, 1906, while for the first three months of the year they aggregated 2,664,963 barrels. During 1905 similar movements totaled 766,691 barrels in March, and 1,745,218 during the first three months.

Grain receipts at Boston, New York, Philadelpiia, and Baltimore, New Orleans, and San Francisco, during March, aggregated 23,960,943 bushels, nearly a million bushels below corresponding receipts in March, 1905, but almost 2,000,000 bushels in excess of those for March, 1904. During the first three months of the present year, similar receipts totaled 98,356,789 bushels, against 71,582,794 for the like months in 1905, and 56,689,199 in 1904. Compared with the 1905 receipts, Boston showed a gain of nearly 2,000,000 bushels; New York, over 4,500,000 bushels; Philadelphia, more than 9,000,000; Baltimore, nearly 12,000,000; New Orleans, a little over 100,000, and San Francisco, a loss of nearly 800,000.

Cotton brought into sight during March totaled 661,651 bales, compared with 1,027,488 in March, 1905, and 476,989 in March, 1904. During the present season from September 1 to March 31, cotton sight receipts aggregated 9,240,688 bales, more than a million below corresponding receipts in 1904-5, but slightly in excess of those for 1903-4. The net overland movement during the first seven months of the current season totaled 758,812 bales, against 823,753 for the corresponding months in 1904-5, and 566,802 in 1903-4, while the total domestic spinners' takings for similar periods were 3,440,461 bales in 1905-6, 3,232,168 in 1904-5, and 3,342,811 in 1903-4. Of the current season's movement, 1,889,943 bales were sent to Northern mills, and 1,350,518 to mills in the South.

Cotton receipts at United States ports from September 1 1905, to March 31, 1906, amounted to 6,721,472 bales, compared with 7,835,777 for the corresponding period in 1904-5, and 6,709,203 in 1903-4. Of the current season's movement, 4,177,132 bales arrived at Gulf ports, and 2,544,340 at Atlantic ports. Cities receiving over a million bales were Galveston, 2,271,558; New Orleans, 1,365,459, and Savannah 1,249,515.

Shipments of anthracite coal from Eastern producing territory during March reached a total of 5,745,868 tons, the largest for any month in the history of the industry, with the exception of those for January, 1903, which amounted to 5,964,955 tons, this abnormal movement being no doubt largely caused by the shortness of the supply during 1902, owing to the coal strike. Although in 1902 the chance of a strike was generally known months before its occurrence, the immediately preceding month's shipment showed no particular increase; in the present year, under conditions largely identical, the increase has been marked. During the three months ending March 31, 1906, shipments of anthracite coal aggregated 15,917,051 tons, against 13,589,746 for the corresponding months in 1905 and 12,825,547 in 1904.

At Connellsville the estimated production of coke during the first thirteen weeks of the current year aggregated 2,655,045 tons, over 350,000 greater than during the corresponding weeks in 1905, and more than 1,300,000 in excess of that for 1904. Shipments from this locality during the same period required 184,444 cars, 55,784 of which were destined to Pittsburg and the river, 103,744 to points west of Pittsburg, and 24,936 to points east of Connellsville. The cars required in the corresponding period in 1905 numbered 153,659, and in 1904, 115,254.

The runs from wells in eastern pipeline producing territory during March amounted to 3,078,876.73 barrels, 1,001,721.78 less than in March, 1905. For the first three months of 1906, similar receipts aggregated 9,606,943.63 barrels, against 11,104,342.50 for the corresponding period in 1905. Regular deliveries during March totaled 3,387,086.65 barrels in 1906 and 4,234,756.61 in 1905; while for three months they amounted to 11,733,375.97 barrels in the former and 11,798,213.35 in the latter year.

Shipments of freight on the Great Lakes during March were largely confined to a car-ferriage movement. During the month 376,063 net tons of freight were shipped, of which 17,596 tons were flour, 35,203 tons grain, 138,517 tons coal, 29,776 tons ore and minerals, 47,427 tons logs and lumber, and 107,544 tons unclassified freight. Similar total shipments in March, 1905, were 318,345 tons, and in 1904, 177,835. During the first three months of 1906 freight shipments on the Great Lakes aggregated 1,052,956 tons, compared with 735,363 during the corresponding period in 1905, and 545,932 in 1904. Of the current year's movement, 47,370 tons were flour, 110,686 tons grain, 387,281 tons coal, 77,068 tons ore and minerals, 141,305 tons logs and lumber, and 289,277 tons unclassified freight.

Coastwise clearances of vessels on the Great Lakes during March numbered 1,241 of 1,204,471 net tons, while during the corresponding month in 1905, 1,065 of 1,018,243 tons were cleared, and in 1904, 458 of 547,881 tons. Of the movement for March of the current year, fifty vessels of 40,650 tons cleared light, or without cargo, and 1,191 of 1,163,81 tons were loaded. During the first three months of 1906, similar clearances aggregated 3,230 of 3,310,487 net tons, in contrast with 2,417 of 2,465,915 net tons during like months in 1905, and 1,650 of 2,048,197 net tons in 1904.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, mannufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from ten drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

BUYS TWO NEW CARS

Interstate Traction Company Increases Double-Truckers to Four.

White City Management Figures for Big Spectacular Feature.

The management of the Interstate Traction company, which operates the street railway line on Minnesota Point, has closed a deal for one, and perhaps two, new double truck cars. The cars are being built by the Twin City Car company, and are to be delivered at Duluth in five or six weeks. They will resemble in size and equipment the double truck cars now in use by the Duluth-Superior Traction company.

The outlay for the new rolling equipment will probably approximate $10,000.

With the new double truck cars the Interstate Traction company will have four cars of this type, two having been purchased and put in service last summer. Besides the four double truck cars there will be in service this summer four smaller motor cars and six open trailers, making a complete rolling stock equipment of sixteen cars. This, it is claimed, will be ample provision to take care of the Park Point travel this summer when the White City is open, both for the visitors and for the residents on the point.

Not only is the Interstate Traction company adding to its car service, but it is making some extensive improvements to its property on the point, because of the new rolling stock. The company owns some land at the southeast corner of Pine street and Minnesota avenue that has 177 feet on the avenue and is 100 feet deep on the street. On this location has been planned the car barn, the repair shops and the offices. The present car barn on the west side of the tracks at Pine street, is wholly inadequate to house what cars the company already has. The new barn, work on which was started this week, will provide room for the twelve cars and still have some left for any other rolling stock that may be necessary in the near future. The work is to be pushed forward as rapidly as possible, to have the buildings completed by the time the new cars arrive.

Unless steps had been taken to repair the Lake avenue viaduct this season, it would have been impossible to have delivered any new cars at Minnesota Point and the contracts for the new rolling stock were not closed until the viaduct repairs were assured.

While the plans for street railway improvement on Minnesota Point are forging ahead, the White City project is far from being inactive. Members of the committee who have the matter in charge state that they are going right ahead with the plans for the amusement project with the $30,000 that has already been raised. Some contracts have been made and others are pending a close for numerous attractions that are coming here this summer to appear at the White City. One big spectacular feature that the management expects to get for Duluth is a representation on quite a large scale of the earthquake and fire at San Francisco. This will be something on the order of the "Siege of Sebastapol," a spectacular feature at the World's Fair at Chicago, only on a larger scale. This feature alone, it is believed would be a splendid drawing card for the White City.

For the present the other amusements that have been secured will not be made public, but it is expected that the committee will soon have its plans in shape to give full publicity to the project. The main thing at the present time, the committeemen say, is that the public shall fully realize that the White City is an assured thing.

CUYUNA RANGE WILL BE QUIET

Iron Properties Near Brainerd Will Not be Worked Now.

The chances of any extensive operations on the Cuyuna range this season are decidedly slim and the probabilities are that the district will not be worked in earnest for three or four years to come.

Pickands, Mather & Co., by far the most important concern interested in the Cuyuna, have pulled up stakes, temporarily, and have announced that practically no work will be done on their properties there this summer. The company ceased operations there last fall, somewhat to the surprise of the residents of the locality.

When the concern's action was discussed, there was no word of permanent abandonment heard. It was said that the Pickands-Mather interests had decided that it would not be wise or necessary to push matters on the Cuyuna just at present. They own several heavy shippers nearer the Head of the Lakes and until these are a great deal nearer worked out than they are at present, there is no need for them to go further inland for ore.

BASEBALL GAMES

At Elks' Reunion in Denver Will Attract Wide Attention.

Denver, Colo., May 3.—Among the amateur baseball games that will attract nation-wide attention, will be those played at the great Elks' reunion in Denver in July. It is proposed to have a series of games between the Elks' teams in which the victorious team will win a trophy worth several hundred dollars. The idea originated with the baseball fans of Montana who are enthusiastic over the project, and think they have a team that can beat any nine in the Elks' organization. No team will be allowed to compete except those which have a membership made up entirely of Elks. Montana has an Elks ball team now, of which Dr. W. H. Haviland is sponsor. It contains a number of ball players, who in the old days were fast men in the big leagues. Harry Burton, the famous twirler, and Horace Merkle, who was at one time catcher in St. Louis' league team; big Bill Enright, who used to play with Cap Anson in the palmy days; Kirby Hoon, who was the star twirler of the old Pacific National, and Andy Ecklund and Pete Snelson, who played with Mike Kelley long ago, and are still game for anything in the baseball line that comes up, will comprise a part of the Montana team. Billy Cheely, who was once given $1,000 by Buffalo Bill for making a triple play in Kansas City, will also be included in the Montana team.

The trophy that is to be played for will probably be a $1,000 bar of gold which will be awarded to the winning team of a series of three days' playing. It is proposed to have continuous baseball during the reunion at the baseball park in Denver, which will be surrendered to the Elks for that purpose.

OFFICIAL SCHOOL CANDY SELLERS

Philadelphia Board Moves for Pure Confection to Children.

Philadelphia, May 3.—Hereafter each public school is to have its official candy purveyor. This was decided upon at a meeting of the board of education's committee on elementary schools, which has been wrestling with the problem of how to prevent the children from buying impure candies.

The subject was brought before the committee by Director of Public Health and Charities Copin, who declared that the poisonous stuff being sold as candy is highly injurious to health.

So the committee has decided that each principal shall appoint one candy dealer, who shall be permitted to sell certain goods prescribed by the committee and which the committee knows to be pure.

It is not known what the list will be, but a monster petition will probably be sent in before long demanding that it shall include sour balls and all-day suckers. They are by far the most popular of school candies, because they last longest, and you can smear more things and make a teacher more nervous with one all-day sucker than with five pounds of 80-cent chocolate creams.

In case an official candy purveyor shall be caught selling articles not included in the committee's list, he will be immediately deposed from office.

MINIATURE PAPER

Tells Dinner Guests of Enagement of Hostess' Daughter.

Jacksonville, Ill., May 3.—At a dinner given by Mrs. W. H. H. King at her home on West State street in honor of Mrs. Ridgely Hudson of Springfield, announcement was made of the engagement of Miss Abigail, the only daughter of Mrs. King, to Horace H. Bancroft of this city.

Miss King's manner of making the announcement to her friends was most unique. Thirty-five guests were present, and beside each plate was a small roll of parchment, tied with a ribbon. On unfolding these the guests found a fac-simile reproduction of the front page of the Jacksonville Journal reduced to about one-fourth its original size. Columns, ruling, heads and the entire make-up was a correct imitation.

In this item of news was one announcing Miss King's engagement. Other notes were personal mention regarding each guest, written in a humorous manner.

Mr. Bancroft is city editor of the Jacksonville Journal, a position he has held two years. He has also been active in local politics, and three years ago made the race for state senator.

Miss King leaves next month to spend the summer in Europe, and the wedding will not occur until some time in the fall.

BABY NOT BAGGAGE.

Mother Scores Man Who Ordered Infant From Carriage.

Milwaukee, Wis., May 3.—Baggageman, John S. Runyon, of the Union station here, made another enemy for the railroad, but established the rule that babies cannot be checked through as baggage. A prepossessing young woman fluttered down upon Runyon and asked him to check a baby carriage to an interior town for her, which he did. As he was lifting the carriage into the car, however, he discovered that it contained a big, dimpled, pink baby fast asleep, with a fat nursing bottle at its mouth.

"Here, here, this won't do," he called to the woman. "Come and get your baby."

"Oh, he'll be all right there; he's just been fed and won't awake up for an hour. If he does, however, just walk with him and don't rub your whiskers against his face,' and—"

"We don't check babies as baggage You'll have to carry him."

"Well, I think you and your old railroad are hateful things," she snapped, but she carried the baby just the same."

BECOMING A MOTHER

Is an ordeal which all women approach with indescribable fear, for nothing compares with the pain and horror of child-birth. The thought of the suffering and danger in store for her, robs the expectant mother of all pleasant anticipations of the coming event, and casts over her a shadow of gloom which cannot be shaken off. Thousands of women have found that the use of Mother's Friend during pregnancy robs confinement of all pain and danger, and insures safety to life of mother and child. This scientific liniment is a god-send to all women at the time of their most critical trial. Not only does Mother's Friend carry women safely through the perils of child-birth, but its use gently prepares the system for the coming event, prevents "morning sickness," and other discomforts of this period. Sold by all druggists at $1.00 per bottle. Book containing valuable information free.

DOG FIRED FATAL SHOT

Peter Carron Says Brother Was Victim of Queer Accident.

Gun Held Between Knees Was Discharged by Playful Pup.

That his brother was shot by his dog is the rather startling claim made by Peter Carron, in denying the story that it was a case of suicide.

The story of Carron's death was published in The Herald last evening, coming from Two Harbors. It was stated that Carron, who was running a tie camp, about three miles from Two Harbors, had seated himself on a pile of ties and, pointing the muzzle of his gun at himself, had pulled the trigger with his toe, blowing out his brains.

The cause for the act was given as despondency, arising from a dispute concerning some ties which Carron had been getting out for Merrill & Ring interests.

The man's brother, Peter Carron, denies that it was a case of suicide, and says that the gun was exploded by a pet dog, which had a habit of leaping upon its master.

"When the body was found," said Mr. Carron, "one leg was crossed over the other knee, and it was evident that he had been sitting down on the ties resting with his gun standing between his knees. After receiving the shot he had fallen back on the pile of ties, and his legs were still crossed.

"On the gun stock were marks that showed where the dog's claws had scratched the varnish. The dog had a habit of jumping on everybody whom he knew or liked, and it was evident that in doing so he had pulled the trigger of the gun. Anyone who could have seen the position in which the body was found would have been convinced that it was not a case of suicide.

"The deputy coroner gave his opinion that the shooting was accidental.

"I don't know how the story of suicide started, but it was either out of malice or ignorance of the facts."

COPPER STOCKS ARE WEAKER

Local Interest Centered in the Activity of the Bisbees.

Copper stocks suffered another relapse today, in sympathy with the New York market. A feature of the day from a local point of view was the activity of the Bisbee shares.

North Butte opened at $85, advanced to $85.25, declined to $84, rallied to $86 and declined to $84.50. The closing price was $84 bid and $84.50 asked. Amalgamated opened at $101.50, and when the weakness came declined to $96.87½ and closed at $97 bid. Anaconda opened at $237 and closed at $228.75 bid. United Copper opened at $59, advanced to $59.87½, fell off to $59 and closed at $58 bid and $59 asked. Butte Coalition was inactive and closed at $31 bid and $32 asked.

Calumet & Arizona, which has been dormant for some time, was quite active. It opened at $109, sold quite freely at that price, declined to $108, and closed at $105 asked. The April output of the Calumet & Arizona smelters was made known today, the total being 1,792 tons.

Calumet & Pittsburg was more active than it has been for several days, selling at $26.87½ and $26.50 and closing at $26.50 bid; Dem-Arizona was inactive and closed at $15 bid; Junction sold at $23.50 and $24, closing at $24 bid and $25 asked; Lake Superior & Pittsburg sold at $35.25 and closed at $33.50 bid, and Pittsburg & Duluth closed at $19 bid and $19.50 asked, after selling at $18.75.

Black Mountain was inactive and closed at $10 bid; Keweenaw at $11 bid; Warren sold at $15.75 and closed at $15.50 bid, and Copper Queen of Idaho closed at $2 bid and $2.25 asked. Ophir Tunnel was inactive and closed at 19 cents bid and 22 cents asked.

The Mining World of Denver in its last issue says: "Willard F. Snyder and associates have just closed a deal for the properties of the Giant Chief and Ilion Mining companies in the Bingham district, which involves the payment of no less than $500,000, and includes some of the old properties of this famous camp that has been productive of some very rich ores during the early days. Associated with Mr. Snyder in this undertaking are H. I. Wilson of Butte, A. D. Thomson, Duluth, P. J. Donohue, a local mining engineer, and capitalists from several of the Eastern money centers. Mr. Snyder has spent several months in New York during the past winter in getting this deal in shape, and he has announced that there has been sufficient funds provided for the opening up of the property on an extensive scale, which will assuredly place the ground in the front ranks of the producers of the Bingham district within another year's time."

Companies Amend Articles.

Amended articles of incorporation were filed with the register of deeds today by the Vermilion Lumber company, which raised the limit of its indebtedness from $20,000 to $50,000, and by the Minnesota Canal & Power company, which set forth its purpose to be the generating of electricity by steam or water power for public use in the way of heating, lighting and for power purposes. The latter company will also construct and maintain canals, improve navigation, and own and operate dams, reservoirs, ditches and pipe lines. The amended articles are signed by H. H. Manford, vice president, and O. H. Simonds, secretary.

GRAND JURY INDICTS SIX

Five Men Are Held on Charges of Assault.

Six men were indicted by the grand jury on returns made in the district court this morning.

John Loytta and Edward Hill, who are claimed to have assaulted Gust Kolio with a knife in this city March 30, are indicted for assault in the second degree. No bill was found against Anton Loytta, who had been held to the grand jury to await its investigation.

Albert Helstrom, charged with attempting to shoot Peter Witheroll, in a camp near Rush Lake, is indicted for assault in the second degree. The assault is said to have taken place March 29.

Jake Tulla and George Tulla are indicted for assault in the second degree. The information against them is that they knifed John Saarl, at Sparta, April 8, inflicting serious wounds.

John Weitersheim, charged with taking a $50 gold watch belonging to John Ryan, is indicted for grand larceny in the second degree. The offense is said to have been committed Dec. 30, 1905.

When the grand jury resumed its session this morning the witnesses called before it were women, from an alleged house of ill repute at Aurora, where a shooting affray recently occurred. It is possible that the grand jury will complete its work by tomorrow afternoon.

Cost of Battleships to Prevent War.

While the struggle between Russia and Japan taught no new lesson of importance, it emphasized the fact that the time is coming when only the richest nations can afford to go to war. The coming battleships are so enormously expensive that the smaller countries cannot afford to build them. The time has also come when you can no longer afford to experiment with your health, that is if you ever expect to get well again. We, therefore, urge every sick man and woman to get a bottle of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters this very day, and let it make you strong and hearty again. It restores the stomach to its normal condition, and cures flatulency, heartburn, poor appetite, dyspepsia, indigestion, nausea, costiveness, cramps, liver and kidney ills or female troubles.

OPPOSED TO THE CONSOLIDATION

Of Cumberland Presbyterians With Presbyterians.

Decatur, Ill., May 3.—Judge William Reister of Evansville, Ind., is here to get a description of the Cumberland Presbyterian church property in this part of Illinois, in preparation for an application for an injunction to restrain the Cumberland Presbyterian general assembly of the United States from effecting a consolidation with the Presbyterian church. The Cumberland Presbyterian general assembly meets in Decatur, May 17. The proposition to unite with the Presbyterian church will come up in a favorable report of the committee of twenty-one, which has been in conference with a similar committee from the Presbyterian church. The proposition is expected to carry.

Judge Reister says the purpose in asking for an injunction before the general assembly meets is to get a decision at once from the courts in a few test cases, thus avoiding the necessity of about 3,000 suits all over the country after the union is effected. The injunction will be asked on the ground that the Cumberland Presbyterian church properties were bought with money given for teaching and preaching the Cumberland Presbyterian faith and doctrines, and that no board of trustees or other officers has a right to transfer to the Presbyterian church any more than to Jewish or Catholic churches.

AFTER HEADQUARTERS.

Owatonna Man Here Arranging for J. M. Diment Campaign.

J. R. Morley of Owatonna, Minn., for several terms a prominent member of the house of representatives, particularly conspicuous in dairy and food legislation, is in the city today to see about getting headquarters for J. M. Diment, candidate for governor on the Republican ticket, and the Steele county delegation of twelve at the June convention. He has arranged for the delegation to be quartered at the St. Louis hotel. Mr. Morley says that before the convention time his district will in all probability agree on either Diment or Senator Lord as a candidate. It is the intention now for only one name to be placed before the convention. Diment is an Owatonna man.

BECOMING EXPERT.

Policemen Make High Scores at Regular Biweekly Revolver Practice.

Exceptionally high scores were made at the regular bi-weekly shoot of the Duluth police department this afternoon.

Most of the officers made scores of from 40 to 50 out of a possible 50, Capt. Resche heading the list with a perfect score, all ten shots striking within a space that could be covered by a man's hand.

The men are becoming much more expert as a result of the regular practice, and there are now only three or four men who fall below 25.

CLERK ARRESTED.

Is Brought Back From Minneapolis to Face Grand Larceny Charge.

To face a charge of grand larceny in the second degree, Perry R. Passage, a young man about 21 years of age, was brought back from Minneapolis today by Deputy Sheriff McGee.

The young man was formerly employed by the Grand Union Tea company, and he is claimed to have embezzled $29.70 from his employers. He returned to his home in Minneapolis, and was arrested there yesterday on information furnished by the Duluth police.

He will be arraigned in the municipal court this afternoon.

MAY LOSE BOTH LEGS.

Edward Sifton Meets With Serious Accident in Northern Pacific Yards.

While working in the Northern Pacific yards shortly before 3 o'clock this afternoon, Edward Sifton was hit by a box car, and had his legs badly mangled beneath the wheels.

He was taken to St. Mary's hospital, and at 3 o'clock was still in the operating room. It is feared that both legs will have to be amputated.

WOMAN'S PHOTO

On the Body of Man Found in River at Racine.

Racine, Wis., May 3.—The body of Hans Rasmussen, aged 48 years, a wealthy man, was found floating in the river yesterday. He disappeared last November. Identification was established by a nephew through the photograph of a prominent minister's wife found on the body. The name is not given. It is said he loved her, but she did not reciprocate. He boarded at the home of John Jacobson, a leading jeweler here, who disappeared a year ago and has not been found.

COURTS ARE ATTACKED

By Senator Tillman in Speech Criticising Several Judges.

Has Scrap With Senator Spooner and Afterwards Apologizes.

Washington, May 3.—When the senate met today, Mr. Tillman again asked for the postponement of a resolution for the investigation of the eviction of Mrs. Minor Morris from the White House last winter. He asked that the measure lie on the table until such time as he might desire to take it up.

The railroad rate bill was then laid before the senate and Mr. Nelson addressed the senate in opposition to Mr. Bailey's amendment depriving inferior United States courts of the power of suspending orders of the interstate commerce commission.

Mr. Tillman took the floor to put into the record a number of statements he had gathered to justify his position that the people distrust the federal courts. Preliminary he announced that he did not intend wholesale onslaught on the judiciary and he acquitted the supreme court especially of questionable proceedings, although, he said, it had "wobbled" more or less. In the South, he went on, there were many excellent judges, but on the other hand, some of them had been guilty of very questionable and discreditable acts. Many of them were, he said, unduly prejudiced in favor of the railroads and were wholly unfit to be trusted with the power to pass on railroad questions.

He referred to the division of the supreme court on the income tax case, saying that in that case one of the judges had changed his mind. He also cited other cases in other courts intended to show that some judges are "not only no infallible but not incorruptible." The first of the references was made to Judge Smith McPherson of Iowa, who was represented in an article in the New York World of the 30th of March last as having appeared at a banquet to Governor Cummins at Council Bluffs in such a condition as "not to be able to stand up without clinging to the table."

Mr. Carter defended Judge McPherson as a man of great learning and probity of character. If, in participating in the banquet he had entered into the spirit of the occasion, he had merely shown himself as a good fellow. He criticized the course of the man who had given out the occurrences at the banquet. He had never heard of any intimation that Judge McPherson was guilty of an excess in the use of intoxicating liquors.

Mr. Dolliver and Mr. Perkins also defended Judge McPherson. Mr. Perkins declaring that having boarded at the same hotel with Judge McPherson for four years, he knew him to be a teetotaler.

Mr. Dolliver said that the judge had never been charged with a want of judicial fairness.

He next called attention to the Northern Pacific railroad receivership, in which Judge James Jenkins of the Seventh district figured in 1893, and in which an injunction against strikers was granted. Commenting on these facts, Mr. Tillman said that Mr. Jenkins had recently retired, "therefore," he added, "he can do more devilment like this."

"I believe it has come to be considered good law to issue injunctions against strikers," said Mr. Tillman, "if it is not, the senator from Wisconsin (Spooner) will correct."

The manner of appeal to him evidently angered Mr. Spooner. He rose and replied sharply, saying:

"The senator from South Carolina forgets what is decent when he challenges me in that way."

Mr. Tillman insisted upon withdrawing his question and apologizing but Mr. Spooner remarked that he asked no apology. Upon an apparently good natured command to Mr. Spooner to sit down, Mr. Tillman and the chair became involved in a spirited colloquoy as to who had the floor. The decision was favorable to Mr. Spooner, who remarked that in ordering him to take his seat Mr. Tillman merely had accentuated what he regarded as "A great piece of rudeness." After Mr. Tillman had offered an apology, Mr. Spooner sat down with the statement that he did so of his own volition.

IN THE HOUSE.

Washington, May 3.—In the house today, Mr. Littlefield (Me.), presented a resolution authorizing the committee on expenditures of the agricultural department to send for persons and papers in the proposed investigation of that department but on objection of Mr. Williams (Miss.), who is urging a report on the statehood bill by the conferees, the resolution went over.

Mr. Foss (Ill.) then moved that the house resolve itself into the committee of the whole for the consideration of the naval appropriation bill.

Mr. Williams called for division on the vote, and then raised the point of no quorum. The doors were ordered closed and the sergeant at arms was ordered to bring in the absentees.

CREDIT GUARANTEE

For San Francisco by Government Will Not Meet With Favor.

Washington, May 3.—Though the senate committee on finance has reserved its decision as to the adoption or rejection of the Newlands proposition as to governmental aid of San Francisco by a guarantee of credit, the indications are that the plan will not meet with favor. The committee will meet tomorrow and make a formal statement dealing with the San Francisco situation. The effect of this is intended to give stability to the credit without launching the national finances upon a project which the committee believes to be in conflict with public policy.

COMMITTEE NAMED

To Take Testimony on the Free Alcohol Bill.

Washington, May 3.—Senator Aldrich, chairman of the committee on finance, today appointed a sub-committee to take testimony on the free alcohol bill, as follows: Aldrich, Burrows, Spooner, Hale, Mooney and Bailey. The chairman stated that the committee would take up the matter immediately; that as far as he knew, all members were in favor of the widest possible use of alcohol in the arts and industries, and for the other purposes indicated in the house bill free of tax, so far as it could be done with safety to the revenue.

A MILWAUKEE MAN ENDS LIFE

Former Supervisor Frank Fowle Commits Suicide by Shooting.

Milwaukee, May 3.—Frank M. Fowle, former supervisor, under indictment by the last grand jury, committed suicide today at his home in South Milwaukee. He shot himself in the head with a 32-caliber revolver while standing in his bedroom.

Mr. Fowle was never conscious after the shot was fired, and he died in about an hour.

Worry over the indictments is supposed to have been the cause of the act. Fowle was 39 years old and is survived by a widow and two daughters. Six indictments were returned against him charging bribery in connection with contracts.

ELECTRICIANS GO ON STRIKE

Employes of All Telephone Companies Want More Wages.

St. Paul, May 3.—(Special to The Herald.)—The electricians of all telephone companies in Minnesota, North and South Dakota struck at noon today. About 800 men are out. Of these between 400 and 500 live in the Twin Cities.

The point of divergence came on the question of hours and wages. The electricians are after an eight hour day and an increase in wages which averages about $5 a month. The average wage of the men is about $70.

The electricians have been negotiating for some time with the employers. Noon today was set as the time for going out, if the demands were not acceded to.

The men also claim that the companies did not live up to agreements made last year.

CURED BY MUSIC.

Even Death Put Off by It, Says Lacey Baker.

New York Sun: "Music is so much a pleasure that the fact that it is a power, I believe I may say the greatest in the universe, is not considered," said Lacey Baker, the musician and choirmaster. "I do not speak of the degenerate, atrophied parlor amusement, which is an accidental human creation, but of music as a part of the cosmos; a force in nature which is dynamic, whose laws are those of vibration and as immutable as the laws of gravity.

"To the seven notes of the scale the world owes its being, and should music cease for the fraction of a second the day of doom would be upon us. The divinely given dimensions of Noah's ark, as tabulated in Holy Writ, were according to musical progression.

"The human head in its entirety, as shown by Hussey, agrees mathematically with the ratio of the harmonic scale. The eyes, nostrils, mouth, even the under eyelid, are all in accord with the same progression."

When asked if he thought that listening to much music would prolong life, Mr. Baker answered:

"I do not thing, I know, it will. To avoid friction, to prevent wear and tear, is the problem of all who have to do with mechanisms, and this is one thing that music does for the human machine; it puts it in harmony with all the laws of being.

"This is no new assertion. The Pythagoreans held that it was the business of music to harmonize all things through the universe. It is a well established fact that the normal tenor of the pulse is regulated entirely by harmonic proportions.

"It was Roger Bacon who wrote: 'Instrumental music and song brings power and vigor, stirs up nature and helps her in all her motions,' and the man who takes a daily dose of music will not only live longer, but better, more satisfactorily to himself and those about him, than one who does not.

"The principal cause of decay and premature death arises from the great waste and dissipation of animal spirits in the continual hurry of life. Music renews, brings a fresh supply of animal spirits, and so promotes bodily and mental vigor, and in this way prolongs life.

"I find music a great appetizer. Both Claus Magnus and Paul Diaconus, writing on agriculture, agree that music excites the flocks to graze better and eat with more activity. The Arabs have a proverb that singing contributes more to fattening beasts than good pasture.

"It has been suggested that these things are fine spun figments of fancy, but if the speed of sensations can be measured, as it is by a machine designed for the purpose, it is not difficult to believe that the vibrations of a violin will cure sciatica. I have in mind a case where the instrument was placed on the affected part and played, and in a short time the pain ceased.

"It is common to say that a certain sound sets the teeth on edge. Nothing has touched the teeth, the mouth is closed; how, then, is it? Simply the result of a vibration of a certain kind; that which cures is of another kind."

When questioned as to instances in which serious illness had been cured by music, Mr. Baker said:

"I was told a short time ago by Dr. Mott Francis of Newport of a young girl, his patient, who was restored to health by music. She was very ill. He had done all he could, but she was sinking.

"Death seemed inevitable, when it occurred to him to try music. He plays the banjo, and friends of the seemingly dying girl sang as he played. She soon revived and continued to mend and is now quite well. This incident was verified by Admiral Luce.

"A certain musician I know of, whose mind had gone wrong, was in the insane ward of a hospital. It was decided to make the experiment of placing him at the piano.

"At first his hands strayed blindly, but after a time the vibrations of his own wandering notes seemed to reach his inner consciousness and he began to play with understanding. That was the beginning of his recovery, and he is now perfectly well.

"It is a reasonable proposition that music intelligently administered will produce definite results in disease treatment. It supplies a stimulant, both psychic and physical. In melancholia and insanity music stimulates the attention centers, withdraws the attention from self and so effects a cure.

"Take the business man, so fagged that he cannot control his attention. Let music be softly and continuously played; his attention will be centered, then tired and he will sleep like a child.

"In Edinburgh Royal Infirmary on Sunday the piano is played in each ward and the patients sing. The reports of attending physicians show that the temperature of patients the night following is more nearly normal than at any other time during the week.

"It is a fact that there is less sickness on the lines of ocean steamers that have bands on board than on others. In Germany, where music prevails, there is little if any pulmonary consumption, and it is true that the children of musical mothers are healthier than others.

"I have, as I believe, saved the life of one woman, said to be dying, by choral music. She rallied while I was giving her the first potion, and continued to gain steadily until she was fully recovered.

"A few weeks ago, here in the streets of New York, a man had an epileptic attack. There was no physician near and his paroxysms continued until a military band went by. As soon as he heard the music he sat up and a minute later was on his feet and free from pain.

"A hypochondriac who, by the advice of his physician, listened to an orchestra six hours daily, regained his appetite after the first few days, and in two months his health was fully restored.

"The power music has over animals is very marked. The bandmaster at Barnum & Bailey's says that the animals will not do their work unless certain tunes are played. A lion will sit upon his haunches, motionless, ears erect, eyes vacant and abandon himself to the enjoyment of music, but the moment the tune is changed he will spring up, often with an air of disgust.

"Milton held that one should listen to music before and after meat to assist digestion, and never ate without either vocal or instrumental music. Chomet's theory, enunciated fifty years ago, was that sound is a fluid which, properly directed, permeates everything, acting as do heat and electricity. It encountered a storm of abuse, yet he demonstrated that with a note sufficiently long and high he was able to kill a dog.

"While there is a good deal of the survival of the slickest in this world of ours, in the fulness of time it is the fittest that survives. Pivotal truths are here to stay, and that music is a great power, greater than has been yet proved, is one of these truths.

"The harmonic ratio has been demonstrated in chemistry as well as music. Loftus found that the varying color of flowers is due to the same common principle. The distinctive harmony due to thirds, yellow and blue, is a common mixture in the coloring of plants and flowers, and the harmony of the fifth is illustrated in the fuchia.

"The mixture of all colors in white is found in the diaposon. Discords are concentives, and the primary harmonies disjunctives, and as in the musical scale, by union and disjunction the fair order of the universe is maintained. In accord with this is the proof that Rice gives us that all geometrical lines have their counterpart in music, as is also the statement of scholars that the music of the universe governs all things and regulates the days and years.

"As a matter of fact, light and sound are identical. Very rapid vibrations produce light, those which are slow produce sound. Tones and colors are the same. Colors are tones of tremendous height of pitch, tones are colors of tremendous depth of pitch, and as vibrations are produced on strings, so emotions manifest themselves by vibrations of the body. Not alone the heart of the world, but all of it is very nearly one, however much it may seem to differ.

"Does this all seem chimmerical, far fetched, not quite in line with common sense? I know that people like to have it understood that they square their lives by common sense, but really what new thing, good and necessary to know, did common sense ever teach us?

"In three score years and ten it does not enable one to decide such simple things as how many times a day it is best to eat, and how much, whether a gallon or a teaspoonful, or how much sleep is good for one. eYt common sense is worshipped and deferred to as a fetich, although, as a matter of act, the amulet of the Hottentot is safer, for it at least does not boss him.

"But when a man of such uncommon sense as Andrew Carnegie takes music, varying from the organ to the bagpipe daily, in practically unlimited quantities, it is a hopeful sign. Therefore permit myself to believe that at no distant date the power of music will be appreciated and utilized."

ANIMALS LIKE JOKES.

They Pull Tails, Make Faces and Play Mischievous Tricks.

A Siamese monkey was being brought to Europe on a steamer with several other monkeys, who, for some reason, would have nothing to do with him, says the London Strand.

This ostracism exasperated the Siamese, and whenever he got a chance he would grab one of the others by the tail, drag him all over the deck, and finally climb into the rigging and drop his victim with a dull thud.

Darwin tells of a female orangoutang that took hold of a dish, in which her food was served, and put it on her head as if it were a hat. Thus adorned she provoked roars of laughter, to her evident gratification, from the crowd around her cage.

Another naturalist saw a baboon get even with an officer who had often teased him. Seeing the officer approaching the baboon poured some water into a hole in the ground, mixing it with earth so as to make mud. When his enemy came up he splashed the muddy water on the officer's uniform. For a long time after this every time the animal saw the officer he indulged in what had every appearance of being laughter.

Saville Kent declares that dolphins are fond of teasing other fish by seizing their tails and dragging them through the water. He once saw two dolphins attack a big skate swimming near the surface of the water. The skate tried to escape them by raising its tail out of water, but the dolphin got hold of it and dragged the skate in every direction.

Foals will often tease human beings by galloping toward them, as if intending to run them down, then stopping short within an uncomfortably short step or two.

Gross, the naturalist, relates several amusing instances of a similar nature about dogs. He had once a dog who, when given a piece of bread that he did not care to eat, dropped it, and then, lying upon it, pretended to look all round with the most innocent air, as if wondering where it had fallen.

Another case he speaks of is that of a terrier, whose greatest pleasure it was to catch flies on the window panes. Nothing annoyed the animal more than to be laughed at when he missed his prey.

"In order to discover what he would do," says Gross, "I purposely laughed immoderately each time he was unsuccessful, and the more I laughed the clumsier he grew.

"At last he was so unmistakably annoyed that in his despair he pretended to capture a fly, and made the appropriate movements of tongue and lips, finally rubbing his neck on the ground, as if to crush his victim, after which he regarded me with a triumphant air.

"So well had he played his little comedy that, had I not seen the very fly still on the window, I certainly would have been taken in by the trick. When I called his attention to the fact that the fly he had chased was still at large, and that there was no dead fly on the floor, he perfectly understood that his hypocrisy had been discovered, and was so ashamed that he slunk away and hid under a couch."

CHAMPION SPENDERS.

People Who Have Money to Throw at the Birds.

When people have more money than they know what to do with they sometimes develop a remarkable ingenuity in devising methods of squandering it, as in the case of the French marquise, who, according to the papers, has her bed strewn with rare and exquisite orchids at a cost of several thousand francs a week, says London Tit-Bits.

Even more remarkable is the story told of a wealthy French man who dines twice a week at a famous Parisian restaurant. His appetitite is of the poorest, but he always insists on having a turcen filled with a specially prepared soup placed before him. Next comes a huge joint of meat, from which he cuts one tiny slice; then follow four quails or a large chicken, of which he eats one mouthful. His desserts consists of four grapes and a cup of coffee; while during his meal he just molstens his lips from a bottle of expensive claret and another of the finest champagne. At the conclusion of the meal, for which he pays 129 francs, he hands 40 francs to the head waiter, 20 francs to the waiter who has attended to him, 10 to the lady cashier and 5 to the porter.

Not long ago the son of an American millionaire gave a dinner to twenty-two friends in Paris. Each guest was driven to and from the hotel in a sumptuous carriage, while before him were placed a whole leg of mutton, a whole salmon, a fowl, a basket of peaches and several bottles of wine. During desert a bag was passed round, from which each guest was invited to draw a souvenir, consisting of pearl studs, emerald links and gold cigarette cases inset with jewels. About the same time another youthful Croesus commissioned eight of the most famous artists in America to paint a fan which he wished to present to a lady, the ultimate cost of the fan being £20,000.

A weird form of extravagance was that of a lady named Hillier, who recently buried her husband in a £4,000 coffin. The casket was made of richly carved mahogany, with solid gold mountings—a single knob costing £35—and lined with silk which is said to have cost 4s 4d an inch. Another coffin, which was recently made for a Chinese Mandarin, was so lavishly decorated with gold and precious stones that its value was said to be £15,000.

There are some men who are in a position to carry a small fortune on their heads. Mr. Manderson of Nebraska is the proud owner of a hat made of "green backs" of the value of £4,000. This costly head covering, we are told, weighs twenty ounces, and "looks exactly like the white hats worn by many gentlemen in summer time." The late Chinese minister at Washington used to wear a hat valued at £1,000, in front of which was a large opal set in diamonds; while another expensive hat made of spun glass, which took two years to make and is said to be worth £1,000, is the property of a Mr. Sherard.

The nizam of Hyderabad has a set of false teeth for which he paid a Madras dentist £700, and Mr. Dixie W. Thompson, a wealthy rancher of Santa Barbara, not long ago spent £750 on a saddle, which is of the finest embossed leather, heavily and most elaborately mounted with silver. Henry G. Marshall lavished £20,000 on a grand piano, exquisitely painted by Sir L. Alma-Tadema and studded with precious stones. Jan Van Beers has a piano, a miracle of painting, precious metals and jewels, which cost him £5,000 and Cornelius Vanderbilt paid £3,500 for another gorgeous instrument.

In his palatial home on Fifth avenue, New York, Commodore Gerry has a beautiful staircase of purest marble, the value of which is estimated at £20,000, each step costing its owner £500; while S. S. Murchand, the American millionaire, spent nearly £200,000 in the equipment of a single bedroom. The bedstead, of massive ebony, with elaborate ivory carvings, took over two years to make and cost £38,000; £12,800 was spent on the decoration of the walls; the wardrobe, washstand, dressing table and a few other fittings accounted for £53,000, and the ivory chairs, inlaid with ebony and gold, represent another £8,000.

One of the most remarkable cases of extravagance on record was the indulging by the sultan of Turkey of a child's whim. One day the sultan found his small son in tears because, though he had been promised to be made an admiral, he could not see his flag flag hoisted on a particular ship from his nursery windows. The sultan promptly had the vessel brought up and moored in front of the Dolma-bagtcheh, to the child's great delight. In order, however, to bring the vessel to the required position, it was necessary to pull down a newly-constructed bridge, which at the sultan's bidding was done at a cost of £100,000.

CONCERNING WOMEN

The attention of the local club women who are contemplating attending the meeting of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, which will be held at St. Paul, May 31 to June 7, is called to the following communication, issued by Mrs. L. H. Bishop of St. Paul, chairman of the badge committee. Those in this city who are planning to go may secure their tickets of admission by sending their names to Miss Elizabeth Anderson of this city, who is in communication with the committee in charge of that work. Mrs. Bishop's communication from St. Paul is as follows:

"The executive committe of the local biennial board G. F. W. C. have instructed the badge committee to correspond with the Minnesota clubs, with a view toward furnishing them with a state badge for the coming biennial, at same rates secured for the local committees.

"All badges will be made of good quality satin ribbons, each six inches long and two inches wide, the state badge of white, having our state flower, the mocasin, the name "Minnesota G. F. W. C., St. Paul, 1906," stamped upon it, and can be delivered to all clubs, postage paid, for 15 cents each. Orders for local club badges can be filled for 10 cents each if printed with the name of club and town; if stamped in gilt, 15 cents each. Clubs can select their colors.

"Every effort is being made to make the biennial not only a great success, but a credit to our city and state; to that end we invite your hearty cooperation, and hope to see a large delegation from every club, wearing our colors, and ready to join with St. Paul hostesses in welcoming our guests from other states.

"Our convention hall seats 4,000, and while it is expected every one will be admitted, admission must be by ticket, and club women will be given preference.

"Will you kindly consider this matter at once, and if an order is given for badges, will you to save time please remit the money with the order. Address all communications to

MEMORIAL SERVICE.

Impressive Exercises Held by Members of Relief Corps.

The members of the Women's Relief corps held a beautiful and impressive memorial service yesterday afternoon at their hall in Rowley building on West First street. The service was in honor of the members who have died since the organization of the department in this city. Mrs. J. H. Sullivan presided at the service, and the desks of the officers were draped in the American flags, and over the chaplain's desk a large flag, black draped, was folded, and upon the desk an open Bible, with a cluster of white carnations, was laid. The flags of the color bearers bore black crape, and flowers were placed about the room. Sixteen chairs, in a double row, bound together with tri-colored ribbon and facing the altar, were a solemn reminder of the purpose of the gathering.

The roll call of the departed members, read by the secrtary, Mrs. John Williams, included Elizabeth Pelton, Lydia Chapman, Sada L. Gilbert, Byrona A. Porter, Clara E. Hood, Julia E. Ayers, Anna Stang, Ellen Sylvester, Mary J. Barnes, Rosetta Gaskill, Sarah Hall, Alice Kimmerer, Sarah Lannigan, Lizzie Gillespie, Vora Schuler, Comrade Nathaniel A. Gearhart.

The address was given by Rev. C. F. Davis of the Lester Park Methodist church, and he spoke particularly of the desire in the heart of man that he be remembered after death. An eloquent tribute to the women of the corps closed the address. Mrs. Hewitt sang a solo "Face to Face," being her selection, and the service was a beautiful and touching one.

Entertains at Cards.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Eischen entertained at cards last evening at their home, 630 West Third street. The guest of honor was Mrs. J. Beaudin, of St. Paul, who is visiting Mr. and Mrs. Edward P. Kreimer of 118 Seventh avenue west. The rooms were prettily decorated in lilies and palms and five hundred was played. The card favors were won by Mrs. Baudin, Edward Kreimer and W. H. Dean.

Pupils' Musicale.

Tomorrow evening the pupils of the Tyler Vocal Art school and the piano pupils of Mrs. D. H. Day will appear in a musicale at the Lyceum theater. Much interest is always shown in the annual recitals of both the Tyler pupils and those of Mrs. Day and the combination of the two promises to fill the Lyceum with the interested friends of the young musicians. By request the prison scene from "Il Trovatore" will be sung by Mrs. James McAuliffe, Mr. Tyler and a number of assisting pupils.

Personal Mention.

Mrs. C. Poirier and Miss Jean Poirier have returned from California, where they have been on a several months' trip. They were in San Francisco during the recent disaster.

Mrs. J. L. Washburn is at St. Paul.

You feel stupid after eating heavy foods—they draw blood away from the brain during digestion.

You can't work brain and stomach to their full capacity at the same time.

For a clear brain all day try Apitezo with cream for lunch as well as breakfast.

Apitezo

is the only food in which all the necessary food elements are scientifically combined. It is good for old and young—for growing children and their mothers and for growing business men.

Apitezo is worth eating for what it does—it keeps you well supplied with the little red corpuscles which are your business amunition.

And Apitezo is worth eating for what it is—a crisp, delicious cereal—as tasty as any you ever ate, and the only one containing plenty of iron, in its natural vegetable form.

Sold by grocers everywhere.

WHAT RETAIL MARKETS OFFER.

Egg plant, 15 cents each.
Cauliflower, 25 and 30 cents each.
Sweet potatoes, 8 cents a lb.
Veal loaf, 20 cents a lb.
Lamb chops, 15 cents a lb.

The market is simply teeming with all sorts of delicious things and quantities of them. Fish seems to be the thing that most people want most for the market windows are full of them and the orders come in thick and fast, too. Lamb is in especially fine condition and broiled chops for breakfast are one of the delicacies of the season.

Egg plant and cauliflower are two of the vegetables that are particularly nice looking and which will doubtless receive their share of housewifely attention. The sweet potatoes are getting more expensive being 2 cents more per lb. than they have been. The tomatoes and green peas remain respectively at a dollar a basket and 80 cents a peck.

Delectable Recipes for Eclairs

By EMMA PADDOCK TELFORD.

To Make Eclairs.

My Dear Mrs. Telford:

Would you kindly publish a recipe for making eclairs? Also let me know how to make coffee cake with bread dough. Should the eggs be added before letting it raise, or after? Thanking you, I remain yours truly,

MRS. J. S. D.

Put into a large saucepan, one half cup butter and one cup boiling water. As soon as it begins to boil, add a pint of flour, stir well for five minutes, then beat with a vegetable masher. As soon as perfectly smooth, remove from the fire, and when cold break into it five eggs, one at a time, beating hard with the hand. This will take about twenty-five minutes. When well mixed, drop on buttered sheets in oblong pieces four inches long and one and a half inches wide and bake in a rather quick oven about twenty-five minutes. As soon as done, ice with vanilla or chocolate frosting and when cold split and fill with cream or strawberry or raspberry preserves. In the latter case they are named after the fruit with which they are filled.

Cream for Filling.

This may be whipped cream sweetened and flavored with vanilla, or a cooked cream made in this way: Put a pint of milk minus a half cupful in the double boiler. When it reaches the boiling point stir in two tablespoonfuls of corn starch wet with the half cupful cold milk; stir constantly ten minutes; beat three eggs light, with three-fourths cupful sugar, then pour over them two or three spoonfuls of the thickened milk; mix well, then turn into the double boiler with the rest of the hot milk. Cook ten minutes. Add a teaspoonful of butter and when cool flavor with vanilla, lemon or chocolate.

Old Moravian Coffee Cake.

Coffee cake is made in both ways—adding the eggs when the sponge is set at night, or after the dough is raised in the morning. This old Moravian recipe comes from Staten Island. Into one pint of warm milk that has been heated almost, but not quite, to the scalding point, then cooled to lukewarm, put one-half cup white sugar, three tablespoonfuls of butter, one egg and three-fourths of a yeast cake dissolved in a little cold milk. Beat and mix thoroughly together, adding flour to make a soft dough like that for rolls. Let this rise all night, protected from draughts. In the morning put the dough into pans until very light, then with the thumb make deep holes, an inch apart on the surface. In each hole put a small lump of butter, a generous seasoning of sugar and a pinch of cinnamon and bake in a quick oven.

Coffee Cake From Risen Bread Dough.

Take enough risen bread dough to make a small loaf. Add to it one-quarter cup soft butter, one-half cup sugar, one well beaten egg and a few gratings of nutmeg. Mix thoroughly, then knead for ten minutes, keeping it as soft as possible. Pat into shape to fit a buttered pan, cover lightly and let it rise until light. Sprinkle the top with sugar and cinnamon and bake.

Raisin Coffee Cake.

Add to one cup scalded milk, one-third cup shortening, one cup sugar, and a scant half teaspoonful salt. When lukewarm, beat in one yeast cake dissolved in a quarter cup of lukewarm milk and flour to make a stiff batter.

Beat thoroughly, cover, and place where it will keep warm over night. In the morning, blend a beaten egg with the dough, add a half cup seeded raisins and roll the mixture on a floured board to three-quarters of an inch in thickness. Put into a buttered biscuit pan, cover and let it rise until it doubles its bulk. Brush with melted butter, sprinkle with powdered sugar and cinnamon and bake in a moderate oven half an hour.

This bread may be baked in a ring. If preferred, by putting the dough into a deep pie plate, having in its center a well-greased muffin ring or a piece of stiff brown paper fastened together to make a circle.

Life of Shoes Lengthened by Care Given Them

No care given any part of the feminine wardrobe is rewarded so generously as the attention paid to the shoes. It is said that the life of a pair of shoes can be lengthened according to the amount of care bestowed upon them. Shoe trees are one of the most necessary appliances for restoring the shape, and should always be put into the shoes immediately after they are taken off. Several pairs of shoes should be kept in operation at one and the same time, so that the wear and tear does not fall upon one pair alone.

Wet or damp shoes should be given special care, for if placed on a radiator or near a fire the chances are the leather will be ruined, for a chemical change takes place when the leather is subjected to heat, which dries and parches it so that it will soon crack like pasteboard.

Dry shoes by evaporation, in the open air if possible, or simply by exposing them in a warm room, but never in the oven or any similar spot. Clean with damp cloth, afterward applying some good dressing to soften the leather. Any paste containing turpentine should be avoided; one can easily detect the odor, for, although it gives a good polish at first, it eats into the surface of the leather and ruins the luster, especially of patent or enamel leather.

In selecting shoes take into consideration for what purpose they are intended and the amount of wear they are to get. For instance, for walking get a good strong leather that will stand the wear and tear, while for dress buy just the lightest, most flexible kid possible. It must be taken into consideration, also, whether one is to walk a good deal in buying business shoes, or whether the wearer is to sit at a desk all day. In the latter case a medium weight shoe will be pleasanter to wear, and will answer every purpose.

If but one pair of shoes is to do for all occasions, it is unwise to purchase an extreme style. There are always many new models on the market which are introduced to give variety and to sell to women who are always on the lookout for something unusual. Insist on having a perfect fit. Shoes that are ill fitting will wear out much quicker than those which fit properly.

Don't neglect to have shoes fixed when they come to the worn-over-at-the-heels period, for, according to the old saying, "A stitch in time saves nine," the same advice applies to shoes. Each little defect remedied will lengthen the life of the shoes immeasurably. Many women are subject to the unfortunate infliction of excessive perspiration, and nothing so quickly ruins a shoe as keeping the leather damp day after day. It is absorbed into the leather and causes its premature decay. Dry the shoes, lining and leather, thoroughly before using again. There are powders now which can be shaken into the shoe that will do much to relieve this tendency to excessive perspiration, and which are a boon to tired feet as well.

In the matter of russet shoes no paste or dressing containing acid, lemon juice or banana peel should be used for cleansing purposes, neither any in which turpentine is an ingredient, all of which are injurious. It is always best to obtain your shoe dressings from your shoe dealer, for he will recommend nothing injurious when the shoes are his own make, for too much depends upon their wearing qualities.

When shoes, however, have finally served their period of usefulness either give them away or "plant" them for nothing is so distressing as to see a quantity of old shoes laying about. Not every one knows that old leather is one of the best fertilizers for trees or vines, and as one old fashioned gardener, who realized their value said, "With a single tree at hand it is sinful to keep shoes out of the ground." They should be "planted" fully two feet down, and nature does the rest. A grape vine, for instance, will take on new life and vigor after being fertilized by old shoes. Another use for old shoes is as a feeder for a fire, for under a layer of coal old shoes will make the very hottest kind of an ironing fire.

Cover Coats Chic for Traveling and Rain

"Cover" coat is the term which characterizes the new automobile, rain and traveling coats, so generally in use this season, and which are developed in a variety of materials, all of which possess those requisite dust resisting and rain repelling qualities so essential in garment of this class.

For both rain and automobile coats rubberized silk is a much favored material, which, as its name implies, protects from the elements, while in appearance it looks like silk, and some of the patterns are extremely chic. Then there is a fine English mohair, which comes in plain, checked or striped weaves, which has the advantage of not being stylish and smart, but repels the dust and dirt and shakes free of wrinkles after a long ride. On account of these good qualities it will in all probability be in demand during the summer.

In all of these garments, both for rainy day and travel wear, the cut is extremely smart, making any one of them a desirable part of the wardrobe. Occasionally there is some sort of trimming applied, and this is generally in a contrasting tone, which gives a touch of daintiness and lends an air to an otherwise severely plain garment.

Leather cuffs and collar in a contrasting color or shade are features of the motor coats, with large mottled buttons fastening in double breasted fashion from neck to hem. In nearly every case the motor coats button up close about the neck, which is finished with a small turnover collar, to be turned up in rough weather, while the rain and traveling models are cut with broad revers and smart coat collars.

In length the three-quarter model is well liked, owing to the fact that women have experienced considerable trouble in getting their skirts dedraggled when the hem of the long coat gets wet. It strikes the bottom of the skirt and soils it much more than a good drenching would.

There has not been the slightest attempt in any of these garments to even suggest the lines of the figure, all of them hanging in loose, graceful folds from the shoulder to hem, with convenient, large pockets set either side, in or on the fronts, and the sleeves large and comfortable.

One of the new features of the sleeves of automobile coats is that there has been provided a full inside cuff portion, which can be drawn snugly about the wrists with elastel and so prevent the arms from becoming chilled from the wind and protected from the dust.

The EVENING STORY.

DEMON ASSISTS

By Marion Ward.

(Copyright, 1906, by Joseph B. Bowels.)

"It's all very well, Demon, but what is a poor girl to do? Did you ever know such stupidity as his, in all your life? I know he—likes me—very much, and—and I know—I like him—and yet he won't say anything, and I can't!"

Demon raised his ears into two sharp points of interrogation. The girl stroked his rough little head.

"What intelligent eyes you have, Demon," she said affectionately. "I verily believe you understand half what is said."

"Half!" he snorted indignantly. "That's just where the human intelligence falls short of the canine. We understand every word you say, but I'm blessed if I can make you understand me."

"Demon, dear, what are you mumbling about?" interrupted his mistress with concern, bending her pretty face down to look at him. Demon fairly gasped.

"Well," he demanded in dog language, "can't you understand plain speaking, you poor, dull-witted mortal?"

Marjorie laid her soft cheek against the rough little head.

"Do you love me very much, Demon?" she questioned.

"Of course I do, better even than mutton bones," he replied loyally, and kissed her in proof thereof.

"Well, then," she demanded with a little laugh, "why don't you help me?"

Demon put back his head and looked earnestly into her face.

"Ah," he remarked, "I hadn't thought of that."

She laughed at his quaint expression.

"Yes, why don't you help me, Big Eyes?" she teased.

He turned without a word and jumped from her lap to the floor. Then he gave a comprehensive shake from the tips of his ears to the end of his tail.

"Certainly I will," he said gravely. "Au revoir." And he trotted in a businesslike little manner out of the room.

Thirty minutes later Demon came trotting importantly back.

"Here he is," he announced, proudly. "Now surely you can settle the business satisfactorily." He glanced back over his shoulder. "Come right in," he called condescendingly. "She's waiting for you."

And as though in response to his invitation a tall, broad-shouldered young fellow with clear eyes and a tanned face came half hesitatingly through the door.

Marjorie dropped the book she was pretending to read with a bang.

"Howard!" she cried, staring at him with pink cheeks and astonished eyes.

He advanced shamefacedly.

"Really, Marjorie, now I am here I don't know how to apologize," he said. "It was all Demon's fault."

"Of course it was," interpolated the Irish terrier, complacently.

Marjorie stared from one to the other. An uncomfortable remembrance of her last injunction to the dog crossed her mind, but she dismissed it with a smile at her own absurdity.

"Demon?" she questioned, looking from him to the eager, bright-eyed little animal and back again.

"Oh!" said Demon, shocked, "you know you sent me!"

"Yes, I assure you it was," explained the young fellow, anxiously. "I was in the middle of a game of golf, and he came running up barking and pulling at my leg, and backing and going on like a small maniac. I only laughed at first and told him to shut up; but he wouldn't, and then I saw he was trying to make me understand he wanted me to go somewhere. So I put down my club and followed him. And would you believe it, he brought me straight up to this door!"

Marjorie's cheeks were vivid carmine, and there was something almost like apprehension in her eyes as she looked at the self-satisfied Demon. Was it really just a peculiar coincidence? Or— She drew a deep breath.

"Quite a mistake, I assure you," she said rather frigidly.

"Oh!" from Demon, reproachfully.

She turned round quickly and caught him up on her lap.

"Demon," she exclaimed, rather breathlessly, "you are uncanny this afternoon."

She looked at the big, apologetic young fellow standing there, and something in his expression made her heart throb. She smiled at him suddenly, brightly.

"As you are here," she invited gently, "won't you sit down?"

"Thank you," he said in a low voice, and sat down in the lounge chair at the opposite side of the fire. Demon looked from one to the other expectantly.

There was a long silence.

Then simultaneously both started a sentence, colored, and stopped short.

"I beg your pardon—?" suggested she.

"No, yours," corrected he.

She bowed. "I was only going to ask you when the match had been decided for," she finished.

He told her, and once started, the conversation flowed on in casual commonplaces. Demon looked from one to the other with profound disgust.

"And after all my trouble!" he cried. His feelings overcame him, and springing from her lap, he planted his four feet pugnaciously on the ground between them, and casting eloquent glances from one to the other howled forth. "Why don't you rub noses?"

They stopped talking in astonishment at this unusual behavior on the well-mannered little dog's part.

"Demon, dear," remonstrated Marjorie. She got up, and went over and knelt down beside him.

"What's the mater, dear?" she questioned gently.

Demon shook himself impatiently from her tender hold, and running over to the young athlete, began pulling and worrying at his legs, casting anxious and expressive glances from his big eyes.

Howard rose wonderingly.

"What does he want now?" he wondered. "What a queer little beggar it is."

"Come on," said Demon, sturdily tugging for all he was worth.

"I suppose he thinks I have been here long enough, and wants to take me back again," guessed the young fellow, laughing, and following obediently. But Demon had no such idea. Straight across the room he went with his captive in tow, till they arrived at within half a foot of where Marjorie stood amazedly watching. Then with a little sigh of exhaustion he released his hold and stood back, watching expectantly. The man and the girl stood close to each other, and the blue eyes looked deep into the grey.

The grey dropped first, and a scarlet wave of color crept into the girl's soft cheeks.

The man pulled himself together with a deep breath.

"What is the little beggar after?" he puzzled.

Marjorie looked down at Demon's expressive eyes, and backed hastily.

"I don't know," she said, hurriedly. "Demon, don't be so ridiculous," she added sharply.

Demon shook his obstinate little head.

"You asked me too," he maintained, and dragged the young man forward again.

"Don't you understand? Rub noses!" he commanded.

They looked at each other and at him. Then they both laughed out.

Marjorie bent down suddenly, and picking him up in her arms went back to her chair.

Demon fought himself free.

Then he sat in the middle of the floor, and lifted up his voice and howled.

"Demon!" said Marjorie.

He howled louder.

"Be quiet, sir, I am ashamed of you," said his mistress sternly.

Demon got up, and trotted across to Marjorie's chair, Howard in pursuit. Then, his pursuer reaching him, he sat down suddenly, pressed tight against Marjorie's knees, and looked up as quiet as a mouse, his beautiful eyes angelic in expression.

"Now—?" he wheedled.

The young man paused. "He seems quiet now—shall I leave him?" he suggested.

Marjorie caressed the rough little head. "Yes," she decided.

The young man took two steps away.

"Ow!" wailed Demon.

He paused, looking over his shoulder. Demon got up solemnly and towed him back.

A light broke in on Howard's brain.

"He wants me to stay near you!" he divined, brilliantly.

"Of course, stupid," agreed Demon.

Marjorie's cheeks burned. She said nothing.

Howard coughed.

"Perhaps as it seems the only way to keep him quiet—" he suggested deprecatingly.

"Yes," murmured Marjorie without looking up.

He pulled up a chair and sat down beside her, very close.

Demon sat in front of both watching them with bright eyes and one ear cocked expectantly.

The young man looked down at him. Her near presence intoxicated him. He was growing reckless.

"He still wants something," he hazarded daringly.

"Yes," murmured Marjorie again.

He drew a deep breath.

There was a long silence.

Then Demon, lifting up his voice gave a wail of disappointment. "Aren't you going to rub noses after all?" he wailed.

Marjorie laughed out suddenly, an hysterical little laugh.

"What are you laughing at," deanded her admirer?

She cast one swift glance at him; her eyes were infinitely sweet.

"I was only thinking," she replied desperately, "ho much more intelligent Demon is than you!"

Demon glanced over at the dusky fire-lit hearth. Then he curled himself contentedly around amongst the satin sofa cushions, a strictly prohibited elysium.

"At last," he murmured, contentedly. "Lord, what a lot of assistance bipeds do need."

WEDDING IS HALTED.

Judge Insists on Father's Consent for Girl of Sixteen.

Omaha, Neb., May 3.—A contemplated marriage of a young girl here did not take place in Douglas county at least by County Judge Leslie, who refused to issue a license.

The bridegroom to be in the case was James Armstrong of South Omaha, a man 52 years of age, who asked for a license to marry a girl more than three times his junior, Miss Gertie Myers of South Omaha, who is only 16 years old.

Mrs. Myers was present and gave her full consent to the marriage, but County Judge Leslie insisted that the law required the consent of the father for the marriage of minor children.

Mrs. Myers said she had been divorced from her husband and the custody of the girl awarded to her, but Judge Leslie insisted that as long as the father is still living his consent must be had.

The disappointed bridal party left in the direction of Council Bluffs.

People live better and dress better than ever before! Women are more critical about their clothes than they used to be—they know better "what's what"!

Probably this store has had more to do with educating tastes in women's apparel than any other hereabouts.

Our beautiful styles are a revelation to those who come here for the first time! The very newest "style touches" are brought out here at the earliest moment—due to eternal vigilance!

Prices, too, are a revelation — women never thought they could get so much beauty, style and character in garm'ts as in our present showing of suits at $25.00, $27.50, $29.50—and in those special lines at $35, $37.50 and $39.50! — and in those rich, silk-lined voile veiling and novelty gowns from $45 up to $75.

WHEAT IS STRONGER

Prices Go Up in All of the American Markets.

Flax Closes Weaker After Session of Quiet in Duluth.

Duluth Board of Trade, May 3.—A good demand made wheat firmer in the American markets today. Shorts were good buyers in Chicago. Both the May and July options were stronger everywhere on this side of the Atlantic. Liverpool closed ½d to ⅝d lower, Paris unchanged to ¼c lower, Berlin ⅜c lower and Budapest ½c higher.

It is estimated that the Argentine shipments of wheat this week will be 3,200,000 bus.

The May option closed ⅞c higher in Duluth, Chicago and New York, ½c in Minneapolis and St. Louis, ¼-⅜c in Kansas City and ⅝c in Winnipeg. The July option closed ⅝c higher in Duluth, ½-⅝c in Chicago, ⅝-¾c in Minneapolis, ⅜c in New York and Winnipeg, ¼-⅜c in St. Louis and ¼c in Kansas City.

Corn was weaker, the July option closing ½c off in Chicago. Corn was ¼d lower in Liverpool. July oats were ⅜-½c off in Chicago.

Car receipts at Duluth were 24, against 3 last year, and at Minneapolis 182, against 137 last year, making a total for the Northwest of 206 against 140 last year. Chicago received 19 against 13 last year.

Primary receipts of wheat were 321,000 bus, last year 300,000 bus. Shipments 164,000 bus, last year 310,000 bus. Clearances of wheat and flour aggraegated 114,000 bus.

Primary receipts of corn were 417,000 bus, last year 132,000 bus. Shipments 283,000 bus, last year 443,000 bus. Clearances of corn 260,000 bus.

Wheat was quiet during the early part of the session of the Duluth market, but some activity and strength developed later. May wheat opened ¼c lower at 78¾c, advanced to 79⅝c and closed at that price, a gain of ⅜c over yesterday. July wheat opened ¼c lower at 75¼c, advanced to 80c at 10:56, declined to 78⅝c at 11:29, rallied to 80¼c at 11:38, declined to 80⅛c at 11:44 and rallied to 80⅜c and closed at 80¼c, a gain of ⅜c over yesterday. September closed ½c higher at 78½c.

Flax was quiet in the local market. The opening was stronger, but prices fell off. Flax was unchanged abroad. There was some inquiry from foreigners, but local exporters did not feel disposed to offer much because of the uncertainty of shipments owing to the marine men's strike. The amount of flax worked for export was small. May flax opened ⅛c higher at $1.16¼, declined to $1.15⅞, rallied to $1.16 and declined to $1.15⅞, at the close, a loss of ¼c from yesterday.

July flax opened ¼c higher at $1.18, fell to $1.17⅜ and ranged between that and $1.17½ during the rest of the session. The closing price was $1.17¼, a loss of ¼c from yesterday. September flax was inactive at the opening, sold at $1.18, declined to $1.17¾ and closed at that price, a loss of ¼c from yesterday. October was inactive and closed at $1.16, a loss of ¼c from yesterday.

May oats and oats to arrive and on track were ⅜c lower and the other coarse grains unchanged.

Following were the closing prices:

THE CHICAGO MARKET.

Wheat Started Out Easier But Quickly Became Firm.

Chicago, May 3.—The wheat market opened easier today, chiefly because of lower curb prices at Minneapolis. There was good demand, however, and the market quickly became firm. Shorts were active buyers on the strength of comparatively firm cables. July wheat opened a shade to ⅛@¼c lower at 78¾c to 78½c and advanced to 78¾@79c. Minneapolis, Duluth and Chicago reported receipts of 216 cars against 258 cars last week and 161 cars one year ago.

The close was strong with July ½c higher at 79@79½c.

The corn market was steady on good buying of the May option by cash houses. Trading was light. The July option advanced to 46¾c, where for a time it held steadily. Local receipts were 204 cars, with 52 of contract grade.

The close was weak, with July off ½c at 45¾c, which was the low point for the day.

The oats market was steady, but trade was almost nothing. July oats opened unchanged at 31⅜c. Local receipts were 131 cars.

Provisions were steady. July pork opened 2½c higher at $15.70. Lard was unchanged at $8.62½@8.65. Ribs were unchanged at 2½c higher at $8.90@8.92½.

Close: Wheat—May, 79⅝c; July, 79@¼c. Corn—May, 46¾@47c; July, 45¾c. Oats—May, 32½c; July, 30⅝@⅝c. Pork—May, $15.20; July, $15.40. Lard—May, $8.30; July, $8.42½. Ribs—May, $8.37½; July, $8.50. Rye—Cash, 62@½c; May, 58c; July, 59c. Flax—Cash Northwestern, $1.13½; Southwestern, $1.07½; May, $1.11¾. Timothy—September, $3.50. Clover—Cash, $11.50. Barley—Cash, 38½@54c. Grain Gossip.

Logan & Bryan, Chicago: Wheat—Wheat had good action today. That is about what we had asked you to expect for the present. It does not act like a market that is headed in either direction for a very important change from the present level of prices. Only yesterday a number of local holders became discouraged and sold out, causing a break. Today the group of bears in the local trade who had become overconfident were forced to change their tactics and cover considerable lines on an advancing market. In addition to this feature, there was enough nervousness over the way the May price lumped a cent or more in very moderate buying, and enough bull features in the news of the session to add some additional buying force, and the result of it all was quite a good bull market, in which the July price at best point was up ⅞c and even the September made ½c gain. Reported sales of new hard wheat to be shipped by way of Galveston late in the season was the bull feature in the last hour. Think local influences almost as important as the outside news for the moment, and unless fresh territory sends crop complaints, believe the traders will be in position to take the bear side for a reasonable turn.

Corn—The corn market, which has shown so much stubbornness for weeks, was obliged to drop back a matter of ½c for the day for all months. About the only modifying influence of the day was the estimate of the Argentine shipments, which was raised to 3,200,000 bus. This is just such a start as that country makes every year at this date in supplying Europe with corn.

Cincinnati Price Current: Past week seasonable and favorable generally for crops. Some localities have needed moisture, late rains and showers having given relief. The situation is eminently encouraging.

• • •

C. E. Lewis, Minneapolis: The wheat market is held up by muscle. There is a large short interest in May, and the bulls are handling their side very well. They are keeping the price so as not to encourage free deliveries, and if they carry this policy out they may make a lively market eventually.

• • •

Chicago Tribune: Country millers in the Northwest were said to have taken delivery of about 3,000,000 bus of May wheat at Minneapolis. Several commission houses in Minneapolis took wheat for them and it is already ordered out. About 1,500,000 bus were delivered after the close of the Minneapolis market on Tuesday, making about 5,300,000 bus May wheat delivered in that market, including 30,000 bus yesterday.

• • •

F. P. Frazier, Chicago: I believe July corn is a sale, and I believe it will sell at 49c. The Argentine crop is going to supply all the European demand from now on. We have always had a movement of corn. It may be a little later this year, but when it does come it will be a big one and it will paralyze the market.

Minneapolis Flour.

Minneapolis, May 3.—The flour market was steady. Shipping directions are coming in a little more freely and the steady tone to the wheat market is giving buyers more confidence in values. Shipments, 47,208 barrels. First patents, $4.10@4.20; second patents, $3.90@4; first clears, $3.50@3.60; second clears, $2.45@2.55.

WRONG REMEDY.

Los Angeles Times: Barney Oldfield was talking about a motor car of enormous horse power, its breakdown, and the effort that had been made to resuscitate it.

"The car was doomed from the start," he said. "They adopted the wrong remedy in its case. Their remedy was wrong as was a Jacksonville waiter's in my case.

"In Jacksonville, one day, I entered a restaurant and ordered a steak. When the steak came on, it was so tough that I could hardly cut the gravy. I said to the waiter:

"'Waiter, this steak is awfully hard to cut.'

"The waiter hurried to me with a solicitous air.

"'Then sir,' he said, 'I'll bring you another knife, sir.'"

A MILLIONAIRE TODAY.

Los Angeles Times: Yasujiro Ishikawa, a Japanese journalist, described in New York a German capitalist of Yokohama.

"It is no wonder," he said, "that this man is a millionaire. His fertility of invention is remarkable, and this fertility is never cramped by principles or by strait-laced notions of morality.

"They say of this man," declared Mr. Ishikawa, "that he reached Johannesburg in his youth destitute, save for a needle and a can of condensed milk.

"Immediately on his arrival, he announced that smallpox was approaching and that he was a surgeon, and with his only two possessions he vaccinated all the good Johannesburgers at $5 a head."

The total sales were 1,338,800 shares.

Stock Gossip.

Logan & Bryan to Paine, Webber & Co.: The action of the market today offers but little encouragement to holders of stock. It seems as if the rally which took place yesterday afternoon was made to sell stocks on and was disappointing to those who bought stocks on the theory that market was entitled to a rally. It is to be expected that the Garfield report on Standard Oil to be transmitted to congress tomorrow will be far-reaching. This undoubtedly is largely responsible for much of today's weakness. We see nothing in the situation on which to buy stocks. The chances to us seem all in the other side just now, and would sell stocks on all bulges.

New York to Baker: Most good judges seem to feel that the liquidation must be about over, but the most sanguine are only able to predict a steadying and moderate rally in prices, believing that the market will show rather a bruised and batered condition for some time to come.

• • •

Dick Brothers to Paine, Webber & Co.: The market continued its rally this morning and further advances were scored all through the list. But the advances induced profit-taking, and renewed liquidation of the shorts, which usually comes as the aftermath of a liquidating movement, and this selling was heavy enough to break the market sharply again in the afternoon and to close it decidedly weak again, so weak that the bulls became quite as despondent as ever. Reading was a feature of the market in the early trading, breaking again before noon and showing noteworthy strength later. In the afternoon Amalgamated Copper became the leader and broke badly under heavy sales to an even lower price than on Wednesday. This selling was chiefly due to expectation of a drastic anti-Standard oil message from the president to congress tomorrow. The closing was weak at about the lowest prices of the day. We think another period of weakness tomorrow will present a good opportunity for purchases.

WEAKNESS IN STOCKS

Due to Profit-Taking and Liquidation by the Shorts.

Closing Was at About Lowest Prices of the Day.

New York, May 3.—Prices in the stock market today opened generally higher than last night with very heavy transactions in individual stocks. In the body of the list the gains were restricted to small fractions, but in special instances there were wide rebounds. Northern Pacific rose 4, Great Northern preferred 2½, Anaconda, Northwestern and Pacific Coast 2, Wabash preferred, Minneapolis, St. Paul & Soo and Texas Pacific 1½, Reading and Cleveland, C., C. & St. Louis 1¼, and a large number of prominent stocks from a large fraction to a point.

Belated openings at advances of a point or more occurred while the general market was showing heaviness on a realizing movement that started after trading had been well under way. In the gains referred to Union Pacific was the most conspicuous stock, but its rise as well as that of other leaders was lost when the selling began. Reading led a sharp break before 11 o'clock. Its decline reached 2¼, Nashville, Chattanooga & St. Louis sold at a decline of 9% Anaconda 7, Smelting, Great Northern preferred and Manhattan 2, Colorado Fuel and Canadian Pacific 1¾, and St. Paul, Atchison, Missouri Pacific, Pennsylvania, Denver & Rio Grande, Copper, United States Steel, Brooklyn Transit, Locomotive, American Car and Lead 1 to 1½. The market became much more active on the break, but supporting orders appeared and prices rallied before the end of the hour.

Support for Reading and its recovery to above 115 quieted apprehension of renewal of forced liquidation. A sensational recovery followed all around, but the activity of the dealings materially diminished. The New York traction stocks were sharply depressed. Metropolitan dropped 4½ and Interborough preferred 2. New York, C. & St. Louis second preferred fell 6, Minneapolis & St. Louis 2½, Allis-Chalmers preferred 2, Steel 1¾ and a number of other a point or more. A brisk demand developed before noon which carried prices generally upwards. Tennessee Coal rose 1½ above last night and Railway Steel Spring 1¾. Bonds were irregular at noon.

The tone of speculation turned quite strong after 12 o'clock and there was a sharp rise all through the list to the opening figures or above. Business which had been large at the rise began to slacken when the market closed off at 1 o'clock. National Lead improved 2¼ and the Smelting stocks 1 to 1¾.

A spasm of selling late in the day forced the prominent stocks down from 1 to 2 points from their best prices and carried back Amalgamated Copper to 98¾, the lowest of the day. Intermittent rallies were poorly held and the market was under considerable pressure again at 2 o'clock. Smelting preferred gained 2 points.

Prices fluctuated uncertainly over a narrow range. Union Pacific and some others got down to the low point. Efforts to get prices up again met renewed selling pressure and Copper fell back to 98⅞, loss of 3¾. American Snuff sold at a decline of 5 and C., C., C. & St. L., 2½. The closing was weak and quite active.

Copper Gossip.

Boston to Paine, Webber & Co.: The market today was very disappointing to the local traders, as they looked for a rally that did not come. It is evident that the heavy sales of yesterday did not complete the liquidation and on every strong spot today stocks were heavily sold. It must be remembered, however, that stocks are now selling at the low point for several months and that the long side is the side to play with the greatest chance of profit. A stock like Amalgamated, paying 7 per cent and selling at less than par, is surely a bargain for a long pull. Don't be afraid to buy the coppers on these weak days.

St. Paul Live Stock.

St. Paul, May 3.—Cattle receipts, 500; steady. Grain fed steers, $3.50@5.50; cows and heifers, $2.50@4.50; calves, $1.50@4.50; stock steers, $2.50@4; feeders, $3@4.50. Hogs, receipts, 2,400; strong to 5c higher; range, $6.20@6.35; bulk, $6.20@6.30. Sheep, receipts, 300; quiet; demand strong; prices steady; sheep, $3.75@6; lambs, $4.50@6.50.

The Cotton Market.

New York, May 3.—The market for cotton futures opened quiet at an advance of 1 to 3 points and shortly afterwards showed a net gain of 2 to 3 on the general list on steady cables and a little covering. Trading was very quiet, however, with no demand of consequence and prices later eased off to a little under last night's finals under liquidation and selling for short account inspired by good weather reports, absence of support and the unsettled tone of the stock market. Cotton spot closed quiet; mid ups, 11.75; do gulf, 12.00; sales, 2,100 bales; cotton futures closed quiet and steady; May, 11.15; June, 10.96; July, 10.95; August, 10.79; September, 10.50; October, 10.43; November, 10.42; December, 10.44; January, 10.48; February, 10.51; March, 10.54.

THE PRODUCE MARKETS.

The following prices, with the exception of those on hay, feed and meats, are the official quotations of the Duluth Produce exchange, and shippers can rely upon them as being correct. The list is corrected daily by the secretary, and it shows accurately the market condition up to 12 o'clock on the date of issue. The weekly market letter, published on Fridays, is not an official statement of the exchange, but the information is gathered personally from the different dealers.

WED ON SHORT NOTICE.

Spokane Physician Courts an Ohio Girl by Mail.

Zanesville, Ohio, May 3.—The wedding of a popular young Zanesville woman and a practicing physician of Spokane, Wash., celebrated here, was the culmination of an old and interesting romance. The parties to the marriage were Miss Agnes Meeds of this city and Dr. G. S. Armstrong of Spokane.

Neither Dr. Armstrong nor his bride had ever seen each other until last week. It was while treating a patient at a Spokane hospital about two years ago that he became quite intimately acquainted with the nurse who was assisting him. During the course of a conversation the nurse remarked to him that she had a very dear friend in Zanesville, and the result was that Miss Meeds and the doctor were introduced to each other by mail. Correspondence led to the wedding.

They kept up a correspondence and finally decided to get married, if agreeable after each had seen the other.

Accordingly Dr. Armstrong came to this city and met his bride. Miss Meeds has been money order clerk at the local postoffice for the last eight years, and did not relinquish her position until the first announcement of her approaching marriage was made to her friends.

TOSSED FROM BEDS BY AN EXPLOSION.

Butte, Mont., May 3.—Burglars caused an explosion in the bar of the Johnson house, which wrecked the safe, blew out a big plate-glass window and played havoc with the bar fixtures and glassware and scared persons in the vicinity half to death. They secured about $100 and escaped.

Shortly after the place had been closed about 2 o'clock in the morning, the burglars, believed to have been three in number, entered the saloon and began operations on the safe. Nitro-glycerin was used to blow off the door and the safe was completely shattered. There was $230 in money in the safe and $95 in coin was found scattered about in the wreckage, and it is thought that some of the bills were destroyed.

The shock of the explosion was so great that persons in the upper part of the hotel were thrown from their beds and many became panic-stricken, believing an earthquake had occurred. Houses in the vicinity were shaken by the force of the explosion and many windows broken.

Police Captain McGrath was near by and hurried to the saloon, but the robbers had fled. Several persons, however, say that they saw the three men, who were dressed in dark clothing and wore masks.

MIND RESTORED BY OPERATION

Man Who Was Insane for Two Years Finally Cured.

Tamaqua, Pa., May 3.—To use his own words, the last two years have been "as a night" to Conrad Koenig, a young business man of this town. His experience has, it is said, been without precedent, and is awakening great interest in medical circles all over the country.

Two years ago, while Koenig was walking along the street on a blustery winter morning, he slipped and fell on the ice, striking violently on his head. He was partially stunned, but soon recovered and thought little of the accident. A few weeks later he became morose and manifested lapses of memory. His condition rapidly became more serious, and in a short time he became a raving maniac. His family is one of the wealthiest in this town, and he was taken to various sanitariums and placed under treatment, but all to no avail. Finally it became necessary to place him in an insane asylum.

As a last resort Dr. A. B. Fleming, a graduate of the Medico-Chirurgical College of Philadelphia, and up to a short time ago resident physician in the state hospital, was called in on the case. He carefully went over its history, learned of Koenig's fall two years ago and decided that the disorder of his brain was due to a depression of the skull.

A superficial examination tended to confirm this theory, and he decided to trephine the skull. With the assistance of Dr. Newton Stine of Middleport, Dr. O. K. Spear of this town, both graduates of the Medico-Chi, and Miss Flora B. Smith, a trained nurse from the Ashland state hospital school, Dr. Fleming performed the operation. With a conical trephine auger he bored a hole in the back of the head at the spot where the center of visual and mucular memories is located. The auger is so constructed that it penetrates the skull bone and removes a circular piece of the bone, which the physicians call a button. Four of these buttons were removed, each one about an inch from the other. Then Dr. Fleming chisled out the square piece of bone. He found that the inner table of the skull had been depressed about an eighth of an inch. This depression irritated the brain and finally brought about insanity.

When Koenig recovered from the effect of the ether he had inhaled he sank into a deep, peaceful sleep, and finally awoke somewhat dazed. This gradually wore off, and he took up the threads of memory where he had dropped them, almost two years ago. He asked about certain details connected with his business, and about certain matters in which he had been interested. Slowly but surely his mind clarified, and he asked if he had been ill. When told that he had, he inquired how long. He evinced great surprise, and said that he had no recollection whatever of what had transpired since about six weeks following the time that he fell on the pavement. He inquired as to what had occurred during the last two years, like a man who had been on a long journey. His family is now engaged in telling from time to time what transpired in that period when he was a man without a memory.

Koenig is still confined to his room, but it is thought that it will be possible for him to be about again in a few weeks. His mental disorder is entirely cured.

AN INTERVENING PETITION FILED

Against American Reserve Bond Company by Fifty More.

Chicago, May 3.—Fifty more complainants today entered into the attack upon the American Reserve Bond company in the United States circuit court. Judge Bethea allowed them to file an intervening petition.

Their claims against the company aggregate $20,000. After granting the filing of the petition, the court ordered that the bond of the Western Trust & Savings bank, which is acting as receiver, be increased from $200,000 to $250,000. This increase in the bond was ordered because of the discovery that the bond company has $27,000 on deposit in a local bank and securities valued at $300,000 in a safety vault in this city.

It was declared in court today by the receiver that in addition to the assets held in this city, the company has $230,000 deposited with state officials in Kentucky and $1,200,000 in Missouri.

St. Louis, May 3.—Application was made in the circuit court last night for the appointment of a receiver for the American Reserve Bond company in Missouri, to prevent the Missouri assets of the company falling into the hands of the Western Trust & Savings bank, which was yesterday appointed receiver for the company by the federal court in Chicago.

Clarence T. Case, St. Louis attorney for the company, who made an answer to the application, entered the appearance of the company and consented to the appointment of a receiver, said today that the reason for the action was to preserve the assets of the company in Missouri to the Missouri bondholders.

CLOSED TO TEAMS.

Repairs to Approach Will Prevent Ferry Bridge From Transporting Wagons.

Teams will not be able to use the ferry bridge for several days next week, owing to the repairs that are necessary on the south approach, which was injured by the big storm last fall.

The work of repairing the approach will be begun early next week, and the bridge will have to be closed to teams for two or three days at least. The car will continue its regular trips for passengers, however.

Residents of Park point who contemplate moving, or who require any supplies of fuel or provisions, would therefore do well to act before the end of the week.

GOING AFTER TREASURE

Antiquarians to Search for Valuables Which King John Lost.

He Was on the Run and the Barons Chasing Him.

London, May 3.—There is more likelihood of success rewarding the efforts that are soon to be made to recover the treasure lost by King John nearly six and one-half centuries ago than seemed probable when some inkling of the project first leaked out. The Society of Antiquaries is backing the scheme with money and enthusiasm. Its members have great faith in the investigations and calculations made by the learned assistant secretary, St. John Hope, who has been quietly working on the matter for several years. The search will be conducted under his direction.

Everybody knows—or, rather, is supposed to know—that King John lost his baggage train when he was taking a short cut across the Wash to escape his wrathful barons who were in hot pursuit of him. The Wash, it should be explained for the benefit of those readers who have forgotten much of their geography they learned at school, is a wide and shallow estuary on the east coast of England, between the counties of Lincoln and Norfolk. John was a bad egg. According to one of his candid contemporaries, he was "a knight without truth, a king without justice, a Christian without faith." He had signed the Magna Charta, the great bulwark of English freedom, only to repudiate it, and when war broke out between him and the barons again, he knew that they would not give him another chance to break his word with them. In his haste to make tracks he did not make sufficient allowance for the tide, and the quicksands swallowed up his army chest and his crown jewels and a lot of other paraphernalia, that it now worth vastly more than it was in his time. eH had a close shave of it himself, according to Shakespeare, who thus refers to the incident in King John:

I tell thee, Hubert, half my power this night
Passing these flats is taken by the tide,
These Lincoln waves have devoured them.
Myself, well mounted, hardly have escaped.

According to some accounts, to drown his sorrow, he went on a big spree which brought on an attack of dysentery, of which he died. He was buried in Worcester cathedral, wrapped in a monk's gown, and as a further protection against vandal hands, was laid between two Saxon saints.

It has been generally assumed that King John's lost treasure was still buried somewhere in the quicksands that the sea overflows at every tide, and that in the course of the centuries that have since elapsed, the stuff must have sunk many fathoms deep in the shifting sand. Under such circumstances, its recovery would be so costly and difficult as to render the prospects of success wellnigh hopeless. But Mr. Hope is able to state definitely that, owing to the changes that have taken place in the sea line and the reclamation of waste lands the treasure now lies some distance inland. In the search for it no diving will be necessary and digging operations are comrapatively cheap. Mr. Hope has made a map of the district as it was in King John's time; on that map he has drawn a line, and somewhere on that line, he asserts, probably about forty feet below the surface, under a substratum of salt, lie King John's crown jewels and army pay chest and the rest of the lost baggage. He has calculated the condition of the tide at the time of the disaster, and the approximate position of the baggage train when the on-rushing waters compelled its abandonment. This enables him to reduce to still narrower dimensions the probable location of the treasure. His fellow antiquarians, who have verified his figures and researches, are convinced that the search is well worth undertaking.

Of course, treasure trove belongs to the crown, but for many years it has been the practice of the crown to pay full marke value for whatever is retained, so that the discoverers, if successful, even if they have to give up the best part of their find are assured of a rich reward. The coins alone, at this date, are immensely valuable. What the crown jewels would be worth, it is impossible now even to hazard a guess, but it is certain they would be appraised at a big sum. And historic associations would confer a considerable price on small articles that have no intrinsic value.

NIGHTS OF UNREST.

No Sleep, No Rest, No Peace for the Sufferer from Kidney Troubles.

No peace for the kidney sufferer—
Pain and distress from morn to night.
Get up with a lame back,
Twinges of backache bother you all day,
Dull aching breaks your rest at night,
Urinary disorders add to your misery.
Get at the cause—cure the kidneys.
Doan's Kidney Pills will work the cure.
They're for the kidneys only—
Have made great cures in Duluth.

J. Vaughn of 532 First St., W., Duluth, Minn., says: "In the summer of 1898 I told the people of Duluth through our local newspapers of the splendid results I had obtained from the use of Doan's Kidney Pills. My trouble was a kidney and bladder disorder that was painful any annoying and had clung to me for a considerable time. The kidney secretions were quite irregular and contained a sediment which varied in color and condition. There were dull heavy pains through the loins and I was very restless at night, being unable to remain in one position for any length of time. The trouble was becoming worse when I was induced to try Doan's Kidney Pills. I continued taking them until entirely relieved of the affliction. I am glad to say that the cure has been permanent, and will always be pleased to recommend Doan's Pills."

LATE DOINGS IN MICHIGAN

Two Young Men Nearly Drowned by Capsizing of Their Boat.

Menominee—Thomas Powers and James Chase, well-known young men of Menekaune, were nearly drowned Tuesday opposite this city by the capsizing of their rowboat while fishing. They clung to the overturned boat for a long time, calling for help until they were exhausted and benumbed with the cold. A passing boat chanced to pick them up in time to save their lives.

The Upper Peninsula Educational association will hold its annual three days' convention in Menominee on Oct. 11, 12 and 13. Over 1,000 teachers will be present.

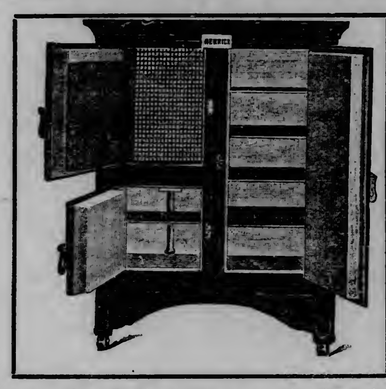
Marquette—The supreme court at Lansing has granted the writ of mandamus asked by Former Mayor Walter Ward, requiring the common council to recount the ballots cast in the First and Fifth wards, in the latter case with the proviso that the ballot box had not been tampered with. A recount in the Second ward is denied, presumably for the reason that the seals of the box there have, it is alleged, been disturbed. On the face of the returns, Ward was defeated for re-election by Rush Culver by seven votes.

Bernard J. Falch, United States postoffice inspector, was stricken with partial paralysis Tuesday morning while at breakfast at the Clifton hotel. Mr. Falch has been in poor health for some time, and his condition is alarming to his physician and friends. During the past month he has given considerable attention to criminal cases calendared for trial at the present term of the United States district court, and the strain from overwork is thought to have induced his present malady. His family reside in California.

Munising—In a decision handed down, Federal Judge Wanty has denied the injunction sought by the American Sulphide company of Boston against the Munising, Mich., Paper company, to restrain it from operating its immense plant, pending the outcome of litigation involving a patent right. He did not pass upon the merits of the case, holding the defendant entirely responsible for any judgment that might herefater be secured.

In the case of Charles Krause, agent of the Quincy Copper Mining company, an injunction was granted and order issued requiring the defendant to make an accounting. This suit is for infringement of patent on a device used in stamp mills.

McCRAY and HERRICK REFRIGERATORS



You must see these Refrigerators to appreciate how nice and cheap they are. It is not the cold alone which is so essential in refrigeration, as may be easily demonstrated, but the circulation of cold, dry air, forced by proper lines of construction proper insulation and arrangement. Perishable foods kept in our refrigerators are preserved in the best possible manner. (Fruits, vegetables, etc., can be stored in our refrigerators together with milk, cream, butter and other susceptible articles without contagion or taint. The walls are always dry and sweet, even after years of use. Matches can be kept on the shelves of our refrigerators for months and struck with ease on any of the linings.) To be sanitary the refrigerator must have this positive forced circulation.

The importance of a sanitary receptacle for the storage of perishable foods is recognized by more each year, since it is found that MUCH SICKNESS is traced to unsanitary conditions in connection with the foods.

PRICES FROM $15.00 to $115.00.

TOMLINSON STEAMER SOCAPA GETS A CREW OF FIREMEN AND SAILS

Had Been Delayed by Her Firemen Going on Strike.

Estimated Fifty Vessels With Coal Are Waiting to Unload.

President Livingstone Says Everything is Progressing Well.

The Tomlinson steamer Socapa, which was held up here yesterday because of her firemen going on strike, went out at 8:30 this morning loaded with ore. Whether or not the strikers went back or other men were put in their places has not been learned at present. At the company's office nothing would be said about this matter except that she went out with firemen.

That was to be inferred anyhow, but nothing could be found out as to whether or not non-union men had been put to work. The agent for the Marine Firemen, Oilers and Watertenders' association with headquarters in Superior, declared that the strikers did not go back to work, but as to whether non-union men had been obtained he asserted he did not know. He believed the steamer went shorthanded but the Tomlinson office says she did not.

CREWS OF THREE

Big Coal Carrying Boats Are Called Out at Milwaukee.

Milwaukee, May 4.—The mates, pilots and oilers of three large coal carrying vessels arriving here have been called off and M. W. Fulton, business agent of the Pilots' Protective association, announced today that the boats would have trouble in getting away. The boats affected are the Manchester, Griffin and Manola.

While the longshoremen claim they are on a strike, vessels that are arriving here are experiencing no trouble in unloading. Boats which are carrying round trip crews from Lake Erie ports will not feel the effects of the strike until the return trips have been completed.

Fifty Vessels Waiting to Unload.

Cleveland, May 4.—It was estimated in shipping circles today that not less than fifty vessels with approximately 400,000 tons of ore on board, are now lying at the various lake ports awaiting to discharge their cargoes, which owing to the strike of the longshoremen's union cannot be done. The delay is causing heavy losses to the vessel owners, but that carrying rates will be advanced to recoup these losses later is generally conceded.

Reports indicate that very few of the mates have joined in the strike movement. As a result the vessels are fully manned and can be moved as usual and only the refusal of the longshoremen to unload them stands in the way of a resumption of traffic.

Everything Progressing Well.

Detroit, May 4.—President William Livingstone, today declined to say whether the Lake Carriers' association has begun organizing a force of non-union longshoremen to unload the boats held up at lower lake ports as a result of the longshoremen's strike. "Everything is progressing satisfactorily from our standpoint," he said, however.

"I am advised from Buffalo today that five of our boats have started up the lakes in the past twenty-four hours from that port."

CONVENTION ABANDONED

By Virginia Commercial Club in Regard to Electric Lines.

Virginia, Minn., May 4.—(Special to The Herald.)—Because of the fact that the villages of Hibbing and Chisholm have already granted franchises to the Northern Traction company to build street railway lines, the Virginia Commercial club has decided that it would now be useless to hold a convention of delegates from the different range cities to discuss the matter of a uniform franchise. So it was decided to abandon the idea and the committee appointed to call the convention was discharged.

The committee recently appointed to further the project of county division has done nothing and it was the sentiment of the club that the committee should get together and commence work. The feeling is now prevalent that a convention should be held to discuss the question and formulate some plan of action that would be agreeable to all the people of the northern half of the county, and it was thought that probably if Allen Junction should be designated as the temporary county seat, the people of all the range towns, including those of the Vermilion, might be induced to join in a movement for county division. It was also the sentiment that the citizens of the Floodwood district should be invited to send delegates to the conference, with a view to formulating a plan to divide the county into three parts with Floodwood designated as the temporary county seat of the southwest portion. The committee will probably hold a meeting in the near future and take some action in the matter.

D. J. KEEFE,
President of the Longshoremen, Who Ordered Marine Strike.

ARMY DID WONDERS

In Straightening Out Things in Devastated City of Frisco.

Hundreds of Carloads of Supplies Pouring in for Sufferers.

San Francisco, May 4.—The army people at the Presidio have accomplished wonders in the way of straightening out the badly mixed up condition of affairs in this stricken city. In an interview of the subject today, Gen. Funston said: "This is the largest rescue work ever attempted by the army.

"In the East they speak of fire as 'The greatest catastrophe of the age,' but those who have been engaged in the work of relief on the ground do not yet realize that 200,000 people made homeless and penniless in a day, have been fed and sheltered for two weeks and no man, woman or child has gone hungry. The relief committee wrought wonders but in the end it must be admitted that without the army it would have been impossible.

"Every quartermasters' store house in the country was emptied to express trains in a day.

"For the first few days the tent cities that sprung up in the Presidio were without order or arrangement. Many of the homeless were crowded together in the wooden barracks. The conditions resulting were not sanitary and yesterday they were moved into a city of Sibley tents which had come by express from the East. Possibly the only problem which now remains for the army in this particular camp is to fix the day when it shall come down and the campers return to normal conditions in the city.

"Rapid progress is being made in the medical supply depot at the Presidio which will soon be able to furnish the hospitals with all the drugs necessary for the treatment of the sick. The work of systematizing the depot was begun last Saturday when Col. Brechemin, U. S. A., was instructed to take charge of all medical supplies sent to the relief committee, as well as those belonging to the government and to issue them to the different hospitals and dispensaries recognized by the Red Cross society.

"In the matter of outside relief, the Southern Pacific officials state that up to 7 o'clock yesterday morning 1,056 carloads of supplies had been delivered in San Francisco from all sections. For the twenty-four hours ending at 7 o'clock yesterday morning, eighty-five carloads were sent to the city from Oakland and sixty more cars were still in the Oakland yards. In addition, forty-one cars were enroute west from Reno. The Southern Pacific people are of the opinion that an additional 1,000 carloads of various kinds of supplies

MANY MILLIONS

Paid Out by San Francisco Mint for the Banks.

San Francisco, May 4.—The United States mint, which is now being used as the general clearing house for the banks, has paid out between $7,000,000 and $8,000,000 to depositors since it opened, Tuesday last.

Yesterday morning the number of persons who were anxious to secure their money was much smaller than expected. The line did not extend for half a block. This may have been due to the fact that none of the savings banks are paying depositors. The savings banks will not open for two weeks, and there will be no opportunity to withdraw accounts before that time.

DOBIE GOES TO NORTH DAKOTA.

Minneapolis, May 4.—Gilmore Dobie, famous as a quarter back for the Minnesota eleven in years gone by and for four years assistant coach of the Gopher team, has severed his relations with the athletic association of the university and goes to Fargo to become a faculty director of the North Dakota Agricultural college. He will not only coach the football and baseball teams, but will work through the school season as a tutor.

GARFIELD SAYS THE STANDARD OIL COMPANY PROFITS $750,000 A YEAR BY UNLAWFUL RATES OF RAILROADS

Results of Commissioners' Investigation Transmitted to Congress.

Numerous and Flagrant Violations of the Law Are Reported

By Means of Secret Rates and Various Discriminations.

JOHN D. ROCKEFELLER,
Head of Standard Oil.

Washington, May 4.—President Roosevelt today transmitted to congress the report of James R. Garfield, commissioner of corporations, giving the results of his investigation of transportation and freight rates in connection with the oil industry.

The president expresses the view that the report is of capital importance because of the effort now being made to secure such enlargement of the scope of the interstate commerce commission as will confer upon it power to meet the demonstrated needs of the situation. The facts in the report, he declares, are for the most part not disputed. That the Standard Oil company has benefited enormously up almost to the present moment by secret rates, many of which were clearly unlawful, the president says the report clearly shows the benefit thereby secured amounting to at least three-quarters of a million a year. On this subject he says:

"This three-quarters of a million represents the profit that the Standard Oil company obtains at the expense of the railroads; but of course the ultimate result is that it obtains a much larger profit at the expense of the public. A very striking result of the investigation has been that shortly after the discovery of these secret rates by the commissioner of corporations, the major portion of them were promptly corrected by the railroads, so that most of them have now been done away with. This immediate correction, partial or complete of the evil of the secret rates, is of course, on the one hand an acknowledgment that they were wrong and yet were persevered in until exposed; and on the other hand a proof of the efficiency of the work that has been done by the bureau of corporations."

The statement is added that the department of justice will take up the question of instituting prosecutions in at least certain of the cases, and the hope is expressed that congress will enact into law the bill of Senator Knox to correct the interpretation of the immunity provision in Judge Humphrey's decision.

Continuing the president says:

"But in addition to these secret rates the Standard Oil profits immensely by open rates, which are so arranged as to give it an overwhelming advantage over its independent competitors. This is a characteristic example of the numerous evils which are inevitable under a system in which the big shippers and the railroad are left free to crush out all individual initiative and all power of independent action because of the absence of adequate and thorough-going governmental control. Exactly similar conditions obtain in a large part of the West and Southwest."

It is not possible, he says, to put into figures the exact amount by which the Standard profits through the gross favoritism shown it by the railroads in connection with the open rates.

"The profit, of course, comes not merely by the saving in the rate itself, as compared with its competitors, but by the higher prices it is able to charge, and by complete control of the market which it secures, thereby getting the profit on the whole consumption."

The president calls attention to that feature of the report regarding the manner in which the law is evaded by treating, as state commerce, what in reality is merely a part of interstate commerce. He says it is clearly shown "that this device is employed on the New York Central railroad, as well as on many other railroads, in such fashion as to amount to thwarting the purpose of the law, although the forms of the law may be complied with."

It is unfortunately not true, he says, that the Standard Oil company is the only corporation which has benefited, and is benefiling in wholly improper fashion by an elaborate series of rate discriminations. The sugar trust, he adds, according to the investigation now in progress, rarely if ever pays the lawful rate for transportation. He declares that in the effort to prevent the railroads from uniting for improper purposes, "we have very unwisely prohibited them from uniting for proper purposes; that is, for purposes of protecting themselves and the general public as against the power of the great corporations."

He favors as an element of competition the passage of some such law as that which has already passed the house, putting alcohol used in the arts and manufactures upon the free list, and of keeping the fee to oil and coal lands of the Indian tribes, or on the public domain in the government, the lands to be leased only on such terms and for such periods as will enable the government to enjoy control of them.

Garfield's Report.

In summarizing his report, Commissioner Garfield speaks of his personal visit to the oil fields, and of the great mass of data obtained by him, either personally or through agents of the bureau of corporations. The preliminary study of this material, he says, showed that the most important subject was transportation, which enters so largely into the cost of the finished product, and hence a most important factor in competition.

Taking up the output of refined oil, Mr. Garfield finds that it amounts to about 26,000,000 barrels annually, of which the Standard Oil company directly or indirectly, controls about 22,000,000, and approximately the same proportion of the finished products of petroleum. Continuing, the report says:

"The Standard claims that the location of its refineries and the use of pipe lines are natural advantages to which it is justly entitled by reason of the energy and foresight of its managers. While in a measure that is true, it must not be forgotten that these advantages were in part obtained by means of unfair competitive methods after years of fierce strife.

"The development of the pipe line system by the Standard Oil company was the result of special agreements with railroad companies. Furthermore, those so-called natural advantages have been and are being greatly increased by discrimination in freight rates, both published and secret, interstate and state, which give the Standard monopolistic control in the greater portion of the country, and which so limit competition as to practically prevent the extension of the business of any independent to a point which even remotely endangers the supremacy of the Standard.

"An immediate result of the delimitation of the competitive area is shown by the prices of ordinary illuminating oil throughout the country. After deducting the freight rate the price of such oil is usually from 2 cents to 5 cents a gallon higher in the non-competitive than in the competitive fields. A reasonable profit upon refined oil is about one-half a cent per gallon. It is clear that exorbitant profits are obtained in the non-competitive fields. The monopolistic control extends from the well of the producer to the doorstep of the consumer."

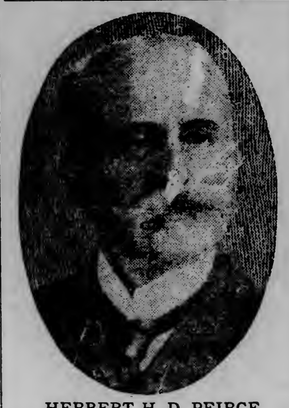
EVERY PROSPECT THAT THE ANTHRACITE STRIKE MAY NOW BE AVERTED

Convention Refers Whole Matter Back to Scale Committee.

Are Instructed to Report to the Convention on Saturday.

Reason to Believe Peaceful Settlement Will be Made.



HERBERT H. D. PEIRCE,
Assistant Secretary of State, Who Is Subject of Charges by Former Consul General McWade of Canton, China.

Scranton, Pa., May 4.—There is every prospect that a strike may be averted. The afternoon session of the anthracite miners' convention lasted an hour and at its conclusion it was announced that the delegates had voted to refer the question of a strike or the acceptance of the operators' proposal for a continuance under the present scale back to the scale committee.

The committee, composed of the executive boards of the three anthracite districts, was instructed to make a recommendation to the convention at tomorrow's session.

Immediately after adjournment, the scale committee met to debate the course it will follow.

With the thirty-six members of this committee now rests the welfare of the 160,000 mine workers.

There is reason to believe that a peaceful settlement will be made, and that the men who have been idle since April 1, will soon be ordered back to the mines.

AGREE ON RATE BILL

Existing Differences Among Senators Have Been Settled.

Satisfactory Amendment Concerning Court Features Prepared.

Washington, May 4.—What amounts practically to an agreement on the existing differences concerning court features of the railroad bill has been reached by the senate conferences, extending over the last week, and Senator Allison will offer an amendment, conferring jurisdiction upon the circuit courts to hear and determine suits brought against the interstate commerce commission. The amendment will not suggest to the court whether their judicial review shall be confined to constitutional questions, or whether it shall be an inquiry into the justice or reasonableness of the rates fixed by the commission. Senator Long, who made the principal legal argument for the house bill, and Senators Aldrich and Crane, the leaders in the movement seeking an amendment providing for a broad court review, expressed themselves today as favoring the amendment, and both factions are agreed that the compromise is satisfactory to President Roosevelt. Undoubtedly this means that obstacles to the speedy passage of the measure have been removed.

BOOST FOR FIRE INSURANCE RATES

Large Companies Decide On Increase of 25 Per Cent.

New York, May 4.—A secret meeting of representatives of practically every fire insurance company operating in the United States was held Wednesday in the office of President George P. Sheldon for the purpose of raising rates all over the country.

The advance will be at least 25 per cent. There is a legislative bill pending making it illegal for fire companies to unite to raise rates, therefore great secrecy is to be observed in the movement.

BURIED THREE HOURS.

Finnish Miner Has Fortunate Escape at the Elba Mine.

Virginia, Minn., May 4.—(Special to The Herald.)—Wednesday morning a Finnish miner at the Elba mine was caught in a fall of ore and completely buried for three hours before he was rescued. Fortunately a sapping of timber fell across his neck in such a way as to keep the ore from his face and consequently he secured sufficient air to sustain life during his burial. His fellow workmen fully expected to find him dead.

BIWABIK SCHOOL BOARD

To Call Election on Building of a New Schoolhouse.

Biwabik, Minn., May 4.—(Special to The Herald.)—The school board of Biwabik district No. 24 has called a special meeting of electors to be held on Tuesday evening next at the Biwabik school building to vote on the proposition of building a school house at the Miller-Monawk mine location in the village of Aurora, and to designate a site therefor, and to vote on the question of building an addition to the Biwabik school. If it is decided to erect a building at the Miller-Mohawk location Aurora people will then enjoy the distinction of possessing two systems of schools, one in the district of Mesaba and one in the Biwabik district, but both within the village limits.

RECEIVERS SAFE FOR THE PRESENT

House Committee Refuses to Report on Hitchcock's Measure.

Washington, May 4.—(Special to The Herald.)—The house committee on public lands today, by a vote of 8 to 4, decided to take no action on Secretary Hitchcock's recommendation to abolish the office of receiver of public money at local land offices throughout the country. A bill, incorporating Secretary Hitchcock's views was introduced and endorsed by Representative Lacey of Iowa, chairman of public lands. The senate committee voted down the same bill a month ago, and the action of the house committee today probably kills it, for this session at least.

VICTIM OF RABIES BARKS LIKE DOG

Four Men Were Required to Control Hans Larson.

Fergus Falls, Minn., May 4.—Hans H. Larson of the town of Trondhem, was brought to this city yesterday and committed to the insane hospital. It is thought he may have been bitten by a mad dog, as he has strong symptoms of hydrophobia.

He was comparatively quiet during his examination, but while the sheriff was waiting the arrival of a rig to take him to the insane hospital, he was seized with a wild frenzy and began barking like a dog. It was a wild, weird bark, and so loud that he could be heard a block away from the detention ward of the jail.

A crowd gathered, attracted by the noise, and four men were required to hold him down. From barking, he turned to biting, and snapped viciously at those around him.

He was thrown upon a bed, and his arms and legs were securely pinioned, but he managed to get a portion of the pillow into his mouth and chewed it viciously, snarling exactly like an enraged dog.

When the pillow was taken from him, he chewed his tongue until the blood poured from his mouth. Two physicians were hastily summoned, and he was finally quieted and removed to the hospital for the insane. His relatives do not know of his having been bitten by a dog, but there have been reports of hydrophobia throughout this section of the state from time to time, and it is possible that he was bitten and that some little time elapsed before the rabies developed.

THE LOSS AT SANTA ROSA AMOUNTS TO $3,000,000.

Oakland, May 4.—Governor Pardee has received a dispatch from Santa Rosa, stating that the property loss caused by the recent earthquake will amount to $3,000,000. It will cost at least $15,000 to clear away the wreckage.

BEAUTIFYING OF DULUTH

Expert to Prepare Comprehensive Plan for Civic Improvements.

Agitation is Started by the Public Affairs Committee.

Following the lead of Washington, D. C., Cleveland, Philadelphia and other thoroughly metropolitan cities, Duluth will probably adopt a system of civic improvement that will make the Zenith City one of the most beautiful municipalities in the country.

The question came up late yesterday afternoon at a meeting of the municipal committee of the public affairs committee, chiefly as a result of the recommendations made by Mayor Cullum at a meeting of the latter committee a short time ago, and it was decided to ask the board of park commissioners to find out what it would cost to bring a qualified man here from the East to draw up a general plan for the beautifying of the city, as was done by Cleveland, Washington, Philadelphia and San Francisco, numbered among the most beautiful towns of the United States.

After the cost is ascertained, the board of park commissioners will, it is expected, work in conjunction with the mayor and city council, the Commercial club and other organizations of Duluth in seeing that the comprehensive system as proposed by the expert be carried out. This action on the part of the municipal committee is by no means a reflection on the ability of the park board members to perform the duties which they have already undertaken. It is generally agreed by everybody who knows anything about the matter, that the board, under direction of H. C. Helm, has accomplished wonders in improving the parks with the means at hand, and outsiders interested in such things have frequently said that the results thus accomplished were quite remarkable.

The new plan applies not only to the parks, but to the whole city as well. It would be beyond the power of the board to undertake to carry it out without the consent, assistance and cooperation of the city authorities and organizations interested in the advancement of the city's interests. The scheme applies to boulevards, parks, play grounds for the children, public buildings, and general improvements, and even after the expert has completed his work it will take years for his plans to be carried out. This has been true of all cities where such ideas have been projected. The proposition is to have some comprehensive system covering the whole city, which may be followed out in the making of all kinds of civic improvements, so that everything along this line will work to the same end.

"We may as well work along metropolitan lines while we are about it," said W. B. Patton, a member of the municipal committee, today. "Duluth should take steps to secure suitable lands for additional parks before there is a further rise in the value of real estate. If the city waits too long it will be unable to get the desired pieces of property, and in a very few years the prices will be so high as to make such purchases almost prohibitive.

"The plan of having an expert prepare a comprehensive system of general improvement has worked out very successfully in certain large cities of the East, and the results have been highly gratifying. Washington is one of the best samples of this. Cleveland is now working along these lines, and it will be years yet before the plans there are fully developed, but even now the benefits are noticeable, and Cleveland is recognized as one of the most beautiful cities in the country.

"Duluth has some beautiful parks at present, and too much cannot be said in praise of the work of Mr. Helm and his assistants, but the city is growing and is going to become a metropolis in the true sense of the word. We will need more parks, and this is the time to start a movement which will mean the proper building and development of the city in the future."

WATERWAYS COMMISSION

Agree on Division of Water at Niagara and the Sault.

Toronto, May 4.—The international waterways commission which completed its work yesterday at Buffalo, has made public its report. It recommends that, exclusive of water required for domestic use or the services of locks in navigation canals, such diversions be limited on the Canadian side to 36,000 cubic feet per second and on the United States side to 18,500 cubic feet per second and in addition thereto, a diversion for sanitary purposes not to exceed 10,000 cubic feet per second authorized for the Chicago drainage canal and that a treaty or legislation be had limiting these diversions to quantities mentioned.

The effect of the diversion of water by the Chicago drainage canal upon the general navigation interests of the great lakes will be considered in a separate report.

Any treaty or arrangement as to the preservation of Niagara Falls shall be limited to twenty-five years. A memorandum was drawn up embodying the following principles in dealing with the whole subject:

No obstruction or diversion shall be permitted in or upon any navigable water crossing the boundary or in or from streams tributary thereto which would injuriously affect navigation in either country.

Each country shall have the right of diversion for irrigation or extraordinary purposes in equal quantities of the waters of non-navigable streams crossing the international boundary. A permanent joint commission can deal much more satisfactory with the settlement of all disputes arising as to the application of these principles and should be appointed.

The American members were of the opinion that the enunciation of principles to govern the making of a general treaty was not within the scope of their functions, moreover the jurisdiction of the American members was restricted to the Great Lakes system.

The resolution in regard to the diversion of water from Sault Ste. Marie river provided that the governments of the United States and Canada should serve all water necessary for navigation purposes at present or in the future and that the surplus should be divided equally between the two countries for power purposes.

POLICE ARREST MANY AGITATORS

Following the Explosion of Bombs in Forest Near Paris.

Paris, May 4.—The body of an unknown man of the Russian type of features and having a revolver wound in his head was found in the forest of Vincennes today. It is believed he was an accomplice of the two anarchists who went to the forest with bombs yesterday.

Following the bomb explosion yesterday, Prefect of Police Lepine ordered the arrest of a number of foreign agitators. Twenty-six of these were taken into custody during the night and three more were arrested this forenoon. The prisoners include a Belgian, who threatened the guard at the entrance of the ministry of finance.

M. Lepine has also ordered the arrest of all persons interfering with liberty of work.

Several small provincial disturbances were reported today. Two dynamite cartridges were exploded at Lens, causing much damage to the houses of two non-strikers.

The mining companies' notification that they will discharge all striking miners has largely augmented the force of workers, who now number 38,000. There are only 15,000 men on strike. The printers, carpenters, tinsmiths and furniture workers of this city have decided not to return to work until their demand for an eight hour day is granted.

LATE DOINGS IN MICHIGAN

Miner in the Baltic Cuts Throat While Temporarily Insane.

Houghton—Henry Nackela, a miner employed at the Baltic, was found in an outbuilding near his boarding house about 10:30 o'clock Tuesday night with his throat cut from ear to ear. It was a clear case of suicide. Nackela had come to the boarding house only that day, and was a stranger to every one there, even to the man with whom he was to room. Nackela and his roommate were about to retire at 10 o'clock, but after they had partially disrobed, Nackela dressed again and left the house. After he had been absent half an hour his roommate became alarmed, and investigation was made.

Sheriff Beck and Turnkey Johnson returned to Houghton Tuesday evening with William Wolf, alias Wall, who had been terrorizing the village of Pelkie and practically all of Laird township for months. The sheriff was notified Monday morning that Wolf was holding the people of the district in terror of their lives, and he went out to bring in the fellow.

Newberry—The mystery of the fate of Thomas Winn, a cook, who disappeared from Camp No. 3 of the C. H. Worcester company early last January, has been solved by the discovery of his remains by the side of an abandoned log barn not over ten rods distant from the house of Peter Gokey, a settler. One hand had been eaten off by some animal.

Winn drank heavily the last few days of his life, and died suddenly from the camp at 9 o'clock at night. He was followed as soon as possible by men with lanterns, but a blizzard was raging and his tracks were quickly covered with snow. An all-night search was fruitless. He was 34 and lived at Reed City, Mich.

Hancock—The department at Hurley, Wis., has been admitted as a member of the Upper Peninsula Firemen's association, an application to that end from the Badger company having been passed upon favorably at a meeting of the executive committee of the organization held primarily for the purpose of completing the final arrangements for the annual tournament. It was necessary to amend the by-laws before Hurley's petition could be granted, the territory of the association having heretofore been limited to the upper peninsula itself. An exception was made in the case of Hurley because it is just across the line from Ironwood, Mich., and in more than one respect is closely allied with that city. The dates selected for the tournament, to be held this year at Houghton, are Aug. 22, 23 and 24, and it is expected that the gathering will be the most successful in the history of the organization. There will be the usual firemen's running races, participated in by the departments from a dozen or more cities and towns, and in addition a street fair and carnival conducted on an elaborate scale. Several thousand dollars will be subscribed by Houghton people to pay the expenses of the meet.

Menominee—Menominee has hopes of a new depot, to be built by the Chicago & Northwestern road. A number of the officials of the company visited the city the other day, inspected the present station, an eyesore to the town, and made such inquiries as to lead to the conclusion that the antiquated frame structure will be replaced by a modern building of brick and stone. It is intimated, in fact, that the hoped-for station will be erected this summer.

CONSEQUENCES MAY BE SERIOUS

British Magistrate at Zululand Has Been Killed by Zulus.

Pietermaritzburg, May 4.—An outrage, which may have serious consequence, has occurred in Zululand. Mr. Stainbank, the British magistrate at Mahlabitini, Zululand, has been killed by Zulus while collecting taxes, near that place.

Mr. Stainbank, his wife, a woman companion, and some mounted police, were caught in an ambush by hostile natives, who fired a volley at them. The magistrate and one of the policemen were fatally wounded.

Mr. Stainbank and the ladies managed to reach Mahlabitini, where the magistrate died. Mahlabitini lies to westward of the forest, where Bambata, the insurgent chief, formerly the regent of the Greytown district, Natal, who has been in arms against the local authorities for a month past, had been hiding, and it is asserted here that there seems to be no doubt that the rebel chief has succeeded in inducing another tribe of Zulus to join in the revolt.

PECULIAR ACTIONS

Of School Board Revealed at Hearing in Missouri.

Macon, Mo., May 4.—There was an interesting hearing before Miss Baity, county school superintendent, and a commission of four men in the circuit court room. The subject of the action was the application of Robert Smith to change from district 3-56-15 to district 1-56-15, 16. One of the districts had voted in favor of the change and another against it. This gave Mr. Smith the right to appeal to the county commissioner.

Two years ago, as a result of a school election, Mr. Smith's home had been placed in district No. 3, and Mr. Smith said his children started to school there, but that during the year 1904 they were denied admission, forcibly ejected from the grounds and later arrested on an affidavit charging trespass, but the action was dismissed without trial.

The directors claimed that they were simply following the law in denying Smith's children the right of that school, it having been decided that they belonged to another district, but that during the year 1905, in conformity with a later decision by the commissioners, the children were not denied permission to attend school, and could have gone there at any time after the final decision of the commission.

Mr. Smith claimed that he did not care to send his children to a school where they had been arrested and he insisted that the 120 acres on which he lived be included in the Morrow district. The commissioners found in favor of Mr. Smith and attached him to that district. While the case was pending he had been sending his children to College Mound, and he claims paid their tuition there.

LOSES BOTH OF HIS LEGS

Edward Sifton Crippled for Life in N. P. Yards.

Stranger in Duluth—Had Been at Work Only Few Hours.

Edward Sifton, aged 43 years, lost both legs below the knee yesterday afternoon while working in the Northern Pacific yards at the West end. He is now in St. Mary's hospital and not in the best of condition. The shock as well as the severe nature of the injury has left him in very poor physical and nervous condition

Sifton, who is a stranger in Duluth, went to work only yesterday morning with a section crew in the yards. At 1 o'clock he was a cripple for life. Just how he got mixed up with the train which cut his legs off cannot be learned at this time.

Sifton has been in the city only a few days. It is not yet known where his relatives are for he is in too weak a condition to be questioned.

Former Duluthian Victim of Heart Trouble in Ohio.

J. E. Lease, formerly of Duluth, died last Tuesday morning at North Amherst, Ohio, of heart disease. J. J. Moir of Moir & Walker, West end, who has been looking after Mr. Lease's property in the city, most of which is at the West end, received word from Mrs. Lease yesterday, telling the news.

Mr. Lease was quite extensively interested in property here and was also engaged in the flour and feed business on First avenue east up to about three years ago, at which time he went to North Amherst to reside.

A short time ago he took sick with measles which developed heart trouble, which caused his death. He was well known in Duluth.

Visiting Ministers Preach.

The pulpit of the First Norwegian-Danish M. E. church of Twenty-first avenue west and First street, will be filled morning and evening next Sunday with visiting ministers. At 10:30 in the morning Rev. H. C. Munson, presiding elder of the Red River valley district will preach; and at 7:45 in the evening, Rev. T. B. Barrat of Christiania, Norway, will preach, sing and play. He is noted in Norway as an excellent speaker. He was born in England and educated at Oxford. After that he went to Hardager, Norway, with his father, who owned copper mines there. He is a young man, but speaks the Norwegian language fluently.

West End Shortrails.

H. T. Lofgren, state deputy for the North Star Benefit association has just returned from a three weeks' visit in the Twin Cities and called at the West end yesterday.

John Mattson of 2309 West Seventh street left Wednesday morning for Spokane, Wash., to visit with former Duluthians residing there.

The Swedish Christian Sick Benefit society will meet this evening at Sloan hall. A large number of new members have been received during the recent months and the society is in a flourishing condition.

The new dry goods store which Henry Guier, Roy Prytz and Miss Clara Richardson are interested in, will open soon in the Columbia block. The storeroom which has been renovated and refitted is almost ready.

Next Monday evening the young people of the Grace M. E. church will give a masquerade at Lincoln Park Roller rink, the last of the season.

James Preston is at work on his breakwater contract at Two Harbors.

Mrs. Addie Burgess is here from Rhinelander, Wis., to visit her sister, Mrs. C. A. Whitney of 313 Twenty-fourth avenue west.

George Stephenson of 2418 West First street is about to go to the hospital to have an operation performed.

The trustees of Grace M. E. church, who have been around getting subscriptions to repair the church and parsonage, have met with a great deal of success and feel gratified at the response to their appeal.

The Women's Foreign Missionary society of Grace M. E. church met with Mrs. R. H. Wellington on Wednesday afternoon, and discussed "Missionaries" in China." The leader was Mr. R. R. Forward.

SHAD FAIL TO COME.

The Warm Weather Does Not Bring the Fish.

Pennsgrove, N. J., May 4.—The shad season has thus far been a total failure. Even the warm days have failed to bring the fish on "the run" and not a fisherman is making expenses. In one day two men off here drifted 650 fathoms of net and failed to get a single shad.

There are 500 boats, employing about 1,200 men, representing an investment of $225,000, in the business on the Lower Delaware, and old fishermen state there will be a sure failure. They say the shad would surely be here at this time if they were coming at all, as the winter was so mild and open.

ASKS FOR JUDGMENT

Rat Portage Lumber Company Files Large Counter Claim.

Answer is Filed in Case Started by Stitt & Howe.

The Rat Portage Lumber company, Ltd., and Patrick A. Smith, its manager, against whom Stitt & Howe have brought an action to recover a large sum alleged to be due on a logging contract in Itasca county, have filed an answer making a general denial of the things set up on the complaint and alleging a counter claim of over $16,000 for which judgment is asked.

The lumber company alleges that in July 1899, Stitt & Howe represented to it that they knew of some pine lands in the Deer and the Bear river districts, in Itasca and St. Louis counties, that could be purchased on advantageous terms and agreed that if the lumber company would purchase the land and advance the money for logging supplies they would pay all the taxes until the timber had been cut and delivered in boom in Beltrami county at the rate of 10,000,000 feet per year. It is alleged that under the agreement the cost to the lumber company, including the purchase of the lands and the advances for logging supplies, should be 75 cents per thousand feet less than the market value of the logs in the boom, such sum to be added to the purchase price and moneys advanced to equal the market price of similar logs at the point of delivery, less 75 cents per thousand feet.

An agreement on the terms mentioned is said to have been entered into and Stitt & Howe are said to have taken out approximately 12,000,000 feet of logs in the seasons of 1899, 1900 and 1901.

It is further alleged that after the logs were in the boom a controversy arose between the parties to the agreement concerning the construction of the contract, Stitt & Howe claiming that the Rat Portage Lumber company refused to perform its part. The loggers are said to have instituted a suit in the district court of Itasca county that resulted Dec. 12, in the court's deciding for the lumber company in all things.

Stitt & Howe are alleged to have then offered to continue on the contract as construed by the court, with certain modifications as to the amount of timber cut in 1901 and 1902, and the price to be paid, and, in 1902, cut and delivered to the lumber company 1,202,150 feet of logs. The Rat Portage Lumber company alleges that it advanced $15,394.68 for supplies and wages for the men, for which it has never received payment.

The second counter claim set up by the Rat Portage Lumber company is that Stitt & Howe did not pay the taxes, amounting to $10,288.11, but that the lumber company did so at their request, and has never received payment for the sum thus advanced.

The answer alleges that Stitt & Howe made a motion for a new trial of the action had in Itasca county, and the findings were in their favor. The lumber company's motion for a new trial was denied and the order was afterward affirmed by the state supreme court. The company's application for a reargument was also denied, and judgment was entered, Nov. 6, 1905.

R. R. Briggs represents the Rat Portage Lumber company, and H. B. Fryberger represents Stitt & Howe.

WILL ENTERTAIN BOYS.

Trinity Chapel Sunday School Girls Lose in a Competition.

Tomorrow afternoon at Trinity chapel at the East end the boys of the Sunday school will be entertained by the girls. Some time ago the boys engaged in a competition with the girls and the former were the winners, as the result of which this entertainment is to be given. The girls will provide refreshments and there will be a romp in the old car barn, where the chapel is located. This will be the last opportunity for anything of that kind as the building is to be torn down preparatory to the beginning of work on the pro cathedral, which is to be erected there.

EXPENSE IS TOO GREAT

Cost of Constructing New Highway to West Duluth Prohibitive.

City Would Have to Pay $100,000 From General Taxes.

The cost of the proposed new road to West Duluth will be prohibitive for at least two years to come, judging from the estimate prepared by the city engineer.

The proposed highway would cost more than $100,000 of which little, if any, could be assessed against the abutting property. Practically all of the cost would have to come out of the general taxes of the city, or else be raised by the issuance of more bonds, and either one of these plans would arouse a storm of protest. At the present time the city's funds are in no condition to stand an expenditure of even $10,000 for work of this kind, and improvements already contemplated will force the conference committee to take a firm stand to prevent a raise in the tax rate, for next season.

The engineering department has prepared a survey of the proposed road, which would start at Elhor street and Fifty-fourth avenue west. It would run north to Fourth street, thence eastward to Thirty-ninth avenue west, south to Traverse street, and from Traverse street across unplatted property to Thirty-fourth avenue west. From there the road would run easterly along Second street to Carleton, and easterly along Carleton street to First street at Thirty-second avenue west.

This highway would have to be graded along its entire distance and should be paved with about twelve inches of macadam, with stone gutters. The cost of putting the road in good shape from Fifty-fourth avenue west to Thirty-second avenue west, would be $83,912, according to the engineer's estimate.

In addition to this, the four blocks between Twenty-eighth avenue west and Thirty-second avenue west on First street would have to be put in condition for travel, which would cost about $24,853, according to the engineer's estimate.

Part of this latter expense could be assessed against the abutting property, but the general funds of the city would have to pay out more than $100,000 for the entire work.

With such an outlay necessary, all thought of the improvement will probably be abandoned for at least another year.

TEN DAYS TO WITHDRAW

Great Britain Issues Ultimatum to Turkey Concerning Tabah.

London, May 4.—The British ambassador at Constantinople yesterday presented a note to Turkey, demanding the complete withdrawal of Turkish troops from Egyptian territory. The note is practically an ultimatum and constitutes Great Britain's last word on the encroachment of Turkey on the Sinaitic peninsula. The French and Russian ambassadors at Constantinople are supporting the British contentions. Should the ultimatum fail to have the desired effect, the British Mediterranean fleet will take the measure so often employed by the powers in recent years, the result of disputes with the sultan, and a naval demonstration it is anticipated will quickly bring about the evacuation of the Tabah territory, which Great Britain contends is unquestionably Egyptian territory.

The sultan was given ten days in which to comply with the British demand for the withdrawal of his troops from Tabah and other points on the Sinai peninsula, pending the delimination of the frontier by a commission.

WILL PLAY SUPERIOR

High School Team to Meet Blaine for Scholastic Championship.

Ruling of Principal Smith Will Disorganize the Central Team.

Tomorrow afternoon, at the Driving park in Superior, Duluth high school will meet Blaine in the first game of the series which is to decide the high school baseball championship of the Head of the Lakes.

The game was to have been played at the Athletic park, in Duluth, but the league team is to use the grounds tomorrow afternoon, which necessitated the change. It is probable that the return game with Blaine, which was to have been played in Superior, will be played on this side of the bay.

The Duluth team's chances received what may prove to be a knockout blow Wednesday, when Principal Smith announced that the interscholastic rule, which forbids players back in work for the preceding semester to play on any team, would be rigidly enforced, and that hereafter no student who failed would be given a chance to make up work by special examinations. This absolutely shuts out Max Cook, upon whose work in the box many of the hopes of the local fans rested; Charles Cargill, who was to have played short stop, and William Crawford, the big freshman, who had earned a place on the first bag. Several of the other members of the team failed in their work for April, and Principal Smith will allow them to take an examination to make this up, though he says that this will be the last time that such a privilege will be graned to a player.

The loss of these men is, of course, very serious, but Capt. Crassweller says that he still has a fast bunch to meet the Superiorites tomorrow, and is sure that Blaine will have to hurry to beat them. McDevitt will take Cook's place in the box, and Earl Cummings will catch. On first, Lewellyn McKinley will be stationed, and Edward Cole will hold down the second bag. Ralph Caulkins, diminutive but fast, will take Cargill's position of short stop, and Capt. Frank Crassweller will take third. Fred Ryan, Roy Bowen and Robert Forsyth or Leon Cooley, will play in the outfield.

Very little is known about Superior's line-up. Joe Rooney or "Goldie" Young will pitch, with Art Buchanan for a backstop. McGraw will play first, and Harvey Buchanan second.

RAIN WAS UNEXPECTED.

Building Contractors Nearly Caught With Uncovered Roofs.

So unexpected was the thunderstorm that came up yesterday afternoon, that the building contractors engaged in constructing additional stories on some of the down-town large business structures were nearly caught with portions of the roofing torn off the buildings.

The weather was so promising yesterday morning that the men employed by Contractor George H. Lounsberry, on the top of the Duncan & Brewer building, corner First street and Second avenue west, had uncovered quite a large area. When the storm began to threaten they made haste to recover the exposed portions and were compelled to finish under cover of a heavy canvas, with the rain falling in torrents.

HUSBAND WAS TOO GAY.

Mrs. Keller Brings Witnesses of Husband's Antics at Indianapolis.

Among the divorce cases heard by Judge Dibell yesterday was one brought by Josephine H. Keller against August K. Keller, on statutory grounds.

The evidence showed that they had been married only a short time, coming here from Indiana, and residing during the past year in the Belvidere flats, on Fifteenth avenue east.

According to Mrs. Keller's story on the witness stand, their family affairs ran along fairly smooth, until she had her suspicions aroused that her husband had broken his marriage vows, and had been consorting with women of loose character. She testified that she immediately left him.

It was brought out in evidence that Keller not long ago made a visit to his old home in Indiana, and while there set out to have a celebration that is generally understood as being denied married men. Mrs. Keller seems to have gained a knowledge of his antics, and as a result, two prominent citizens of Indianapolis, who accompanied Keller on the trip in the red light district, were subpoenaed to appear in Duluth and give testimony as to what they knew of the husband's actions. Although reluctant, they appeared, and gave testimony that practically cinched Mrs. Keller's case, and she was granted her divorce.

Keller has been connected with the Oppel Grocery company, but yesterday sold out his interest and left for the West.

Mrs. Keller was represented by Reynolds & McLearn.

SHERIFF GETS ANOTHER.

Independent Telephone Company Stockholders Tire of Assessments.

Unable to meet its obligations, the Tulare Telephone company's property has been sold for $1,550 by the sheriff at Tulare, judgment having been rendered for $832.72 in favor of D. B. Moore, a director of the Bank of Tulare, to whom the claim was assigned by the bank.

The company has been operating for about four years, an independent telephone exchange at Tulare, Visalia, Woodville, Lindsay and Exeter; also, about 120 miles of telephone lines connecting towns and farming communities throughout Tulare county. It is understood the failure is due to the fact that many of the local stockholders refuse to pay any more assessments, because of the uncertainty of success, and having recently paid a 30 per cent assessment, levied to pay urgent claims then due. No dividend has ever been paid, and the venture has been a losing one from the start, being handicapped by the Bell company, which operates a telephone system throughout the county as well as the state.—Fresno, Cal., Democrat.

WOMAN ENDS HER LIFE IN QUIETUDE OF CHURCH.

Cincinnati, May 4.—Using a straw to prevent disfiguring her face, Mrs. Emma Reybert, wife of a printer, last night, in the solemn quietude of St. Philomena church, committed suicide with carbolic acid. She died a few minutes after being found, but her identity was not established until after midnight. Despondency because of her ill health is believed to have been the cause of the suicide.

PATENT OFFICE

Turns Down Bid of the Government Printing Office.

Washington, May 4.—By having all the work done by contract, Commissioner of Patents Allen expects to save the government on the publication of the Official Gazette at least $60,000.

But in effecting such a saving some 200 or 300 printers employed in Uncle Sam's big printery will be out of a job. The printing of the Official Gazette has always been done at the government printing office.

When Commissioner Allen was before the house committee on appropriations he asked for an increase in the amount for printing the Gazette. He wanted in all $200,000, of which $120,000 was to pay for the work done at the government printing office. He was asked by the committee what it would cost to do the printing by contract. The commissioner said it would effect a saving of $60,000 or $70,000. Acting on this information, the committee cut the appropriation for printing to $60,000, and allowed $70,000 for the photo-lithography, making in all $130,000.

MATHEMATICIAN'S FALL.

Noted Author Goes to Missouri Prison for Forgery.

Kansas City, May 4.—Michael Angelo McGinnis, a former college professor and author of a standard work on mathematics, was convicted of forgery in the criminal court here and sentenced to ten years in the penitentiary. McGinnis and a confederate forged a deed to a city lot and sold the property for $300.

McGinnis for three years was principal of the high school at Oconto, Wis. In 1884 he established a newspaper at Medford, Or. Later he published a paper at Juiesburg, Colo., and held important political positions in Logan county, Colorado. He is a direct descendant of John Napier, inventor of logarithms. While publishing a newspaper in Newton county, Missouri, McGinnis was sent to the penitentiary for misuse of the mails. While in the penitentiary he wrote the book which made him famous with mathematicians throughout the world. He called it "Algebra, the Universal Solution for Numerical and Literal Equations." After his release from prison the book was published simultaneously in America and England.

LOCHINVAR AND PAPA ARE IN JAIL

Would-be Arkansas Bridegroom Says That He Will Win.

Fort Smith, Ark., May 4.—Will Wallace of Taylor and Miss Mattie McWirten, living near here, have been awakened from their happy dream of becoming husband and wife by an angry father, who landed in prison after having his intended son-in-law arrested.

Wallace and Miss McWirten eloped to Temaha, where they went to Notary Davidson and asked whether they could get a marriage license. The young man was informed that he would have to get the consent of the girl's father, she being under age. This, Wallace says, was refused.

Just when the young couple were ready to leave, that they might try their luck elsewhere, the angry father arrived. He had the young man arrested and took the girl away with him. It was charged he punished the girl severely. He was arrested and placed under $300 bond for appearance in court.

Citizens signed petitions in behalf of Wallace, who is said to be a steady and industrious young man. He says: "I will marry the girl any way as soon as I can. She will be of age some day. That will be our time."

FLEEING BRIGAND MAKES SHOTS COUNT

Rome, May 4.—The notorious brigand Faltori has at last fallen into the clutches of the law at Padua, after an exciting struggle with the police and soldiery deputed to capture him. The exploits of the brigand had resulted in the placing upon his head of a price of $2,000, and when it was discovered that he was in hiding at the house of a cousin in Padua, the building was promptly surrounded by gendarmes.

Faltori, however, managed for the time to give his would-be captors the slip, and made off, with the gendarmes at his heels. He was armed with an eight-chambered revolver, with which he terrorized all who got in his way, and his escape seemd certain when he ran almost into the arms of a score of soldiers, who hemmed him in. He fired four shots in rapid succession, wounding four of the soldiers, and again got away. The gendarmie meanwhile maintained the pursuit, and one officer was on the point of overtaking the fugitive when the latter turned and shot him dead, immediately afterwards directing the weapon at two of the leading gendarmes, both of whom were gravely wounded.

With but one cartridge remaining in his revolver, the brigand sought to take refuge in a house, and when the owner barred his passage he killed him with his remaining charge.

Faltori had been repeatedly fired at, but none of the shots had taken effect. He was now, however, nearly spent, and as a last desperate resource leaped the parapet of a bridge spanning the Bacchiglione into the river, from which he was dragged. The gendarmes now had all their work cut out to protect their handcuffed prisoner from the fury of the crowd. As it was, before the prison was reached one of his eyes was torn out, and he sustained an ugly cut on the face.

SAVED BABY LYON'S LIFE

MOTHER PRAISES CUTICURA REMEDIES

"Our baby had that dreadful complaint, Infantile Eczema, which afflicted him for several months, commencing at the top of his head, and at last covering his whole body. His sufferings were untold and constant misery, in fact, there was nothing we would not have done to have given him relief. The family doctor seemed to be wholly incapable of coping with the case, and after various experiments of his, which resulted in no benefit to the child, we sent to Mazon, Ill., to a druggist and got a full set of the Cuticura Remedies and applied as per directions, and he began to improve immediately, and in about three or four days began to show a brighter spirit and really laughed, for the first time in a year. In about ninety days he was fully recovered, with the exception of a rough skin, which is gradually disappearing, and eventually will be replaced by a healthy one.

"Praise for the Cuticura Remedies has always been our greatest pleasure, and there is nothing too good that we could say in their favor, for they certainly saved our baby's life, for he was the most awful sight that I ever beheld, prior to the treatment of the Cuticura Remedies. Mrs. Maebelle Lyon, 1826 Appleton Ave., Parsons, Kan., July 18, 1905."

COMPLETE TREATMENT $1

Complete external and internal treatment for every humor, consisting of Cuticura Soap, Ointment, and Pills, may now be had for one dollar. A single set is often sufficient to cure the most torturing, disfiguring, itching, burning, and scaly humors, eczemas, rashes, and irritations, from infancy to age, when all else fails.

Cuticura Soap, Ointment, and Pills are sold throughout the world. Potter Drug & Chem. Corp., Sole Props., Boston. Send for "The Great Skin Book."

SERIOUS CHARGES AGAINST PEIRCE

Former Consul Attacks Secretary Before Foreign Affairs Committee.

Washington, May 4.—The house committee on foreign affairs yesterday listened to a statement by Former Consul Gerela McWade, at Canton, China, in reply to the charges made against him by Third Assistant Secretary of State Peirce. Affidavits were presented by Mr. McWade to show the unreliable and criminal character of those who instigated the charges.

Mr. McWade made such sensational charges against Assistant Secretary of State Peirce that it is considered probable that congress may take them up. The only statement of record made by McWade is a letter addressed to the committee. This letter was dated April 26, 1902, and is in part as follows:

"A litle over six months ago H. H. D. Peirce assured me that I was removed because the president wanted my place and for no other reason. I now learn through the persistent industry of some anonymous person the nature of the charges preferred against me by H. H. D. Peirce and I solemnly declare them to be false in every essential particular. I also solemnly declare that they are made by men who had been charged before me for various offenses from murder down and that these men formed a criminal conspiracy against me to have me removed because my continuance in office meant the absolute compulsory abandonment of their criminal practices within my jurisdiction.

"I solemnly declare that not a reputable man or firm, American or foreign, resident and doing business within my jurisdiction, ever uttered a single word of complaint against me or my administration, a fact which H. H. D. Peirce could have easily ascertained, although he was only forty-eight hours in Canton and he did not devote two hours of that entire time to any investigation whatever. He quotes a certain firm, of which he was guest, as complaining against me and gives that firm a bill of health for high business character, etc. A little investigation would have shown that that firm desired my removal because I was largely instrumental in showing up how it had robbed the American railway and I had stopped its doing so most effectively. I do not in any way, directly or indirectly, question the high right and privilege of the president to remove me from the position of consul-general to which I was promted for 'conspicuous silence.'

"In the name of justice I reiterate the demand that I cabled from Canton, China, on the date of the receipt of the wire removing me from office. I demand a thorough and exhaustive investigation at the hands of your honorable committee when the truth will be fully established or as much so as possible after the lapse of two years of suffering and persecution."

TOBACCO POWERFUL AS A DISINFECTANT.

London, May 4.—The Lancet has been making some experiments to test the truth of the popular belief that tobacco smoke is a disinfectant. These experiments, says the Medical Journal, seem to confirm the observation that one of the principal constituents accounting for the germicidal properties of tobacco smoke is the powerful antiseptic formaldehyde. The amount present is more than just appreciable, for if water through which a few puffs of tobacco smoke have been passed is tested for formaldehyde the result is strikingly positive. The quantity of formaldehyde in tobacco smoke would appear to depend on the quality and kind of tobacco smoked. Thus the cigar apears to yield more formaldehyde than the pipe, and the pipe more than the cigarette. It has more than once been stated that tobacco smokers enjoy an immunity from certain diseases, and the frequent presence of a powerful antiseptic in the mouth, nasal passages and sometimes the lungs (as in the case of those who foolishly inhale tobacco smoke), would to some extent justify the statement. Formaldehyde is one of the most powerful disinfectants we possess, one part in 10,000 parts of water serving to destroy all microbes, while such a dilute solution has practically no poisonous action on the human organism. All the same, it is most undesirable that this fact should stimulate the practice of smoking tobacco to absurd excess, for tobacco poisoning is a greater reality than many persons think.

HAUNTED FOR YEARS.

Pennsylvania Murderer Attempts Suicide to Escape the Vision.

Pittsburg, Pa., May 4.—Haunted by the face of the woman he foully murdered fifteen years ago, Joseph Evans, aged 39 years, attempted to kill himself by swallowing carbolic acid. The effort was not successful, and he was sent to the Workhouse for thirty days on the simple charge of disorderly conduct.

Fifteen years ago Evans shot and killed Sadie Bruner, an inmate of a disorderly house. His age and the fact that he was intoxicated when he committed the deed saved him from a first degree verdict, and he was sentenced to the penitentiary for twelve years.

From the day of the murder until now Evans has been constantly hunted by the face of the woman he killed. He declares that in his cell in the penitentiary, if he awoke during the night, he would see her face looking at him from the wall of his prison. Since his release he has walked the streets night after night, seeking to escape the look of that murdered woman. There is no reproach in her face, only pity and anguish.

Twice before Evans has tried to end his torture by taking his life, once by shooting and once by poison, but he lives on, tortured by the dead face and punished as no law of man ever devised could punish him.

BRIEF TELEGRAMS.

Corwin Spencer, a leading grain trader, capitalist, vice-president of the World's fair and former president of the Merchants' exchange, collapsed Thursday afternoon while watching the stock quotation board at the Planters hotel, St. Louis, and died soon afterwards.

The mines whose owners have granted the miners' demands in the Hocking valley had a loss of about 50 per cent of their tonnage on Wednesday. One of the reasons given was that there were "no orders," a condition attributed to the longshoremen's strike.

The boodle case against R. M. Snyder, capitalist, of Kansas City, was nolle prossed in the criminal court at St. Louis Thursday because Fred C. Uthoff, former member of the city council and the principal witness against Snyder, did not appear. Circuit Attorney Sager stated that Uthoff is in Colorado and had telegraphed that he is ill there.

Capt. Munn of the Gulf Fisheries company, received a cablegram Thursday from an attorney at Progresso, Mexico, who had been requested to represent his company in the matter of the seizure of the fishing schooner Lizze B. Adams, stating that as the matter is very delicate, he could not act as their representative. Other attorneys, it is stated, have also declined to act.

John Alexander Dowie is making little, if any, progress in regaining a foothold among his former followers in Zion City. Dowie's third meeting since his return from Mexico was held in the tabernacle Thursday night. Less than 300 Zionists attended, the others keeping away in obedience to the wishes of Voliva.

Maj. W. T. Bowdre, a prominent cotton factor and director of the Commercial Appeal of Memphis, Tenn., was shot from ambush and instantly killed Thursday night while walking towards his home. No motive is known which could have prompted the assassination and there is no clue to the assassin.

An armed posse is searching for one Johnson, who is accused of kidnaping the 15-year-old daughter of George Butler of Waukon Junction, Iowa. A brother of the victim is heading the posse and there is chance that Johnson may be lynched if apprehended.

Eleven persons were badly injured Thursday night in an elevator accident in the Wonderland building at Toledo, O. They had been attending a banquet of a lodge of the Home Guards of America on the third floor and had just got into a freight elevator when the cable parted and the lift fell to the basement. All were taken to the Toledo hospital.

LAD FAILS

in His Suicide Attempt as He Escapes Death by Accident.

North Yakima, Wash., May 4.—Jesse E. Rowley, the young man who attempted suicide because his mother was near death, appears to bear a charmed life. The bullet took a downward course from the lower ribs and struck his hip joint. It was extracted by the surgeons, a flesh wound only resulting.

While riding after horses near Toppenish a number of years ago Rowley was struck by a bullet from the gun of a hunter. He was wounded in the leg, but recovered after a severe siege.

While a resident of Rawlins, Wyo., he was sleeping in the third story of a hotel when it caught fire. He was cut off from all the exits and, with flames roaring about him, he made his way to a waterspout on the outside of the building and slid down this part way before he lost his hold and fell. He was badly injured.

Again, while riding the range in Klickitat county, one of the cowboys fired at an outlaw horse that had stampeded the herd. The bullet missed the animal and struck Rowley's horse while it was traveling at full speed. The equine leaped high in the air and fell to the ground, pinning Rowley underneath. He sustained a number of broken bones and was a long time recovering.

He suffered from another accidental gunshot wound in his body, but it was not as serious as the other mishaps.

NATAL TRIBESMEN RESIST TAX PAYMENTS.

Pietermaritzburg, Natal, May 4.—In spite of the martial law proclaimed several weeks ago, there is no indication of absolute peace. The attitude of the natives does not warrant the withdrawal of the troops. It is true that their actions do not seem concerted, but there is a great deal of dissatisfaction among them, which may break out in excesses at any moment.

The chiefs are in favor of the government, but they cannot influence the natives enough to make them remain peaceful.

On one occasion, when the poll tax collector came to collect taxes, Chief Fynn, one of the best-known chiefs, asked the natives to pay their taxes, but they refused. When they went armed to the hotel where the collector stayed, and the chief asked them to put away their arms, they refused to obey.

GHOST IN LANCASHIRE MOVES AND BURNS DRESSER

London, May 4.—A curious story of a "ghost" is being told at Kearsley, near Farnworth, Lancashire.

Smoke was seen issuing from a drawer in a dresser of a house in Primrose street, and there was a smell of burning wood. The drawer was pulled out, but no fire could be discovered.

On the following night two women were watching the dresser, when they saw it move forward about a yard without any human aid, and glass ornaments standing on it were thrown to the floor.

We care not how you suffered, nor what failed to cure you, Hollister's Rocky Mountain Tea makes the puniest, weakest specimen of man or womanhood strong and healthy. 35 cents, Tea or Tablets. Ask your druggist.

COME SATURDAY

A Tailored Eton at $15.00

Not often you get even a comparative value such as this—it's distinctly a Glass Block offering.

Pick out a navy, Alice or any one of the gray shades in this Eton Bolero Suit of chiffon Panama, and note the short sleeves, gauntlet cuffs, the white satin lining, the dainty, nobby effect in the use of gold and white soutache braid trimming.

Pay a bit of attention to the circular gored skirt, with the broad stitched self-band around the bottom, and the crushed silk girdle.

Look it over very carefully, though even a hasty inspection will show its superiority, and you won't leave until you've left $15 for one of these suits. Made to sell at about $20.00—we got them for less.

CROWS CHEATED OF THEIR REPAST

Little Anoka County Girl is Saved by Searching Party.

Anoka, Minn., May 4.—Crows fluttering in the air and ceaselessly calling and croaking, directed a searching party from this city and the surrounding country to the spot where the daughter, but 3½ years old, of Henry Pehling, who lives near Round lake, had spent the night and was lying in a stupor. The ill-omened birds seemed to be gathering for a feast upon the delicate flesh of the little girl.

The child wandered away some time Wednesday and the father conducted a search as best he could until 2 o'clock yesterday morning. Then, feeling that his child had probably perished, he came to Anoka and aroused the officials.

The search was then taken up by the sheriff, chief of police, the county attorney and county auditor, who hurriedly drove to the lake and, bright and early in the morning, found the child lying on the ground with the uncanny birds flying about her and making their dismal calls.

Rain which came through the night fell upon the little girl and she was drenched to the skin. However, she soon recovered and called for her mother and, after being fed, sank into restful sleep. Despite her fearful experience, it is believed she will experience no harmful effects.

THE NEW CODE

Shuts Out the Court Commissioners From Performing Marriages.

Minneapolis, May 4.—By a recently discovered provision of the new code the court commissioner is deprived of his right to perform marriage ceremonies. As a result the people whom Court Commissioner William E. Bates has married since the new code went into effect are man and wife merely under the common law, having made a civil contract to that effect.

The provision by which the code repeals Chapter 311 of the laws of 1897 was only recently discoverd at the courthouse and has undoubtedly not been brought to the notice of Court Commissioner Bates, who is continuing to perform marriage ceremonies as fast as the applicants come to him. The marriage is undoubtedly a valid common law marriage, and since the official has been acting in ignorance of the new law there will undoubtedly be no inclination on the part of anyone to enforce the penalty of $100 fine provided in cases where anyone without proper authority performs the marriage ceremony.

Chapter 311 of the 1897 laws gives the court commissioner the right to perform the marriage ceremony. After repealing this chapter, the new code follows the old statute giving the right only to justices of the peace, judges, superintendents of certain asylums and ministers of the gospel.

NATIONAL GUARD MONEY.

St. Paul, Minn., May 4.—A total of $12,400 is being distributed to the soldiers of the Minnesota National guard by the state and Adj. Gen. Wood is busy this week distributing the money among the companies. There are 1,770 men up to the mark in annual inspection of the companies, conducted by Gen. Gerlach, and each of them is entitled to $7 of the state's money.

HUMAN FINGER IN CIGAR.

Tennessee Man's Find Causes Him to Quit the Habit.

Webster City, May 4.—George Lombard, of Memphis, Tenn., who is visiting at the home of relatives in Fort Dodge, was made violently ill as the result of smoking a cigar, in which part of a human finger was discovered. The portion of the finger was quite large and had a part of the finger nail still clinging to it. It had evidently been cut off the hand of one of the operators, where the cigars were manufactured by machinery, and had thus become lost in the filler.

Lombard had purchased several cigars of his favorite brand, and had smoked all but one of them. He had puffed away at the last of them but a few moments until he noticed something wrong with the flavor. He began to feel sick and for an hour was violently ill.

In the meantime, his relatives laying his illness to the cigar he was smoking, made an examination and discovered that it was a piece of human flesh that had caused the trouble. The cigar had burned down to it and it almost protruded from the ashes. It had been charred by the tobacco at the burning end and Lombard had been puffing smoke and the odor from it.

The Tennessee man has now quit the smoke habit.

BRAKEMAN TAKES ONUS OF WRECK; ONE KILLED.

Green Bay, Wis., May 4.—Brakeman James Boex admits that he was responsible for the Milwaukee & St. Paul railway wreck at Kiel, Wis., on Monday.

"It was all a mistake of mine," he said. "I had been sleeping in the caboose of the freight train, as I was all played out. I got up, thinking that the passenger which hit us later had passed us and opened the switch the wrong way."

Fireman J. E. McLean died from injuries in the wreck.

LEPERS GIVE RELIEF FUND.

Hawaiian Sufferers Contribute Money to Help San Francisco.

Honolulu, May 4.—The lepers at the settlement of Molokai have held a mass meeting, at which they adopted lengthy and eloquently worded resolutions in the Hawaiian language, expressing sympathy for sufferers from the San Francisco fire. They also raised a relief fund, representing the subscription of 400 persons, who each gave five cents up. The resolutions prepared by the lepers are of a profoundly religious tone and provide for the forwarding of resolutions to Mayor Schmitz, of San Francisco. The money has been sent to the Honolulu board of health.

EXPELLED JEWS COMING TO AMERICA.

Berlin, May 4.—Dr. Nathan, president of the German organization for helping distressed Jews, says the statement that 7,000 of the aliens who are to be expelled from Berlin are coming to England is absurd and untrue. In the first place, the 6,500 Jews among them are not to be expelled, but only those of them who are regarded as undesirable from the point of view of the political police. None of these aliens is going to England. Those who are emigrating are either going to the United States or South America. Dr. Nathan's organization is pledged not to send any undesirable aliens to England. With regard to the remainder, Dr. Nathan has been summoned to a conference with the police master to arrange for permitting them to remain in eGrmany until they are independent enough to emigrate to America.

GARFIELD SAYS STANDARD OIL COMPANY PROFITS $750,000 A YEAR BY UNLAWFUL RATES OF RAILROADS

pany refused for itself and affiliated lines to give access to records of state rates.

At the beginning of the investigation, he says, the Standard Oil company denied that it had obtained in recent years or is now obtaining any rebate or other transportation discrimination, and yet a careful review of the facts and explanations leads to the conclusion that the Standard Oil company has habitually received from the railroads, and is now receiving secret rates and other unjust discriminations.

In 1904 these secret rates saved to the Standard Oil company $750,000, representing the difference between the open rates and the rates actually paid. "These discriminations," he says, "have been so long continued, so secret, so ingeniously applied to new conditions of trade and so large in amount as to make it certain that they were due to concerted action by the Standard Oil company and the railroads." He says further that the Standard Oil company is receiving unjust discriminations in the matter of open rates, the published rates from the leading Standard shipping points being relatively much lower than those from the shipping points of its competitors.

Mr. Garfield then refers to seven instances of important discriminations in favor of the Standard Oil company in various parts of the country, and says that most secret rates and some of the open discriminations described by the bureau were abolished by the railroads shortly after such discovery. After calling attention to the good which already has resulted from the investigation, Mr. Garfield says that the changes effected have put the independents upon a fairer footing, and make competition possible in territories heretofore inaccessible. The report concluds as follows:

"Nevertheless, the widespread discriminations in open rates still in force leave the independents at serious disadvantage. The investigation has only incidentally touched state shipments from distributing centers, particularly in less than carloads. The few instances examined suggest the probability of discrimination in such shipments which, taken in connection with through traffic, may result in discriminations on interstate business.

"I have cited these particular instances to show the various methods by which discriminations are obtained, and to call particular attention to methods which, if legal, are mere devices to obtain exactly the same results as would be obtained by rebates paid on interstate business. Any freight discrimination, whether it be state or interstate, tends to give control of markets to the preferred shipper, and makes monopoly possible. If existing law merely prohibits a special device for obtaining discrimination, and permits the same result to be accomplished in a different way, then the legislation is to that extent a sham.

"This investigation has shown very clearly one glaring defect in the interstate commerce law, viz.: The method of filing and publishing tariffs. Although a tariff or a rate has been filed with a commission, in compliance with the means of the law, means that the favored shipper may know of its existence, tariffs may be made and rates may be combined in such a manner as to make it practically impossible for the ordinary shipper to find them. As long as the state rates are not required to be made public, and shippers use such rates in connection with interstate rates, all manners of devices to evade the purpose of the law are possible. All state rates used in connection with the interstate commerce should be filed with the interstate commerce commission, and a radical change should be made in the direction of simplifying tariffs and methods of posting and filing them."

Explaining more in detail, the results of his investigation, Mr. Garfield says:

"The general result of the investigation has been to disclose the existence of numerous and flagrant discriminations by the railroads in behalf of the Standard Oil company, and its affiliated corporations. With comparatively few exceptions, mainly of other large concerns in California, the Standard has been the sole beneficiary of such discriminations. In almost every section of the country that company has been found to enjoy some unfair advantages over its competitors, and some of these discriminations affect enormous areas.

"Discriminations in the transportation of oil embrace a variety of forms, the more important of which may be classed under the following heads:

"1—Secret and semi-secret rates.

"2—Discriminations in the open arrangement of rates.

"3—Discriminations in classification and rules of shipment.

"4—Discriminations in treatment of private tank cars."

Many of the secret rates described by the bureau of corporations have applied only on shipments of oil wholly within single states. The Standard Oil company, which controls refineries in twelve states, is obviously in a position to make extensive use of such intrstate rates, or as they are ordinarily designated, state rates.

For the purpose of more effectively concealing the secret rates given to the Standard Oil company, railroads in several important cases have used peculiar methods of billing and accounting.

In some cases oil has been "blind billed," that is to say, the way bills have been made out showing the kind of product transported and its weight, but without showing, as is the usual custom, any freight rate or the amount of the freight charges. In such instances the collection of freight is originally made, not by the local agent of the railroad, but through the central office by the presentation to the Standard of a summary bill showing the amount of freight charges at the secret rate. Local agents often do not know what the actual rates used on blind bills are.

An especially large number of secret rates and rebates in the transportation of oil was found in California. In all more than eighty distinct violations of tariffs on oil were discovered in this state, the total concessions to shippers and consignees under these rates as compared with the published tariffs may be safely estimated at about $200,000 per year, of which amount about $100,000 went to the Standard.

The commissioner under the head of possibility of further discrimination says:

"It seems wholly possible that there may exist a multitude of other discriminations, effected by secret rates or even by rebates, of great aggregate importance, involved in the local distribution of oil especially in less than carload lots. The Standard Oil company ships enormous quantities of oil in less than carload lots, and although the distances involved in such cases are usually comparatively short, the amount of freight charges under the high rates which prevail on such business under regular tariffs would be very great and the possibilities of departure from these charges extensive.

"It is perfectly clear that the distinction between the rebate and the secret rate is merely one of accounting."

Regarding discrimination in the open arrangement of rates, Commissioner Garfield declares:

"Different methods are used in different places and under different conditions, but the net result is that from Maine to California the general arrangement of open rates on petroleum oil is such as to give the Standard an unreasonable advantage over its competitors.

"The conclusion is unavoidable that the Standard Oil company has had an important voice in the construction of such rates, and this conclusion is supported by specific evidence, developed by the investigators."

In many cases, he says, there are unreasonable differences between the rates on oil in carloads and less than carloads. He charges that discrimination is practiced in some instances in the treatment of private tank cars.

ANNUAL MEETING.

Civil Service Board Elects Officers and Prepares Questions.

At the annual meeting of the board of civil service commissioners held last evening, C. B. Nunan was chosen president for the coming year. Reuben Johnson was re-elected secretary.

The board prepared questions for the twenty-six applicants for civil service positions who will write on the examination set for May 8. The examinations are for candidates for positions in the police and fire departments, and assistants in the public library.

HIBBING BALL TEAM

Has a New Catcher for the Games With Duluth.

Hibbing, Minn., May 4.—(Special to The Herald.)—The Hibbing baseball team has completed arrangements for a series of two games with the White Sox of Duluth, at that city, on Saturday afternoon and Sunday afternoon. On Friday of next week, the White Sox will come to Hibbing and play a series of three games with the Hibbing boys. Manager Brady has arranged for a new catcher, H. F. Smith, who has the reputation of being one of the fastest independent men in the Northwest. The Hibbing boys are putting in a lot of solid practice, and hope to show the Duluthians how to play ball. The game played here last Sunday was won by the Hibbing boys. The opposing team was the Millers of West Duluth.

LOVE FEAST IS IN ORDER

Candidates for Sheriff Should Get Together and Destroy Evidence.

Sad Story of Politics, Duplicity and the Double Cross.

This is a story of politics, and guile and the gentle art of double crossing.

The scene of the story is Duluth, and the characters involved are Sheriff W. J. Bates, Jack Miles, the boy politician, and "Be Sheriff or Die" John Armstead.

Some time last winter, when the mercury was flirting with the minus marks on the tube, it was wafted to the ears of Sheriff Bates, that his old friend the enemy, John T. Armstead, was to make one last, grim, stand for the office he has so long coveted. "Billy" figured up the vote he was likely to get on the ranges, sized up Armstead's strength in the city, and hunted up Jack Miles.

The boy politician has a following in the city, which Sheriff Billy considered would stand him in good stead in cutting into the vote of the perennial candidate.

With tender recollections of the campaign of two years ago, the boy politician refused to launch his frail bark on the troubled waters of the political sea, without some insurance against being wrecked on the shoals of financial disaster. Accordingly rumor has it that an agreement was reached, whereby, for a monetary consideration, Mr. Miles was to jump into the field and keep Mr. Armstead so busy in the city, that Sheriff Bates could get in his fine work on the range unmolested, and pile up a vote there that would swamp his old opponent.

The deal was consummated, and the monetary consideration is rumored to have been $500, which was figured as about the sum required for exepenses.

But since all is fair in love and war and politics, neither candidate quite trusted the other, and the agreement was drawn up and signed by both parties. Two copies were made, each man keeping a signed copy.

Meanwhile Mr. Armstead had been casting his experienced eye over the shrievalty field, and it looked good to him. He heard rumors of the intentions the boy politician held of entering the fight again, and in the exuberance of his good will he composed a friendly letter to Mr. Miles. He informed Mr. Miles that he, Mr. Armstead, was planning to enter the race once more, and that this time the chances looked bright for finally landing the long coveted prize.

He dwelt long and lovingly upon the fact that he had patched up his difficulties with the labor unions, and that he had been assured of the support and aid of many friends in secret societies and fraternal orders. The latter was an innocent outpouring of his hopes and expectations, and closed with the friendly statement that fine as he felt his chances to be, he would keep out and support Mr. Miles if he ran, but gave the inference that he thought that he, Armstead, could run better.

With the letter and the contract in his possession, the boy politician apparently had a hand full of trumps, but for some unaccountable reason he "tipped his mitt." The agreement with Mr. Bates was turned over to Mr. Armstead, and the whole deal laid bare to the sheriff-struck laundryman.

Not content with putting Mr. Armstead wise, the boy politician turned over the letter of Mr. Armstead to Sheriff Bates.

And now the question is, "Who is in the deepest?" Mr. Armstead has proof of the dealing between Messrs. Bates and Miles. Mr. Bates has documents that would make rich campaign reading for enemies of Mr. Armstead, and Mr. Miles is in the peculiar position of double dealing.

It looks as if it might be in order to hold a three-cornered love feast, destroy all campaign documents and start fresh.

ARMY DID WONDERS.

from the East will reach Oakland during the next four or five days."

The cheering information was given yesterday that San Francisco is not threatened with a water famine and that all of the city's sources of water supply are intact. Probably for two or three more weeks, however, there will be a necessity for conserving the limited supply that is now coming into the city, for the reason that the supply cannot be enlarged until serious breaks in one of the leading mains are repaired. Until these breaks are repaired San Francisco's supply of water will be limited to 13,000,000 gallons daily. This supply is now being used to fill the various reservoirs. Some of these reservoirs are full and some are filling slowly. Within a few days more liberal use of water will be permitted.

The first signs of the resumption of the real estate sales market was given yesterday. Several transactions which were in process of negotiation before the conflagration were completed on the lines of the original terms, while new ones were entered upon. In addition a number of offers for realty at figures considerably below the values that have hitherto resigned were promptly declined. Whatever the future may bring forth owners at present are unwilling to accept any material sacrifice on their holdings. The clearing house committee reports all the city banks as solvent. Its statement may be taken as authoritative. That does not mean that any bank could pay out the full balances of all its depositors at sight for the majority of that money is loaned. It means simply that all banks could pay at sight all checks which would be drawn in the ordinary course of business under normal conditions and all other deposits within a reasonable time.

Four sugar companies have declared their usual monthly dividends for May. The Hawaiian Commercial & Sugar company has declared a dividend of 65 cents per share payable on the tenth instant. On that same date the Paauhau company will disburse its regular dividend of 15 cents per share and the Hutchinson plantation will pay 12½ cents per share. The Makaeli company will pay its usual dividend of 30 cents per share on the 15th inst.

The health of the city continues good. Seven cases of typhoid fever have been reported in San Francisco while only one definite case since April 18 is known to the health board. The remaining six cases are suspicions and it is not yet determined whether or not they are actually typhoid. The record of seven new cases in two weeks is below the average.

This constitutes, it is claimed, one of the most remarkable reports known to medical men. That almost an entire city should be turned into virtually one vast camp without preparation for the handling of the sanitary situation and yet the cases of typhoid should be limited to such a small number is considered miraculous.

STEIN-BLOCH SMART CLOTHES

If your every day tailor could put as much thought, imagination, skill and time into his customers' orders as our Stein-Bloch tailors put into every suit and overcoat made in their shops, that tailor would be sought by the wealth and fashion of the land.

Stein-Bloch can afford to do it and can command the skill. Rightness is a Stein-Bloch habit.

The question sifts down to this:

Would you rather pay 50 per cent more to an ordinary merchant tailor or would you rather pay 10 per cent less for an ordinary ready-made than buy at a common-sense price our Stein-Bloch smart clothes, that, master-made and right clear through, will wear and fit and give you style?

PRISON DISMISSALS HERMIT'S TREASURES.

Berlin, May 4.—In the death of Christian Heitzman Germany loses one of the most curious characters, one who attracted country-wide attention during life.

Heitzman, who was 75 years old, lived in a Berlin suburb in a quaint cottage built by himself. He lived alone and was never seen in any one's company. In his cottage he had three rooms.

One of the rooms was called the "Prophet Elijah chamber," the second he called the "Peter room" and the third the "Moses Tabernacle." The rooms were all decorated with curios secured on occasional ramblings.

After his death Heitzman was found on his cot in the "Moses Tabernacle." Nearby was a coffin which had for many years served as a wardrobe. The walls of the "Tabernacle" were papered with receipts for fines he paid on various occasions, prison dismissals given him each time after serving a term for not paying taxes, and other legal documents gathered during his curious life.

FUNERAL ON SATURDAY.

Remains of Harry Buffington Taken to Old Home at Stillwater.

Stillwater, Minn., May 4.—The remains of Harry Buffington, who was found dead in his room in a hotel at Iron River, Wis., with a bullet wound in his head, were brought here this morning, and the funeral will be held from the family residence probably on Saturday afternoon. His relatives say the shot was accidentally fired. The bullet entered near the temple and took an upward course. Death was instantaneous.

AUTOMATIC CAR GUIDE.

Kansas City Machine Shows Three Next Stop Stations.

Kansas City, Mo., May 4.—R. B. Eubank, Jr., has invented a machine for showing the names of streets the cars are approaching and the next station on railroad trains. The machine is so constructed that it always shows in advance the names of the next three streets or stations as they come, in regular order, thus informing the passenger of the approach of his street and giving him time to get ready to get off. Or, if on a railroad train, he has the time it takes to run three stations to be ready to get off. Patents have been allowed in the United States and applied for in European countries.

RAILROADS

EQUIPMENT DELIVERED

Duluth & Iron Range Now Has Ten New Locomotives.

Deliveries of New Ore Cars to Range Lines Begin.

With the arrival of two of the consolidation type of freight engines from the Baldwin Locomotive works today, all of the ten new locomotives ordered last fall by the Duluth & Iron Range road have been delivered.

The latest arrivals will be sent to Two Harbors and put into commission at once. If the effect of the strike is felt keenly, however, the need of the new equipment will not be as great as indications last fall and at the beginning of this season showed.

Of the ten news engines, six are of the consolidation type of freight engines and four are switch engines. The first of these were delivered before the opening of the ore shipping season.

Both the Duluth & Iron Range and Duluth, Missabe & Northern roads ordered new ore cars last fall of the Pressed Steel Car company of Pittsburg. The Missabe road bought 750 cars and the Iron Range, 500 cars.

Two hundred and fifty cars for the Missabe road have been delivered and the deliveries will be kept up right along, throughout the season. The next deliveries to be made by the Pittsburg company, however, will be of 250 cars for the Iron Range road.

These new cars are of the most improved type and equipped with all the modern contrivances for the expeditious loading and unloading of ore.

In addition to its order of 750 ore cars from the Pressed Steel Car company, the Missabe road has purchased six new freight engines of the consolidation type, from the American Locomotive company of Pittsburg, and two ten-wheel passenger locomotives from the Baldwin works. These latter have already gone into service.

RATES TO SAN FRANCISCO.

Those Announced Before Earthquake Will be in Effect During Summer.

Local railroad offices have been notified to begin the sale of tickets to San Francisco. Since the earthquake, tickets have been sold only so far as Oakland.

Although the annual meeting of the National Educational association, which was to have been held in San Francisco during July, from the 9th to the 13th, has been called off on account of the catastrophe, the Northern Pacific announces that it will put the low rates announced for the affair into effect anyway, giving the people a chance to visit San Francisco and the coast cities on the same rates as would have prevailed during the convention.

On June 1 summer tourist rates to Washington, Oregon and California points will go into effect on all railroads, and tickets will be on sale daily until Sept. 15, with the return limit fixed at Oct. 31. It is expected that a liberal patronage will be given these tourist rates.

SHIPPERS PROTEST

Against Being Cross-Examined by Attorneys for Railroads.

St. Paul, May 4.—Minnesota shippers and jobbers interested in the proposed reduction in freight rates on the various classes of merchandise were given a partial hearing before the state railroad and warehouse commission at an adjourned meeting yesterday. The hearing was a continuation of the hearing held last month, when the railroads presented their objections to the proposed tariff schedules. Winona shippers and jobbers took a decided stand against the adoption of the proposed schedules, while Mankato, Rochester, Moorhead, Fergus Falls and the St. Paul Shippers' association, represented by George S. Loftus, took a decided stand for the adoption of the schedule, declaring that it would result in reducing rates generally in Minnesota and would result in benefit both to the merchant and the consumer.

The hearing broke up abruptly early in the afternoon, owing to the refusal of the jobbers favoring the schedule to be cross-examined by C. A. Severance, attorney for the interested railroads.

After a ruling by the commission that Mr. Severance had a right to cross-examine the witnesses called, the shippers and jobbers present favoring the proposed schedule took their coats and hats and proceeded to leave the room, after George S. Loftus had announced that as far as the St. Paul Shippers' association was concerned it would take no further part in the hearing if Mr. Severance were allowed to cross-examine their witnesses while the case of the association and the jobbers of the state in general was being submitted.

Members of the commission called attention to the fact that the hearing was in the nature of a trial, and that court procedure to a certain extent must prevail. The shippers protested on the grounds that they had not cross-examined the witnesses of the railroads when their side of the case was submitted some weeks ago. The attorneys for the commission replied that shippers had a perfect right to come in and cross-examine the railroad officials when the hearing was first opened, and that the same opportunity would be offered when the witnesses for the railroads were recalled later to be cross-examined by the commission.

The shippers refused to be pacified, and declared that they were being badgered and worried while attempting to file a complaint against existing tariff schedules. They stated that they would consent to be cross-examined if the commission would first allow them to submit their case without interruption.

Commissioner Mills replied that they had been invited to participate in the hearing in order to throw all possible light on the matter of readjusting the tariff schedules, and that if Mr. Severance's questions tended to throw any light on the general situation, they should not refuse to answer them. C. F. Staples cautioned the protesting witnesses that, unless Mr. Severance were allowed to cross-examine them, any ruling the commission made on their testimony in the future would be valueless and no court in the land would uphold it.

While the commissioners were busy explaining, the jobbers were moving out of the room, protesting among themselves about the absence of a square deal. Finally Commissioner W. E. Young rushed to the rescue and proposed a compromise. Several of the protesting shippers, who were from Mankato, held a hurried conference in the outer office and decided to appear before the commission at a later date, when Attorney General Young would appear as their representative and advise them concerning matters which might arise through the cross-examination by counsel of the railroads. It is likely that the hearing will be held some time in June, and notices will be sent out to the towns of the state interested and to the large shippers to appear and present their case. It is expected that several days will be taken up with the hearing. After that hearing, the railroad officials will be called by the commission for purposes of cross-examination.

Fast Winnipeg Train.

The Great Northern road will put on a new train, the Winnipeg Limited, between St. Paul and the Canadian metropolis next Sunday. It will make the fastest time on record between the two points.

The train will leave Winnipeg at 5:20 p. m., as at present, but will arrive in St. Paul at 7:30 the next morning, making the running time thirty-five minutes faster than the present schedule. The time for the entire run will be reduced to 14 hours and 10 minutes. The schedule for train No. 7, north bound to Winnipeg, will not be changed.

New Road for Southern Wisconsin.

Milwaukee, May 4.—A special to the Sentinel from Madison, says: The Milwaukee, Rockford & Eastern Railway company filed articles of incorporation with Secretary of State Houser yesterday, after the document had been examined and approved as to form by Attorney General Sturdevant. The company is capitalized at $100,000 and proposes to build seventy-five miles of road in Milwaukee, Waukesha, Walworth and Rock counties.

House Returning From West.

F. E. House, president of the Duluth & Iron Range road, is expected to return from the Pacific coast Sunday. Mr. House started West in his private car shortly before the San Francisco disaster occurred and he took a party of surgeons and nurses, not to mention medical supplies, on with him from Portland. His family has been spending the winter in California and will return with him.

Railroad Notes.

At a meeting of general freight agents, held this morning in the local office of the Milwaukee road, it was agreed that the local freight offices should not close Saturday afternoons during the summer, following out the usual custom. The Wisconsin Central refused to close, and so the other roads had to fall into line.

The Northern Pacific will have in effect a round-trip rate of a fare and a third Saturday next between Duluth and St. Paul, on account of the state meeting of the Knights of Pythias, to be held in the latter city, May 8 to 10.

G. L. A. Thomson, traveling passenger agent for the Pennsylvania line, with headquarters at St. Paul, who has been making the Duluth territory for several years, is now in Duluth on his last official trip. Hereafter he will cover Canadian territory, although he will still travel out of the Twin Cities. A man from the Milwaukee office will look after the company's business in Duluth.

Local railroad men have received copies of the Northwestern Railway American, published at Minneapolis by Alton R. Radley. Mr. Radley was formerly a conductor on the Duluth & Iron Range road. Three numbers of his paper have been issued.

Wall Street—that is, the railroads.

For the sake of a few more dirty dollars and the temporary interests of a couple of railroads, they are doing their best to hold up this magnificent undertaking.

Fair means or foul: the latest is sending labor-agitators to upset the already difficult labor-arrangements.

But the President and Taft and Stevens are making good in spite of them.

WINNING BY WIDOW CAUSES LOTTERY CRAZE.

Paris, May 4.—To become the richest woman in France is now the frank ambition of Mme. Hofer. She has fallen victim to the devouring greed of gold since she won, at lottery, the million that raised her from the keeper of a canteen to a capitalist. She has already made a large sum out of her book, in which are printed the pitiful begging letters she has received, and it is still selling. She buys the lottery tickets of all countries and passes hours studying the winning list. Like those who go half crazy over systems at Monte Carlo, the unfortunate woman tries to discover the mathematical possibilities of winning or losing before she risks the smallest coin.

HAPPENINGS IN THE DAKOTAS

Mayor Johnson of Fargo Begins a War on the Mashers.

NORTH DAKOTA.

Fargo—Mayor Johnson has announced that war will be waged on mashers. Complaints have been made by ladies who do shopping down town on Saturday nights that unbaked youths gather in front of the department stores, stare and make comments when ladies come from the stores to the streets. The police have been instructed to round up all offenders.

Fargo must have 25,000 population in the next five years. This is to be the battle cry of the Commercial club. It means the practical doubling of the city's population.

It is proposed to organize a 25,000 club and to enlist every patrotic man and woman of the city in the organization. The membership will be placed at only $1 and the funds raised will be used for the purpose of attracting attention to the city. The Commercial club members are enthusiastic over the movement and believe it will be a success.

Retiring City Auditor Gibson of Fargo was not long out of a position. Commissioner of Agriculture Gilbreath has named him as his deputy, and he left last night for Bismarck to assume his duties. He succeeds E. E. Kaufman, who recently resigned. Commissioner Gilbreath will devote his personal attention to immigration work, while his deputy will look after the office matters.

No decision has yet been reached in the case of Alexander Larron, the horse thief, wanted in Canada. The hearing was resumed before United States Commissioner Montgomery, and it appears to make little difference to Larron as to which side wins, as there are two North Dakota sheriffs here to take him if the extradition proceedings fail. He has two attorneys fighting extradition.

SOUTH DAKOTA.

Spearfish—In a runaway accident Mrs. J. S. Pratt and her daughter, Miss Inez, who is an invalid, were dangerously injured and it is believed Mrs. Pratt will die. She is the wife of Capt. J. S. Pratt, who owns a beautiful ranch about four miles from town.

Mrs. Pratt, her daughter and Miss Evans, a granddaughter, were driving home from Spearfish when they met a rancher who was driving and leading a horse. The horse kicked and frightened the team Mrs. Pratt was driving and the runaway followed. Mrs. Pratt received such serious injuries that an acute attack of pneumonia was superinduced and her recovery is doubtful.

Mrs. H. W. Kelly, formerly of Kingman, Ariz., has leased the hotel in this city.

Aberdeen—T. H. Thelan held by the police at Butte, Mont., for the Aberdeen authorities, will be released. It was learned that he would not return without requisition papers, and when the matter came up at yesterday's meeting of county commissioners, the members decided not to ask for a requisition, for the reason that there might be a mistake in the man, and should such prove to be the case, serious complications might result. Another objection was that by the time papers could be secured Thelan might have been given his liberty through a writ of habeas corpus, or other legal proceeding, and the county would be put to needless expense.

The sheriff was directed to wire the Butte police of the action of the commissioners. Thelan was arrested on the charge of being short in his accounts while employed as bookkeeper for a local brewing concern more than a year ago. The total shortage is alleged to be about $800.

Sioux Falls—The returning by a coroner's jury of a verdict to the effect that Chris Sven, a farmer, who disappeared in this city last winter and whose body was found in the Sioux river this spring, came to his death by drowning is the closing chapter in the case.

The theory of those entertaining the belief that Sven was murdered was that he was the victim of knockout drops. In view of the suspicions of foul play, and in order to make a thorough investigation, Coroner L. D. Miller and the county authorities sent Sven's stomach to an eastern chemist for analysis. The report of the chemist was read at an adjourned meeting of the coroner's jury, and was to be the effect that there was not the slightest trace of poison.

The libel suit instituted several months ago by Oscar Larson, a well-known hardware man of this city, against E. Martindale, at that time editor of the Soo Critic, a weekly newspaper published in this city, has been settled by the imposing of a $50 fine.

Martindale left the city some weeks ago, and is now supposed to be in Kansas, where he resided prior to coming to Sioux Falls. When the case was called for trial Martindale appeared by attorney and pleaded guilty.

WOMAN WHO WAS BRIGANDS' GUEST, THEIR CHAMPION.

Paris, May 4.—Mme. Crespin du Gast has returned from the dangerous wilds of Morocco, where she has traveled for several months under the protection of the Bu Hamara, pretender to the Moorish throne. It turns out that "the most extraordinary woman on earth," as her friends call Mme. du Gast, sought Morocco for adventure's sake. She was not captured by brigands, as has been reported again and again, but was entertained by them with the warmest hospitality.

"I have received the baptism of fire," she gayly tells her intimates. "I have learned to sleep happily in a litter of straw. I have made the life-long friendship of the bravest and most delightful brigands. I am loaded with presents bestowed on me by the pretender and his warlike vassals—gifts which they acquired more or less honestly.

"Those idle reporters at Algeciras invented the story that I had been captured and held for a ransom. The whole truth is that the brigand Vallento, chief of the Anjero tribesmen, gave me a princely reception and charmed me with the vivid color of his life, for he dwells in an atmosphere like that of the Arabian Nights.

"I could not tear myself away. I have even converted him from his evil paths, for he has undertaken to safeguard in the future life and property in the Spanish towns which his band pillaged only recently. This may mean war on our own merry men when they go to police Morocco, but I feel intensely proud of my apostleship.

"When we write to each other, Valiento and I greet each other as friends."

Gets Divorce for Cruelty.

Two divorce cases were heard in the district court yesterday afternoon. Bessie Cayo was legally separated from Walter J. Cayo because of cruelty and habitual drunkenness, and the case of May Boyer against Domino Boyer on the grounds of cruelty, was submitted. A total of sixteen decrees of divorce were granted during the day by the three judges of the district court.

CONCERNING WOMEN

There is a stenographer, quite a nice blue eyed and yellow haired and pink complexioned young person, who works down town in an office. There is a young man who comes in and out of the office. Yesterday he went out and then came in. He brought back with him a white carnation and having some respect for his own social position he gave the carnation to the girl. She likes carnations and this was an especially big, dazzling white and spicy carnation. She pinned it at her throat and enjoyed its dainty fragrance all morning. Then she went home to lunch and the second chapter begins.

She got down on the street corner and waited for a car. Lots of men went by and every third one had on a white carnation and anything but a ridiculous look. She noticed it, also lots of people seemed to notice hers. When she got on the car men looked at her askance. At least she thought it was askance, she was not quite sure what askance was, but she thought she had pretty near a corner on all that sort of glances which the car afforded. It worried her slightly. One does not wonder at an extra glance or two when one has on one's best gown and most becoming hat and one's only pair of long gloves, but going home from down town after a morning's work, with disheveled hair and smudged nose and a white carnation, what in thunder was the matter with people anyway? The stenographer was getting mad.

Her brother observed the especially big, dazzlingly white and spicy carnation with the laconic remark, "I'd hang the twenty-three sign on that if I were you." As was remarked before the glances had got on the stenographer's nerves. "What's the matter with that carnation, I'd like to know," she snapped Can't one wear a simple little flower if one wishes?"

"Sure thing," said her brother. "All the men are wearing them. But would you mind telling us if you got the internal decoration with yours that they did with theirs. And wasn't the salad good," he meaninglessly inquired as he went out the door.

She didn't wear the carnation down town. She put it carefully in water and wore it again last evening when the young man who thinks she is engaged to him came to see her. He is terribly mistaken. He is only engaged to her. "Where'd you get the carnation," said he, shortly after he came in.

"Where'd you get yours," she asked in the same old feminnine way.

"I'm not wearing any," said he.

"No," said she, "I suppose you gave it to the girl at the office.

"And what if I did," he inquired.

"Nothing," she bit off quickly. "only I should think that when men get salad and beer and pickles and carnations all in one place that they might keep the carnation as well as the rest of the st ff," which was not a bad beginning for an evening of delightful bickering.

It seems that the stenographer had become erudite as to the dispenser of white carnations yesterday. Of course, it was not the fault of the man who is engaged to her, but he knows it is going to take him two afternoons of thought, one evening of undivided attention and about $3 in money to square himself. And the moral, if there is any, is the curse of drink.

WHAT RETAIL MARKETS OFFER.

Crown of lamb, 25 cents a lb.

Spring lamb, maybe, $2 a hind quarter.

Pansies, 35 cents a dozen.

Cucumbers, 2 for 25 cents.

A crown of lamb is one of the prettiest things in the meat line to serve as the piece de resistance at your Sunday dinner, and the beauty of it is that the butcher carves out the prettiness, and it doesn't take all your church time to arrange it yourself. He takes the ribs of the innocent, but slaughtered, young sheep thing and cracks them just where they are joined. He sews part of them together, and then turns the whole thing inside out, and there you have an arrangement with the meat all inside, and the slender little ribs making a rim just like the spokes of a crown. If you want lamb, that is probably the best you can do for your Sunday dinner, for the real lamb is exceedingly scarce this year, and just once in a while does one of the markets have some.

One of the grocers, who each year makes a specialty of pansy plants, had them out this morning, with the happy little faces of the great big blossoms just coaxing to be taken home, at 35 cents a dozen plants. Lots of people were taking them, for there are an unlimited number of folks who cannot resist pansies, and the fact that there is not an available space to plant them makes little difference to the real enthusiast when he sees those alluring little flowers in the mart of trade.

CARD RECEPTION.

Pretty Affair in Honor of Mrs. F. J. Griffith.

Mrs. R. G. Henderson was hostess at a luncheon and card party yesterday afternoon at her home, 210 Fifteenth avenue east, in honor of Mrs. F. J. Griffith. The rooms were prettily decorated in white and red carnations and ferns, and one of the dainty flowers was placed at each cover. Five hundred was played and the favors were won by Mrs. A. R. To Prevent Disagreeable Cooking Odors

One of the things that housewives have to contend with, particularly those who live in apartments, are the odors that will penetrate from the kitchen into the other part of the house even when observing the utmost care.

Much of this sort of thing can be avoided if proper precaution is taken. For instance, with some vegetables such as turnip onions, cabbage and the sort whose odors are strong, there is one precaution that can be taken, and that is to soak them for several hours before they are put on the fire. In weak, cold salt water, when much of the essential oils will be thrown off, rising to the surface in a sort of scum. Allow vegetables to come to a boil in the salt water, then skim very clean. A dash of cold water will throw up another scum, and this can be taken off as the other. Cook all such vegetables uncovered, as the lid has the tendency to strengthen the odor tenfold.

Bread crust dropped into the water just as it comes to a boil and left for about ten minutes is also said to gather up much of the oil. If cauliflower is not quite fresh the odor will be very strong. Before soaking scald in a weak salt water, boiling hot, which will tend to remove much of the odor.

Another cause of odors is stale grease that has been left on the stove from previous cooking. This is most offensive but can easily be guarded against by having the stove cleansed after each meal. Vessels that have been used for cooking strong vegetables should be left to soak in soda water until the time comes for washing. This will obviate the difficulty. Another simple deodorizer is to burn quickly a bit of newspaper, straw or excelsior which, with the windows open, will drive out any disagreeable odors.

Medium Sized Fans Replace Empire Style

Medium sized fans will in a great measure replace the tiny Empire styles of last season and because of their greater practibility are being welcomed by women generally. Six inches in length is the average size and are easily carried or tucked away in the belt of the princess gown to be brought forth when necessary.

Other utilitarian features of these fans are the materials of which the sticks are composed as well as the fabrics of which the mounts are made. Sandalwood sticks, carved; dainty gilt or ivory white frames are mounted either in printed silks in watteau designs, lace to match the gown, in chiffon, tulle or illuminated paper. Spangles ornament some of them but generally speaking extreme delicacy is sacrificed to usefulness, gorgeousness to utility, yet withal they are dainty enough to suit the most fastidious of women.

The EVENING STORY.

THE SPARROWS' HOUSE

By Joseph Baugher.

(Copyright, 1906, by Joseph W. Bowles.)

There was absolutely no reason why we should move; we were living in an up-to-date house in an excellent neighborhood. But Alice, my wife, thought differently, and as she was bent upon making a change, I consented on condition that she should do her own house-hunting.

"Oh, James!" she cried, as she met me one evening with a five-year lease in her hand. "I've found such a charming little home, and in such a delightful location; it's so cultured and refined, you know. I am so glad on Henry, Jr.'s account, for you know that Henry, Jr., is getting on."

The youth referred to had not turned 14 months.

"I leased the house from a Miss Sparrow—such a superior woman!" continued my wife; "so much nicer, don't you think, than renting from those horrid agents who will never do a thing for one without making a fuss about it. Miss Sparrow says she couldn't think of giving us so charming a little home, but her sister Amy is to be married next month, poor girl! and she, Miss Sparrow, of course, doesn't care to live alone."

I offered no objections, but suggested that she should write to her uncle Henry, for whom Henry, Jr., was named, and request him to postpone his visit until we were thoroughly settled in our new home. She indignantly refused, saying that her uncle had grown very irritable and suspicious of late, and he might think we didn't want him, and that she wasn't going to have Henry, Jr.'s, prospects ruined by any such insane notions. My wife's uncle, an asthmatic, wealthy old bachelor, was strongly prejudiced against me, because his niece had married me when he had hoped she would nurse him in his declining years.

The night of the first of the following month found us in our new home, and, excepting that a shower of prisms fell from the parlor chandelier when I had lighted the gas, the evening had, so far, passed off without incident.

My wife's uncle arrived in the worst humors; his train, being three hours late, didn't pull in until almost midnight. He drew back from me suspiciously when I offered to take his valise, and glared at me savagely over his glasses, thoroughly convinced, no doubt, that to a conspiracy on my part was due the accident to his train.

My wife, not a little hurt when her effusive greeting met with a rebuff, said she was sorry little Henry had gone to bed, for she would so like to have her Uncle Henry see his little namesake. Whereupon he somewhat gruffly inquired whether Henry, Jr., had any intention of absconding before morning.

Crestfallen, and worn out after a hard day's work we went to bed, but I had hardly closed my eyes when I felt myself suddenly aroused.

"James," whispered my wife in trembling tones, "what is that noise?"

"Only water running next door," I replied drowsily, and turned over to sleep again.

"Water next door! Why, James, it's in this very room. Listen!"

I got up and plainly heard the sound, but couldn't locate it.

Hoping to find the source of the noise, I ran a lighted wax taper along the side of the wall; when I reached a point about three feet from the window I found it as a volume of flame belched forth almost to the opposite side of the room. I seized a pillow, and called to my wife for a cork.

"Take it away for the love of heaven!" I yelled, as she handed me a cork, holding in her other hand a bottle. "It's gasoline!"

She gave a piercing shriek, and threw the bottle and cork out into the hall. After knocking over several things in the medicine chest she gave me a rubber stopper. I drove it into the aperture of a gas pipe from which the bracket had been purloined by the Sparrows, and which they had plugged with wax. The pillow, in the meantime had caught fire, and while I was trying to smother it my wife screamed again, and this awoke Henry, Jr., who joined in the melee; this brought down my wife's uncle, whom we didn't see until I lighted the gas, although he had announced himself by a sneeze.

Finally I got things quieted. I didn't notice until the next morning how badly I had been burned. It was after dawn when I was awakened.

"James! get up quick!" called my wife. "The room is filled with smoke—the house is on fire!"

Almost suffocated, I jumped out of bed, threw open windows, and groped my way to the kitchen stairs.

"Phyllis!" I yelled at the top of my voice; "is there a fire down there?"

"No, sah," yelled back the cook; "dar ain't no fiah; I wish dar war, but it's all smoke. Dart de ole stobe!

We hurriedly dressed, while Henry, Jr., having awakened, entered into the spirit of the affair, and seemed to enjoy it, for he persisted in kicking his heels up into the air and throwing off his covering. We tied him fast in his cradle, and then ran down to the kitchen, where we found Phyllis in tears.

"It are only de smoke, Miss Alice," explained the cook, drawing her sleeve across her eyes, while my wife, the picture of misery, was genuinely crying.

"There are draughts all over this house," she said, shivering as she drew her shawl around her.

"Dar ain't no draughts in his heah ole stobe, Miss Alice, 'deed dar ain't," said Phyllis, fanning the grate with her apron.

"Never mind the grate, Phyllis," said my wife, "but make a fire at once in the parlor. The little precious upstairs will take his death of cold." And she went up to Henry Jr., leaving me gazing dejectedly through a broken window out on the rain-soaked, ash-covered landscape of the Sparrows' back yard.

I was brought back to myself by my wife calling me to come up and unrope Henry Jr., who was strenuously objecting to his bondage. Just as I had freed him, there came from below an awful crash.

"Bress mah soul!" wailed Phyllis from the parlor, "if de whole front winder of de parlah stobe ain't done fall out."

I ran down again, followed by my wife with Henry in her arms.

"This is the last straw," I muttered, looking on our new parlor carpet, ruined forever.

"Where are you going, James?" said my wife, as I was getting into my rain coat.

"I'm going, my dear," I replied, "to call, as early as it is, upon that Sparrow of yours, and twist its neck."

"I beg of you—I implore of you not to go, James. Miss Sparrow will attend to everything, I am sure; besides, poor Miss Amy is going to be married only next month, and—"

Before she had time to finish her uncle entered and startled us with a double sneeze.

"Oh, Uncle Henry!" cried my wife, in great distress, "I knew you would take cold last night. You must let me get you something. I'm sure you must feel very bad; I will—"

"You may make yourself easy on that point, madam," he broke in. "But before I leave this house of conspirators I want to advise you to place that child in an asylum where he will be properly cared for; while you, madam, should be confined in some sanitarium. And as for you, sir," he shouted, shaking his umbrella in my face, "take the gold cure—the pledge would do you no good, you'd only break it. Take the gold cure! the gold cure! the gold cure!" He slammed the front door after him, and shuffled down the street.

While conning these things, Phyllis came in with her scuttle for the last load. She told us she had found an oil stove with enough oil in it to cook breakfast. She hesitated as she added that she had borrowed some water from our neighbor next door, who remarked that we had begun the borrowing plan rather early for so short an acquaintance. We commended our cook's enterprise and told her to do the best she could. And for the next ten minutes we heard her in terms forcible, if not polite, pay her respects to the stove.

Breakfast was not a success. The coffee was cold, and the chops were garnished with coal oil, the flavor of which lingered with me for hours.

Directly after breakfast I called on the Sparrows, who, while making my complaints, did nothing but flutter and chirp. The elder bird said she couldn't afford to spend a cent at that time on repairs.

I notified her that we would vacate the house within three days.

She fluttered and chirped excitedly as they followed me to the door, and I thought I heard the betrothed Sparrow say something about damages, though it may have been nothing more than an inoffensive twitter.

After calling on my old agent, I turned my steps toward our "new home," where I met the stove man who was, for the moment, leaving. He told me he had fixed the parlor stove, but could do nothing with the kitchen range; that during the summer months the sparrows must have built their nests in the chimney. I told him I hadn't the slightest doubt about it.

My wife was anxiously awaiting my return. Itold her of my highly satisfactory visit to our old landlord.

"Poor Miss Amy!" moaned my wife. "And, oh! you poor, disinherited, defrauded little darling," she added, burying her face in Henry, Jr.'s, neck.

On the evening of the third day following we were back in our old home.

SAYS LEASE WAS BROKEN

James Cash Sues Frank Suech and Joseph Risatti.

Action Involves Contract to Build on Bowery Property.

Because Frank Suech and Joseph Risatti are alleged to have repudiated a 50-year lease on some Bowery business property, on the upper side of Superior street, near Fifth avenue west, that carried with it an agreement to improve the site with a new building, James Cash, owner of the title to lot 83, block 18, Duluth proper, Third division, has brought suit for $15,000 damages, with interest and costs. Besides Suech and Risatti, their three sureties, James Magee, D. B. Erspamer and Edward E. Starkey, are made defendants.

This action will be one of considerable interest, not only because of the questions of law that will be raised, but because of the evidence that is likely to be introduced relative to the values of Bowery property.

In his complaint, filed with the clerk of the district court, this morning, by D. G. Cash and J. B. Richards, his attorney, Mr. Cash alleges that March 22, 1904, Frank Suech and Joseph Risatti leased from him the Bowery lot in question, one that has a frontage of fifty feet on Superior street, for a term of fifty years from May 1, 1904, with the agreement that they were to erect on the ground and have ready for occupancy, May 1, 1906, a modern brick and stone structure at a cost of not less than $15,000.

Suech and Risatti, it is alleged, agreed to pay a yearly rental for the first five years equal to 5 per cent of the valuation of the property, which was to be $50,000, with the understanding that every five years thereafter the valuation was to be fixed by arbitration. The rental was to be paid in advance each quarter, beginning May 1, 1904, and was not to be less than $2,500 a year in any event.

The complaint alleges that under the terms of the contract, Suech and Risatti agreed to pay all the taxes and assessments, beginning with the year 1904.

To secure the performance of the contract Suech and Risatti are said to have executed with James Magee, D. B. Erspamer and Edward E. Starkey, a joint and several bond in the penal sum of $15,000, conditioned that Suech and Risatti should pay all rentals, taxes and assessments that should become due under the lease prior to May 1, 1906, and should complete the building free of all liens and claims.

It is further alleged that March 1, 1905, by consent of all parties, including the sureties on the bond, the time for completing the building was extended from May 1, 1906, to August 1, 1906, and the payment of rent due under the lease of May 1, 1906, was changed from $625 to $833.34 and the payment due August 1, 1906, from $625 to $416.66. This waiver, it is claimed, was in no way to affect the liability of the principals or the sureties.

Suech and Risatti are alleged to have taken possession of the premises May 1, 1904, and to have collected and retained all rents for the property ever since that date. They are claimed to have refused to make the payment of $833.34 due May 1 last, or to pay the taxes and assessments against the property, amounting to $777.26.

Mr. Cash claims that Messrs. Suech and Risatti have notified him they have abandoned the lease and do not intend to erect the building or perform any of the other conditions of the alleged contract.

In consequence of this alleged repudiation of the lease, Mr. Cash claims he has been damaged in the sum of $15,000, the amount of the bond.

WEST DULUTH

MUST HAVE NEW CHURCH

Baptists May Find Themselves Homeless or Get One.

Cannot Rent After October—Out for Money to Build.

The annual meeting of the West Duluth Baptist congregation was held last evening at the church and the following officers were elected:

Deacon for three years, M. E. Allen, re-elected; trustee for three years, Forest Kent; clerk, Miss Maud Wallace; treasurer, A. L. Bishop; financial secretary, Mrs. F. J. Ross; musical director, Mrs. M. E. Allen.

The condition of the congregation in general is considered excellent and the reports were very satisfactory. However, the church people find that they will have to complete their new church this year. The building which they now occupy and which they have rented for seven years, must be vacated on Oct. 1 at the latest. The owners have so notified the congregation.

The West Duluth Baptists now own a lot at Grand avenue and Fifty-ninth avenues west and last year put in a stone foundation, all of which is paid for. Besides that $3,000 of the necessary $5,000 to complete the church has been collected or subscribed. In view of the fact that the present building must be vacated in October, Rev. Arthur J. Hoag, pastor of the church, has already started out to complete the subscription list and push the new church building to a finish. It is expected that work on the superstructure will be started within a very short time and that the building will be pushed. Mr. Hoag and the officers of the church will bend every effort to get the money in order to have a new church opened without any debt on it. As Mr. Hoag says about having to get the church:

"It's a ground hog case; we have to have it, or preach on the streets."

It appears that they will raise the money all right. The accompanying cut is that of the side elevation of the new church as it will appear.

WAS RAILROAD MAN.

Believed That Unknown Suicide Belonged to the Transportation Profession.

Nobody has been able to identify the body found near the crossing of the incline and the Missabe road tracks yesterday. The man has very successfully destroyed all papers, etc., by which his name might be found. It is believed that he was a railroad man. He carried in his pocket a stencil of the Great Northern road, also a stencil made out of agate and a lead pencil with the name of the Missouri Pacific railway upon it.

Scores of people viewed the body, but nobody seems to know who he is. He was seen in West Duluth a few days ago, begging. A man belonging in West Duluth also claims to have seen him going up the incline last Saturday.

Mr. Forbes is President.

Business men of Finlayson, Minn., have formed a club which is known as "The Finlayson Business club," and George Haven Forbes, formerly of West Duluth, has been elected its president. Mr. Forbes is a son of Rev. Robert Forbes, formerly presiding elder of the Duluth district of the Methodist church.

CAPTURED AFTER LONG CHASE

Fugitive is Taken for Crime Committed Two Years Ago.

After dodging the police authorities of the Northwest for nearly two years, Fred Ford, alias Robert Miller, was arrested by Officer Roberg this morning, and will be sent back to Valley City, N. D., to face his trial on the charg of highway robbery.

On Aug. 4, 1904, three men held up Mike O'Leary and Harry True with loaded revolvers, and robbed them of their watches and money, near Valley City.

One of the three men was captured and he is now serving a sentence of fifteen years in the North Dakota state prison. The other two men escaped, and the police have been searching for them persistently since that time.

The Duluth police secured information, several days ago, that Ford or Miller, who was suspected of being one of the other two men, was in the city, and the officers were warned to be on the watch for him.

He was captured by Officer Roberg this morning and taken to headquarters. There he was identified by Mr. O'Leary, one of the two victims of the robbery, who happened to be in the city at the present time.

The sheriff at Valley City was notified by telegraph this morning, and he answered that he would come for the prisoner at once.

BIDS FOR PAVING OF SECOND STREET OPENED

Competition for This Large Improvement is Very Keen.

Difference Between Tar Macadam and Cedar Blocks is Small.

Bids for the paving of Second street from Sixth avenue west to Seventh avenue east were opened this morning at the meeting of the board of public works, and they will be tabulated and referred to a meeting of the property owners, which has been called for Monday afternoon at 2 o'clock.

The bidding was very keen, and the margin in favor of the successful bidders, very small.

There were six bids submitted on tar macadam, and five on cedar blocks on a concrete foundation, while two submitted bids on creosote blocks and one on asphalt.

The work of tabulating all of these bids and carrying out the totals, is a very tedious task, and it will not be completed until late this afternoon or tomorrow morning.

From incomplete figures, however, it is likely that George R. King is low on the tar macadam pavement, and Fitzgerald & Norris on the cedar blocks.

The bid of George R. King for the tar macadam amounted to $61,246.65, which was about $700 below that of Hugh Steele and about $900 below that of P. McDonnell. The other three bidders were from $1,000 to $2,000 higher, but their bids have not been totalled.

These figures have not been checked over as yet, and mistakes may be found in them.

On the cedar block bids the totals are even more incomplete than on the tar macadam, but it is believed that Fitzgerald & Norris are low on this kind of pavement. Their bid is the only one that has been carried out, and it foots up to $60,542.25. The other bidders were: Thomas & McCoy, George R. King, P. McDonnell and Sang & Preston. They are but very little higher than the bid of Fitzgerald & Norris, and it is possible that one of them may yet prove to be the lowest bid.

There were but two bidders on creosote blocks, P. McDonnell and Sang & Preston. Mr. McDonnell's bid was $85,775.35, which was considerably lower than the other.

The Barber Asphalt company was the only bidder on asphalt, offering the pavement for $1.98 per square yard.

With less than $1,000 difference between the tar macadam and the cedar blocks, it is believed that the former stands an excellent chance of being selected.

The question of what kind of a pavement will be chosen, will be left to the decision of the property owners themselves. A mass meeting will be held Monday afternoon in the city council chamber, and the pavement selected. The contract will then be immediately let by the board of public works to the lowest bidder on that kind of pavement, and the award sent to the council for confirmation.

Bids for the paving of Seventeenth avnue east were also opened this morning. But one kind of pavement was considered, that being tar macadam. Sang & Preston were the lowest of five bidders, offering to do the work for $5,716.

The contract will be awarded to this firm.

CLASS DAY EXERCISES

At Michigan College of Mines of Much Interest.

Vice President Gayley of Steel Corporation to Speak.

Houghton, Mich., May 4.—James Gayley, first vice president of the United States Steel corporation, will be the central figure of interest when the Michigan college of mines, at Houghton participates in its annual class day functions today and Saturday. Mr. Gayley is the man secured this year by the college to deliver the class day talk. These annual addresses have now grown into a regular institution in connection with the college, constituting an important part of the college year.

Persons of international reputation in the mining world have come to Houghton in years past to deliver the addresses or "talk to the college men," as it is put in college circles. This year is no exception, nor its it calculated that any exception shall occur in years to come, and to that end the college has the conditional promise of a number of men whose names are as familiar as the mining industries with which they are associated.

JAMES GAYLEY,

The unique position of the Michigan college of mines in the purpose which it serves is such that those men are willing and glad to lend their aid in shaping the careers of the members of the younger generation who are going out into the field to take up the responsible portion of the work in the mining industries, because upon the successful execution of that portion of the work rests the success of the entire structure.

Mr. Gayley is a man eminnetly fitted to "talk to the men," as he knows the ground inch by inch over which they must travel. He did not have the early advantages that they have had in special training for mining work, his specialization having been confined to chemistry, but from the position of chemist, taken at $500 per year in the Crane Iron works at Catasauqua, Pa., immediately after his graduation from Lafayette college in 1876, he has steadily advaneed himself to the senior vice presidency of the world's greatest mining and metallurgical concern. The achievement was accomplished in less than twenty-five years, as Mr. Gayley has occupied his present position since the organization of the Steel corporation in 1900.

Merit was the basis upon which his advance was founded. He displayed

ENOCH HENDERSON,
President.

inventive capacity as well as an absolute mastery over the details of his work in hand. Some may call it good fortune, and unquestionably it is good fortune to have that capacity which wins the confidence of the employer and won for Mr. Gayley the support of Andrew Carnegie in his advancement. But the mining and metallurgical world is too exacting to bestow positions of the heaviest responsibility upon shoulders that are not proven by unquestionable tests to be capable of bearing them. Some may call it favoritism for a man who showed himself to be faithful, capable and loyal.

Mr. Gayley was born in 1855 at Lock Haven, Pa., his father being a Presbyterian minister. After his graduation from Lafayette and his first position with the Crane works, he became chemist for the Missouri Furnace company in 1880 and soon after took the management of the company's South St. Louis furnace.

In 1883 he beame superintendent of the Brooke Iron company at Birdsboro, Pa., and in 1885 he was secured by the Edgar Thomson Steel works near Pittsburg, Pa., in which concern he held various positions until finally he had general charge of the entire plant.

It was while in this position that he was able to apply his inventive capacity and work out some of the problems that made so much for the larger volume and more economical fuel consumption in blast furnace operation. His work in that line, twenty years ago, are today looked upon as marvelous, with the mechanical hinderances under which he then labored.

After demonstrating his practical knowledge of metallurgy at the Thomson plant he was assigned to the Pittsburg office of the company as an associate of the chief executives and there he came in close personal touch with Mr. Carnegie, in the function of supplying the enormous plants of the Carnegie Steel company with raw material. From that plane of operation his advancement to his present position was in the natural order of superior capacity. His broad grasp of every auxiliary of the mining and metallurgical industries make him one of the most interesting men the world could provide to meet and talk with the men of the Michigan College of Mines.

It is the wish of the college to have it understood in the clearest way that these annual addresses, which are given in the Kerredge theater, are for the public as well as for the student body of the college. They have always been liberally attended, and are now looked forward to with anticipation and are planned as part of the season's regular program. The attendance has grown steadily larger, and future increases is expected.

The banquet, given on the evening following the address, is served in the Douglass house and is for the speaker and the other guests of honor, the board of control and the college faculty, with the graduating class as hosts.

This year's graduating class is made up of strong personality, and is typical of the student body of the Michigan College of Mines. There are in the class of forty-five graduates this year four married men, and these men of families are not at all unusual in this college. It is very hard to make people understand the difference between the student body of the Michigan College of Mines and that of other educational institutions, but it is brought to view very strikingly in this one instance alone, where almost 10 per cent of the graduating class consists of men of families.

It is also brought to view by an investigation of the past of many of the students. While a great portion of the 200 students in the college came to the institution direct from high school, yet a surprisingly large number have interposed several years of business experience between their school work and their college career. A number have given up well salaried positions to take the special training in Houghton and others are alternating a year of work and a year of college successively in order to pay their way. These instances show the unusual strength of character and stable social structure that enter into the college life in Houghton.

The president of the present graduating class is Enoch Henderson of Norway, Mich. He is known among his college fellows as "Prof. Nick." Mr. Henderson after completing his high school work went into the business office of the iron mining industry and he resigned the chief clerkship of the Loretto iron mine, which is a well salaried position, to take up his work in the college of mines. He is a man with a family.

The secretary-treasurer of the graduating class is W. B. Pattison of Kalamazoo. He has displayed excellent business aptitude during his college career and last year was assistant manager of the Michigan College of Mines Glee and Mandolin club, which was on tour for some time.

The class also has an executive committee of which Clifford A. Barabe of Houghton is chairman. Mr. Barabe has a family consisting of a wife and children, living in Houghton and has for several years carried responsibilities in mining interests with which he is associated. The other members of the committee are J. C. Hartness of Houghton and G. M. Burke of Canandaigua, N. Y. Mr. Hartness is a man of experience in life, having held a position with the Pioneer Furnace company of Marquette, one of the important adjuncts of the iron manufacturing interests of the country, and also a position with the government in connection with the Sault Ste. Marie ship canal.

Mr. Burke, known among his college fellows as "Our Mike," is also president of the Students' association, which consists of the student body as a whole and which appoints committees to direct the social affairs of the college, the dances, the annual party, the college rush, the nightshirt parade and other similar work, and also to confer with the faculty and executives in all matters requiring such conferences. Mr. Burke as president of the organization is ex-officio chairman of these committees. His work in this connection has been particularly responsible during the last year because of the institution of new gymnasium. In carrying out this duty he has met regularly once a week with the college president and the gymnasium director.

W. B. PATTISON,
Secretary-Treasurer.

In addition to the two class officials already mentioned who are married, there are two other married class members. These are C. O. Lindberg of Marquette, who before coming to the college was chief clerk in the claim department of the Duluth South Shore & Atlantic railroad, and I. N. Woodworth of Grand Rapids, who was engaged in business for some time before coming to the college.

R. L. Downing of St. Paul, Minn., is the toastmaster selected by the class for the banquet. There will be responses by a number of the prominent mining men present.

CLAIM LAWS DEFECTIVE

Difficulties Encountered Under Minnesota Statutes on Marriage.

Legislature May be Asked to Make Some Changes.

That many persons authorized under the Minnesota laws to perform marriages do not live up to the requirements of the statutes is demonstrated by the fact that every few days the clerk of the district court receives certificates for filing that are dated from six months to two and three years back, and which should, under the statutes, have been received by the clerk within thirty days from the date of the marriage.

Letters of explanation that the clerk of the district court has received from time to time from ministers especially, shows that some of them have a very vague idea of what they are required to do, and for that reason the marriage records of persons who took out licenses to marry either fail entirely of completion, or are completed a long time after the ceremonies were performed.

The present laws of Minnesota are said to have shown some important defects that the next legislature may be called on to remedy. There are on the statutes at the present time sections which, so far as their real value is concerned, are practically dead letters and which will continue to be so until some radical steps are taken.

The law requires that persons about to join in matrimony shall first obtain from the clerk of the district court or from one of his deputies, marriage licenses. The licenses are presented to the person officiating at the marriage. Section 3562 of the Revised Laws of Minnesota says:

"Every person solemnizing a marriage shall make a record thereof, and within one month make and deliver to the clerk of the district court of the county where the marriage took place a certificate under his hand, containing the facts mentioned in Section 3561, which shall be filed and recorded by the clerk in a book kept for that purpose. And said clerk shall be entitled to receive 25 cents for recording said certificate from the persons offering the same for record."

The penalty for failure to observe the law is a sum not exceeding $100. If the clerk fails to record a certificate returned to him he is liable to the same fine.

Tre clerks of the district court in the counties throughout Minnesota have been acting under the assumption that the law requires a return of a certificate of marriage both to the county where the marriage license was procured and to the county where the marriage took place, for a license taken out in one county in Minnesota is a legal permit to be married in any other county of the state. The clerks have also insisted that the person recording such marriage should pay the 25 cent recording fee in both counties.

So far as can be learned from the revised laws there is no provision requiring a return made of a marriage to the county where the license was issued. The law states explicitly that the return must be made to the clerk of the district court in the county where the marriage is performed, and which, as happens in many cases, is not the county where the license was issued.

If the law is followed out strictly to the letter it means that the marriage record in the county where the license was issued may not be completed at all unless the person performing the ceremony happens to make a return there and this he is not compelled to do, as the statutes are interpreted.

On the other hand, the clerks of the district courts claim that where a marriage license is issued in one county and the ceremony is performed in another, there is absolutely no means whereby they can check up the record in the latter county unless the officiating officer or person happens to send in his certificate of marriage. For this reason some certificates are now and then coming in that are over two and three years old, the existence of which the clerk of the court knew nothing.

Marriage records are frequently of importance in legal transactions and many times persons who have lost their marriage certificates have been put to a great deal of trouble and inconvenience to establish the fact that they were regularly married, simply because the clerk of the district court never received a duplicate certificate for recording.

It is claimed the law should be amended to require the filing of the marriage in the county where the marriage license was issued, or else require that it be filed in both the county where the license was issued and where the ceremony was performed. As a rule the record is said to be of the most value anyway in the county where the license was issued as that is usually the residence of either one or other of the contracting parties.

FOR CONSTIPATION

WOMAN NEEDS NO LAW TO GIVE HER PRIVILEGES.

Paris, May 4.—The reforming of marriage and divorce laws demanded by certain legal and literary lights in the name of woman's growing emancipation has provoked an amusing utterance from M. Barboux, the Nestor of the Paris bar.

"Boussuet discovered that it is easier to stop an ass from braying than to prevent A woman from committing follies," said Barboux to a friend with whom he was walking.

"Will you tell me why the women of today put saucepans on their heads and call them hats and bind their waists with corsets that make them walk like this?"

So saying, the old man gathered up imaginary skirts, stuck out his chin and minced along in accurate imitation of a comely actress, to the intense and undisguised astonishment of a municipal guard near by.

"Woman's idea being unfathomable, you want the law to declare she should be emancipated," he continued. "As if a woman would wait for the approval of a slow-footed old legislator! The women are everything now they want to be; they are clerks, merchants, sculptors, leather cutters—everything. They are better writers than men and almost as good lawyers. But do you imagine they have ceased to be women?

"By Jove, no! They still have the secret of making men do what they will; infamies, follies, sometimes even great deeds. So, what is the use of legal reforms for their benefit? They would gain nothing, since they have everything now, and they would lose the priceless privilege of thinking themselves ill-used.

"As for those crying loudest for these reforms, in my opinion, it would be well if they felt a little more ashamed of their lack of intelligence and a good deal less vainglorious over their immorality."

AMERICAN IDEAS OF FRENCH CANDIDATE.

Paris, May 4.—Paul Adam, a sworn upholder of American institutions, is a candidate for election to the chamber of deputies, making his campaign as an advocate of innumerable reforms.

If elected, his legislative action will be largely inspired by his observations in the United States. He has just published a book called "American Pictures," in which he makes a comparison very unfavorable to France, where, he says, the political conditions are "bald, toothless, near-sighted and tottering."

Adam is running as a Republican-Socialist. He declared that the direct cooperation of what he calls "the aristocracy of the labor world" is essential to the just and wise government of a modern state.

THESE DAINTY PAJAMAS ARE NOT FOR THE MEN.

London, May 4.—Many West end firms are at present exhibiting dainty silken pajamas against a background of gauzy lingerie.

An inoffensive men who ventured in to inquire the price was sternly informed that "this is not the gentlemen's department," and fled before the wrath in the assistant's eye.

More careful inquiries elicited the fact that these artistic sleeping suits have replaced the empire "robe de nuit" in the hearts of fair customers.

The manageress of a Bond street firm has received an order for half a dozen pajama suits from an up-to-date society dame.

"They are to be made in the palest shades of silk, hand embroidered with flowers," the manageress said.

"Our customer has particularly asked us not to forget the little coat pocket, and we have been ordered to provide silk pocket handkerchiefs to match each suit."

THE DIVORCE DECISION FORCES RETIREMENT.

London, May 4.—Mrs. Ernest Cunard, formerly Mrs. Padelford, is one of the Anglo-Americans affected by the United States supreme court's divorce decision.

She has been in poor health since she underwent a severe operation, and the decision was a severe blow to her.

Her Portman square house is closed. She and her husband intend to stay quietly in the country indefinitely, or until they are able to regularize their marriage.

A Grand Gala Week of Value-Giving Beginning

SATURDAY, MAY 5,
In Celebration of our
First Birthday
In the Golden Rule Store.

WE Opened the Golden Rule One Year Ago Tomorrow. This came about after several years of study of the Dry Goods situation in Duluth, as affecting our interests and the interest of the public at large.

We knew that it was needed and we believed that we were the right organization to meet and provide for this necessity. The folly or wisdom of this decision is an open book that he who runs may read. And to our generous and critical public we refer the verdict. THE GOLDEN RULE has been a success from the very day of its opening invitation. There have been thorns to sidestep and stones to avoid but the hardy youngster has looked up not down; has looked forward, not back; has been hopeful, not regretting; has met cunning with frankness; has won success fairly; never tainted nor stained it by an unkind or unfair reference to a competitor. It has been broad enough to believe that there is room in the business sea for every craft that floats a fair flag!

One Year! What a along time if devoted to destroying confidences or useful institutions! What a short time in which to build a contending factor in the Dry Goods business of Duluth, to which all competitors give due consideration! THERE WAS ONLY ONE WAY TO DO IT! By straight dealing; unswerving from the right; honorable with every patron regardless of station or walk in life; never countenancing anything that could not be satisfied by our broad and generous conception of what is right between man and man! And here are other beacons that lighted the bright way for us: No misleading claims for merchandise; no juggling with technicalities only confusing; none of the numerous devices to enable the sale of goods at overvalue; no markups, then mark downs; no humbugging of any nature. But first very sure that OUR MERCHANDISE WAS RIGHT, then selling it every day to everybody alike, so that a customer knew beyond a doubt that he stood on the same fair ground as his fellow.

One Year! And our banners are floating high and wide; open and broadside to the glad, proud breeze of public approval. Growth has added to necessities and we have met them. Our old first-day friends are still with us, and the contended family grows larger each day. It's a proud first year and this week we give full sway to our spirit of obligation. Be welcome, for you are!

It's open-house week; a week when you must ask questions; a week when you may assert greater interest than ever before in the store and stocks; a week of bargains you'll do unfair to yourself to neglect; a week when we want to show by every act that this entire organization is a needed public utility, a part of which is YOURS TO HAVE AND TO HOLD.

MALLORY FILES BRIEF.

Modern Samaritans' Differences Formally Presented to Mr. O'Brien.

Deputy United States Marshal George J. Mallory was in St. Paul yesterday, and while there filed with the state insurance commissioner, T. D. O'Brien, a brief, which sets forth in detail the contentions of West Duluth council, No. 4, Modern Samaritans, in their complaint against the imperial council of the order. The matter was brought to the attention of the insurance commissioner by Mr. Mallory and M. Jacoby, acting for the West Duluth council, about a week ago.

Last night Mr. Mallory addressed Astoria council of St. Paul, and was afterwards subjected to many questions, invited by himself, as to the state of affairs prevailing in the order.

TWO INDICTED FOR MURDER

Spejar and Sertich Are Charged With Killing Peterson at Aurora.

John Spejar and Joe Sertich, the two Austrians charged with the murder of Charles Peterson, near Aurora, March 22, are indicted for murder in the first degree. If convicted under this indictment the penalty will be death by hanging.

Peterson was shot and stabbed to death for his money, near a sporting house run by Maud Miller, who was one of the witnesses before the grand jury.

Spejar and Sertich were arrested a few days ago on suspicion, and were held to the grand jury. They have maintained their innocence ever since their arrest. They are said to have left Aurora with a party of miners the day the body was found, near the old townsite of Aurora, and were arrested while working in a mine at Virginia.

John Rhedy, who is accused of robbing John Anderson of $31.55 is indicted for [illegible] and as [illegible] ed for grand larceny in the second degree.

John Briggs is indicted for burglary in the third degree. It is claimed that he broke into the Marquette saloon, owned by J. B. Cox and Frank Winchester, at Virgina, with the intent to steal.

John Kelley is indicted for grand larceny in the second degree. The information is that he robbed Robert McLean of Superior, Wis., of a watch, valued at $28, and brought it into this state.

SOMERS RESIGNS.

St. Paul, May 4.—Fred W. Somers, superintendent of the new capitol building, tendered his resignation to the capitol commission today, to take effect May 15. He leaves to take the position of chief bookkeeper with a contracting firm.

CARING FOR DESTITUTE

Is Causing Great Anxiety to Officials at San Francisco.

Washington, May 4.—The question of caring for the destitute in San Francisco is causing the officials there great anxiety as shown by the following telegram from Gen. Greely, dated yesterday and received at the war department over night:

Number of destitute being fed enormous, aggregating by today, as just reported, 191,637 in San Francisco. Apparently conservative estimates place destitute refugees at 40,000 in Oakland and Berkeley. How these terrible conditions are to be met is a subject of most earnest consideration between Dr. Devine, finance committee, and myself. While exertions of army to reduce aid to smallest possible limit has effected important changes, yet solution of situation without enormous suffering appears impossible."

Jury Cases for Trial.

Following is the setting of court cases in the district court next week:

May 7—Nos. 8, 9, 11, 18 and 31.
May 8—Nos. 33, 39, 42 and 44.
May 9—Nos. 45, 47, 48 and 49.

"I heard" is not so good as "I saw;" nor "so 'tis said" as "I read." Thus, the types advertise us a thousand-fold more widely than "our loving friends." "Like our shadows, our wishes lengthen as our sun declines." Through Herald want advertising we may get a "long wish" as easily as a short one.

EGG PRICES HOLD FIRM

Receipts Have Hardly Been Keeping Pace With the Demand.

Strawberries Becoming Plentiful—Stocks of Roots Running Low.

Receipts of fresh eggs have hardly been keeping pace with the demand during the last week, and the price is holding firm at 16 and 17 cents a dozen.

The movement has been heavy during the week, the demand being brisk.

Little attempt has been made to place any large number of eggs in cold storage as yet. The price is too high for the big dealers to care to handle them, but some small lots have been put away for the winter, and this has kept any surplus that might have accumulated well cleared up.

Butter prices remain practically unchanged from last week. Creamery prints are quoted at 22 and 23 cents a pound, and the dairies at 15 and 16 cents.

Cheese prices are also about stationary, and no change of any importance has been reported for weeks.

Strawberries are now coming from Mississippi and Texas.

During the last two weeks there have been heavy rains in the strawberry country, which have interfered greatly with packing and shipping, but heavy receipts are expected tomorrow and during the early part of next week. The territory from which berries are being shipped has greatly widened, and the supply is steadily increasing. The Mississippi berries are coming in twenty-four quart cases, which are selling at $3.75 a case. This price is likely to be cut next week, when the berries begin to come in more freely.

Pineapples are now quite plentiful, and are selling at about $5 per crate, or $1.90 per dozen. Pineapples and bananas are about the only fresh fruits that appear to be plentiful this year. Reports of a shortage in the orange crop continue to come in, and while they may be exaggerated in some parts, it is likely that the crop is light, and that when the demand increases with the warm weather, the prices will go much higher.

The same conditions are said to exist in the lemon market. The price of lemons is advancing in the East as the weather grows warmer, and the market has a very firm tone. Lemons are quoted now at from $4 to $4.50 per case.

Some Messina lemons have been received, and are being quoted at $4.50.

This week has been a very uneventful one as far as the green vegetable market is concerned.

Potato prices remain unchanged at practically the same figures that were quoted last week. They range all the way from 60 to 70 cents a bushel, according to the grade. The price is not likely to go any higher, as the roads are improving constantly, and it will be easier for the farmers to get their stocks to market.

The supply of Southern green stuff is becoming more liberal and the local dealers are heavy buyers.

Cabbage is now being received from South Carolina and from California, and is selling at $3.50 per crate.

The supply of roots is rather light, and the prices have advanced materially. Bagas are selling at $3 per hundredweight and carrots at $1.50. Beets have advanced to $3 per hundredweight and parsnips are selling at $3. These prices are about double those that were quoted three or four weeks ago.

The market on these staple vegetables is getting well cleaned up and the stocks are running very low.

* * *

Meat and poultry prices remain at about the same figures as last week.

The movement in poultry is very light. The demand is not heavy and the receipts are small.

* * *

The week has been a fairly active one along the street, although the cold and disagreeable weather greatly interfered with trade.

CHARGED WITH CONSPIRACY

Five Oshkosh Men Arrested in Connection With Land Frauds.

Oshkosh, Wish., May 4.—Five lumbermen and bankers representing an aggregate wealth far in excess of $1,000,000, were arrested here yesterday by the federal authorities on the charge of conspiracy to defraud the general government by means of alleged land frauds in the state of Oregon.

The men arrested are: Leander Choate, James Matt Bray, Benjamin Doughty, James Doughty and Thomas Daly. Mr. Bray is the president of the Bray & Choate Lumber company, and Choate is the treasurer of that company. The Doughtys are retired lumbermen. Daly is cashier of the Commercial National bank, and all of the men are large stockholders in that institution.

Each was placed under bonds of $2,000 and the hearing adjourned to Friday, May 11. Besides the above defendants, warrants have been issued for August Anderson and Joseph Black of Shawno. The charge contained in the federal grand jury indictments under which the men are being prosecuted, is that of conspiracy to defraud the federal government by having furnished money to Oregon parties to make entries and buy homesteads in the states named.

Portland, Or., May 4.—In addition to the Oshkosh, Wis., capitalists who either have or will be arrested in connection with the government land frauds in Oregon, Sumner K. Parker of Ashland, Or., has also been arrested under the same indictment. This indictment, which was one of the most important that has been returned by the present grand jury, charges that under the name of the Oshkosh Lumber company, the accused acquired 160,000 acres of land in Klamath and Lake counties by inducing residents of Ashland and Medford, Or., to file upon the land, upon the understanding it was to be transferred to the Wisconsin men as soon as final papers should be secured.

SEVENTY PASTORS AT SLEEPY EYE

Annual Meeting of German Evangelical Association in Session.

Sleepy Eye, Minn., May 4.—The Minnesota German Evangelical association began its session in this city Monday evening. About seventy pastors from all parts of the state are in attendance. Rev. Mr. Utzenger of Blue Earth delivered the opening address. On Tuesday Bishop Thomas Bowman of Allentown, Pa., arrived, and he will have charge of the sessions.

The preliminary meetings were held on Tuesday and Wednesday. On Tuesday the examinations of applicants for the ministry were held. The applicants are: C. C. Stetthacher of Bemidji, C. R. Ziek of Danube, F. W. Riedel of Deer River and M. Wordelman of Sherburne. All will receive charges before the close of the sessions.

Wednesday morning's session was devoted to the hearing of reports and statements of the fire and tornado insurance society which is conducted by the association. The society insures only the association's churches and parsonages. A very favorable report was submitted and accepted.

In the afternoon the conference missionary society work was discussed and the annual election of officers was held. The treasurer's report showed that contributions amounting to $8,365 had been received and properly distributed to foreign and state missionaries. The following clergymen were elected as officers of the missionary society:

President, Rev F. R. Pettikow of Minneapolis; vice president, Rev. C. W. Sydow of Fairmont; secretary, Rev. C. F. Tesch of New Palnesville; treasurer, Rev. C. F. Kachel of Wells; delegate to annual church missionary society at Chesley, Ont., Rev. H. Plantikow, presiding elder of St. Paul district; alternate, Rev. J. M. Baltimger, presiding elder of the Minneapolis district.

N. A. Palmer state superintendent of the Anti-Saloon league, delivered an eloquent and forcible lecture before the ministerial conference Wednesday evening. A new committee will be named by the association to co-operate in the work of the league. Music for all meetings is being furnished by the conference octet. The ministers who are attending the association's meetings are being entertained by the different citizens.

CONTRACTS ARE AWARDED

Water Board Accepts Bids for Equipment for Duluth Heights.

Fairbanks, Morse & Company were the successful bidders yesterday for the contracts for furnishing the pumping equipment at Duluth Heights and the laying of the mains. The firm's bid for the pumping equipment was $8,898, and for the laying of the mains its bid was $5,079.

The T. J. Thompson company of this city was awarded the contract for the special castings, at $2.75 per 100 pounds. R. D. Wood & Company secured the contract for the fire hydrants on a bid of $37, the only one submitted. The Glunn Manufacturing company was awarded the contract for the valve boxes on a bid of $4.20 each. The water and gas valves will be supplied by the Roe-Stephens company. The specifications call for various sizes.

The water board took no action regarding the bids that have been submitted for furnishing the pumps for the Lakewood station. The matter is still in the hands of the engineering expert that the board retained to investigate the merits of the different pumps.

MINNESOTA BUTTER

Re-marked by Eastern Dealers and State Loses the Credit.

St. Paul, Minn., May 4.—E. K. Slater, state dairy and food commissioner, has just returned from New York where he went to gain recognition for Minnesota butter handled by the New York dealers and sold to the Eastern and foreign trade. Minnesota butter, instead of carrying the brand of this state, is re-marked New York when purchased by Eastern dealers, consequently the state receives none of the fame in foreign parts as the first butter state in the Union. Mr. Slater desired to have the Minnesota butter branded and to get the consent of the Eastern dealers to have the brand remain. He found them unwilling to handle Minnesota butter under the brand, as large dealers establish their own brands, buying butter where they can and rebranding to suit themselves. Some kind of a co-operative creamery to handle Minnesota butter and such in New York is contemplated.

TO ESTABLISH BRANCH HERE

Works Biscuit Company Will Have Offices and Salesrooms in Duluth.

The Works Biscuit company has decided to establish a branch here and quarters are being fitted up for the concern, on Michigan street. The concern has its headquarters and factory in Minneapolis and employs about 350 people. E. B. Johnson and B. E. Ludwig, secretary and credit man, respectively, of the concern, are in Duluth making arrangements for the opening of the local offices and salesrooms.

A. A. Kerr, for many years sales manager in the National Biscuit company's local branch, will be manager of the Works company branch. His staff will include George M. Snyder and O. C. Reitan, both of whom have been connected with the National company.

The new place of business will be opened next week. About twelve men will be employed in the office and shipping room and a number of traveling salesmen in this district will report to this office and make Duluth their headquarters.

ARRANGES FOR THE EXERCISES

Memorial Day Committee Meets to Select Speakers for Day.

The Memorial day committee of the G. A. R. met yesterday in the office of the secretary, Judge White, and outlined a program for May 30. C. S. Mitchell, editorial writer on the News Tribune, will deliver the principal address of the day, and Rev. M. S. Rice, pastor of the First M. E. church, will deliver the Memorial day sermon there on the morning of May 27, which is Memorial Sunday.

The veterans, the Women's Relief corps, Ladies of the G. A. R and Sons of Veterans will gather at Kalamazoo hall in the forenoon on May 30 and proceed to the cemeteries, where the graves of the dead soldiers will be decorated. In the afternoon, appropriate exercises will be held at the Armory.

There will be music by local vocalists and musicians, the reading of Lincoln's Gettysburg speech and Mr. Mitchell's address. A number of features of the program have not been determined upon yet and the committee will hold several important meetings between now and the last of the month.

A TORNADO

Blows Down Several Buildings Four Miles From Cannon Falls.

Cannon Falls, Minn., May 4.—A tornado four miles northwest of this place yesterday afternoon blew down all the buildings on the farm of Ferdinand Ista, excepting his house. Two large barns on a neighboring farm and the Ista school house were blown into kindling wood. School had been dismissed only a few minutes. As far as heard from, no lives were lost. Many people in this city watched the funnel shaped whirling cloud high up in the air. All at once it shot down to the earth and then seemed to diffuse itself into smoke or vapor.

POWDER MILLS BLOW UP.

Louisiana, Mo., May 4.—The machine house, gun cotton house and dry cotton house of the Lamotte Powder works, situated two miles from Ashburn, Mo., blew up yesterday. Charles Bernard, of Haverton, and Henry Pulsec, of Ashburn, were killed and several were injured. The shock was felt and the report heard here, twelve miles distant.

WILD REIGN OF TERROR

In a Louisiana Village Brought to End by Murder.

Justice of the Peace and Fellow Conspirator in Prison.

Kenner, La., May 4.—Startling conditions of lawlessness and disorder which existed in this little city of Jefferson parish, prior to the recent investigations brought on by the murder of a negro woman and the shooting of several others, are vividly painted in the report of the Jefferson grand jury, which was submitted to Judge Prentiss E. Edrington of the Twenty-eighth judicial district court.

Only the report of the inquisitors can furnish one with an idea of the state of affairs, or rather the "reign of terror," which formed part of the life and existence of the city just before the Smallwood killing brought about the climax in the thrilling drama of reality. Not all of those who were responsible for these conditions have felt the hand of the law, but two have been sentenced to terms in the penitentiary. One of these is W. J. Adam and the other, John Ledoux.

As the result of the investigation of the grand jury, indictments for murder were returned against W. J. Adam, John Ledoux, W. V. Brown and Sam Catalini; A. L. LeBreton was made the defendant on an indictment to corrupt a juror, and four indictments were returned against Henry A. Stahl for blackmail. Two true bills were returned in blank, one being for embezzlement and the other for violating Act No. 41, 1890.

After relating the course it assumed in the finding of these indictments, the grand jury reports:

"The indictments above enumerated constitute the climax of this body's searching inquiry into a condition of affairs as outrageously violative of every law of God and man as has ever been on earth within the knowledge of any member of this body. The city of Kenner and the adjacent settlements form the scene of this saturnalia of crime. There was none so fearless and bold in the long-suffering community as to stand forth and denounce the succession of crimes and the perpetrators of them. Good men abhorred the dark and bloody deeds, but none cared to invite the midnight bullet by openly avowing his knowledge or his suspicions touching the identity of the perpetrators.

"Scores of witnesses were examined by this grand jury relative to the conditions above outlined, and the overwhelming preponderance of testimony was to the effect that two men—officials whose sworn duty it was to uphold the law and to protect human rights—were the principal violators of this law and of the rights vouchsafed under it. These officials are ex-Justice of the Peace W. J. Adam and ex-Treasurer H. A. Stahl. What a state of terror must have been ever present in the mind of the inoffensive and peacably inclined citizen when he was confronted with the spectacle of the judge and other sworn officials trampling all laws under foot at will and transforming the sanctity of their official oaths into a hollow mockery! It was no wonder, as we learned, that law-abidding men feared to walk the streets at night; that women trembled even in their homes in dread anticipation of some unseen yet keenly felt danger, some hovernig menace of evil to come, and that the pursuits of business and pleasure alike came to a sudden check when the shadows of night gathered about the unfortunate town.

"Our investigations disclose the fact that the town was practically run by the officials named. All municipal offices from which any revenue could be derived were monopolized by these two, Adam was justice of the peace and street commissioner; Stahl was everything else—treasurer, secretary of the council, acting constable, assessor and tax collector. The mayor and councilmen were officers in name only. Meetings of the council were held whenever Stahl sent notice to the mayor and councilmen that a meeting was desired. These meetings were sometimes four and five months apart, and the proceedings were perfunctory, Stahl always getting through whatever measures he had assembled the council to pass.

"The mayor and councilmen have declared that they have no recollection of voluminous minutes that appear in the record of the council's proceedings ever being read—everything appeared to be done through notes or memoranda, and the fact that the then mayor, S. M. Cowen, had not fixed the signature of his approval to the minutes for a long period, and that he has not signed countless municipal expense and salary warrants, bears out his declaration that he did not believe things were run as they should have been, to use his own mild description. Sums aggregating over $9,000 were expended without any legal authorization that we can discover. These moneys were almost invariably advanced by Treasurer Stahl on order of street commissioner. The funds of the city of Kenner, in the custody of Stahl, were not deposited in any bank. To stamp Stahl's handling and disposition of these sacred funds as criminally loose is to apply a merciful description to his acts and methods.

"The outcome of the trial of Ex-Justice of the Peace Adam on the charge of murder, which resulted in the pleading guilty to manslaughter and the imposition of a sentence of ten years in the state penitentiary by your honor, prompts us to withhold presentation for lesser offenses against him, especially as the facts concerning these are within the knowledge of the proper officers of this court, who, we feel, may be depended upon to proceed in the matter as their sense of duty shall dictate.

"As there is a silver lining to every cloud, so does good often come out of evil, and the dark days of Kenner seem now to have faded into a mere unpleasant memory. Witness after witness has appeared before this body and breathed a fervent thank God in appreciation of the redemption of Kenner.

"We now live in peace, with nothing and nobody to fear," is the popular verdict touching present conditions. Municipal affairs today are conducted by a conscientious mayor and council. Council meetings are held monthly, and the people attend en masse to see and hear what their servants are doing—a privilege they were afraid to exercise under the preceding regime."

TRAINING IS SUPERB

The Carlisle Indians Show Great Aptitude for Football.

About Seventy-Five Tribes Represented in the School.

Carlisle, Pa., May 4.—There is nothing untutored about the Carlisle Indian, whether in matter of physical education or of plain common sense. Boys and girls of all ages, from 6 years to 22, are taken into the school, and from the time they enter they are under the care of a system of strict physical training.

The girls have the place to themselves three times a week; the boys use it the other three days, and on Sunday the weary building closes. Its day begins at 7:30 o'clock and winds up toward 5 o'clock with virtually no cessation of activity.

The chief thing that disqualifies an Indian applicant is consumption. The others, as a rule, are good material to work them up to a high state of physical perfection. The opinion at Carlisle is that the Indian has not gone back with the approach of civilization, that he is still a higher grade in physical attainment than the white.

Out of the proceeds of sport, and football in particular, the gymnasium was equipped and has since been maintained.

The gymnasium at Carlisle is a big, bare building. The floor space is large and well lighted. The classes range from seventy-five to 100 in number.

When it is one of the boys' days the little boys come in early in the morning, and they get a half hour or so of gymnasium work. The instructor plays along with them.

A detachment of big boys comes in. They get a severe drill, according to abilities. Some get Indian clubs, some wands or dumbbells. Others go through the manual arms with a rifle, using the setting-up drills of the army.

To this class succeeds one of little boys again, and in alternation it runs through the day with an appropriate interval for lunch. There are about 600 boys in the school.

For the girls the program is much the same. The rifle drill, naturally, is omitted. They have mostly Swedish exercises, with an occasional drill with wands. The little girls get the play games, which they enjoy as much as the boys.

In the entrance to the Carlisle gymnasium there is a sort of trophy room. Along the walls hang pictures of former football teams, as well as baseball and track organizations. Above the pictures hang two rows of footballs, the choicest from a large collection.

These are painted in appropriate colors, Carlisle's on the one side, with the score made by the Indians; on the other the colors of the vanquished team, with its tally. Above each football hangs the college flag of the defeated college.

It is on the athletic field outside that the Indians have played all their home football games, and no visiting team has ever crossed the Indians' goal line. That, of course, does not say that goals from field have not been kicked, but no touchdown has been made.

The Indians take naturally to football, and their teams generally are good. Besides that they supply men to the professional leagues each year. Lacrosse is also played at Carlisle, and this, with track athletics, makes up the list of competitions in which the athletes engage.

About seventy-five tribes are represented in the school. Apaches, Nez Perces, Sioux, Creeks, Oneidas, Tuscaroras, Iroquois and Chippewas are the mixed bloods—that is, the best of them.

The best athletes are Oneidas and Chippewas, as far as generalities can be made. A lineup of the teams at Carlisle contains representatives from many or practically all the known tribes, and occasionally, as in the case of Nikifer Schouchouck, a couple of years back, an Eskimo gets on the football team.

Of the athletes whom the school has turned out, one of the most wonderful is Frank Mount Pleasant. Mount Pleasant comes from the Tuscarora tribe, and entered the school ten years ago. At that time he was a boy about 12 years of age. He did not display any strong athletic tendencies, and it is only of recent years that he has shown prominence.

Now he rejoices in a physical development that is simply superb. A better pair of shoulders or stronger muscled back and chest it would be hard to find anywhere. At the Pennsylvania relay carnival last spring Mount Pleasant made his appearance in competition in a way that attracted intercollegiate attention to him.

BOY'S MURDER STORY A DREAM

Tale of Father's Killing Little Brother Excites Constables.

Joplin, Mo., May 4.—When Constables Dan Turnbull and Lou Drane went to investigate the murder of the baby, which, according to the story of the 8-year-old son of John Williams, the father had killed and thrown into an abandoned mining shaft, they found the baby at home playing gayly with the father's hair and pulling it as hard as it could.

Young Williams of Chitwood told the constables that his father shot the baby and then cut it to pieces and threw the remains into a mine shaft to hide his crime. The boy told the story in such a serious manner that the officers did not doubt its truth. The constables started for the shaft to find the remains of the baby. The boy did not want to accompany them. He said he feared his father would kill him.

Near the shaft the constables met Mrs. Williams, who was looking for her boy. The constables told her the story the boy had told them. Mrs. Williams led them to the house where they found the father playing with the baby.

There seems to be no other reason for the boy's story except his habit of making up yarns and relating them for truth.

IRON GIANT IS HOMELESS AGAIN

Women's Clubs Object to Huge Statue for City Park.

Birmingham, Ala., May 4.—Vulcan, the giant iron statue of the god of iron which was on exhibition at the World's fair to represent Birmingham's mineral interests, and which is the largest cast statue in the world, standing some fifty-five feet high, is having a hard time finding a permanent location.

After the World's fair the Commercial club of this city, which had the statue cast at a cost of $25,000, could not get the iron man home until a fund sufficient to pay off a debt of about $5,000 was raised. With this finally accomplished, the next thing in order was to find a permanent location for the giant. The club finally agreed upon the summit of Red Mountain, just south of the city, as a proper place, it being argued that such a big statue would show up better from the mountain top than elsewhere. However, no owner of land on the mountain would either sell or rent a spot on which to stand the statue, and that location had to be abandoned.

Capitol park, in the city, was selected next, and the city council agreed to allow the statue in the park. After this had been done the women's clubs rose up in arms and said that the statue was too big to be placed in Capitol park, that it would be out of harmony with its surroundings, and that to place it there would be an outrage on esthetics, etc. Then the council rescinded its former action, and Vulcan is again homeless.

WILL AND WON'T RAGTIME CLUBS

Des Moines Musical Girls Divided Upon Popular Music Question.

Des Moines, Iowa, May 4.—Des Moines has girls who will and girls who won't play ragtime. The recent organization of twelve young girls in the Enna Conservatory of Music who will not play ragtime finds a contrast in the club of women just formed who will play ragtime and at their weekly meetings insist on at least one number of ragtime. The former club insists ragtime is trashy and the latter that it is classical. The former say they don't play ragtime because it isn't proper and the others say that anyone who will not play it refuses because they can't. They claim that one of Paderewski's minuets that everyone plays in big concerts is ragtime.

CUPID IN TROLLEY.

Love Begins in Sickroom and Culminates in Car.

Plainfield, N. J., May 4.—After keeping their marriage secret for about three months, Miss Ida Wright of Westfield and Andrew Mulford of this city made it known, and at the same time related the romance that led to the marriage.

The courtship began when Mulford was escorting Miss Wright home from this city. The street car was given a bad jolt and Mulford was injured. Miss Wright nursed him. This led to the mutual love between the couple.

About three months ago they met accidentally in the same trolley again and they thought that fate preordained that they should wed the same day—and they were married.

TOWN HERO ARRESTED.

Pennsylvania Soldier Must Answer to Charge of Desertion.

South Bethlehem, Pa., May 4.—When, during the holidays, Howard Applegate returned to his home here from the Philippines, where he was company clerk for five or six years, he was tendered a public reception and dinners were given in his honor. It was generally understood that he had completed his term of enlistment. But United States Marshal Reed arrested him here on the charge of desertion from the army, and he was hurried to Philadelphia.

The arrest was a big surprise to almost everybody, for he made no secret of his return to town.

THE Food Cure
Put in the body what NATURE NEEDS
Find that in GRAPE-NUTS
HOW TO BUILD A BODY.

One of the most important discoveries of late is the application of the right kind of food to rebuild the lost substances of the body, thrown off by the active, nervous work of Americans.

Careful investigation by experts in food and diatetics, has brought out the fact that albumen, which is contained in various foods, is acted upon by phosphate of potash, not such as obtained in drug stores, but such as is found in certain parts of the field grains in most minute particles, arranged in Nature's laboratory, not man's.

The part of the grains containing phosphate of potash is used in the manufacture of Grape-Nuts food, therefore the active, nervous, pushing brain-worker can feed the body with food that goes directly to the rebuilding of the broken-down gray matter in the brain, solar plexus and nerve centers all over the body, with the result that the individual who refreshes and rebuilds the body with proper material of this sort, obtains a definite result, which he can feel and know of and which is apparent to his friends.

A vigorous brain and nervous system is of the greatest importance to any business man or brain-worker.

SOCIAL GAME BRINGS A FINE

Judge Holds Glass of Lemonade as a Gambling Stake.

St. Joseph, Mo., May 4.—"I am going to fine every man brought before me and proven guilty of violating this ordinance," said Police Judge Muir after assessing a fine of $3 each against George Dysart and C. P. Brooks for playing cards at the Anona club rooms for lemonade.

The ordinance covers any game of chance for money or property, and Judge Muir holds that drinks of any kind that cost money, cigars and such things as are usually played for in the so-called social game of cards, are property. Shaking dice for drinks or cigars will also come under this head, if the police see fit to enforce the ordinance rigidly.

The fines assessed against the two men were the result of the raid on the Anona club by Detectives Wheeler and Wilson. They found several men seated at a table playing cards. Dysart and Brooks admitted that they had played for lemonade. Gabe and William Etschman, arrested as proprietors of the house, were found not guilty of keeping a gambling house.

PAVED ROADWAYS

Wanted by Farmers Who Are Willing to Pay for Them.

Chillicothe, Mo., May 4.—"I would tax myself $1 an acre if my neighbors would join me for the purpose of paving the road with brick," said William Jackson, a farmer living on Spring Hill road. His suggestion was taken up, and he found others even more liberal than himself. Among these is J. T. Jackson, who lives on Trenton road. When Jackson heard of the plan, he said, unhesitatingly:

"Why, I would give $2 per acre to pave Trenton road, and I believe there are others who would do the same. I know one other farmer on the road who would do it. The money collected this way would be enough to pave the road with brick and chertrock. Of course, chertrock is cheaper. The road need not be wider than 16½ feet, and it could be put up for $3,000 a mile, I think."

Jackson is active trying to get the opinions of his neighbors, and he thinks with them he will start to raise a fund for paving the road.

THOUSANDS SEE STREET WEDDING

Altar on Corner Result of Dares of Indiana Couple.

Evansville, Ind., May 4.—In the presence of 2,000 gayly dressed promenaders, with a buggy standing on a street corner for an altar, Miss Anna Black, a comely girl of 19, and Fred Powell, 21, were united in marriage. The unique wedding took place at the corner of Main and Second streets, and two hearts were made one by Justice Henry F. Schrader.

A few weeks ago an Evansville couple were married on the top of a huge smokestack, and it is said that the ceremony was a sequel to the former event. The lovers were discussing the smokestack wedding when they began to dare each other, with the result that the girl accepted her lover's proposal to wed on the street corner.

The audience which assembled for the wedding was excelled only by that at the smokestack ceremony. The newspapers had extensively announced the event, and for an hour before the time of the wedding all traffic in the street was stopped by the throng. The street cars were compelled to wait while Cupid had his way. The lovers could not reach the appointed place for the wedding until the police had cleared a space for the drive.

"Here, Jenkins, take this collar and clean it up for me with a sponge and a little castile soap and water."
"But, sir, the laundry—"
"How do as I say, Jenkins. Thank Heavens, the laundry can't tear any more of my collars and cuffs to pieces. Hereafter these 'LITHOLIN' Waterproofed Linen Collars and Cuffs for mine."

TRIP ABANDONED.

Father Sherman Keenly Feels Criticism of the People and Press.

Atlanta, Ga., May 4.—Father Thomas Sherman yesterday abandoned his trip over the historic fileds which his father, Gen. W. T. Sherman, traversed forty years ago, and with the escorting party returned to Fort Oglethorpe. A special messenger with orders from Gen. Duvall, commanding the department of the gulf, reached Cartersville at midnight Wednesday from Fort McPherson. Mail and telegraph orders were also received by Lieut. Campbell, commanding the escort, stating that on account of the misapprehension by the southern people, the war department had ordered the immediate return of the party. The return march was commenced at 5 o'clock yesterday morning. Father Sherman expressed regrets that his mission should have been misunderstood and expressed himself as keenly hurt by the criticism of people and press. He declared that he would continue the trip alone, but finally decided to return.

ARCHBISHOP WELL PLEASED WITH VISIT.

Rome, May 4.—Archbishop Ireland will leave Rome today, staying a few days at Milan and later going to Paris. He expressed himself yesterday as being delighted with his visit to Rome, saying he has received the most cordial and kindly treatment from all, and especially from Pope Pius, Cardinal Merry Del Val and other members of the sacred college. He had, he said, found the Vatican more than well informed about things American and animated by the friendliest feeling toward America. This, the archbishop declared, is especially true of Cardinal Merry Del Val, who sometimes is depicted as anit-American. Pope Pius gave Archbishop Ireland a letter written in Latin congratulating him on the construction of a cathedral at St. Paul of more than usual beauty and of a church at Minneapolis scarcely less magnificent. The letter authorizes the archbishop to thank, in the name of the pope, all those who contributed towards the erection of the two churches, and especially the gentlemen who so liberally endowed the diocese of St. Paul with a fine seminary.

MAYOR BATHES AT HOME.

Pittsburg Official Declines to Use the City Property.

Pittsburg, Pa. May 4.—Mayor George W. Guthrie's latest surprise is his absolute refusal to avail himself of the usual "perquisites" enjoyed by mayors.

A finely bred horse and a private shower bath at the Safety building are among other things allotted to the chief executive of Pittsburg, but Mayor Guthrie will not accept any of them. He prefers his own horse and his own bath.

ORDER TO EXAMINE ACCOUNTS, ETC.—

State of Minnesota, County of St. Louis —ss.

In Probate Court, Special Term, May 3rd, 1906.

In the Matter of the Estate of Samuel P. Weisiger, Deceased:

On reading and filing the petition of Henning Chambers, administrator with the will annexed, of the estate not already administered of Samuel P. Welsiger, deceased, representing, among other things, that he has fully administered said estate, and praying that a time and place be fixed for examining, settling and allowing the final account of his administration, and for the assignment of the residue of said estate to the parties entitled thereto by law.

It is ordered, that said account be examined, and petition heard by this Court, on Monday, the 28th day of May, A. D. 1906, at ten o'clock A. M., at the Probate Office, in the Court House, in the City of Duluth, in said County.

And it is further ordered, that notice thereof be given to all persons interested, by publishing a copy of this order once in each week for three successive weeks prior to said day of hearing, in The Duluth Evening Herald, a daily newspaper printed and published at Duluth, in said County.

Dated at Duluth, Minn., the 3d day of May, 1906.

By the Court.

MARINE

ALL QUIET IN HARBOR

No Desertions Since Socapa Incident Reported Here.

Thirteen Ore, One Merchandise and One Grain Cargoes Go.

So far as the marine strike in Duluth is concerned everything is quiet in Duluth and Superior and no other reports of desertions have come since that of the steamer Socapa. Rumors have been heard, but all when chased down have been found to be groundless.

Thirteen vessels departed today loaded with ore, and five after arriving here light for ore, were sent back to Two Harbors to load. The Juniata of the Anchor line went out with package freight and the Morley took out a load of grain.

MARKED DIFFERENCE

In Leaders' Statements as to Number of Mates Striking.

Detroit, May 4.—President Keefe of the Longshoremen and President Livingstone differ widely as to the number of mates who have obeyed the strike order. "We have positive and accurate reports that 80 per cent of the mates have walked out," said President Keefe today. "We have the number of boats and their names. These reports are not made by officials of the Pilots' association, but by our own representatives on the ground."

"Not more than 1 per cent of the mates have left their boats," was Livingstone's reply to Mr. Keefe's statement. "We are experiencing no trouble whatever in moving boats."

PLAIN STATEMENT

By Package Freight Lines on Their Attitude Towards Mates.

Buffalo, N. Y., May 4.—C. C. McCain, commissioner of the Association of Lake Lines, which is composed of all the package freight lines operating on the Great Lakes, issued yesterday on behalf of the interests he represents, a statement relative to the strike situation, which was in part as follows:

"The Lake Carriers' association has a membership of substantially all the vessel interests on the Great Lakes, including the package freight carrying lines. A committee of the association has, for several seasons past, arranged for the wages and conditions of the various subordinate classes of vessel labor, and has been prepared to consider and arrange for the conditions to apply for the season of 1906.

"At the annual meeting of the Lake Carriers' association, held in January last, attention was given to the understood attitude of the mates, and the following resolution was adopted:

"Resolved, That as the mates are executive officers and the source to which we look for masters, and are educating to be masters of our ships, our masters are instructed not to employ any mate who is a member of, or affiliated with any labor union.

"Numerous additional reasons could be stated why a mates' union, as such, and affiliated with labor organizations would be inimical to the carriers' rights. It would mean a relinquishment by owners of the control and direction of the principal vessel officers, the obligation to accept the assignment to vessels of officers of questionable competency, the dominating influence over such officers by unions composed of subordinate employes, the consequent impairment of discipline, and interference at critical and important periods with the companies' management and public duty as a common carrier.

"The orderly and expeditious conduct of the freight traffic on the lakes, the navigation of vessels, the proper protection of shippers' property, and the fulfillment of the lake carrying companies' obligations to the shipping public and connecting transportation lines, render it absolutely necessary that owners shall have the unrestricted right to employ such officers aboard vessels as will insure this necessary and proper protection and compliance with those accepted business obligations.

"The mates are now understood to be either members of a union or affiliated with labor organizations and through failure to obtain recognition of the mates' union, a strike has been called by another organization with which the mates are affiliated, this action being taken before availing themselves of the known opportunity to negotiate for the usual season arrangements as to wages and conditions for their respective services. Neither the mates nor the other organizations named have expressed dissatisfaction with prevailing terms nor have any applied for new conditions affecting their service and none are understood to have separate grievances of any nature.

"The mates and the several organizations named have ceased work and forced idleness upon a large dependent class in allied occupations, resulting in an extended interruption of the lake routes service."

Firemen Out at Ashland.

Ashland, Wis., May 4.—On receipt of telegraphic orders, the firemen on the Great Lakes towing tugs on Chequamegon bay quit work last night and the tugs have been laid up. Independent tugs will take their places.

The Wolvin Unloading.

Toledo, May 4.—(Special to The Herald.)—The steamer Augustus Wolvin arrived this morning with 10,000 tons of ore and is being unloaded at the docks of the Toledo Furnace company. This company has its own dock force and no trouble is expected. The barge City of Chicago, with lumber, is delayed in the lower harbor, as all tugs are out of commission. The general strike situation is unchanged.

Marine Notes.

The tug Ashland of Ashland, which does towing for Schroeder Bros., has arrived here and is on the dry dock at the Marine Iron works, getting some repairs done. Capt. La Chappelle is her master.

The steamer Easton is also at the Marine Iron works for repairs.

The steamer William H. Gratwick, chartered for this season by the Graham & Morton line, is here from Chicago today with package freight.

The sand-sucker Togo has been assigned the official number of 162,746 by the customs officials.

The steamer Siemens, which was damaged while working on the stranded steamer William E. Corey last fall, is in dry dock at Detroit, having those injuries repaired.

Ocean Steamships.

Sinsconnset, May 4.—The steamer Lucania from Liverpool for New York was in wireless communication with the Marconi station here when the vessel was 200 miles east of the Nantucket lightship at 6:20 a. m. today. The Lucania will probably dock about 8:30 a. m. Saturday.

New York — Arrived: Cassel from Bremen.

Sable Island, May 4.—The steamer Amerika, from Hamburg for New York was in wireless communication with the Marconi station here, when the vessel was 180 miles southeast of Sable island at 8:40 a. m. The Amerika will probably reach her dock about 8 a. m. Sunday.

DEFAULT HAS BEEN MADE IN the payment of Six Hundred and Twenty Dollars ($620.00), which is claimed to be due, and is due, at the date of this notice upon a mortgage, dated June 5th, 1891, made by John Olsen and Annie Olsen, his wife, and Nels Nelson, mortgagors, to Charles S. M., in said Register of Deeds' office in Book 73 of mortgages at Page 430, and which said mortgage, and the debt secured thereby, was duly assigned thereafter in writing by Charlotte E. Jackson, E. J. Ayers and Joel Stevens as executors of estate of said Mathew Jackson, deceased, to William Jackson, bearing date May 12th, 1894, and recorded in the office of said Register of Deeds June 1st, 1894, at eight-twenty o'clock A. M., in Book 107 of Mortgages, Page 64, and which said mortgage, together with the debt secured thereby, was duly assigned in writing by said William Jackson to Stryker, Manley & Buck, a corporation, by written assignment, dated November 8th, 1905, and recorded in said Register of Deeds' office March 19th, 1906, at two-twenty o'clock P. M., in Book 186 of Mortgages, Page 170.

No action or proceeding has been instituted to recover the debt secured by said mortgage or any part thereof.

Notice Is Given, That said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale at public auction of the premises therein described, which are situate in St. Louis County, Minnesota, and described as follows, to-wit: Lot numbered 16, of Block 2, MacFarlane's Grassy Point Addition to Duluth, according to the recorded plat thereof, to pay said debt and Twenty-Five Dollars ($25.00) attorneys' fees, and the costs of foreclosure, as stipulated in said mortgage, which sale will be made by the Sheriff of St. Louis County, Minnesota, at the front door of the Court House in the City of Duluth, in said County and State, on the 14th day of May, 1906, at ten o'clock in the forenoon, subject to redemption, as provided by law.

Dated at Duluth, Minnesota, March 30th, 1906.

CITY BRIEFS

Barbara Hibbing has made application to the district court to register title to lot 14, block 63, Oneota and J. L. Washburn desires to register title to some land in section 34-49-15.

The probate court of this county has been notified of the death at the state insane asylum of Louis Setter of Hibbing, who was committed in April.

Between seventy-five and 100 school teachers and pupils of Duluth and Superior will visit the Great Northern Power company's development work at Thomson tomorrow. They will leave over the Northern Pacific in the morning, returning in the evening.

The April report for the office of the clerk of the district court which has been filed with the county auditor shows a total of $2,799.46 in work accomplished by that department last month. Of this amount $1,871.90 represented work for the county and $927.56 the cash receipts turned over to the county treasurer. The receipts from first and second papers were $200 and from marriage licenses, $186.

UNION MUST PAY CAREY

Member Wins Case Against the Switchmen of North America.

St. Paul, May 4.—(Special to The Herald.)—Under an order filed by the supreme court today, the Switchmen's Union of North America will have to pay James Carey, one of its members, $1,200, because of total disability.

The case came from St. Louis county, where Carey sued the union for the amount. There the union lost and appealed the case, offering as one of its contentions that the policy contained certain clauses which rendered the amount claimed void.

County Treasurer Jesse Foote and F. W. Gosewisch of the probate court lose in their effort to have the Ramsey county salary law declared invalid.

In an order handed down today the supreme court affirms the findings of the Ramsey county district court in the appeal made by the two and says its former opinion must stand. This former opinion was given in the case of E. G. Rogers, whose right to his old salary under the fee law was established.

THE SENATE AMENDMENT

Making Pipe Lines Common Carriers Adopted Unanimously.

Washington, May 4.—The senate began its session today by listening to the reading of the president's message on the transportation of oil.

On motion of Mr. Foraker, the message was ordered to lie on the table. In making the motion Mr. Foraker said:

"It covers nearly all the questions under consideration in connection with pending bills."

This action was followed by the adoption of a resolution offered by Mr. Culberson directing the secretary of commerce to forward to the senate a copy of the full report of the commissioner of corporations, a summary only of which was transmitted in connection with the president's message.

A bill amending the law regarding the issuance of gold certificates was passed, as was also a bill authorizing the construction of a bridge across the Missouri river in Walworth county, S. D.

The senate amendment making pipe lines for the transportation of oil common carriers within the meaning of the interstate commerce act was adopted unanimously.

IN THE HOUSE.

Washington, May 4.—At the beginning of today's session of the house, some delay ensued due to the understanding that the president desired to send a message to congress, in reply to a resolution of the house. The message in relation to the Standard Oil was received at 12:15 p. m., and immediately read.

The clerk completed its reading at 12:30. On its conclusion, applause rang through the chamber, both sides vieing in the demonstration of approval.

The house then went into committee of the whole for the further consideration of the naval appropriation bill.

COAL COMPANY SUES RAILROAD

For $750,000 for Alleged Discrimination Against It.

Clarksburg, W. Va., May 4.—In the United States court of the northern district of West Virginia, a writ was filed in a suit brought today by the Federal Coal & Coke company of West Virginia against the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad company, and the Fairmont Coal company, alleging discrimination against the plaintiff company in furnishing transportation of coal from the plaintiff's mines and conspiracy to wreck and cause financial ruin to the plaintiff with the intent to bring about the forced sale of the plaintiff's property.

The Federal Coal & Coke company claims that by reason of the discriminations against the plaintiff in favor of the said Fairmont Coal company, the plaintiff has suffered actual damages of $700,000 and a claim of exemplary damages in the sum of $50,000 is set up which the plaintiff by this suit seeks to recover.

The plaintiff asserts that it owns 5,500 acres of bituminous coal land in Marion county, West Virginia, and it began the development of this coal land in June, 1900, equipping it with the necessary machinery, but because of the delay of the defendant railroad company in completing its branch road and sidings to the said mine the plaintiff was unable to ship coal before Feb, 1902.

It is further asserted that the Fairmont Coal company, which is co-defendant in the suit has a large number of mines on the same division of the B. & O. railroad and is supplied with cars from the same distributing point as the mine of the plaintiff company.

STRUCK AN ICEBERG.

The British Steamer Anglo-Peruvian Founders in Mid-Ocean.

London, May 4.—The British steamer Anglo-Peruvian. Capt. Curtis, from Shields, April 11, for Philadelphia, foundered recently in the Atlantic as the result of a collision with an iceberg. All the members of her crew were picked up by the British steamer Mohawk, from New York, April 20, for Antwerp, which passed Prawless Point today and signalled the news.

Recent arrivals at British ports have reported icebergs, dangerous to navigation, in the track followed by the Atlantic liners.

INTENTIONS HONORABLE

To Carry Out National Representation, Says Russian Minister.

St. Petersburg, May 4.—M. Schwanebach, former minister of agriculture, controller of the empire in the new cabinet, who is Premier Goremykin's chief lieutenant, sent for the Associated Press correspondent today and requested, in behalf of the new premier that it be announced to the United States and to the world generally, in the following official note, that the new ministry does not mean reaction:

"His majesty, the emperor, and the premier, M. Goremykin, have the full, honorable intention of carrying through the idea of national representation, with all it implies. There is no intention of dissolving parliament. Naturally unforeseen circumstances may arise, as in any government, which might force such an unhappy event. But we do not anticipate such a misfortune, as the majority of the members of parliament are lovers of their country, and we do not believe that they are desirous of forcing a conflict. The new ministry will work with parliament."

Treasury Balances.

Washington, May 4.—Today's statement of the treasury balances in the general fund exclusive of the $150,000,000 gold reserve in the division of redemption shows: Available cash balance, $160,643,703; gold, $57,792,149; United States notes, gold certificates, $46,156,929.

AN OFFICIAL "JINER."

Kansas City Journal: The most important person in Fort Hancock, Tex., is George Ross, who holds more public offices probably than any man in the country. He is postmaster of the town, receiving his appointment from a Republican administration, and is a member of the board of county commissioners of the county, having been elected to that office as a Democrat. In addition to those two offices he is justice of the peace, being elected to that office as an independent candidate. He is also public school trustee for the precinct.

COULD STAND MUCH.

Kansas City Journal: An Italian resident of Tennessee has been having a tobacco dispute with Congressman John Wesley Gaines, and threatens to defeat that gentleman at the next congresional election. On hearing of this Mr. Gaines remarked gently: "Defeat me. Why, if that apparition appears in my district I will shoot him full of holes and kill him every day for a week, if necessary." "I surely commiserate the gentleman after the third day," said Congressman Cousins, who stood near by.

"STRONG MEN WANTED."

"Lest we forget"—Don't neglect to send strong men from Northern Minnesota to the state legislature next winter.

Now is the time when the candidates are coming into the field all over the state. Nearly every newspaper brings announcements of citizens who aspire to make the state's laws, and who seek their party nominations to that end.

It is not always the seekers that are the best material. If the people would take the initiative, and pick out our own candidates, in many cases they would not choose those who are seeking these places now. But if the people do nothing, and content themselves with choosing among the candidates that offer themselves, their choice will be limited, and the next legislature will be a mere repetition of its predecessors.

It is particularly important that Northern Minnesota should send her best and strongest men. Matters of vital importance to the whole state and especially to this end of it hinge upon the selections for legislative positions.

There should by all means be a reapportionment of legislative districts at the next session, based upon the new census, for Northern Minnesota's representation is grossly inadequate and unfair. For that very reason, Northern Minnesota must overcome her numerical inferiority by sending strong men who will be able to carry the reapportionment through by appealing to the sense of justice of those from other parts of the state that must lose representation when this end of the state gains.

That is reason enough, but there are others. Northern Minnesota wants her swamp lands drained; she wants the state to comply with the solemn contract whereby the federal government, in consideration of an agreement to drain them and make then fit for use, gave the state all its swamp lands. Northern Minnesota wants vacant state lands appraised and sold to settlers, and to that end she wants a more liberal land policy than the state has had in the past, and she wants generous appropriations for advertising purposes, wherewith she may herald abroad the attractions she offers to settlers. Northern Minnesota wants good roads; in short, she wants development and progress. And she can get these things only if her very best men are sent down to St. Paul to get them.

And beyond all these things, she wants men that will be for the people that elect them, and whose legislative careers will be based upon the broad doctrine of fair play to both corporations and the public; that and nothing more or nothing less.

RECLAIMING WASTE LANDS.

Speaking of drainage, the campaign is not confined by any means to states like Minnesota, with their large submerged areas. In many parts of the country areas of greater or less extent that have been passed by because they were too low and wet for farming purposes, are being reclaimed, greatly to the profit of those interested in the operation.

Popular Mechanics tells of an instance that goes to show that there is a field in drainage for bright young men to make money. In Southern Wisconsin there was a swale which extended for a mile and was 100 feet to a quarter of a mile wide. In the spring it was always under water for weeks, and even in the dry seasons it was soft and swampy and unfit for use. The farmers whose properties it trespassed upon had accepted it always as an unavoidable nuisance, and never thought of doing anything to it except to swear at it and wonder what it was good for.

Then a man came along who had an eye and a mind that knew how to use it. He made the farmers a proposition to run a ditch the entire length of the "slough" at so much per rod. The price did not bear heavily upon any of the owners, so they took him up. He bought a practical ditching outfit and drained the land in three days, at a profit of $300, or $100 a day. This seems large, but the farmers could not have drained the land for ten times that sum by hand, or by any method they had ever heard of.

The result was that 200 acres of land were reclaimed, and brought into immediate use. Before this land was drained, so far from having value, it could not have been given away. Now it is worth $100 an acre, or $20,000. The farmers who owned it have hardly recovered from their astonishment yet, and are wondering why they never thought of such a simple thing as drainage long ago.

This is not the kind of drainage Northern Minnesota needs, but in every state there are "sloughs" that have been abandoned to disuse for many years which drainage would quickly bring into active use and high values. It is likely that here is a fruitful field for the owner of a little ditching machinery to work, for he could carry his outfit from place to place and by draining a low spot here and there make substantial profits, at the same time adding to the value of farm property and becoming a public benefactor thereby.

SOME MORE SLANDERS.

It will pay those who are inclined to place confidence in the good faith of the irrigation interests that are busying themselves in Northern Minnesota affairs, to follow their public utterances carefully, and see for themselves that their only interest in drainage is to get it where it can be squelched any time it seems likely to interfere with the irrigation scheme.

Maxwell's Talisman is the chief exponent of the propaganda that is busy trying to fasten forest reserves upon Northern Minnesota, and to get the drainage movement switched off upon a sidetrack. The legitimate irrigation movement, with which no sensible person could have any quarrel, is all right, and is accomplishing good results. But sheltered under its wing are the people who appear to be trying to get all the public land possible tied up beyond the reach of settlers, and their efforts are especially directed against Northern Minnesota.

In a recent issue of the Talisman there is a denial by its editor that he has slandered Northern Minnesota, in which he rather reluctantly admits that there is some good farming land there. In another part of the same paper are these words, a part of an article directed against the drainage movement:

> The area around the headwaters of the Mississippi in Minnesota, to the extent of about 10,000,000 of acres or more, includes so many lakes, so many little streams, so many muskeg and other kinds of swamps, and so much moisture-retaining forest land, that it is fitly described as an immense sponge. It absorbs the rainfall month after month—tons upon tons, millions of tons—and slowly parts with it to supply the current of the great river. There is but little land that is not better adapted to forestry than to anything else.

If this isn't slander and deliberate misrepresentation it is hard to tell what it is. It means that in the immense area of 10,000,000 acres about the headwaters of the Mississippi river there is "but little land not better adapted to forestry than to anything else." That means that it is not fit for agriculture, for nothing fit for agriculture is "better adapted for forestry than for any other purpose."

And hundreds of prosperous settlers in that section, and thousands who would like to get in there if the swamps were drained and public lands thrown open, will testify that the Talisman's statement is absolutely untrue.

The fellows that write this sort of stuff are the fellows in power in the "reclamation service", to which they are asking this drainage movement to be committed. If they succeed, there will be precious little drainage. They are not going to drain this "sponge" from which they hope to draw water to drain lands a thousand miles away. They want to get control so as to head off drainage and to shut out settlement by plastering the north country with forest reserves.

NOTHING DONE; SO MUCH TO DO.

While so far congress hasn't done very much, there is hope so long as it remains in session that it will do something besides talk. It has done lots of that, as its custom is in the long sessions, when senators and congressmen make speeches that have no particular bearing upon pending measures, but are valuable for use in the coming campaign.

The railroad rate measure has passed the house with practical unanimity, and has lingered for weeks in the senate, where the senators have pawed it over and sniffed at it and said their say about it, but without arranging, so far, to vote upon it.

The pure food bill, a stern necessity to the American people, has passed the senate with about the same degree of unanimity, and is being held up in the house.

The joint statehood bill, which passed the house carrying statehood for Arizona and New Mexico as one state and for Oklahoma and Indian Territory as another, was butchered in the senate by the elimination of Arizona and New Mexico—a very proper surgical operation, since neither territory wanted to be yoked in joint statehood with the other—and sent back to the house, where its ultimate fate is still in doubt.

These are about the only measures of prime importance that have received attention from either house, and none of them have run the gauntlet of both houses and become laws. It is perhaps no better than an even bet that any of them will become laws. The chance that they will be killed or amended into harmlessness and futility appears to be about as good as the chance that they will pass in any effective form.

In addition, there is the Philippine tariff bill, wherein it was sought to extend some measure of commercial succor to the needy islands that, through no wish or fault on their part, have come under our control and protection. That bill, after passing the house with concessions to the sugar and tobacco trusts, was slaughtered in a senate committee as a further concession to these grasping and conscienceless commercial monstrosities.

The ship subsidy bill, which nobody wanted but a few large interests that do not need it, passed the senate with a whoop, and went to the house, where it slumbers. It is likely to slumber indefinitely, and if the house makes the sleep permanent it will be one white mark to the credit of that body.

Little has been done, therefore, but a lot can be done in a short time if the statesmen really set about it. When talking is over, it takes but a short time to vote. Bodies that can pass hundreds of private pension bills in a few minutes ought to be able to make short work of the public business remaining undone, if they really want to do it.

HOTEL GOSSIP

"Santa Cruz is one of the prettiest, best-built, best-governed and most picturesquely located cities in the United States," said F. O. Dodge of Los Angeles, Cal., at the St. Louis. "Of course, Los Angeles is ahead of it in every way, as all residents of the larger city will say it is ahead of everything else on the map.

"A feature of great interest to tourists in Santa Cruz is the new tent city. The living places, as the name indicates, are made up entirely of tents, and the climate of the region makes living in them a delight. A great effort is being made to place the city among the leading resorts of the coast, and with that object in view an expenditure amounting to about $250,000 has been made for a new pavilion, plunge baths and esplanade.

"There is an immense and quite wonderful casino, with a vaudeville theater, music hall, hot salt water plunge, aquarium, all kinds of tub baths, pleasure wharf, and everything needed to constitute a thoroughbily up-to-date summer resort.

"Commercially, Santa Cruz is also of importance. The soil is very rich and the orchards and vineyards are profitably productive. The powder works, among the largest in the world, are in a canyon of their own, three miles from town. The city owns a 565-acre park of headlands, hills and plain. It is here that the National Guard of the state meets every summer."

"I don't see any objection to Sunday baseball, provided the park where it is played is located far enough from the residence and business districts so that the noise arising from it will not be sufficient to disturb the peace," said S. E. Barrows of Eau Claire, Wis., at the McKay. "There certainly is nothing bad about the mere watching of a game, and if the players themselves get pleasure out of it, and do it of their own free will, I cannot see that anyone else reasonably has a kick coming.

"A lot of people cannot go to a ball game any other time than Sunday, and yet they like to watch one as well as anybody. I am in favor of giving them an opportunity to enjoy themselves if they are inclined that way. There is nothing demoralizing about the game, Sunday or any other day, and the majority of the onlookers, among the men at least, are doubtless better occupied than they would be if they were not occupying seats in the grand stand or on the bleachers.

"We are told that Sunday is a day of rest, and it is, in one sense of the word, but in another sense it is a day of unrest. A man gets up late in the morning and is all out of tune. For the past six days he has been going a regular round of duties, and when the seventh day comes along, when he is supposed to rest, he is at a loss to know what to do with himself. Along about the middle of the day he gets pretty restless, as a rule, and begins to figure out what he can do in the afternoon. If he doesn't decide on a ball game, it is very likely something that will really do him more harm than good. A good game of ball straightens a man up, and gives him a chance to let off steam, so to speak."

The Leaves of Life.

"The leaves of life are falling one by one"—
The woods once thick and green are brown and sere;
And youth with all her bounteous hours is done,
And age is here.

"The leaves of life are falling one by one"—
And one by one the heavy hours fall past,
And the glad hours we prayed might ne'er be gone,
Are gone at last.

"The leaves of life are falling one by one"—
Old dreams, old friends, we watch them fall away;
And all our music takes a minor tone,
Our skies grow gray.

"The leaves of life are falling one by one"—
Best, worst, loved, hated, happy days and sad,
Each the inevitable cause has run,
The present had.

"The leaves of life are falling one by one"—
Till, after all the gladness and the strife,
We see the redness of the setting sun
Light up our life.

And good seems not so good—ill not so ill;
And things look other than they used to seem;
Ourselves more vague, questions of fate and will
Less like a dream.

And then why leaves should fall we think we know,
Because the Autumn comes before the Spring—
The Eternal Spring, where flowers will always blow,
Birds always sing.

"Keep Giving."

New York Sun: Gen. Greely reports that 300,000 people are homeless in San Francisco; 300,000 into 16,000,000 goes 53.33, and $53.33 won't last a hungry and homeless person a great while. An anonymous contributor to the Boston fund signs his gifts "Keep giving," and comes in every day. He has the right idea.

No Trouble About It.

Washington Post: Probably the reason marriage licenses were in such demand in San Francisco immediately after the fire was because the girls wanted husbands who were well broke.

THE WEATHER

If this weather does not suit you, you are certainly hard to please. The first thunderstorm of the season occurred yesterday afternoon, accompanied by a drenching downpour of rain, and after it was over and the skies cleared, conditions were charming, and they were that way still this morning, though a fresh breeze came down over the hill and prevented it becoming hot. The weather man bids you look out for a frost tonight. The northwest winds are to bring cooler weather, and he deems it not at all improbable that there will be a frost tonight. Last night's lowest temperature was 34 degs. and yesterday's highest was 66 degs. Says Mr. Richardson of conditions:

"Storms central over Lake Superior and Oklahoma caused rains throughout the Northwest, lake region and Southeastern states Thursday or last night. Somewhat cooler and rather frosty weather prevails in the Northwest as result of rising barometric pressures in that section. The slow easterly movement of the Lake Superior disturbance, combined with these incoming higher pressures, will be attended in this locality tonight and Saturday by strong northwest winds and partly cloudy weather."

Following were last night's lowest temperatures as recorded by the weather bureau:

Minnesota and North Dakota—Fair tonight and Saturday; cooler tonight, with frost.

South Dakota—Partly cloudy tonight and Saturday, with showers in west portion tonight; cooler tonight.

Upper Lakes—Brisk northwest winds over southern portion, high over northern portion tonight and Saturday; showers tonight; Saturday partly cloudy. Hoist storm northwest warnings 10 a. m. on Superior except Duluth, Mackinaw, Alpena, Frankfort and Escanaba sections.

Fame.

Harper's Weekly: Two Americans who were traveling in England made a devout pilgrimage to Stratford-on-Avon, and spent several days wandering about the neighborhood. One day they met a countryman, and, pausing, one of the pilgrims said:

"My friend, I envy you your life here amid the fields that knew the great poet's youth. What sublime thoughts must come to you as you tread the paths his feet trod!"

The rustic simply stared, and the American demanded if he knew of whom he was speaking, receiving a prompt negative.

"Why, of Shakespeare, man. You must know of him!" the pilgrim explained, stricken with horror.

After some coaxing, the man finally admitted that he had heard of Shakespeare, and believed he had "wrote fur summat."

"And have you any idea of what he wrote—was it the Times?" the American inquired, with infinite sarcasm.

"Oh, it warn't the Lunnon paper," the man said. "I know it was summat solemn like. I think it was the Bible, belike."

The Standpatters Warned.

Indianapolis News: Never was there a situation more like that presented by the slavery question before the war. In those far-off days Democrats and Whigs alike were in mortal terror lest the slavery question should be "opened up," and all the while it was a veritable chasm yawning before their feet. The Democrats opposed agitation and the Whigs deprecated it. The Whig party was swept out of existence and the Democratic party wandered in the wilderness for a quarter of a century. That is what comes of failing to face issues. And history has an awkward way of repeating itself. But there are other points of similarity. Them the slave power, and the great commercial interests dependent on it, opposed the free soil agitation. Now the great interests are savagely opposing any opening up of the tariff question.

The Ways of the West.

Outing: The steam schooner, a vessel whose build and habits are peculiar to the Pacific, often goes to sea "with her load-line over her hatch." Which means, that after her hold has been crammied with cargo, a deckload of lumber is piled half way up the masts, so that her skipper puts out with the water washing green over his main deck, and an occasional comber frisking across his battened hatches. Along the harbor front of Seattle runs the story of a passenger who loped down to the wharf in a hurry to get aboard a departing steamschooner. He balanced himself on the stringpiece for an instant, looked down at what little he could see of the laden craft, and hove his gripsack down the only opening in sight. He was about to dive after it when a lounger on the wharf shouted:

"Hi, there! Where do you think you're jumpin' to? That's the smokestack you tossed your baggage down."

"Hell!" gasped the pasenger, "I thought it was the hatch."

The Crown.

He chose not to succeed; he thrust aside
The crown Ambition urged; and bade Renown
Adieu; made common Grief his friend; sat down
With Sorrow.. So he lived, and died.—

Pease Porridge Hot.

G. S. Pease in Anoka Union: Office-seeking is becoming an art these days. The candidate who does not favor drainage will have a hard road to travel. Seven candidates for governor so far, and Anoka county not yet heard from. Minnesota, with all its cold weather, is a pretty good state to live in, after all. Two gubernatorial candidates lacking. Certainly each congressional district should have one.

J. Adam Bede has named N. B. Morrison to be receiver of the Duluth land office to succeed J. M. Smith, and Editor Hamilton of the Aitkin Republican is left out in the cold, and congressional promises are below par in that office.

MINNESOTA OPINIONS.

Le Sueur News: Politicians write, or cause to be written for them, platforms, and in many cases forget them, when success meets them face to face. It is well to keep a list of this class of vote getters.

Red Lake Falls Courier: It would have been interesting to observe the countenances of Julius Block, Jacob Jacobson, Sam Lord, Andy Stephens et al., as they read President Roosevelt's endorsement of Governor Johnson and Insurance Commissioner O'Brien.

Albert Lea Standard: It was indeed clever in President Roosevelt to refer in a special message, as he did, to Governor Johnson and Insurance Commissioner O'Brien. It was never before done and in all regards was a rare distinction. Mr. Roosevelt is certainly broad-minded, and the people of Minnesota will not fail to appreciate his generous recognition of the eminent worth and valuable services of their governor and insurance commissioner.

Ada Herald: Governor Johnson has taken a determined stand for law inforcement and honest administration, and at no time have the departments of the state government been in more efficient hands.

Ortonville Herald Star: Northern Minnesota is crying for strong men in the next legislature. The strong arm men will probably hear the call, however.

Sleepy Eye Dispatch: It is said that President Roosevelt has been remarkably successful in providing work for congress. It might be added that congress has been quite successful in not doing the same work.

North Branch Review: The Review has yet to hear one voter express an opinion on the gubernatorial situation.

Monticello Times: Are you sympathizing with the people of San Francisco? If so, has it affected your pocketbook?

Fergus Falls Free Press: It is a serious mistake for any of the state politicians to act on the theory that Bob Dunn is dead. He is as active as ever and will remain a force until the undertaker packs him under six feet of Minnesota's virgin soil. They should remember the old saying, that it is impossible to keep a good man down.

Rochester Post and Record: A San Francisco man has invented an instrument by which it is claimed it will be possible to hear a voice 4,000 miles over a telephone. Perhaps, some day, an instrument will be invented by which it will be possible to hear the voice of a man in the next block over a telephone.

Mankato Free Press: The New York Sun advises us that it is a wise tariff that knows its own friends. Very true, and there is every reason why the Republicans should make haste to give the country a proper revision of the tariff and not wait until the people fool themselves into the belief that the Democrats can do that job satisfactorily. The Democrats are not friendly to the tariff.

Out of Date.

("I realize that it is exceedingly late to be writing about Mrs. Wharton's 'House of Mirth.'"—Correspondence New York Times).

We may still write of "Pickwick," "Henry Esmond," "Ivanhoe,"
"Far From the Madding Crowd," "The Egotist," "Pere Goriot,"
Of "Pride and Prejudice," and other tales of equal worth—
But it's rather late to write of Mrs. Wharton's "House of Mirth."

We still may talk of "Middlemarch," "Salammbo," "On the Heights,"
"Jane Eyre," "Tristram Shandy," "One of Cleopatra's Nights," Dumas' "Vicomte de Bragelonne," or Scott's "Fair Maid of Perth"—
But it's really getting late to talk about "The House of Mirth."

Why, bless my soul! "The House of Mirth" was published months ago;
Already we remember it with last year's leaves and snow.
"Best Sellers" come like water and like wind they disappear.
There is naught so soon forgotten as the books of yesteryear.

Reflections of a Bachelor.

New York Press: Life's a stage, and all the people on it mighty poor actors.

The only way to get rich without disgracing yourself is to inherit it.

A woman's idea of having no clothes is when she has one less than her next-door neighbor.

It's a good deal better to think poetry than to write it, and better to write it than to print it.

A man's idea in being your friend is that you will be glad to do something for him to prove it.

Out of the Mouths of Babes.

Chicago News: "Mamma," said little Ethel, who was looking at the pictures in a Sunday school book, "how do the angels get their night gowns on over their wings?"

"I think papa and mamma like the baby better than they do me," said 4-year-old Flossie to the visitor, "'cause he lets 'em do as they please."

"Tommy," said the teacher, "don't you know better than to talk aloud in school?"

"But what is a feller to do?" queried Tommy. "You said the other day I mustn't whisper."

It was the roll of distant thunder that caused little Margie to observe: "They must be cleaning house in heaven today, mamma."

"Why do you think so, dear?" asked her mother.

"I hear the angels movin' the furniture around," explained Margie.

The Doings of Alex. Shoemaker.

Grindstone, S. D., Bee: Alex. Shoemaker returned from Pierre last week with a heavy load, but the horses were not hauling it.

Attendant—He thinks he has money.

Chicago Tribune: "A curious thing about a man that has a lot of stock in a fire insurance company," remarked Uncle Allen Sparks, "is that a big fire generally gives him cold feet."

Philadelphia Press: "When do you consider a man at his prime of life?"

"When he's old enough to quit writing poetry and not to old to begin writing love letters to his stenographer."

Cleveland Plain Dealer: "Have you had any trouble with your heart?"

"Not lately. I'm living with my third wife."

Washington Post: Still, it is only natural that Mark Twain should favor funetio spelling.

Cleveland Leader: She—I agree with Cowper—I hate a man who needlessly sets foot upon a worm.

He—So do I. It spoils 'em for bait.

Philadelphia Ledger: "The average woman, of course, has no head for figures."

"Oh, I don't know. She has a head for other women's figures; at any rate, whenever they pass they make her turn it."

Cleveland Plain Dealer: "The midgets insisted upon being married on the beach. They walked way out to the fringe of water and there were united."

"Curious affair, wasn't it."

"Yes, case of low tied."

Little Jean.

She was wedded last night—
Little Jean—
In a satin gown, white,
All a-sheen,
And a heaven joy burned
In her eyes as she turned
From the chancel—a bride
And the man at her side
Led her out like a queen—
Little Jean!

She has gone far away—
Little Jean,
And a tale grave-and-gay
Do I glean,
As I stand at the door
Of the room where no more
She will come for the white,
Happy thoughts, golden-bright,
Of a maiden's heart, sweet and serene—
Little Jean.

Like a casket bereft
Little Jean,
Is the wee room you left
Yester-e'en!
Ah, the low, empty chair,
And the long mirror there,
And the dainty white bed,
Where you knelt as you said
Your last maiden prayer, all unseen—
Little Jean!

But my heart is content,
Little Jean,
For the way that you went,
Dear, I ween,
Is a path blossom-strown,
And you walk not alone—
Human love and divine
'Round you fondly entwine,
And an angel's white wings are your screen—
Little Jean!

No Room.

Detroit Free Press: A Chicago janitor refused to permit a woman to take her pet canary into the flat she had rented. He probably knew, too well, the capacity of the flat.

There Always Is!

A river came up to a mountain one day,
A mountain with aspect forbidding and gray,
And the sentinel trees muttered hoarsely and low,
"Thus far and no farther, slight thing, shall you go!

"The great mountain spirit has here set his sway,
And here you must fret, while he watches with glee,
How you yearn to plunge on toward the infinite sea!"

But the river laughed gally, and cried,
"Have no fear,
The fortress shall stand for full many a year
And yet to me cause no hindrance or bound;
My friends, there is always another way 'round."

And it hurried and leaped, and the mold of the clay
Drew aside with respect as it went on its way,
And it flung to the rocks that stood threatening and strong,
Bright jewels of spray, and sped laughing along.

Alas for the weakling: alas for the fool
Who mirrors each day like a still-standing pool!
Who meets opposition with terror profound,
And forgets there is always another way 'round!

TOURIST IS ARRESTED

In Russia for Accepting Invitation to Photograph Police.

Telegram to British Consul Caused Them to Free Him.

St. Petersburg, May 4.—The Russian police and bureaucratic officials love documents as a cat loves mice, and they are not happy till they have swallowed every word—the same with the cat and his prey. The Russian officials are brought up on documents, and as soon as they can wield a pen, begin to enter facts about other people in huge tomes. Without this employment there would be nothing for the bureaucracy and police to do except their one other occupation of arresting every individual showing signs of intelligence. If the Russian police find a man without documents, they immediately diagnose him as a man of evil intent; if, on the contrary, he has a plethora of them, they equally distrust him, for, say they, "a man must be evilly disposed to need so many documents to protect him."

H. F. Kennard, an English writer, tells this recent experience:

I arrived at a hotel in Oriel with my bag and a large bundle of documents; the latter were immediately, by request, sent to the police for inspection, and were pronounced "in order."

The next day I changed hotels for one nearer the station, and on my arrival the police again requested my documents to be sent for inspection. I refused, demanding that they should come to me if they wanted to see them again. With their inherited sense of officialdom and forethought for their fellow-men, they did so—at midnight, when I was asleep. Their anxiety to know why I changed my hotel was insatiable, and my statement regarding the station was received with an incredulous smile, and the laconic remark, "It can be so."

Two days after this I commenced to tour the country in a sleigh, and was incessantly the victim of demands from police and others to know why I should leave England and sleigh in Russian villages. Finally came the inevitable; the police in the village of Hotyetoo demanded those terrible documents. I produced them, but refused to hand them over. A wordy battle royal ensued, but I was obdurate, and the incident ended in their taking tea and begging me to drive over and photograph the whole police corps. I agreed with pleasure, and—we parted lovingly.

The next day I drove to their headquarters—a 12-mile journey over a snowclad desert in a bitterly cold wind. I was received with the intensely cordial remark, "Delighted to see you; but where are your documents and permision to photograph us?" I had not brought them, seeing whence the invitation came, and said so.

"Then," said they, "we are bound to arrest you," and promptly did so. I requested permission to fetch my documents, but the request was met with an answer characteristic of the Russian police: "You are here with a camera and without a permission; we are bound to arrest you and detain you until that period when you produce the same, and you cannot move from here until you do produce them." I then endeavored to force my way, but was met with the point of the bayonet, and resigned myself to think over this Brobdingnagian problem.

"I asked that my trusty peasant servant should return to fetch my permission and documents, but was met with another poser: 'They are your documents. He has no right to them. Nelziar!' (It is forbidden.) Here was a dilemma!

"Six hours after, during which time I had refused their magnanimous invitation to accept of an aldermanic repast of black bread and weak tea, I managed to get a telegram sent off to Mr. Grove, the British consul in Moscow, saying I was arrested. On discovering this they became frightened, and demanded why I should have done such a thing, why I did not take the matter calmly—in fact, like a Russian subject—and thirdly, why I had said I was arrested and not used the word detained.

"I replied that a British subject did not deal in such nice distinctions. Detention for an hour or a year was equally arrest, and as I had been informed that I might have to be "detained" a week or more, I was amply justified even from the Russian point of view. As midnight approached, they became more and more anxious as to the results of their deed, and more and more angry about my telegram, especially as Mr. Grove is known throughout Russia to be a man who has the interests of every British subject at heart, and acts speedily and with the utmost tact and judgment. It became obvious to their minds that a loophole must be found. They found it in my passport. Said they: "It is not in order."

"Why?" I demanded. "It is said here you are a doctor; how then can you be a journalist?" How do we know you are one and the same? We must detain you till we hear from Petersburg what is to be done? I then showed them my revolver permit, which is proof positive that my credentials must be in order, and they visibly paled. Following on this I demanded to be released immediately (seeing they were thoroughly frightened), and told them that if they detained me they would be the cause of international complications worse than those connected with the North sea. They were by this time thoroughly depressed and decided to let me go after copying my passport word for word. At midnight I was released and hired a sleigh and horse (having sent my own fourteen miles with my telegram); and, previous to starting on my lonely journey in the teeth of a blizzard, thanked them sardonically for their lavish hospitality which had led them to wish to make me a permanent lodger.

CUROSITY FOILS GRAVE ROBBERS

Men Follow Buggy and See Preparations to Steal Body.

Dubuque, Iowa, May 4.—Charles Ford has unfolded to the superior court a remarkable story of an attempt to rob a grave at night. He states he chased away the ghouls and brought as proof a sack full of tools used for disinterment left by the fleeing robbers.

"While standing on the corner of Fifteenth and Palean streets," said Ford, "George Gibson and I saw a buggy pass, the horse of which I recognized. It was about 8 p. m., and I wondered what the buggy was doing in the neighborhood. I spoke to Gibson and we both followed the buggy. It was going toward the cemetery and as we approached I saw one occupant try to conceal a shovel between his legs. I saw his face despite his effort to shield it from view.

"When we reached the cemetery, Gibson and myself, and saw two men crawling near a newly dug grave, we asked them what they were doing and they ran. We chased them, but soon lost them. We returned to the grave and found the sack with these tools."

Ford thinks he recognized one of the men in the buggy and says he will file information against him.

SPIRIT WARNING THROUGH CAMERA

Three Negatives All Show Absent Fiance With a Dagger.

London, May 4.—An astounding story of mysterious photographs, which is vouched for by a well known London photographer, is told here:

A certain woman, who may be called Miss B., lives with her mother in one of the Home counties. Some time ago, she made an appointment with the photographer in question. The sitting was duly given, and the photograph taken.

After the lapse of a week Miss B. received a letter saying that the photos were not a success, and asking for another sitting. She at once agreed, and as soon as possible went to London again, but a second photograph was taken.

A short time elapsed, and as no proofs were sent, she wrote to make inquiries, only to receive a very apologetic letter saying that again the photos were failures, and asked a third sitting.

So for the third time Miss B. came up to London. She is a good-natured girl, and contented herself with expressing a hope that this time there would be a successful result.

In two days' time she received an urgent letter from the photographer asking her to come up to his studio and to bring a friend with her. As a result of the letter, Miss B., accompanied by her mother, paid a fourth visit to the studio and there the photographer exhibited the amazing results of the three sittings.

The actual photos of the girl herself were quite good, but in each plate there was to be seen standing behind her the figure of a man holding a dagger in his uplifted hand.

The features, though faint, were clearly discernible, and, to her horror Miss B. recognized them as those of her fiance—an officer in the Indian army.

The effect of this experience was so great that after a few days she wrote out to India breaking off the engagement.

THE NEW "BLACK POPE" IS A RESIDENT OF ROME.

Rome, May 4.—Father Freddie has been named as successor of Father Martin, general of the Jesuits, or as the head of the order is known in Vatican circles, "the Black Pope."

The new occupant of the high religious office is an ascetic, a highly cultured scholar and the author of numerous works.

He has been principal of the order in Rome and for some time past editor of the Review Civitta Catholica.

His special work at charity has been the conversion of young criminals.

Father Meyer, formerly of St. Louis, was a candidate for the honor.

WORLD'S LARGEST SHIPS FLOATING HOMES FOR 3,800

London, May 4.—The two new Cunard liners which are being built with the $10,000,000 lent by the government are fast nearing completion, and will be launched in June and July this year.

They will be named Mauritania and Lusitania, and will be the largest ships the world has ever seen. Some remarkable figures regarding the two vessels were yesterday supplied by the Cunard company.

Each vessel will have a gross tonnage of 33,200, while they are 60 feet longer than any other liner afloat. They are 88 feet in beam, and in this respect are the first to surpass the Great Eastern, which was 83 feet in breadth.

They will each have accommodation for 3,000 passengers and carry a crew of 800. They will be propelled by turbine engines capable of developing 80,000-horsepower, and are expected to travel at a minimum speed of 24 knots an hour.

Marine engineers predict that the two vessels will be the steadiest ships on the ocean. They will be fitted in a manner equal to the most gorgeous modern hotels. The decorations will consist of reproductions of the greatest works of art, while a system of elevators between the various decks will provide for the rapid transit of the passengers from one part of the ship to another.

The first-class dining saloon will be unprecedented in marine architecture. It will be a massive and gorgeous apartment, 125 feet long and 80 feet wide, and will comfortably accommodate 500 persons at one meal. It will be lighted by a great dome, extending up through the two decks above, and crowned with a roof of cathedral glass.

More than one engineering record has been broken in the construction of the ships. The stern frames and brackets are the largest ever known, the former alone weighing 47 tons and requiring no fewer than 60 tons of molten metal in the making.

The rudder weighs 70 tons, and each link in the 2,000-foot cables is 22¼ inches long and weighs 160 pounds. Each link was tested and withstood a strain of 370 tons.

ENGLISH PROSPECTORS AFTER NEW GOLD RIVER.

London, May 4.—A quest for gold in the wild and little known region of Tierra del Fuego, in Patagonia, is the object of an expedition which will shortly start from this country.

Prospectors discovered alluvial gold as far back as 1880, and the purpose of the present expedition is to dredge for gold, the sands of certain rivers being said to be full of particles of the precious metal washed down from the higher country.

A queer-looking stern-wheel boat has been constructed in Thornycroft's yard at Chiswick for the use of the expedition. It takes the form of a shallow steam barge of metal, capable of carrying five tons of the "golden sand," and will act as tender to the dredger, carrying the sand to the headquarters of the prospectors to have the gold extracted.

SPORTS

LOOKS LIKE A WINNER

Duluth Team Shows Up Well for Its First Practice.

Will be Especially Strong in Infield and Pitching Staff.

The Duluth team is a likely looking bunch.

The coming champions of the Northern and Copper Country league had their first work out at Athletic park yesterday afternoon, and in spite of the sloppy field and heavy diamond, they put up a snappy exhibition of ball.

O'Dea is not yet fully recovered from his recent illness, and he was content to watch the practice from the side lines, but the other twelve men who are on hand were at work.

If there is any weakness to be found in the team, it is at the bat, and this will be remedied before the season opens. O'Dea claims he has the best bunch of box artists in the league, and it looks as if his claim had a good basis. With Ferguson, Pool, Krick, Nornstrom and Treadway, the team will not lack for pitchers.

The infield will show the fans some of the snappiest ball ever seen in Duluth. Lovett, on third, has all the marks of a comer, and when Graham gets over the effects of a lame arm and an attack of malaria, he will deliver the goods. Livingstone's work at second is well known from his work with Crookston, and O'Dea will fill out at first.

"Sox" Newman is expected back, and if there is a weak spot in the infield he will be used. Leighty is also available for an infield position, and will arrive next week.

In the outfield there are McCormick, Baer and Ludwig, with Menelce coming next week.

Hunchie had no opportunity to show what he could do yesterday, but he carries himself like a ball player.

Up to the present time the team has not been hitting as it should, but this may easily be excused from the lack of any regular batting order, and the unsettled condition of the line-up. Bear should develop into a good sticker, and with O'Dea and Menelce back in the game there will be at least two men who can be counted on.

Livingstone is also a fair sticker, but the other men are rather unknown quantities in this respect. They will have a chance to show what they can do against Freeman, the Hibbing twirler, on Saturday and Sunday.

On the whole, the team looks as if it would be much faster than last year's bunch, and if the other clubs are to be in the pennant race, they will have to show a big improvement over last year's form.

HART AND SCHRECK

Meet in First Contest in New York Since Repeal of Horton Law.

New York, May 4.—For the first time since the repeal of the Horton law, governing boxing bouts in this state, two heavyweight pugilists of prominence met here last night in a four-round contest. The principals were Marvin Hart of Louisville, and Mike Schreck of Chicago, and they appeared in the bout which wound up the first series of exhibitions given in the Madison Square Garden by the newly revived Twentieth Century Athletic club.

The men were slow in the opening round but fought each other almost to a standstill in the other three rounds. Neither seemed to have trained for the contest and they simply slugged wildly without any show of science or judgment. Tim Hurst was referee, but his duties were confined to making the men break from clinches as no decisions are rendered under the existing legal restrictions. Only members were admitted. The membership books were open until 7 p. m.

Two local fighters in one of the preliminary bouts were quietly arrested after leaving the ring in order that a test case may be made of the legality of fights as conducted last night. Otherwise there was no police interference.

FARM PUT IN TRUST BRINGS A FORTUNE.

Anthony, Kan., May 4.—Eighteen years ago a resident of Wichita in his will bequeathed to his little granddaughter, then only 2 years old, 160 acres of land in Spring township, Harper county, Kan., making her father her guardian and stipulating that he should pay her 7 per cent interest on the annual grain rent proceeds of this 160 acres until she became 21 years of age, retaining the rent money and interest in his possession, to be all paid to her at 21 years of age.

From his carefully kept record of the proceeds of his rent the father estimates that he must pay his daughter over $20,000 and put her in possession of the land in two years more.

There is 120 acres of this land in cultivation, which has mostly been farmed to wheat, and the average annual grain rent for nineteen years will exceed $500 per year, the highest rent being $900 and the lowest $300. This quarter section is now valued at $5,000.

IOWA WOMAN CANDIDATE

Shows Her Men Rivals How to Make a Campaign.

Des Moines, Iowa, May 4.—A marching song composed for Mrs. Hannah Sharp of Des Moines, who is a candidate for county recorder on the Republican ticket, swings along thus merrily to the tune of "Everybody Works but Father."

Everybody works but Hannah,
And she electioneers all day,
While other candidates are loafing,
She is making hay.
Mother would like to vote for her,
And so would Sister Ann,
All voters are in line at our house
From me to my old man.

The Courthouse Glee club is going to sing it at the campaign meetings which Mrs. Sharp is going to address throughout the county. Mrs. Sharp has also enlisted the services of several negroes, who will sing to banjo accompaniment "Hannah" parodies on popular "coon songs."

If a unique campaign will land the county recordership Mrs. Sharp will certainly get it. She is soon to start out on a tour of the county in an old-fashioned prairie schooner. She has tried to obtain oxen to draw it, but has been unsuccessful, so will use mules instead. On the top of this wagon will be a platform, on which the negro singers and the glee club will sit and enliven the countryside. Mrs. Sharp herself will drive the mules. She will make speeches at every large town in the county.

For fear she will not have time to reach some small places she has had graphophone records made of her speeches, and these will be sent to the country hamlets.

Mrs. Sharp is the wife of an honorably discharged Union soldier, who is totally disabled. He cast his first vote for Abraham Lincoln, and has continued to vote the Republican ticket from that day to this. On account of his disability, Mrs. Sharp has had sole charge of their business affairs for many years, and is well and favorably known by the business men of this city, who are all her friends, and by hundreds of voters throughout the county precincts with whom she has had dealings.

Mrs. Sharp does not believe in staying at home and relying on the sending out of printed cards to win her fight. She is out in all kinds of weather electioneering. She is afraid of nothing and can talk business or politics as well as any man. In the early days of spring she wore a man's beaver cap which she pulled down over her ears, and a long straight coat. Unlike Dr. Mary Walker, she does not advocate trousers for the gentler sex, but she does believe that a near approach to man's apparel is the best dress for a woman engaged in politics. Often she will stop a farmer on his load of corn in the street and leaning on the wheel talk politics.

Mrs. Sharp's friends are confident that she stands a good show of winning the race.

WRONG MAN BURIED.

Indiana Relatives of Isaac Slipher Hear He Is Alive.

Frankfort, Ind., May 4.—The people of Mulberry and vicinity are discussing one of the most mysterious cases of a supposed dead man returning to life ever recorded in this country.

Twelve years ago Isaac Slipher, then a young man, went West to seek his fortune. With him went his wife and children, and the family settled in Missouri. During a flood Slipher and a party of his neighbors made an effort to cross a swollen stream in a wagon. The horses, wagon and the occupants were all swept down the swift current, but all except Slipher escaped drowning, according to the story that reached his family in this county. At any rate, Slipher was never seen alive in that community afterward. A week later a body, supposed to be that of Slipher, was found several miles below the spot where the drowning had taken place. The body was badly decomposed and Mrs. Slipher accepted the body as that of her husband, sent it to Mulberry, Ind., where the funeral and interment took place.

The wife and children remained at Mulberry for a year. Then Mrs. Slipher married Eli Hart, and the family returned to Missouri.

The next chapter begins with the death of "Uncle" David Slipher at Mulberry a few weeks ago, a life-long resident of that town and the father of the Slipher supposed to have been drowned. A copy of a paper containing a notice of his death was mailed to Jonas Clark at Topeka, Kan., a nephew of David Slipher, and in the obituary notice there was a mention of the fact that Isaac Slipher had been drowned years before. This was news to Mr. Clark, as it happened that the supposed dead man had been a visitor at his home only a few weeks previous. Mr. Clark wrote to relatives at Mulberry asking for an explanation of the reported death of his cousin, and stating that he had seen him alive and well but a few days before at his own home.

This was startling information to the family at Mulberry, and an investigation was started at once. Mr. Clark was communicated with and it was learned that Isaac Slipher, whose body was supposed to rest in Fair Haven cemetery, is now living in a small town in Colorado.

William Slipher, a brother of the supposed dead man, has started for Topeka, where he will be joined by his cousin, Jonas Clark, and the two will go to Colorado in an effort to locate Isaac Slipher.

How to Fool a Lazy Liver with Artificial Exercise

EVERY serious Sickness has a small beginning.

And, in nine cases out of ten that small beginning is made in the Bowels.

Indigestion is the beginning of most diseases.

It paves the way for all others.

Lack of exercise, hasty eating, improper food, are its first causes.

Laziness, and postponement, permits it to grow into Chronic Constipation, which means life-long Discomfort.

It isn't necessary to be sick-a-bed, you know, in order to be mighty uncomfortable.

Even slight indigestion affects the nerves, dulls the mind, and obscures the merry sunshine of Life.

And, Indigestion once started, grows fast, corrodes temperament, and discounts happiness, good cheer, capacity.

It does that long before it puts you on the Sick list.

Every thinking Doctor knows why.

* * *

Professor Rand knew it.

That's why he framed up for students his famous formula for Happiness, viz.: "Trust in God, and keep your Bowels open."

The Bowels need adjustment from time to time, just like a clock, or a watch.

No "Good time" is humanly possible without this.

And, the time to adjust the watch is not when it has run down, nor when the main spring is broken, but at the very minute adjustment is discovered necessary.

The time to adjust the Bowels is not merely when your Head Aches, when your Liver is Sick, your Stomach in Revolt, and Nature's Food Process retarded for 24 hours or longer.

The proper time to adjust them is the very minute you suspect they need adjustment.

—If your tongue is slightly coated,

—If your breath is under suspicion,

—If your Head feels a trifle heavy or dull,

—If digestion seems even a little slow,

—If Heartburn, Belching, Colic or Restlessness begin to show themselves,

—That's the time to eat a Cascaret.

Don't imagine the Cascaret is ineffective because it is pleasant to eat as Candy.

It acts as pleasantly as it tastes. It is as congenial to your Bowels as it is to your Palate.

It is not a "Bile-driver" which floods out your stomach today with fluid juices needed for tomorrow.

But, it acts like Exercise, instead.

It stimulates the muscular lining of the Bowels and Intestines, so that they mechanically digest food and drive out the waste.

* * *

The time to use a Cascaret is when you first suspect you need one.

The only way to have them ready to use precisely when you need them is to carry them constantly in your pocket, as you do a Watch or a Lead pencil.

The ten cent box of Cascarets is made thin, flat, round-edged, and small, for this precise purpose.

Be very careful to get the genuine, made only by the Sterling Remedy Company and never sold in bulk. Every tablet stamped "CCC."

THEY WANT HUSBANDS

Eight Thousand Women Reply to the Wyoming Bachelors.

Maids and Widows Willing to Become Cowboys' Wives.

Cheyenne, Wyo., May 4.—How to exchange cows for wives is a serious problem for the 1,600 bachelors of the ranges about Meeteetse, who have formed a club and advertised.

Fully 8,000 replies have been received from women, young and old, in various parts of the United States who are anxious to marry them. The bachelors have no money to import them and make their homes, but they have plenty of cows. Their club is called the Gray Bulls.

The Gray Bulls realized that Wyoming was short of women and they promised to be good to any maid or widow who immigrated, to find her employment if she needed it, and then to let the law of sex attraction do the rest. It was felt that any enterprising girl once established in that country of great demand would be able to pick her man and superman him.

The first result was flattering in the extreme. The local postoffice was choked with letters to Mr. Barrow, the secretary. Most of the 8,000 letters arrived the first week, but there have been scattering responses ever since.

Now the club is able to report that it has imported more than 100 of the 8,000, found them places in the territory and left the rest to their own powers of attraction and the ardent wooing of the cowpunchers of Meeteetse.

From Missouri letters a few samples have been culled. It is hard to tell whether this one expects to be taken seriously or is just joshing the Gary Bulls.

"I would prefer a man who was kind and good with $1,000,000 or over, for, although I am not mercenary, it is much more easy to be happy with money than without and I believe in being honest in regard to the matter; then there can be no mistake. I am capable at managing a house in every detail, as I have always lived with my mother, but now my parents are both dead and I am alone, so I must make a change of some kind, but I will not marry a poor man.

"I am musical, have a college education and am able to take care of myself, but I feel as if I would like a man 60 or over to take care of me always."

A widow in St. Louis says that she has a sister in Wyoming and would like to have a husband out there, so that she could be near her sister. She adds:

"I am honest, upright and a Christian woman. Don't fool or want to be fooled with, as I am sincere. Cheerful disposition. Understand housekeeping in all its branches, and sewing.

"Would like a gentleman anywhere from 45 to 60, even older if he has means to take care of him in his old age, as I am a good nurse also. I would give the best of care and kind treatment, as a good wife should. My sister got such a nice husband I think I much rather have a Western man."

From Kirkwood, Mo., comes this businesslike statement of requirements:

"I saw in Sunday's paper an advertisement about your place saying there were so many bachelors I thought I would write to you and see if you could find one to suit me. I want a dark-complexioned man, loving disposition, for I require a great deal of attention. I am a widow, 35, blue eyes and dark brown hair. Some people say good looking. Five feet nine inches in height, work as a sreslady in a bakery from 6:30 a. m. to 7:30 p. m. Long hours, don't you think? Hoping that this will reach the eye of some good man."

From Joplin, Mo., the club gets this application:

"To whom it may concern seeing an Ad in the Paper about your Club of a Thousand members to get help-mates I take the opportunity of answering the same. I am a strong Healthy woman of 45 years was never married but if I got acquainted with some good and worthy man who would appreciate a good Catholic woman I would not hesitate. No other need reply. Can give good references and expect the same. Hoping to hear from you before going into further detail I remain anxiously."

A young woman of Kansas City writes in a business college hand a most alluring account of herself and says:

"Just any old man won't do, either."

A young woman of Chillicothe, Mo., calls the attention of the secretary of the Gray Bulls to the fact that she cannot imagine a greater tragedy than to go West, and, after marrying, find that neither is congenial to the other. She wants a man of innate refinement; otherwise he would be devoid of sentiment. However, this one spoils her chances with the truly loyal citizen of Wyoming by concluding:

"I do not desire to bleach my bones so far from home."

This comes from an address not far from a St. Louis suburb:

"I am English and have been out West. I like the West very much and would like to go West again. I am an Episcopalian. I am Earning my Living as a cook. I would prefer a English, Scotch or American, age about 40. I am a good Housekeeper and Neat. Have good References. Am tall and Fair."

A young woman of Triplett, Mo., 25 years old and of alluring specifications wants a man not more than ten or twelve years older than herself, but if those are all gone she will take one from fifteen to twenty years older.

A young woman at St. Joseph, Mo., says that thre are about twenty-eight girls to a man in her neighborhood. She wants a kind-hearted man, but thinks that everyone in the West is "that way."

A woman of Topeka, Kan., writes on behalf of a friend, who is too modest to take her pen in hand for that purpose, asking what the "fair" is out to Wyoming, as she thinks of sending her friend there for a husband.

A Southern widow residing temporarily in St. Louis writes three pages of her geanology, and takes a shy at Northern women.

"I can understand how New England furnished the largest quota. This city is overcrowded with New Englanders. Why, they have forsaken all the past traditions they may have possessed—home and home cooking, the rostrum, preachers, real estate, doctors, lawyers, etc., and last, but not least, to run automobiles. It seems to me that every womanly attribute has been given up by the Northern women to see if they can't best man in the game of life."

In conclusion, the writer wishes the Gray Bull club every joy "in this life, and even in the life to come."

One Nebraska woman, a great deal more modest than some of the rest, wonders if they will consider a candidate of 38 years. A Des Moines woman asks if the members of the club are intelligent and enlightened. If they are, she knows of several women thereabouts, women of refinement and good families, who would appreciate Western husbands. They could start in as teachers, she says, but they would not be averse to marriage. As for herself, she doesn't want a Western husband.

A charitable woman of East St. Louis writes in behalf of the two women who run the boarding house where she lives. She thinks that they would make good mates for good men. They are of German parentage and speak both English and Hungarian. She wants for them two good, serious Western men—no triflers.

Still another helper of the sex lives far out in a St. Louis suburb. She is happy herself as it is, but she knows several women who need husbands and will be glad to furnish their addresses.

A Kansas City woman has two sisters and two friends "in the field," as she expresses it. They are equally divided between maiden and widow and range from 30 to 48.

To top off the altruistic offers a whole club throws itself at the head of Wyoming. The letter, which comes from Fort Worth, Tex., is as follows:

"The Society of —— sends greetings to the gentlemen of your club. Our society numbers thirty. Our members are expert housekeepers and are well educated. Some are beautiful. The causes of our single blessedness are many, but would not interest you. The causes of the like condition in your club are, we understand, the want of women's society. We desire to know the desires of your members."

LEG HE LOST IN WRECK RETURNED

Railroad Officials Seek Missing Member When Complaint is Filed.

Wilkesbarre, Pa., May 4.—The leg which Louis Felter of Nanticoke lost in the Pennsylvania railroad wreck near Pottsville, when the locomotive left the rails and turned turtle down an embankment, has been returned to him by officials of the company.

It was scratched, bruised and dented, but was otherwise sound, and he can use it again.

Felter was hurled from one end of the car to the other, and had a hard struggle getting out of the wreckage. Not until he was extricated did he miss his leg. He notified the company, and it was found and sent to him.

It was a wooden one which he had just purchased in Philadelphia and was taking home.

ACTRESS GETS LEGACY BUT REMAINS ON STAGE.

London, May 4.—Miss "Billie" Burke, the actress, is still being congratulated by her friends on her legacy of $35,000 from Willis T. Sawyer of San Francisco.

"He was an old friend of my father," says the actress. "I can remember when he held me, a child, on his knee. I never expected the windfall, and I shall carefully invest my money. I shall be extravagant enough to buy another horse, for I am very fond of riding. But leave the stage? Ridiculous. I love my work above all things, and am ambitious to do something notable in real comedy."

A BURNING MOUNTAIN

interior is a Vast Bed of Creosote That Heats.

Davis, I. T., May 4.—All doubt as to whether or not the Arbuckle mountains have been thrown up from great depths by volcanic action, have been set at rest by scientific investigation within the past few days, and since Vesuvius and other old craters have been belching forth fire and lava. Burning Mountain, eight miles from Turner Falls, has been acting queerly, to say the least. Recent investigations by Prof. Mattoon prove conclusively that the Arbuckle range is affected and this wonderland of the Southwest is attracting more than passing notice.

Numerous stories have been published about Burning mountain, but the average reader has probably considered them exaggerations of the "yellow journal" type, and has allowed them to pass as such.

The truth is that Burning mountain is a reality, and at this writing fumes and yellowish smoke can be seen curling up from the old crater peak. This mountain is said to be nothing more than a great bed of creosote, and geologists have declared there was nothing very strange about it. Prof. Gould of the University of Oklahoma has reported Burning mountain as a strange freak of nature, but it appears he has been unwilling to give an opinion as to its probable cause, from a scientific point of view.

Prof. Mattoon, who is said to be connected with the geological department at Washington, has been encamped in the Arbuckles near Turner Falls, about six miles southwest of this city, for several days, and has been making an investigation of caves, mineral deposits and the strange aspect of Burning mountain.

He says there can be no doubt about the volcanic theory, and that Burning mountain is a fact. The smoke and fumes are more noticeable now than for years past, and he believes that the Arbuckle mountains are more or less affected by the recent earthquake and volcanic activity. He says there can be no possible danger of an eruption anywhere in the Arbuckle range, but that some of the larger caverns might at any time emit smoke and sulphur fumes.

When asked to give an opinion about Burning mountain and its probable danger, Prof. Mattoon said:

"I am not making a study of the Arbuckles in the interest of newspapers, and therefore cannot give you any facts and figures, but I will say that Burning mountain is a most peculiar freak in nature, and furnishes food for speculation. My opinion is that an immense bed of creosote is reached by underground streams and surface water, and when wet, it begins to heat and throw off smoke and fumes, causing the strange phenomenon. I do not regard Burning mountain as at all dangerous. It is quite possible that those caves around Turner Falls are connected with the base of Burning mountain, six or eight miles away, and the smoke which sometimes emits from underneath the Falls is driven out there by strong air currents from far beneath the surface."

GRANDPA FLOGS BOY IN COURT

Missouri Squire's Unique Sentence Carried Out With a Will.

Palmyra, Mo., May 4.—The sentence of a justice that the prisoner before him should be soundly flogged in open court was the unusual spectacle offered at Squire Sites' court.

Sam Barr was the offiender. He is a well-known negro boy, and has been suspected of various petty thefts. At last he went after the game in the true Chicago style. He had a cart with him and managed to load a small stove from the rear of the store of William Englehardt. The theft was discovered and the culprit traced, a state warrant sworn out and Sam arrested. His case was set for hearing before Justice W. E. Sites.

In the meantime Samuel Barr, Sr., the grandfather, had heard of the case. The senior Barr is a character of the town, and is respected. He was very much worried that the juvenile Barr would disgrace the family name by a term in prison, and proceeded to labor with the authorities on behalf of the lad. Justice Sites conferred with the sheriff and Prosecuting Attorney Nelson, and finally announced to the old man that if he himself would appear in court and administer a sound thrashing to Sam, the case would be dropped. The old man said that his hands were sore and his wrists weak, but if they would get him the right kind of a club he would carry out the sentence.

Barr, Sr., appeared before Justice Sites with the boy. Sam was laid face downward across a table, and then the grandfather, armed with a big oak stave, pounded the young culprit until he shrieked for mercy. After some twenty blows had been struck the court declared itself satisfied, and the prosecuting attorney formally dismissed the charge.

The judgment was executed in the presence of a number of officials and court habitues, and at its conclusion the grandfather marched proudly away with the weeping and suffering culprit. Sam says his grandfather must have been joking about weak wrists.

FAIL TO RUFFLE PRETTY WIDOW

Lawyers Meet Their Match in Will Contest Case.

Richmond, Va., May 4.—The suit in the chancery court to break the will of James A. Wallen, stone contractor, because of the alleged undue influence of his young and pretty third wife, attracted much attention.

There was a deed of his property, amounting to $30,000, to his young wife, dated some time before the will was made, and the will, therefore, only represents about $10,000. The action is brought by the children of Wallen's first and second wives, and the $30,000 deed is the chief point of contention.

Mrs. Wallen made a most excellent witness. The inexorable lawyers probed deeply into the courtship and love affairs of herself and husband, but, with pretty flushes, she met every attack and lost no advantage by any foolish slip of the tongue and failed to do the expected by refusing to allow her temper to be ruffled.

The evidence was that when Wallen first came a-wooing his advances were met with diffidence, but he was insistent and wrote many warm love letters, in which the word love was spelled with a capital L.

The reading of these was trying to the pretty widow, but she held her ground bravely through it all. Mrs. Wallen was Miss Alice Hay, daughter of a merchant and farmer of Chesterfield.

Of the many warm love letters read in court from her aged lover the following, of date June, 1898, is a fair sample:

"Dear Alice: It is useless to tell you that I love you, as my whole soul is wrapt in you. I would give my life for you. Of course, you can get a much younger companion than I am, but none that loves you more ardently and devotedly than I do. Your least wish I should always grant to you, if it laid in my power, and there is nothing in this world that you wanted that I would not give you.

"Dear Alice, try and love me a little, and in the course of time, by my devotion and love to you, I hope that the time may come that you will love me as well as I do you. We are all under the providence of God. He rules all things. Our lives are in his hands, and when he calls us from this world we have to go—the young, the middle-aged and the old. As I am in the world by myself, I wish no other hand but yours to put me away in my resting place after this life. Try and share with me the pleasures and sorrows of this world and the prayers of my life will be for your welfare and your happiness.

"Dear Alice, pardon me for writing to you, but, believe me, if we are nothing but friends, I shall always love you and always think of you, as I cannot help loving you. I remain your ever-devoted and affectionate friend.

"JAMES A. WALLEN."

READ AND YOU WILL LEARN

That the leading medical writers and teachers of all the several schools of practice, endorse and praise in the strongest possible terms, each and every ingredient entering into the make-up of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, the famous stomach tonic, liver invigorator, heart tonic and regulator and blood cleanser. This is also equally true of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, for the cure of all those weaknesses and distressing ailments peculiar to women.

No other medicines sold through druggists for domestic use, can show any such professional endorsement. Dr. Pierce's above mentioned remedies are non-alcoholic and non-secret, all their ingredients being printed on each bottle wrapper. They occupy a unique position and are IN A CLASS ALL BY THEMSELVES. They are neither secret nor patent medicines. They are powerful to cure but safe to use in any condition of the system, even for the most delicate women and children.

Pure, tripple refined glycerine, which is used instead of alcohol both for extracting and preserving the active, medicinal principles from the roots of the several American forest plants entering into Doctor Pierce's medicines, is much superior to alcohol for these purposes, and is entirely free from the objectionable features inherent in alcohol, inasmuch as it produces only salutary influences upon the system, while alcohol, even in moderate portions, if long continued, as in the treatment of obstinate ailments, is very injurious and often begets a craving for stimulants. Furthermore, glycerine itself is a most valuable curative agent instead of being a harmful habit-forming agent like alcohol. Its nutritive properties, Dr. Pierce and many others eminent in the profession believe, far surpass those of cod liver oil, entitling it to favorable consideration as a remedy in all cases of incipient consumption, especially when it is combined with the active medicinal principles extracted from Black Cherrybark, Queen's root, Stone root, Golden Seal root and Bloodroot, as in "Golden Medical Discovery."

Besides its superior nutritive properties, glycerine is a very valuable demulcent and thereby greatly enhances the remedial action of all the foregoing roots in the cure of severe coughs, bronchial, throat, laryngeal and other kindred affections of the air-passages and lungs. In all "wasting diseases," where there is loss of flesh and gradual "running down" of the system, the glycerine certainly plays an important part in lessening the breaking down and wasting of flesh, and in promoting assimilation and increase of bodily strength and weight. It is a powerful reconstructive agent in all cases of impaired vitality and especially valuable when associated and combined with such superior alteratives and tonics as in "Golden Medical Dircovery" and "Favorite Prescription." Its wonderful solvent properties also play an important part in the cure of gall stones and severe constipation.

Glycerine is also one of the very best anti-ferments and as such counteracts the excessive fermentation of foods in the stomach, present in most cases of indigestion or dyspepsia. Thus the pain, belching of noxious gas, bloating and other disagreeable symptoms are overcome and the Stone root, Golden Seal root, Bloodroot and other ingredients of "Golden Medical Discovery" are greatly assisted in their action in completing a cure.

As will be seen from the writings of Drs. Bartholow, King, Scudder, Hale, Wood, Hare, Johnson, Coe, Ellingwood and other high authorities, as contained in the little book mentioned below, these agents can confidently be depended upon for the most positive, curative action in all atonic, or weak, states of the stomach, accompanied with distressing indigestion or dyspepsia and kindred resultant affections of the liver, kidneys and other associated organs.

Read from the writings of the authorities above quoted, under the headings of Golden Seal root, Stone root, Black Cherrybark, Bloodroot, Queen's root and Mandrake root, in a little book of extracts, compiled by Dr. R. V. Pierce, and which will be sent you free on request addressed to the Doctor, at Buffalo, N. Y., and you will learn that all these ingredients are recommended as remedies for indigestion or dyspepsia and "liver complaint," as well as for the cure of all catarrhal affections wherever located, also for the cure of lingering coughs, arising from bronchial throat and lung affections. All are ingredients of "Golden Medical Discovery," combined in such proportions that each enhances the curative action of all the others.

The "Discovery" must not be expected to produce miracles. While it is especially suited for the cure of all chronic, lingering coughs that are curable, it is not so effective in acute colds and coughs unless slippery elm mucilage, flaxseed tea, solution of gum arabic, or other mucilaginous demulcent be drank freely in connection with its use. Nor must the "Golden Medical Discovery" be expected to cure consumption in its advanced stages. In its early stages it will stay its progress and often effect a cure if its use be persisted in for a reasonable length of time. Send for the little book noted above and learn what those most eminent in the medical profession say of the ingredients out of which Dr. Pierce's medicines are made and thereby learn why they cure obstinate diseases.

By reading some of the extracts from eminent authorities contained in the little booklet mentioned above, treating of the several ingredients entering into "Golden Medical Discovery," it will be readily understood why this famous medicine cures obstinate kidney and bladder affections, chronic diarrhea, all catarrhal affections, no matter in what part of the system existing. By reason of the Stone root, and Golden Seal root contained in it, it is a most effective curative in valvular and other affections of the heart, as you will understand from the writings of Drs. Paine, Hale, Ellingwood and others, concerning Stone root, Golden Seal root and Black Cherrybark which are to be found in the little booklet above mentioned.

Doctor Pierce's Pleasant Pellets cure biliousness, sick and bilious headache, dizziness, costiveness or constipation of the bowels, loss of appetite, coated tongue, sour stomach, windy belchings, "heart-burn," pain and distress after eating, and kindred derangements of the liver, stomach and bowels. Put up in glass vials, tightly corked, therefore always fresh and reliable. One little "Pellet" is a laxative, two are cathartic. They regulate, invigorate and cleanse the liver, stomach and bowels.

A good medical book, written in plain English, and free from technical terms is a valuable work for frequent consultation. Such a work is Dr. Pierce's Common Sense Medical Adviser. It's a book of 1008 pages, profusely illustrated. It is given away now although formerly sold in cloth binding for $1.50. Send 21 cents, in one-cent stamps, to pay for cost of mailing only for paper-covered copy, addressing Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.; or 31 cents for an elegantly cloth-bound copy.

BLIND MAN IS SAVED FROM FIRE

Building Occupants Ran From Flames, Forgetting Sightless One.

Houston, Tex., May 4.—Charles Sieverssen, a blind man, was rescued by the firemen from a burning building where he was asleep after other occupants had fled.

The building was enveloped in flames when a number of men and women escaped in their night clothes, all confused and frightened. The firemen were at work when one of the women exclaimed:

"There is a blind man there! He will burn to death."

Almost simultaneously with the woman's words shrieks were heard from the house. Capt. Oliffe and Fireman Lutz ran up a ladder and disappeared through the flame filled window. Everybody awaited their reappearance. They were gone so long it was feared they were victims. But they appeared at the window with the apparently lifeless body of the blind man.

Sieverssen, the rescued man, is totally blind in one eye and can only see with the other by the aid of glasses. He soon recovered.

Postmaster Robbed.

G. W. Fouts, postmaster at Riverton, Iowa, nearly lost his life and was robbed of all comfort, according to his letter, which says: "For twenty years I had chronic liver complaint, which led to such a severe case of jaundice that even my finger nails turned yellow; when my doctor prescribed Electric Bitters; which cured me and have kept me well for eleven years." Sure cure for Billiousness, Neuralgia, Weakness and all Stomach, Liver, Kidney and Bladder derangements. A wonderful Tonic. At all drug stores. 50 cents.

CONTAGIOUS BLOOD POISON

THE WORST DISEASE IN THE WORLD

Contagious Blood Poison is the worst disease in the world; not only those who contract it sufer, but the awful taint is often transmitted to innocent offspring whose lives are blighted and bodies diseased because the virus of Contagious Blood Poison has been allowed to remain in the family blood. The first sign of this disease is usually a little pimple or blister, then a red rash breaks out, the mouth and throat ulcerate, the hair comes out, copper colored spots appear on the limbs, back and breast; and as the disease more thoroughly pollutes the blood, sores and ulcers form and if the trouble is not checked the finger nails drop off, and the soft bones of the nose and head are destroyed. S. S. S. goes down into the blood and forces out every particle of the poison and makes a complete and lasting cure. As soon as the system gets under the influence of the remedy the symptoms begin to pass away, and when the cure is complete the patient is left in perfect health. So thoroughly does S. S. S. rid the system of the virus that no signs of the disease are ever seen in after years, and posterity is born with a rich, pure blood supply. Book with complete instructions for home treatment and any medical advice desired will be given without charge.

I contracted Contagious Blood Poison by using a towel used by some infected person and had every symptom of the vile disorder. I tried everything I heard of but the disease got worse until I heard of S. S. S. which I commenced, and continued the treatment until I was entirely well. This was some time ago and I have never seen the slightest sign of the disease since. JOS. SCHLOEMER. 801 Allen Ave., St. Louis, Mo.

ATTENTION, PEOPLE!

REASON:

Our buyer left for Chicago some two weeks ago in reply to a message received from H. Cohn & Sons, 232 and 234 Market street, Chicago, stating that they were ready to offer a clearing sale on their entire stock of clothing that was left over from this season's manufacture.

After carefully looking over the line, Mr. Cook considered that the whole lot was a great bargain. In fact, many of the same patterns and styles that we had purchased for our spring trade were included in the lot—and at just 50c on the dollar—exactly half the price we had paid for them earlier in the spring.

Notwithstanding the lot was a large one, 1,500 Suits, together with a good sized stock we already had on hand, it is a great undertaking for a store of this size, no matter how low the price may be. To those who are familiar with the Union Clothing and Shoe House's methods of doing business, it is needless to say that every time we advertise a SPECIAL SALE, it means LOW PRICES and BARGAINS. We don't have a sale every new moon. But in order to make this Great Cash Purchase, we are compelled to avail ourselves of every possible means of raising money. Therefore, we are going to throw this stock onto the market as quickly as possible and realize quick cash at a small profit.

We would have made this announcement last Saturday, but we were too busy receiving the goods, checking them up and putting them into the stock. Every article marked in plain figures, from the $5.85 table throughout the store. EVERY SUIT BEARS THE UNION LABEL. We are not buying an unknown line of clothing, but the well-known line of H. Cohn & Co. union-made clothing. Clothing that is guaranteed, and bears the best reputation of any line manufactured in Chicago. Our prices will bring you here if you read and heed.

MANUFACTURERS' CLEARING SALE!

We were fortunate enough to make a mammoth purchase of over Fifteen Hundred Suits and Top Coats at 50 cents on the dollar at the Manufacturer's Clearing Sale. This is positively the largest purchase ever made by any retail clothing concern at the Head of the Lakes. Positively the largest number of suits for men and boys ever displayed under one roof in this city. BOUGHT AT PRICES that will enable us to sell clothing far below the actual cost of the cloth.

Sale Positively Commences Tomorrow,

WHEAT HAS A DECLINE

Large Argentine Shipments and Lower Cables Are Cause.

Flax Market is Lower, Though Foreign Markets Are Steady.

Duluth Board of Trade, May 4.—Wheat was weaker in the American markets today. The May option was firm in some cities, but the July option was lower everywhere. Lower cables and large Argentine shipments contributed to the weakness. Pit traders were heavy sellers in Chicago. Liverpool closed 3/8d to 1/2d lower, and Antwerp unchanged to 1/2c higher.

It is estimated that the stock of wheat in store at Duluth will decrease 350,000 bus this week.

The May option was 3/8c lower in Duluth, 1/4c higher in Chicago, 1/8c lower in Minneapolis, 1/8c higher in Kansas City and unchanged in New York and St. Louis. There was no session of the Winnipeg market today, it being a holiday there. The July option closed 1/4c lower in Duluth, 1 1-8c off in Chicago, 3/8-1/2c in Minneapolis, 1/8c off in New York, 3/8c in St. Louis and a shade off in Kansas City.

Corn was weaker in Chicago, the July option closing 1/8-1/4c off. Corn was 1/2d to 3/4d lower in London. July oats closed a shade off in Chicago.

The Modern Miller, St. Louis, Mo., this week says: "In reply to inquiries whether the condition of winter wheat improved or deteriorated during April, the cause of deterioration and extent of abandoned acreage. The largest number of millers reported improvement and speak highly of the condition of the crop. The most deterioration was reported in Michigan, Illinois, Missouri, Kansas and Texas and little elsewhere. The poorer condition to the crop is attributed to too much moisture in March and dry weather in April. A number of millers who reported deterioration also noted beneficial effects of recent rains. Abandoned acreage is reported in Michigan, Illinois, Kansas and Indiana. The latter in the flooded river bottom lands. Elsewhere the loss of acreage is small. In Western Kansas, a large average was winter killed by dry weather and high winds and the acreage put into other grains. Otherwise conditions in other states are highly favorable."

Car receipts at Duluth were 34, against 1 last year, and at Minneapolis 192, against 78 last year, making a total for the Northwest of 226, against 79 last year. Chicago received 7 against 12 last year. Winnipeg received 159 against 68 last year.

Primary receipts of wheat were 328,000 bus, last year 137,000 bus. Shipments 205,000 bus, last year 178,00 bus. Clearances of wheat and flour aggregated 253,000 bus.

Argentine shipments of wheat this week were 2,616,000 bus, against 2,400,000 bus last week and 3,512,000 bus last year.

Primary receipts of corn were 475,000 bus, last year 100,000 bus. Shipments 329,000 bus, last year 178,000 bus. Clearances of corn were 150,000 bus. Argentine shipments of corn this week were 2,803,000 bus, against 1,671,000 bus last year, and 1,216,000 bus this year.

Wheat was quiet during the early part of the session of the Duluth market, but became more active later. May wheat opened 1/8c lower at 79 3/4c, advanced to 80 1/8c, declined to 79 1/4c and closed at 79 1/2c a loss of 3/8c from yesterday. July wheat opened 1/8c lower at 80 1/8c, declined to 80c at 10:05, rallied to 80 1/4c at 10:10, declined to 80 1/8-1/4c at 10:15, rallied to 80 3/8c at 10:25, fell off to 80 1/8c at 11:25, rallied to 80 1/2c at 12:35 and declined steadily to the close, which was 79 3/8c a loss of 1/2c from yesterday. September wheat closed 1/2c lower at 78c.

There was a fair activity in flax in the local market. The foreign flax markets were unchanged. It is estimated that the stock of flax in store at Duluth will decrease 600,000 bus this week. May flax opened 3/8c lower at $1.15 1/2, advanced to $1.15 5/8, declined to $1.15, rallied to $1.15 1/4 and declined steadily to the close, which was $1.14 3/8, a loss of 1c from yesterday. July flax opened 1/4c lower at $1.17 1/4, fell to $1.16 3/8, rallied to $1.16 7/8, fell off to $1.16 1/4 and closed at that price, a loss of 3/4c from yesterday. September flax opened unchanged at $1.17 3/8, fell off to $1.16 1/2, rallied to $1.16 3/4, declined to $1.16 3/8 and rallied to $1.16 7/8 at the close, a loss of 3/4c from yesterday. October flax opened 1c lower at $1.15, advanced to $1.15 1/4 and declined at the close to $1.15, a loss of 1c from yesterday.

May oats and oats to arrive and on track were 1/4c lower and other coarse grains unchanged.

Following were the closing prices:

THE CHICAGO MARKET.

Selling by Pit Traders Causes a Weakness in Wheat.

Chicago, May 4.—The wheat market opened weak today on selling by pit traders. Cables were lower and larger shipments were reported from Argentina. These were the chief causes for selling. Trading was light. July wheat opened 1/2@7c to 1/2c lower at 78 1/2@78c to 78c, and for a time held within these figures. Minneapolis, Duluth and Chicago reported receipts of 233 cars against 225 cars last week and 91 cars one year ago.

Prices were unsettled all day. Toward the middle of the session a sharp advance took place on covering by shorts, and the price of July advanced to 79 3/8@1/2c. Profit taking later caused a reaction and the close was easy with July down 1/2c at 78 3/8@7/8c.

The corn market was steady on predictions of wet weather in the corn belt. July opened 1/2c to 1 1/4@1c lower at 45 1/2@45c to 45 3/4 and sold up to 45 5/8c. Local receipts were 248 cars with 37 of contract grade.

The market held fairly steady until the close. The high point for July was 45 3/4@45c. At the close July was down 1 1/4@1c at 45 1/2@45c.

The oats market was steady, but trading was very light. The July option opened a shade lower at 30 3/4c. Local receipts were 202 cars.

Provisions were steady. July pork opened 2 1/2c higher at $15.42 1/2. Lard was 2 1/2c lower to 2 1/2c higher at $8.45. Ribs were unchanged at $8.50.

Close: Wheat—May, 79 3/8c; July, 78 3/4@7/8c. Corn—May, 46 3/4c; July, 45 1/4@45c. Oats—May, 32 3/8c; July, 30 3/4c. Pork—May, $15.65; July, $15.25. Lard—May, $8.30; July, $8.37 1/2. Ribs—May, $8.32 1/2; July, $8.50. Rye—Cash, 62c; May, 58c; July, 55@59c. Flax—Cash Northwestern, $1.13; Southwestern, $1.07. May, $1.11. Timothy—September, $2.55. Clover—Cash, $11.50. Grain Gossip.

Logan & Bryan, Chicago: Wheat—The news today was bearish. The cables came lower, Liverpool claimed to be getting more wheat direct from Argentina. There was nothing but the most flattering reports concerning the finishing up of the seeding in the great spring wheat acreage. The Modern Miller covering the entire winter wheat country, could give the trade nothing new, only to say there are scattered complaints of winter killing from Michigan, Missouri and Kansas, and that the wheat belt as a whole is regarded as in most promising condition. There was a continuation of the reports yesterday that foreigners were bidding for new wheat at Southwest markets for after harvest shipment.

OPHIR

(A PLAY)

It has leaked out that the late consolidation meetings were a Mum Play—everything being done by signals.

Mr. Tut was pointed out as Chairman and Mr. Qutee as secretary.

The minutes of the previous meeting were passed around and read.

They were then approved (without amendment.)

All motions were made and carried by a unanimous smile.

In the last act each man bound his handkerchief over his mouth and all (but one) sat upon the center table, while the odd one crept around on the carpet gathering up scattered bits of green paper—thus pledging themselves to sit upon Ophir stock and have it quietly picked up.

The minutes were ordered filed with Jennings' and Atwater's report and Stewart's Opinion on Ophir title, where no ordinary stockholder can see any of them.

Each one having patted himself on the back and all having enjoyed another smile, the meeting was adjourned, "cum die" Ophir.

SHORTS ARE PUT TO ROUT

Bid Up Stocks Rapidly in the Scramble to Cover.

Closing Was Very Active and Buoyant at the Advance.

New York, May 4.—The higher range of prices in London had some effect upon international stocks in the opening dealings in the stock market here today, but the early movement was much confused and irregular. Canadian Pacific rose 1 1/4 and Union Pacific and Reading 3/4, but the latter immediately lost its gain. Anaconda broke 5 1/4, and the opening in Amalgamated Copper was of 8,600 shares at 96 to 96 1/2, compared with 97 last night. Tennessee Coal fell 1 1/2, American Smelting 1 1/4, and National Lead a point.

Aside from some feverish fluctuations, prices went sharply upwards when it was perceived that the inside support and commission houses were taking all offerings. Stock that had been sharply depressed at the outset scored large gains, notably Copper, Anaconda and Smelting. Representative roads were bought heavily, especially Union Pacific and Reading. About the only element of uncertainty lay in the frequent efforts of the bears to turn the market downwards by concentrating their selling on a few stocks, but up to 11 o'clock these attacks had been successfully resisted. Great Northern preferred and Northern Pacific improved 3; Union Pacific, Reading, Copper, Smelting and Brooklyn Transit, 1 to 1 3/8, and St. Paul, Atchison, Missouri Pacific, Sugar, Colorado Fuel, Anaconda and Peoples Gas, 1 to 1 1/4.

Prices made a further rise, the speculative favorites leading. Northern Pacific and Great Northern preferred rose 5 1/4; Minneapolis, St. Paul & Soo, 3 1/4; C., C., C. & St. Louis, 3; Union Pacific, Reading, Canadian Pacific, Northwestern, Copper, Smelting, Brooklyn Transit and Metropolitan Street Railway Trust rose 2 to 2 3/4. New York Central, Delaware & Hudson, the United States Steel stocks and Consolidated Gas, 1 to 1 1/4. Prices receded a fraction before noon, but were irregular at noon.

The advance of midday compelled the shorts to cover. Gains of between 1 and 2 was recorded. By 1 o'clock there was a setback, running to a point in Reading, St. Paul, Smelting and others. The top prices included advances of 6 3/4 in Northern Pacific, 6 1/4 in Anaconda, 4 in New York Air Brake, 4 1/2 in Reading, 3 3/8 in Union Pacific, Smelting, Distillers' Securities and 2 in St. Paul, Delaware & Hudson and Sugar.

Between 1 and 2 o'clock the market overcame the realizing movement and there was another sharp rise which put all the active features to the highest. Enormous buying of Amalgamated Copper restored all the losses occasioned by yesterday's late slump and there was also an expanding demand for the Western stocks, Reading and Local Tractions. Great Northern preferred extended its rise to 8 1/2, Metropolitan Street Railway 4 1/4, Amalgamated Copper 3 1/2, Northwestern, Brooklyn Transit and Central of New Jersey 3, and Colorado Fuel, Manhattan and Lead, 2 1/4 to 2 3/8.

The shorts began a rout and they bid up prices rapidly in the scramble to cover. The most notable advances were Anaconda 12, Northern Pacific 8 1/4, Central of Jersey preferred 6, St. Paul, Minneapolis & Omaha 7, St. Paul 5 1/4, New York Central 6 3/4, Amalgamated Copper 5 1/4, Distillers' Securities 4 1/2, Tennessee Coal 6 1/4, Union Pacific 4 3/8, Smelting 4, Colorado Fuel 4 1/8, Delaware & Hudson 3 1/2, and the list generally from 1 to 3 points. The closing was very active and buoyant.

What the trade most needs are supporting influences in a foreign demand for our present surplus for immediate shipment. Pit conditions had much to do with the action of prices today. A bonus with Northwest short interests attempted to cover some May, and gave that month a sharp upturn. Barring some unusual turn in the May price, think the conservative position is to take the selling side of the new crop months.

Corn—The heaviness in the late corn months which was noted yesterday was apparent in a mild form again today, and while the May closed unchanged the July was at nearly 1/2c net loss. Early weakness was recovered on buying caused by the forecast for showers and cooler weather for the corn states. Good support was entirely lost at the close. The surface indications are all against corn prices for the moment, but the absence of Western supply, the sharp reduction in stocks, the certainty of fair Eastern cash demand all suggest that the market will not weaken much until it runs into a strong speculative position again.

Wheat: Around the opening prices for wheat were slightly lower as a result of the 1/2d decline at Liverpool, but the bears were very timid about adding to their already large short lines and through lack of offerings principally the market developed strength. Despite the liberal cars at Minneapolis and Duluth for the week, stocks there show a decrease of 875,000 bushels. This with the mills running rather light indicates that outside demands are strong and taking the wheat. An estimate for world's wheat shipments from India is for 96,000 bushels. The official figures of the corresponding time last year of 1,036,000 bushels. The weather forecast was for scattered showers with frosts in the Northwest states and very cool so far south as Kansas. We look for the market to show improvement after the 10th, more known of what is to become of large deliveries that were made this week on May contracts and after the lake strike has been settled. The set back toward the close today was on profit taking and places wheat on an excellent investment basis.

Chicago Inter-Ocean: "It does not occur to the trade that the people in this country will consume 90,000,000 bushels in the shape of flour in the next sixty days," said C. H. Conley. "This will come out of our supplies and this will be felt before another crop is ready to market. It is not natural to suppose that the winter wheat farmers are going to break their necks to sell their new crop at 78 cents."

• • •

Chicago Record-Herald: The pressure that the Watson bear crowd has been putting on the Minneapolis market for May delivery attracted buying orders from all directions. New York bought a small quantity and Duluth a larger lot of cash wheat at Minneapolis yesterday, and both markets were bidding for more. There were rumors also of sales to Chicago.

• • •

Chicago Tribune: The Missouri crop report shows a wheat condition of 87 against 85 last month and 91 lest year. The June condition last year was 81, and the crop harvested was given by the state at 30,000,000 bus. Only 2 per cent of the corn area planted as against 52 a year ago, but plenty of time yet. Total acreage estimated 6,700,000 acres. Oats area 16 per cent less than last year; condition 74.

The Copper Gossip.

Logan & Bryan to Paine, Webber & Co.: Stock market closed strong and sharply higher, in most cases closing prices being best of the day. The president's message was less unfavorable than expected and contained nothing on which holders of stocks should become panic-stricken. It turned out to be a boomerang for the bears, or at least those of that belief who had sold stocks yesterday, expecting the message to have a far-reaching effect. A favorable bank statement expected tomorrow contributed much to the buying, as also did ease in money rates. The action of market and temper of crowd tonight suggests some further headway on the bull side. At least some better prices may be looked for tomorrow. After the bank statement we are inclined to look for more realizing. We doubt if conditions have so much improved as to warrant taking an aggressive stand at this time. It will take but little bull speculation to bring sharply higher money rates. For the time being, on upturns tomorrow, we would be inclined to sell stocks.

The Cotton Market.

New York, May 4.—The cotton market opened steadily at an advance of 2@6 points in response to higher cables, buying on the near months by local bulls and Liverpool, and scattered covering. Trading was much more active than yesterday. The market held steady to firm during the middle of the morning, with 4 or 5 points net higher on the old crop and 2@3 points higher on new crop positions, the latter being relatively easier on good weather reports from the Eastern belt.

Spot closed quiet; middling uplands, 11.87; middling gulf, 12.05. Sales, 800 bales. Futures closed strong; closing bids: May, 11.22; June, 11.03; July, 11.02; August, 10.85; September, 10.56; October, 10.40; November, 10.54; December, 10.48; January, 10.52; February, 10.55; March, 10.58.

FLOURISHES REVOLVER

Laborer Fires Two Shots In Fight at West End.

Was Attacked by Companions With Pick, Shovels and Stones.

A mysterious shooting affray between several Italian laborers employed by Hugh Steele on the paving of West Superior street, was witnessed by a number of West End residents about 5 o'clock last evening.

No one was injured in the affair, but it created much excitement in the West End and stories were current that two or three men had been fatally wounded.

Sergeant Fiskett of the police department, who is himself an Italian, was working on the case until 2 o'clock this morning, but he has as yet been unable to find out the details of the affair, or even the names of the men.

The shooting is said to have been done by a man whose first name was Leon, and the quarrel is believed to have been the outcome of a feud which was begun at Thompson, where the men were formerly employed by the Great Northern Power company.

During the afternoon, bad blood was manifested between the men, and the words came to blows about 5 o'clock. Five of the Italians are said to have attacked the man whose name is Leon, with their picks and shovels, and with loose stones. Leon drew a revolver from his pocket and fired shots from it. He must have intentionally fired in the air, as neither of the bullets took effect on the men who were close about him.

After discharging the gun, he immediately turned and fled, followed by the others, and they made their escape up Nineteenth avenue west.

A crowd quickly gathered, attracted by the shots, but by this time the Italians were out of sight.

The police were notified of the affair, and Sergeant Fiskett was detailed to the case. He spent the evening at West Duluth, searching for some trace of the men, but was unsuccessful in learning more than the given name of the man who did the shooting. The police have a clue on which to work today, however, and they expect to locate the fugitives before many hours have passed.

THE WESTERN COAL INDUSTRY

Lake Strike Important Feature—New Dock Prices Higher.

Chicago, May 4.—The Black Diamond, official newspaper of the coal industry, reviewing the Western market conditions, tomorrow will say:

Developments in connection with the bituminous markets in the West have occurred during the week which may have considerable influence on the future commercial position of coal in this territory. One of the most important features was the inauguration of a lake strike on Tuesday, tying up all the important lake craft and interrupting the shipment of coal to dock points. In addition there seems to be a general sentiment among the coal operators of the Central West that the suspension which was inaugurated on April 1 may continue until the first of July. The miners are beginning to realize that this is not a paper strike, but that the operators are in earnest in demanding a continuance of the present wage scale, and will keep the mines idle until terms on this basis are reached. In some instances the miners are beginning to be rebellious at the delay in reaching a settlement with the operators, and it is freely predicted that if some of the operators were to announce a resumption at the 1904 wage scale in some of the fields, they would easily secure a sufficient number of miners to operate their properties. Dock prices were named on Monday of this week to continue during the month of May. Lump coal will be held at about 50 cents above the figure which was named at the opening of the lake season a year ago. The future tendency of dock prices, after May, will largely depend upon the duration of the lake strike. Should it continue for thirty or sixty days it is possible they might be advanced still further, but if it should be speedily settled, it is likely they would continue on the same basis as at present during the summer, although of course this is a matter of speculation.

The new prices agreed upon for coal f. o. b. docks on Lakes Michigan and Superior are an advance of about twenty-five to 50 cents over those named at the beginning of the season a year ago. At that time very low prices were designated owing to the general condition of the coal industry, but this year the lake strike makes the outlook entirely different and dock companies will be inclined to wait development before committing themselves to the sale of a large tonnage of their product. The prices named apply only to business accepted for the month of May and are as follows:

Description—	F. O. B. Docks Net Ton.
Pittsburg and West Virginia lump	$3.50
Pittsburg and West Virginia run of pile lump	3.20
Pittsburg and West Virginia screened nut	3.40
Pittsburg and West Virginia run of pile nut	3.10
Pittsburg and West Virginia slack	2.65
Hocking Valley lump	3.50
Hocking Valley run of pile lump	3.10
Hocking Valley slack	2.25
No. 8 Pittsburg lump	3.50
No. 8 Pittsburg run of pile	3.10
No. 8 Pittsburg slack	2.65
Smokeless run of mine	3.30
Smithing	4.15

No prices have been named on the dock as to smokeless screened lump and egg due to the fact that this coal is only sold in limited quantities as compared with the tonnage of the descriptions given above.

IS ALL FALSE, SAYS ATTORNEY

When Shown Commissioner Garfield's Report on Standard Oil.

New York, May 4.—When the president's message with the accompanying report of Commissioner Garfield was received at the office of the Standard Oil company in New York, Hon. F. M. Elliott, general counsel of the company, was asked what reply he cared to make. He said:

"It is difficult to comment hurriedly and with due restraint on the astonishing report of Mr. Garfield and the message of the president. We must, however in justice to ourselves, and our shareholders immediately express our unbounded surprise over Mr. Garfield's report, on which of course, the president's strictures are based, and our unqualified declaration that it is absolutely unfair and unjust towards us. We do not hesitate for a moment to say that an unprejudiced study of the facts presented by us to Mr. Garfield's investigators will vindicate us absolutely. In this statement we make no reservation, but mean it to apply to all the charges of railroad favors in any form, unfair dealing as affecting the public or our competitors, and indeed all the charges so maliciously, persistent and unfairly made against us. Our great business has been built up and perpetuated on merit. The common charge that it has been built up by railroad favoritism is ridiculously false, as has been repeatedly proven. We asert unqualifiedly that since the passage of the interstate commerce law, our business has been conducted with scrupulous regard for its provisions. We have been under investigation many times on this subject by tribunals not always or indeed usually friendly, and their findings have been uniformy in our favor."

SERVANT SETS FIRE TO HER MASTER'S BED.

Paris, May 4.—A crime that shocked Paris occurred in the neighborhood of the big city, and the perpetrator of the deed in all probability punished herself worse than the authorities would have done.

A suburban merchant had a woman servant in whom he had great confidence. But a few months ago he observed that she had begun to cheat him. He noticed many valuable articles were missing from the house, and after close watch, concluded the woman had stolen them. He proved this to the servant's own satisfaction and told her to go. She begged him to allow her to stay a few days longer. The merchant did so.

During this time the woman prepared a plan for revenge. While her employer and his nephew, who lived with him, were asleep she entered the room and put coal oil in their beds and then set the beds on fire. The men were awakened by the flames and saw the servant feasting her eyes on their pains. She even held the lad, who tried to run from the burning bed. When it became dangerous to remain in the room, the woman ran out, locking the door.

The merchant succeeded in breaking the door and rescuing himself and nephew. Both were taken to the hospital and when the police were informed of the cause of the fire a search was made for the woman, who a few days later was found dead in a canal.

BOY'S VITALITY IS REDUCED BY FAGGING.

London, May 4.—Mr. and Mrs. D. C. M. Lindsay of Salt Lake City recently arrived at Windsor, having been hastily summoned on the journey of many thousand miles by the illness of their young son, a scholar at Eton.

The boy's vitality had been reduced by fagging and he had a sharp attack of pneumonia, but he is progressing favorably.

Many of the cases of influenza and pneumonia at Eton are undoubtedly caused by boys doing their fagging before taking off the wet clothes in which they come in from playing in the rain.

The younger boys, the fags, have to do all sorts of errands for the older students—the fag masters, as they are called—black their boots, carry coal to their rooms and so on.

But even Prince Arthur of Connaught was compelled to fag at Eton, although, it is generally agreed, the system, should be abolished.

GOV. VARDAMAN DOWNS TRUSTS

Special Message to Legislature Upset Big Ownership Clause.

Jackson, Miss., May 4.—Governor Vardaman won a notable personal victory in forcing the two houses of the state assembly to change a corporation law clause which had been adopted for the new state code.

The clause permitted corporations to own as high as $10,000,000 worth of timber land. This the governor, in a special message, denounced as promoting trusts and shutting the door of opportunity to ambitious young men. He urged the houses to limit the corporation ownership of timberland to $2,000,000. In the message Governor Vardaman said in part:

"The best product of any land is its men and women, and that is the happiest and most prosperous population where the wealth of the state is most equally divided among the people. Millionaires produce paupers; the concentration of riches in the hands of the few breeds poverty and squalor among the many. The effect of such legislation will be to close the door of opportunity and hope in the face of the struggling youth of the state and make of them toilers for the favored rich."

After the reading of the message, both houses, despite strong lobby organizations, placed the limit of ownership of timber lands by corporations to $2,000,000.

GEN. BELL'S WIFE

Likes the Roving Life of an Army Officer.

Washington, May 4.—"I am an army woman, pure and simple, and there is nothing in life which appeals to me like lifes and drums and boots and spurs and all the blazonry of war," says Mrs. J. Franklin Bell, wife of the new chief of the general staff of the army.

"No phase of army life is distasteful to me," continued Mrs. Bell. "I love the changing environment, the making of new friends and the excitement of moving. It is natural for the soldier to love to move, and, as I have been identified with martial life for nearly forty years, I feel that I am a sort of soldier, too.

"I can find amusement and employment anywhere. I can go into the corral and get lots of fun out of the mules I have lived in almost every state in the Union and in some foreign countries. I spent nearly three years in the Philippines, and found plenty to do there, and the monotony of which so many complain never affected my spirits at all.

"I am delighted to round out this varied experience in Washington, and I look forward to the coming season with all the anticipation of a young girl about to make her debut."

Mrs. Bell, who takes such a roseate view of her duties as one of the leaders of official society, is a delightful woman of middle age, as full of life and vivacity as a girl of 20.

She is a native of Rock Island, Ill., and has been imbued with martial traditions all her life. She was Miss Sarah Buford, and is niece of Gen. John Buford and of Gen. Napoleon Buford, well-known soldiers of fifty years ago.

As becomes the wife of a great cavalry officer, she is a devoted horsewoman. She rides almost daily, and says she is fond of almost everything which is designed to afford pleasure.

ILLINOIS CHURCH

Will Maintain Kindergarten So Mothers Can Attend Services.

Paris, Ill., May 4.—Rev. Finis Idleman, pastor of the Christian church in Paris, and one of the most progressive ministers in the city, has just put into practice a plan whereby mothers may come to church on Sunday and bring all the children, and not be caused any worry through fear that during the service the conduct of the little ones may annoy the pastor or the congregation.

He has secured the services of Miss Rachel E. Bremmenan of Bloomington, Ill., one of the best kindergarten teachers in the state, who, with the assistance of a few of the women of the church, has fitted up a room in the rear of the edifice, where the children are taken during the progress of the services and taught as they would be in a kindergarten.

Miss Bremmenan says she will make her end of the work so attractive and profitable that the children will beg to be allowed to attend the kindergarten sessions. Thus the parents of the little ones will not only have no excuse for not going to church but their children's pleadings will supply an additional incentive for their attendance.

The kindergarten is only for the children who are accompanied to church by their parents.

Ashland Connection.

The Duluth, South Shore & Atlantic road now has connections with Ashland, Wis., for passengers arriving at or departing from Duluth. The South Shore passenger trains, one a day each way, connect with the Omaha Twilight annex, at Bibon. A person may leave here over the South Shore at 6:20 p. m., arrive at Bibon at 9:28 p. m., board the Twilight annex a minute later, and arrive at Ashland at 10:15 p. m. On the return trip he may leave Ashland at 3:05 p. m., arriving at Duluth at 6:45 p. m.

GIRLS' LONG WALK WAS ALL IN VAIN

Texas Runaways Apprehended Because They Boarded Train Again.

Houston, Tex., May 4.—After having walked ten miles to elude pursuit and finally reached Houston, the goal of their ambition, three girls from Brenham, the youngest 10 years of age, were apprehended by Chief Ellis and turned back home. They were found upon a train at the Grand Central passenger station and the error of their way demonstrated. Tickets were purchased and, escorted by an officer, they were placed on board the railroad coach that was to bear them back to Brenham.

The girls had formerly been employed in a factory at Brenham, but believed by coming to Houston they might improve their condition. Taking a train they traveled as far as Hempstead, but fear of pursuit caused them to alight at that station.

They were not, however, deterred in their aim and continued the journey on foot, walking ten miles to Waller. There they again took the train and arrived in Houston, only to be apprehended before they could step foot upon the soil of the city.

The girls were over the age that would have made their arrest legal and Chief Ellis was forced to depend upon his powers of persuasion to induce them to return.

"Every man's task is his life-preserver." A Herald want ad. will get you a new and better life-preserver if the old one is unsatisfactory.

SOMERVILLE'S ENTRY IN GUBERNATORIAL RACE ANGERS BLOCK MEN

Second District Now Reported as Arrayed Against Block.

His Fences in Second District and St. Paul Shattered.

Senator Nelson Said to be in Favor of Somerville.

St. Paul, May 5.—(Special to The Herald)—Block's friends are out with an ax for George Somerville, whose appearance in the race almost eclipses the candidacy of the state treasurer. Not only this is the case but the Second district, which was regarded as a Block stronghold, is now arrayed against him. There is no doubt but that Somerville's candidacy will cut more into Block's preserves than any other candidate named on the ticket.

Another element of weakness in Block's candidacy is the action taken in the Third district in regard to it. It is understood that Joel P. Heatwole, Congressman Charles Davis and J. C. Applegate of Cannon Falls are framed up to carry fire into his own district and so divide the delegation as to totally discredit Block before the convention.

It is commonly known that Block is persona non grata both to the Dunn and the Heatwole factions. In his support of Dunn, Block was too cool, and his general indifference to Heatwole in the days of that gentleman's embarrassment is also against him. In attempting to steer clear of any complications, Block incurred the displeasure of both factions.

The result of the St. Paul city election has thrown into confusion the "kid" organization which Block hoped to capture, and through it the solid Ramsey county delegatin. There are strong rumors that the Fenton Warner and Franklin Griggs directorate is about doomed. They have failed to make good twice in succession; once in the case of Collins and lately in the case of L. G. Hoffman who ran for mayor against R. A. Smith.

These party leaders, it is rumored, will not have such a free hand in the fall campaign, although Fenton Warner now holds the chairmanship of the county organization. There is little doubt but an effort will be made to displace both Griggs and Warner, and it is feared that leaders who know not Block will rise up.

There is every indication that the federal ring has shifted its allegiance from Jacobson to Somerville. William Grimshaw and his deputy, Rich, while in attendance at the Mankato term of the district court, were circulating lists of Somerville talk. It is reported that

PETER OLSON IS KILLED NEAR ELY

Run Over by Flat Car on Swallow & Hopkins Railroad.

Ely, Minn., May 5.—(Special to The Herald.)—Peter Olson was instantly killed yesterday afternoon, at the hoist, on the Swallow & Hopkins railroad between Fall Lake and Basswood.

Olson was section foreman for the Swallow & Hopkins Co., and was riding on a flat car at the rear end of the train, which was backing up, when his hat was blown off. In leaning over to watch when it went, he lost his balance and fell under the car. Both his feet were cut off and he was badly crushed in the chest. He was about 50 years of age and leaves a family.

EXPLAIN KISSING STORY.

Stanley's Friends Tell of the Governor Hoch Incident.

Wichita, Kan., May 5.—Close friends of former Governor W. E. Stanley have given out the origin of the story that Governor Hoch had attempted to kiss Mrs. Stanley.

The incident happened in April a year ago. Mrs. Stanley had met at Emporia, the daughter of the governor and talked with her for some time. As Mrs. Stanley was leaving she said she was going to call upon Governor Hoch.

"Tell papa I send my love and lots of kisses," said Miss Hoch.

Mrs. Stanley, after concluding the business with the governor, mentioned her meeting with Miss Hoch and told him the message.

"Well," said the governor, "aren't you going to deliver the goods?"

Mrs. Stanley resigned when the political story came out. Since then political capital has been made out of it by Hoch's enemies.

RECEIVER APPOINTED.

Chicago, May 5.—Byron L. Smith, president of the Northern Trust company of this city, was today appointed receiver of the Traders' Insurance Company by Judge Julian Mack in the circuit court of Cook county. The application for the receiver was made in behalf of fifteen stockholders, including John A. King, Clarence Buckingham, Charles L. Hutchinson, Abram Poole, William C. Cepp and George Sturges, all of them wealthy men.

WITTE AND M. DURNOVO

Dismissed From Cabinet by Emperor in Flattering Terms.

Second Highest Decoration in Russia Conferred on Premier.

St. Petersburg, May 5.—The official announcement of Count Witte's retirement from the premiership, the retirement of M. Durnovo from the ministry of the interior and M. Goremykin's elevation to the premiership appeared today in the Official Messenger. The names of the other members of the cabinet were not gazetted. It is asserted that one or two are hesitating, notably M. Ivolsky, curator of St. Petersburg high schools and university, who has been named for foreign minister, knowing full well that the cabinet is a makeshift of the emperor to let both Witte and Durnovo down. The usual rescripts do not contain the slightest suggestion of the emperor's displeasure. On the contrary the rescript to Witte puts the motives for his retirement in the best possible light, accepting the excuse of ill-health at its face value. The whole tone of the rescript is extraordinarily cordial, and besides it confers on Witte the order of Alexander Nevsky set in brilliants. It is the second highest decoration in Russia. Witte also retains his title of count and is appointed a member of the council of the empire or upper house of the new parliament and remains secretary of state. Durnovo in giving up the ministry of the interior becomes a secretary of state, retains the dignity of senator and is made a member of the council of the empire.

In his farewell rescript to Witte under today's date the emperor says:

"In consequence of the state of your health which has been impaired by your arduous labors, you have been obliged to ask to be relieved of the functions of president of the council of ministers. When I summoned you

MIDSHIPMEN FEEL EASIER

They Will Not be Expelled From the Naval Academy.

Washington, May 5.—After consultation between the officials of the navy department and Admiral Sands, the superintendent of the naval academy, the fate of thirty midshipmen has been settled. When the hazing investigation was at its height the special board appointed by Admiral Sands collected much evidence against many of the midshipmen of which the latter never knew. Had the old law remained unchanged each of the boys would have been hauled before a court-martial and if convicted of hazing would have been dismissed from the academy. The board worked in secret and consequently none of the boys knew just how far he had been incriminated by the testimony being taken from their ranks. Meantime many of the youngsters lost ground in their studies because of the secret apprehension under which they suffered. Now, however, all doubt has been removed, the new law has been applied and the superintendent of the academy has been allowed to fix the punishment to be meted out to each of the midshipmen found by the board to have been implicated in hazing. Those punishments consist of the imposition of demerits; of reduction in classes; confinement to the limits of the reservation, and other penalties of minor degree, all of which have been welcomed by the culprits as infinitely to be preferred to the harsh sentence of expulsion which has heretofore been the only punishment permitted by law.

FRANK CONWAY DEAD.

Dies Suddenly Near Ripple---Has Married Daughter in Duluth.

Ripple, Minn., May 5.—(Special to The Herald.)—Frank Conway, employed on the railway section, has died suddenly, apparently from uraemic poisening. He has a married daughter in Duluth. The address of his relatives is unknown.

WOMAN LIVES TO 130.

Four Great-Great-Grandchildren Survive Mrs. Betsy Ware.

Washington, May 5.—A remarkable case of longevity is disclosed in a death notice announcing the demise of Mrs. Betsy Ware, aged 130 years. She lived in Spotsylvania county, Virginia. After saying that Mrs. Ware was born in the county where she died, the notice continues:

"She leaves to mourn her loss seven children, twenty-nine grandchildren, fifty-eight great-grandchildren and four great-great-grandchildren.

TEN PERSONS KILLED IN HEAD-ON COLLISION ON PENNSYLVANIA ROAD

Twenty of the Passengers and Train Crew Seriously Hurt.

Freight Wreck Short Time Previous Cause of Disaster.

Trains Were Sent on Branch and Orders Misunderstood.

Altoona, Pa., May 5.—Ten persons are dead as the result of the head-on collision on the Pennsylvania railroad near Clover Creek Junction last night. Six were killed outright and four died as a result of injuries received. About twenty of the passengers and train crew were more or less seriously injured but as far as is known all will recover.

The dead:

ALL STEEL NECESSARY

Will be Promptly Furnished Frisco for Next Three Years.

Every Facility Will be Afforded Builders of New City.

San Francisco, May 5.—That every facility will be afforded the builders of new San Francisco by the great manufacturers' interests of the East, is apparent by the promise of representatives of all the allied companies of the American steel makers, six of whom are now on the ground here. These men for some days past have been in conference with Mr. Harriman. The officials of the Santa Fe, Pacific Mail and American-Hawaiian Steamship companies have stated that no scarcity of structural steel will delay the rebuilding of the city. Structural steel is to be furnished San Francisco for the next three years as fast as it is needed, faster than it can be riveted together in the frames of the buildings, that are already being planned. More than that the promise is given that credits on past business will be extended and payments on new orders may be deferred to the longest limit to which individual builders can legitimately be entitled.

Money will not be wanting to back up the building operations now about to be energetically taken up and the insurance money exceeding $150,000,000 soon to be released in the community will go a long way in helping the good work along. A large amount of money is already being forwarded here by the insurance companies of the United States and Europe to meet the big losses they will have to pay. Many of the companies have, it is said, decided to reimburse their clients with spot cash at their offices or with drafts as

WAINWRIGHT GETS SEVEN YEARS IN PEN.

Minneapolis, May 5.—(Special to The Herald.)—Imprisonment in the state penitentiary at Stillwater for seven years, was the sentence meted out to Thomas J. Wainwright in the district court yesterday by Judge Brooks for robbing Dr. Pinault's residence of a wagon load of valuable household goods. Wainwright pleaded guilty last Tuesday. He admitted to the court that he had once served a sentence of twelve years in prison for taking diamonds from an open safe.

THE ANTHRACITE MINERS VOTE TO ACCEPT THE WAGE SCALE OF 1903 AND RETURN TO WORK SOON AS POSSIBLE

BOYCOTTED BY TUGMEN

Independent Tugs at Chicago No Longer Tow Lake Carriers.

New Orders Are Received From National President McCarle.

Chicago, May 5.—All lake carrier boats were boycotted in Chicago river by the Licensed Tugmen's association today, orders to that effect having been received by President McCarle. This deprives the boats outside of the tug trust of the rich harvest they have been reaping while the trust boats were tied to the dock by the tugmen's strike. The tug Handy will be kept in commission to tow the passenger steamers in and out of port.

The new movement will simply hamper the movement of vessels in Chicago river, but will not be effective in stopping traffic, as the boats will get around somehow, the captains having been educated to Chicago river navigation during past strikes of the tugmen.

At South Chicago iron ore cargoes were being unloaded from the steamers Ball Brothers and Lyman C. Smith. The steamers Perkins and Maythan got a new force of firemen and sailed today. The Maunaloa arrived from Milwaukee with a cargo of ore, partially unloaded, and the rest will be taken out at the Illinois Steel company. The steamer J. B. Cowle arrived with 7,000 tons of coal, and the work of unloading was begun this afternoon. Thus far boats are not having much trouble at South Chicago to fill the places of striking firemen.

DULUTH CONTRACTOR

Will Erect the New Bray Hospital at Biwabik.

Biwabik, Minn., May 5.—(Special to The Herald.)—F. Marion of Duluth has been awarded the contract to erect a hospital building for Dr. C. W. Bray on the site of the one recently destroyed by fire. The new building will be of frame, two stories high, and will be well equipped in every particular. The contract price is $7,575.

WITHERING SARCASM

In Standard Oil Officials' Reply to Garfield's Report.

President Comes in for Hot Shots in Same Answer.

New York, May 5.—In reply to President Roosevelt's message and the report of Commissioner Garfield, Messrs. H. H. Rogers and John D. Archbold of the Standard Oil company, said that their examination of the message and report had necessarily been a hurried one and that they should at a later date make a full answer to their shareholders. Meanwhile they made this statement to the Associated Press:

"In the president's effort to secure the passage of a bill enlarging the powers of the interstate commerce commission and just and equitable railway rates, we have precisely the same interest that any good citizen has. No more and no less. Regarding his criticisms upon the management of the railways, or his strictures upon any acts of the interstate commerce commission, we have neither responsibility nor concern, when, however, he or Commissioner Garfield attacks that Standard Oil company and uses its methods of doing business as an object lesson of the promoting of his views, we protest. It may be frankly stated at that outset that the Standard Oil company has at all times and within the limits of fairness and with due regard for the law, sought to secure the most advantageous freight rates and routes possible. There will be no denial of this fact on our part. The question is whether we have at any point violated the law or the properties.

"The present inquiry grew out of a resolution adopted by congress a year ago on motion of Mr. Campbell of Kansas, instructing the secretary of commerce and labor to investigate the oil business as carried on in this country.

"We welcomed the investigation. When Commissioner Garfield in the discharge of his duty, visited our office, he and his experts were given free access to our books and the fullest opportunity to ascertain the manner in which our business was conducted. Frank disclosures of all of our methods were made and every criticism offered by him was met with a candid and painstaking answer.

"So conscious were we of our rectitude that we repeatedly importuned Mr. Garfield to make public the conditions existing in Kansas, but he refused. We proposed ourselves to answer some unfair criticism on the subjects, but refrained on Mr. Garfield's

AMERICANS AND CHINKS

Enjoy a Banquet and a General Good Time at Shanghai.

Shanghai, May 5.—George G. Ward of New York, vice president of the Commercial Pacific Cable company, who arrived here recently to supervise the completion of the Manila-Shanghai link, was entertained by the American association of China at a banquet at which several distinguished Chinese who were among those present heartily welcomed the new cable connection with the United States.

During the course of the evening the healths of the dowager empress of China and of the president of the United States were drunk with enthusiasm. Mr. Ward made a speech, in which he gave a short history of the cable company, eulogizing the late John W. Mackay. He said the enterprise was due to his American spirit, and added that his plans had been ably carried out by his son, Clarence H. Mackay. Mr. Ward believed the new cable would increase the commerce and cement the good relations between the two countries, and otherwise be of great advantage to both America and China. He also said that it would furnish proof to the great Chinese empire of the desire of the United States for closer intercourse with her people, and be accepted by China as an expression of good faith, friendship and good will.

MISSED JANESVILLE.

Therefore Playhouse Manager Wants $85 of Bernhardt's Money.

Madison, Wis., May 5.—P. Meyer, proprietor of the Janesville opera house, has tied up Sarah Bernhardt's receipts at the Madison playhouse with garnishee proceedings, claiming that Bernhardt's manager promised Janesville a date, but failed to go there, even after the "Divine Sarah" had been billed publicly. The claim is for $85 and the trial will take place on May 12. Both sides have engaged Madison attorneys.

Provided Operators Will Give Every Man His Old Place.

Scale Committee Recommended Acceptance of Former Award.

Adopted by Convention After an Hour's Warm Argument.

Scranton, Pa., May 5.—There will be no strike of the miners in the anthracite coal fields providing the operators will agree to give every man his old place and reinstate those who have been dismissed because they obeyed the suspension order of John Mitchell. This was the agreement reached at today's session of the convention. The convention did not adjourn, however, President Mitchell requesting that the delegates remain in Scranton until the scale committee reports the result of its meeting with the operators, which will probably be held in New York on Monday if the operators agree to meet the miners' representatives. The no-strike decision was reached after President Mitchell and National Secretary-Treasurer Wilson had addressed the delegates recommending that the 1903 award be continued. A resolution to this effect was offered and unanimously adopted, after which the convention adjourned.

When President Mitchell returned to his hotel, he issued the following statement:

"For several months we have been endeavoring to negotiate a wage scale and adjustment of conditions of employment with the representatives of the anthracite coal mining companies. During these negotiations we made a number of propositions, each of which materially modified our original demands. We did this, not because we were convinced that our original propositions were unfair or wrong, but purely for the purpose of finding a common ground upon which we could reach an agreement that would secure and maintain peace in the anthracite coal industry. We still believe that our first proposition was reasonably fair, and notwithstanding the modifications we have since made in the interest of peace, now we are face to face with the alternative of continuing at work under our former conditions, or declaring a strike. In this crisis your committee recommends the following policy:

"First, that we agree to work on the basis of the award of the anthracite

POLICEMEN SHOOT RIOTOUS ITALIANS

Sharp Battle Occurs With Strikers at Passaic, N. J.

Passaic, N. J., May 5.—In a battle between riotous Italian strikers and the police today, four of the rioters were shot and a number of the police injured. One of the men shot may die. Thirty-two men were made prisoners by the police.

The riot took place about the building of the Daily Herald, which is being erected at Central avenue and Monroe street, where a strike of diggers and shovelmen was begun a few days ago. About 150 strikers appeared at the building today and tried to induce the concrete workers on the building to join in the strike. Four policemen who were on the ground were temporarily overpowered and reinforcements were sent from the police station. A battle ensued in which four of the strikers were shot and nearly every policeman engaged was injured. Policeman Gustave Schmidt was struck on the head with bricks and badly hurt, but the rioters were put to flight after 200 shots were fired. The police pursued the rioters and routed them out of a stone quarry, from whence they fled into the woods.

TWENTY-ONE ENTRIES IN SECOND MARATHON RACE.

St. Louis, May 5.—The second annual Marathon race, under the auspices of the Missouri Athletic club to be run today, brought to St. Louis some of the best distance runners of the country besides the pick of the local coterie.

Twenty-one entries were made including runners from Chicago, Boston, Columbus, Ohio, Keokuk, Iowa, New York and Canada.

The course, about twenty-five miles, is entirely over country roads, the runners finishing in the fair grounds race track after doing two miles in view of the spectators.

MOUNTAIN IRON

Raised $590 for Relief of the San Francisco Sufferers.

Mountain Iron, May 5.—(Special to The Herald.)—A total of $590 was raised here for the relief of the afflicted at San Francisco. President Mott raised $140 among the residents of the village, the employes of the Mountain Iron mine gave $258.50 and those of the Stephens mine of the same company $101.50. The amount has been forwarded to the governor.

ALBERTSON'S

WELCOME O. A. ANDERSON.

Swedish Christian Sick Benefit Society Makes Him Present.

The monthly meeting of the Swedish Christian Sick Benefit society held last evening at Sloan's hall, was turned into a social affair. This was done in order to give a hearty welcome home to O. A. Anderson, former secretary of the society, who has just returned from a six months' visit to Sweden.

Up to the time of his departure for the old land, he had been secretary of the society for five years and last night was given the open hand of welcome by his brother members.

In token of their esteem of him and as a memento of their pleasure at seeing him again they made him a couple of valuable presents. He was entirely surprised and, needless to say, felt keen pleasure at the demonstration of friendliness given.

INSURANCE CLERKS

MARINE

SITUATION UNCHANGED

Receipts at Ore Docks Dropping Off Because of Strike.

Men Being Laid Off—Lack of Sympathy With Strike.

The only parts of the Duluth harbor which are beginning to feel the strike are the ore docks, and there is noticed a dwindling in receipts. It is understood that while some men have already been laid off at the docks in Duluth and at the mines on the range, this is only a forerunner of the laying off of a large number.

Otherwise the situation here remains the same.

The steamer Troy of the Western Transit company arrived here yesterday with only sixteen tons of freight in her. This, it is understood was loaded just in time to allow her to get out of Buffalo harbor before midnight of last Monday. This is all she had time to load before the hour of the strike was to arrive.

Word comes from below that in many places men ordered to strike have refused to do so. The sympathy of the men in many places seems to have gone astray somehow for they are not in favor of striking when the mates, over whom the strike is called, do not do something for themselves. In fact the attitude of the mates is becoming something of a laughing stock even among some of the men involved; and it it not regarded as fair that the tugmen and longshoremen should have to strike and sacrifice their wages when the mates still hold their jobs and draw their pay.

Word come from Cleveland that a union delegate who boarded the steamer James E. Davidson at Erie to induce the mate to join the union was treated to a bath by the man he tried to convert. The mate, in short, threw him overboard.

Some of the docks below are being guarded and nobody is allowed on them in day or night without a pass. It is believed this is a forerunner to putting non-union men to work.

LARGE SHOAL AT NEW HANNA DOCK

Vessels Drawing Seventeen Feet Are Warned to Keep Away.

Vessels drawing 17 feet of water cannot safely do business at the new Hanna dock in Superior. This word has been given out by Maj. Charles L. Potter of the United States engineers, stationed in Duluth, in a report made to the United States lake survey office in Detroit.

Maj. Potter reports that a shoal has been developed by the construction of the new Hanna dock on the Superior front channel and that vessels should keep near the outer buoys marking the channel. The shoal is 600 feet long and extends 250 out from the dock.

The least depth over it at low water datum is 16 feet and as was said before, vessels drawing 17 feet had better keep away from there. The channel at this point is 400 feet wide passing 150 out from the face of the dock.

LIBERAL TAX LAWS

Of Minnesota and Indiana Get Many Enrollments of Vessels.

Michigan City, Ind., is said to be becoming the port of hail of a good many vessels of the great lakes owing to its liberal taxation laws applying to steamers and barges. It is an illustration of what copying a good thing does for a place. The Indiana legislature some time ago copied the Minnesota vessel tax law to the letter and since then has secured a good many boats' enrollment.

It is understood that a good many vessels are changing their home states from Michigan and Wisconsin to Minnesota and Indiana owing to the differences in tax laws. In Michigan and Wisconsin, vessels enrolled are listed and taxed the same as any other personal property, while in Minnesota and Indiana they are taxed 3 cents per gross net ton. In this way a good deal in taxes is secured by Minnesota and Indiana which would otherwise go to other states, seeing that most of the vessels enrolled in these two states are owned in others and the headquarters of their companies are mostly in Ohio and New York.

It was expected that the Goodrich Transit company would change its boats from Michigan to Indiana, but instead of that the company enrolled at Duluth, and more are expected. The Graham & Morton line has enrolled at Michigan City, Ind., and others are expected to enroll there.

Former State Senator H. R. Spencer of Duluth is the author of the law which prevails in both Minnesota and Indiana, introducing it and securing its passage in the legislature of 1895.

IS BADLY INJURED.

Zimmerman Crew in Luck Not to Have Been in Deep Water.

Capt. C. H. Sinclair, representative of the marine insurance underwriters, has been on a visit to the Sault, where he inspected the sunken steamer Zimmerman and other steamers which stranded there recently.

Capt. Sinclair says the Zimmerman is a very badly damaged boat and that the cost of repairing her will approximate $50,000. Her bow is smashed back to the pilot house, and even her windlass was crushed by the Saxonia's stem. The Zimmerman's anchor, which was torn off by the Saxonia, was found 28 feet forward of where the boat settled, showing that she must have been backing away from the Saxona.

Capt. Sinclair says if the accident had occurred in deep water the Zimmerman would have gone down like a stone and that no one would have had a chance to escape from her.

The Donnelly Wrecking company, which has the contract for raising the Zimmerman, is building a cofferdam at the Sault and this will be floated down to the boat. It is expected that the vessel will be floated in about one week. She will probably unload her coal cargo at the Sault and will be docked at Toledo.

According to Capt. Sinclair, the masters of the Hutchinson, Umbria, and Iroquois are not to blame for the stranding of the boats, as the buoy at the point where they struck was 100 feet out of place.

STEAMER ON RAMPAGE.

Midland Queen Breaks Steering Gear and Runs Away.

According to reports in the Detroit newspapers, the collision of the Canadian steamer Midland Queen with the new steamer William G. Mather was a case of a steamer, as it were, taking the bit in her teeth and running away. Something went wrong with the steering gear and before she got through she had collided with the Mather twice and put a dredge scow out of business.

The Midland Queen was bound down with grain, and the Mather was bound up light when the accident occurred. The Canadian boat first struck the Mather on the port bow, punching a hole in her above the water line. She then hit the dredge and again struck the Mather at No. 10 hatch, damaging her below the water line. The Midland Queen's bow was badly stove in, but she was able to continue her trip.

The Mather went to the Ecorse shipyards, where she will be repaired, which will take about a week. Five plates have to come off, but the boat will not have to be docked as she can be listed sufficiently to permit of repairs being made to the injury below the water line.

The Mather had just completed one round trip and was on her second when the mishap occurred. She carried close to 10,000 tons on a draft of 18 feet 3 inches on her maiden trip, and came down the lakes at a rate of 11¾ miles an hour. She was designed as an 11-mile boat.

MATES GOING HOME.

Many Believe the Strike Will be of Considerable Length.

Cleveland, May 5.—Believing that the lake marine strike will be of indefinite length, mates from surrounding towns are arriving here and, after visiting headquarters, where they get little encouragement looking toward the end of the strike, are departing for their homes. Fifteen non-union mates have joined the union here since yesterday morning, according to a statement made at the local headquarters of the union today. The steamer W. H. Mack, manned by non-union men, reached her dock today. A detail of officers was on hand to meet her. Although a few longshoremen lounged about the dock, no trouble occurred. It is the expectation of vessel owners to load two vessels with coal today.

The Sherwin Repaired.

Bay City, May 5.—(Special to The Herald.)—Repairs to the new Gilchrist steamer Sherwin, which collided with a bridge and knocked a hole in her bow a week ago, were completed last night, and the steamer left on her maiden trip today, going to Duluth for iron ore.

Strike a Surprise.

Buffalo, May 5.—(Special to The Herald.)—The firemen and oilers on the tugs Tonawanda and Constitution, which handle the lumber boats to and from Tonawanda today, refused to work. The Lumber Carriers' association having recognized the mates union, the action of the firemen came as a great surprise. Many union lumber shovers will be thrown out of work. Their officials have telegraphed President Daniel J. Keefe about the matter.

Will Supply Men for Return Trip.

Milwaukee, May 5.—(Special to The Herald.)—Two steamers, the Stone and Volunteer, hailing from the lower lakes started on return trips today. Vessels belonging at this port are tied up on account of the strike. The only boats reported as leaving are those which have contracts with crews for round trips. There is no report of any disturbance at this port. It is said that should there be any strike of union men on vessels arriving here from the lower lakes with crews contracted for the round trip, that the union officials will replace the strikers with other union men in order that return trips might be completed.

Ocean Steamships.

New York, May 5.—Arrived: Pretoria, Hamburg; Philadelphia, from Southampton.

Cost of Battleships to Prevent War.

While the struggle between Russia and Japan taught no new lesson of importance, it emphasized the fact that the time is coming when only the richest nations can afford to go to war. The coming battleships are so enormously expensive that the smaller countries cannot afford to build them. The time has also come when you can no longer afford to experiment with your health, that is if you ever expect to get well again. We, therefore, urge every sick man and woman to get a bottle of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters this very day, and let it make you strong and hearty again. It restores the stomach to its normal condition, and cures flatulency, heartburn, poor appetite, dyspepsia, indigestion, nausea, costiveness, cramps, liver and kidney ills or female troubles.

NEW CODE SAYS

Court Commissioners Can Perform Marriage Ceremonies, After All.

Minneapolis, May 5.—"Court commissioners are empowered to perform marriage ceremonies by the new code," declared Court Commissioner William F. Bates today in emphatic denial of the story that these officials had been stripped of this authority.

"Although the code does repeal the provision of the laws of 1897 giving the court commissioners the authority to marry people, and chapter 3555 does not name court commissioners as having the right to perform the marriage ceremony, this right is nevertheless conferred upon district judges in chambers, and section 148, chapter 6, of the new code reads: 'Court commissioners shall be men learned in the law and shall have and may exercise the judicial power of a judge of the district court at chambers.'

"The object of the statute revision commission was to condense and simplify our statute law. They accomplished their purpose, but in this instance they did so in a manner that has caused misunderstanding and misapprehension."

This interpretation of the code is also approved by Judge Daniel Fish, a member of the revision commission.

WORE WHITE STOCKINGS; DRIVEN FROM BLOCK.

Sioux City, Iowa, May 5.—The manager of the Lytle block visited Mrs. E. K. Long, a pretty clairvoyant with an office on the third floor, and told her she must move. Mrs. Long demanded to know the reason, and the manager after must hesitation, said:

"Well, the fact is, the men on the second floor object to your white stockings, and every one of them says he will move unless you do."

It seems that Mrs. Long has been wearing short skirts and white stockings regularly. There is no elevator in the building, and the men saw Mrs. Long climb the stairs, skirts in hand, twenty times a day. Finally they could not stand it longer, and appealed to the manager. Mrs. Long has agreed to move.

WAGES ARE ADJUSTED.

Pittsburg, May 5.—The differences between the United Mine Workers of the Pittsburg district and the Great Lakes Coal company at Kaylor, Pa., have been satisfactorily adjusted and work will be at once resumed. Candidates Explain Positions in Peculiar Shrievalty Situation.

Sheriff Bates Is Not Ashamed of His Part In Matter.

The publication in yesterday's Herald of an article giving inside facts concerning the peculiar situation in the shrievalty contest in St. Louis county has resulted in the publication of the Armstead letter and Bates agreement.

While the letter writen to Jack Miles is not looked upon as being very injurious to Mr. Armstead, it is agreed that it was injudicious, particularly that part of the letter referring to the friendship of the secret societies, of which he is a member, and to the part he expects two prominent labor leaders, James Walsh of the Licensed Tugmen's association and President Shartell of the Federated Trades assembly, to play in the campaign.

The agreement existing between Sheriff Bates and Mr. Miles, whereby the latter received $500 for filing for the nomination, is regarded more seriously, and has given rise to a discussion among local politicians as to whether or not Sheriff Bates will not be liable under the corrupt practices law. Under the provisions of that law no candidate for sheriff in this county can spend more than $477 this year in trying to be elected to the office. The amount is based upon the vote at the previous election.

Mr. Bates is understood to claim that he was not a candidate at the time the $500 was paid over, and says that, in the opinion of attorneys, he is not liable under the law because of this fact.

The agreement reads as follows:

Duluth, Minn., Mch. 30, 1906.

In return for $500, one hundred of which has been paid and $400 which is to be paid on or before the last day of filing, I agree to file for the office of sheriff of St. Louis Co. before the coming election, and to withdraw from the fight on or before the last day of filing. I do this to keep out any opposition to Mr. Bates and in order to split up the vote if any other candidate should get into the field.

(Signed) J. R. R. MILES.
(Signed) WM. J. BATES.

Regarding his part in the matter, Mr. Armstead says:

"The much talked of letter has been printed and what does it amount to when considered in the light in which it was written? It was a confidential communication to another man I was willing to help if he would get into the fight for the nomination, and in it I tried to show him I was not staying out of the fight hrough fear of a defeat but for business reasons. The reference to fraternal societies and to friends in the ranks of organized labor was somewhat injudicious but that is all. There is no suggestion in it that an honorable man could not make and do it conscientiously. It was simply a voluntary offer of assistance to Miles. If there is a thought in it that is suggestive of anything dishonorable, I confess I am too dense to see it. The whole matter is just this: A politician has been caught paying a man to help him win a fight he ought to have been willing to make on an even basis and when he learns that the proof of his action is in the hands of his opponent he yells "You're another," and publishes a confidential letter as his justification for his own questionable action. I am glad the letter has been printed, the voters can now judge for themselves as to who has been playing dirty politics. Personally I am satisfied with the situation.

"The regrettable thing in the whole matter is that Miles should be criticised as he is. I have no criticism to make of him. He did not give my letter to any one. He tells me the letter was taken from his desk during his absence from the office. I think he was justified in taking the money offered him by Bates, for the reason that friends of Bates were saying, and presumably quoting Bates, that Miles could be induced to run for a few hundred dollars, and thereby cut up the city vote to Bates' advantage. After hearing this several times, and after having been approached five different times with a money proposition to run, Miles took the money, signed a contract and filed for the nomination. Since then, I am told, Bates has offered Miles $1,000 for the return of the contract, which Miles has refused. I think this would indicate that Miles was not in it for the money he could get, but rather to show up Bates."

"I did nothing but what I believe I had a perfect right to do—to spend my own money," said Sheriff W. J. Bates, this morning, with reference to the agreement between himself and John R. Miles, which was to aid Mr. Bates to secure an election

"I freely admit that the move was not a wise one, as it has turned out, but I have done nothing that I am ashamed of, or irregular in any way. I have the written opinions of two of the city's prominent attorneys, which state that my action was entirely regular.

"I regret now that I entered into the agreement, or had anything to do with Miles, and would not do it again. It was a case of trusting Miles and of being sold out.

"When the agreement was made between Miles and myself I had not filed my affidavit of nomination. The agreement was signed March 30 last, and I filed April 18.

"I have known for some time that Miles had given the agreement to Armstead, and that the latter intended using it for campaign purposes, also, as he supposed, to hold a club over me if I should be successful in the nomination and election, but I have not worried on that score. Of course I should have preferred that the matter had not been given the publicity that it has, as it was a private transaction between myself and Miles, but now that it is out I think it is just as well so. One thing is certain I have nobody to come back at me, or any explanations to make.

"I had every reason to believe that Miles was acting on the square with me, but I find I was deceived. Any statement that I offered him $1,000 to get the agreement back is untrue. I would not give him a cent for it."

A SPLENDID INDORSEMENT.

Medical Journal's Opinion of Blanchard's Eczema Lotion.

From the Chicago Journal of Health: "The proprietary medicine that we consider worthy of editorial mention is Blanchard's Eczema Lotion, which has unquestionably proved its right to rank as a specific of the highest character. This wonderfully successful remedy is compounded by Prof. Joseph Blanchard, skin specialist of Minneapolis, Minn., and is a genuine specific for eczema, being that one proprietary remedy in a thousand that this publication can consistently indorse in its editorial columns. We consider it not only a clearly indicated duty, but likewise a pleasure to single out Blanchard's Eczema Lotion and bestow upon it the unqualified editorial indorsement of the Chicago Journal of Health."

WINCHELL WITH GREAT NORTHERN

Geologist Leaves Amalgamated Company to Go With Railroad.

Mining men in this region will be greatly interested in the announcement that Horace V. Winchell, who has for some years been chief geologist for the Amalgamated Copper company, has resigned to enter the employ of the Great Northern Railroad company on June 1 as head of the geological department. Whether it will mean any new activity on the part of Great Northern interests in connection with its iron lands is a matter that will be watched with much interest.

Speaking of his resignation Mr. Winchell said:

"It was not until recently that I arrived at a decision in connection with an offer made me by the Great Northern with which I was formerly associated as geologist with jurisdiction over the Mesaba iron-ore range mines. I came here from St. Paul eight years ago and since my advent here I have had many good offers, but, in view of the litigation between the interests of the Amalgamated and United Copper interests, I would not accept any of them, as I did not wish to leave the company in the midst of it. Now, however, the trouble is over and it is easier for me to get away.

"It was my intention to branch out as a free lance in my profession, but the offer made me by the Great Northern is such a good one that I have decided to accept it."

Mr. Winchell was assistant geologist for Minnesota several years, and is recognized as one of the foremost men in the country in his line of work.

Dr. Smith to Lecture.

Rev. Samuel G. Smith, D D. of the People's church, St. Paul, will be in West Duluth, Tuesday of next week and will speak at the Plymouth Congregational church, afternoon and evening. Dr. Smith is a man of a good deal of influence within and without the state, a student of the application of Christianity to modern problems, a lecturer upon sociological questions at the State University.

"The King's Daughters," a dramatic cantata, will be presented at the Lyceum, Thursday evening, May 17, for the benefit of the First Christian church. The production will be under the direction of Mrs. G. E. Budd, and sixty people will take part.

The company fairly bristles with talent, and those who will appear include, beside Mrs. Budd, Louis Dworschak, Agnes Johnson, and Mr. Myhre, who will enact the role of the king. There will be no end of pretty musical numbers, and the entertainment will conclude with a beautiful tableaux, "Rock of Ages."

BISBEE STOCKS SHOW STRENGTH

All Higher and Calumet & Pittsburg Sells at $29.

The Bisbee shares, particularly Calumet & Pittsburg, occupied the center of the stage in the copper stock market today, from a local point of view. All of them were stronger and Calumet & Pittsburg sold as high as $29 in Duluth and Chicago, closing at $29 bid.

Junction sold at $26 and closed at $26 bid; Lake Superior & Pittsburg at $34.50 and closed at $34.75 bid and $35 asked; Pittsburg & Duluth at $19.37½ and closed at $19.50 bid and $20 asked and Dennarizona at $15.50 and closed at $15 bid. The listed stocks were fairly steady and closed about unchanged. North Butte opened at $87, which was the high price of the day, and declined to $86.25, closing at $86.25 bid and $86.75 asked. Amalgamated opened at $102, declined to $101.37½ and rallied to $102.87½, closing at $102.50 bid and $102.75 asked.

Anaconda opened at $244, declined to $237.50 and rallied to $242. The closing price was $241.75 bid. United Copper was inactive and closed at $59.50 bid and $60.50 asked. Calumet & Arizona opened at $112 and closed at $110 bid. Butte Coalition closed at $32 bid and $32.50 asked.

Black Mountain was inactive and closed at $10.25 bid; Keweenaw at $11 bid; Warren sold at $16 and closed at $16 bid; Copper Queen of Idaho sold at $2 and closed at $1.75 bid and $2.25 asked. Ophir Tunnel was inactive and closed at 22 cents asked. There were no bids.

Stockholders of the Calumet & Cochise Development company have been given notice that they have a dividend of 47½ cents a share coming on the stock. This stock cost them $10 a share a few years ago and this is the only money they have ever received on it and the last they will get, for the company has wound up its affairs. The property it once had and lost is no wpart of that owned by the Warren Realty & Development company.

Golden Rule Celebrates.

The Golden Rule, Duluth's popular new Department Store, is celebrating its first anniversary, having just closed a most satisfactory year with a volume of business to its credit that augurs well for its future success. The sale announced in yesterday's Herald brought out crowds of shoppers today, the store being filled all day.

The management of the Golden Rule is both progressive and aggressive, and in the short space of twelve months has won a place for the store among the successful business houses of Duluth.

RANGE TOWNS GET RECTOR

Rev. Albert Carswell to Take Charge of Two Churches.

Bishop Morrison announces that the Rev. Albert Carswell, rector of the parish of Randolph, Vt., has accepted charge of St. Paul's Episcopal church at Virginia and St. John's church at Eveleth and will enter upon his duties tomorrow.

Rev. Mr. Carswell is a graduate in law and arts from Trinity college at Toronto and has taken a post-graduate course at the General Theological seminary of New York. He has had experience in Eastern and Western parishes, having been a rector in the states of Montana and Vermont. He is a single man, between 35 and 40 years of age, and is said to have marked ability as a preacher and parish administrator.

Business Men to Meet.

The East Fourth street business men, who have been complaining that the outlet to the Rice Lake road from Seventh avenue east has been closed after being used as a public highway for over twenty years, will have a mass meeting Monday evening at 7:30 o'clock, to discuss the matter, with a view of taking some action for having the road reopened. The meeting will be held at A. J. Harker's, 407 East Fourth street.

Will Give Organ Recital.

Prof. Horace W. Reyner of Montreal, who is visiting in the city and who is to preside at the organ at the First Methodist church tomorrow, will give an organ recital Monday evening at the church and will give a fine program. It will be open to all, no admission being charged, although a collection will be taken.

SMOKED OUT!

"We have not found it necessary to adopt methods employed by some in warning you against THIS particular cheat or THAT specific fake, or the advantage of some system, in the hope of attracting your attention from some greater shortcomings—"

—From the "Big Duluth" Advertisement in the Sunday News Tribune of April 29th, 1906.

We might have taken the text for tonight's talk on the Rebate Question from yesterday's message of President Roosevelt on the secret reductions made by railroads to the Standard Oil Co. However, the above paragraph from the advertisement of one of our contemporaries will serve as well. It is interesting because after we have written on this subject for seven weeks, this is the first public sign that our Saturday Night Ads are being read and digested by other stores, while every clerk in the city will tell you that they are the talk of the town, especially among the merchants.

We would have preferred a less vacant answer, one that would really say something in support of the Two-Price System and Rebate-giving, still prevalent in so many stores, as this is the only "particular cheat" and "specific fake" which we have attacked. We attack it because we, and for that matter everybody else in the country, (including the Rebaters) consider the One-Price-To-All System absolutely necessary to conduct business honestly and to sell the best goods obtainable at fair prices.

We see no reason why the liberal people of Duluth should be obliged to pay more for their clothing and other things than is paid in any city of the land. We blame the antiquated Rebate-giving for the fact that at most of the stores they always did and still do. This is a serious accusation which permits of no fiddle-faddle replies. If we are wrong, say so, and we'll adopt the Rebate System. If the Rebate System has a foot to stand on, why not solicit trade that way publicly, instead of secretly as is now done?

The people are awake and interested. We have no ill will against any merchant in dragging this skeleton out of the closet, but it can only be abolished with the help of the public. Serious contributions upon this subject from merchants, clerks and others, either in their own advertising columns or in this space (at our expense) are cordially invited.

HAPPENINGS IN THE DAKOTAS

Dead Body of Bowbells Man Found in His Wagon Box.

NORTH DAKOTA.

Bowbells—Drunkenness is given as the cause of the death of Fred Mendel while he was on his way from town to his home thirteen miles north. His team arrived home shortly after midnight and upon investigation it was found that he was dead in the wagon. It was at first thought he had been the victim of drugs. Drs. Limburg and Lenfest, A. R. Foster and Marshal Day drove to the home yesterday afternoon and a coroner's inquest was held. The dead man's stomach was found to contain a large amount of whisky, but no sign of any other dope or drugs. He had a wife and five children.

Minot—In addition to beginning suit against her husband for divorce, Mrs. W. M. Hubler has started an action for alienation of her husband's affections against Mrs. Edythe A. Holmes, who has been employed in Dr. Hubler's office. Only the summons in the suit has as yet been filed, and it is not known what damages will be asked.

Miss Holmes was much agitated when the summons was served upon her, and soon afterwards packed her trunk and left for Barnesville, Minn., saying she intended to stay there a few weeks with friends.

Mrs. Hubler has traveled all the way from Berlin, Germany, for the purpose of securing a separation from her husband.

Carpio—The 16-year-old son of John Hoerter, living near here, was killed instantly while working in the field. He was seeding and tried to move his wagon down an incline, stumbled and the wagon wheels ran over his head crushing it.

Ellendale—Sheriff Drew brought here John Bouvien, a farmer, who was adjudged insane and committed to the Jamestown asylum. This is Bouvien's second attack. Some years ago he became insane, but recovered.

Merricourt—Frank E. Houghton was arrested on the charge of stealing goods from a local store. He was bound over to the district court on the charge of larceny.

SOUTH DAKOTA.

Ipswich—Mangled to such an extent that her heart was laid bare, and failing back dead when her father reached her side, was the sad fate of Catherine Eisenbeisz, the 16-year-old daughter of Joseph Eisenbeisz, a farmer living in the extreme western part of Edmunds county.

No one knows how the accident happened, as there was no eyewitness of the tragedy. The father was engaged in drilling wheat in a field, and his daughter was following him with another team which was hitched to a harrow.

Glancing back, he was surprised to see his daughter's team running away, having broken loose from the harrow. At some little distance his daughter was kneeling on the ground, motioning with her hand to him. When he reached her she fell back dead. An examination of the body disclosed a large, deep wound in the girl's left side which had laid bare the heart and other organs.

Wilmot—A dog's bite has caused no end of trouble and excitement here. The dog bit another, then attacked Otto Draves, manager of the Dakota Central Telephone company, after which it was promptly killed. The other dog, however, rounded up a companion, and after chewing it a few minutes, sought bigger game among the cattle, several of which were bitten. Now hydrophobia has developed, and a wholesale slaughter of cattle and dogs has been carried on in an effort to stamp it out. Draves has decided to go to Chicago to take the Pasteur treatment.

Pierre—Thomas Engle, a young man employed in the Richardson railroad camp, about five miles up Bad river from Fort Pierre, was drowned while attempting to ford the stream on a pony. The current carried the animal off its feet and threw the young man into the water. The body has not yet been recovered.

Aberdeen—A wreck occurred on the Great Northern three miles west of Rutland, N. D., at 9:30 Thursday night. The mail and baggage cars were derailed, and Mail Clerk Boucher and Weighing Clerk McLeod were badly shaken up. No passengers were injured. The wreck was caused by the engine plunging through a herd of cattle, killing three. About 600 feet of track was torn up by the derailed cars. A wrecking train was sent from Rutland, the train reaching Evansville, Minn., only half an hour late.

LATE DOINGS IN MICHIGAN

Escanaba Woman Departs on Train and Leaves Her Baby.

Menominee—An Escanaba woman became so engrossed in business matters and the care of many parcels that when she boarded a train here on her way home she forgot her baby and left it in the station seat. When a mile north of Menominee she suddenly remembered the babe, and the train was stopped and backed to the station and the little one recovered.

Ole Johnson, a respected citizen of Carney, 62 years of age, was arraigned in a Menominee court today on a charge of murder, having been brought down late last night.

The alleged victim is Emil Johnson, who was working for the accused on his farm near Carney. The crime is said to have been committed on March 25, 1901. Ole Johnson is well educated in his native Norwegian, and has been well thought of by his neighbors. The crime has always remained a mystery, and the details are still unknown. Johnson was placed under $4,000 bail and returned to jail.

Menominee witnessed an amusing spectacle last night when a newly married couple, who had fled from irate parents to the Gretna Green in this city started on their homeward journey.

A large crowd of small boys and girls secured tin pans and organized an impromptu charivari and escorted them to the train, while whole streets of citizens gathered to see the fun. The bridegroom tried to buy off the children, but they secured his money and promptly resumed their serenade.

Jennie Hall, a 16-year-old girl of this city, ran away from home yesterday to see the world. She packed her belongings and fled on a steamer to Escanaba, where she fell into the hands of the police and was brought back home last night.

Homer Williams, residing near this city, captured two lake sturgeon of 140 and 162 pounds weight.

Houghton—Thursday morning at 5 o'clock the first fatal accident that has happened at the Baltic mine for some time occurred. Peter Delaurenti, a miner in the employ of the mining company at this place, was instantly killed by falling a distance of four levels or about 400 feet, in Shaft No. 5. The remains of the man were in a badly mutilated state when picked up.

L'Anse—On the 27th of April Mrs. Marla Jackson of L'Anse was 100 years old. The occasion was celebrated by a small gathering at her home on the Bay Shore road. The guests were the children, the great grand children and the great-great-grand children of this remarkable old lady. Despite her great age Mrs. Jackson is hale and hearty to a remarkable degree and moves about the house without help of any kind. Mrs. Jackson is the mother of seventeen children, ten of whom are living. One in London, Eng., one in Douglas City, Alaska, one in Mt. Clemens, two in Hancock, one in Houghton and four in L'Anse. She has thirty-eight grand children, forty-eight great grand children and seven great-great-grand children.

CLEVELAND'S NOMINOR IS DYING OF GANGRENE.

Buffalo, N. Y., May 5.—Daniel L. Lockwood, a member of the state lunacy commission, former congressman and the man who placed Grover Cleveland in nomination for mayor of Buffalo, governor of New York and president, is dying. He has been ill for six months. Gangrene set in two weeks ago and his left leg was amputated at the knee. His physicians said last night that he was slowly sinking and there was no hope for him.

LABORER IS KILLED

John Louick Meets Death Under Heavy Pile of Lime.

Accident Happens in Stock House of Blast Furnace.

John Louick, a laborer at the blast furnace, was instantly killed this morning by a large amount of lime falling on him and crushing him to death. Louick was in the stock house shoveling lime from a pile into a lime buggy and while so engaged, a large portion of the lime from the top of the pile, was caused somehow to slip and it piled down on him burying him under a pile of it.

His head was crushed, some of the bones in his back broken and his right leg fractured. He was taken out immediately, but was dead. The body was sent to Filiatrault's morgue, where it is being prepared for burial.

No arrangements have yet been made, as the man has no relatives in this country. He is unmarried, but has a father and mother in Finland, where he was born. He was about 28 years of age.

A man who was working with him at the time was slightly knocked out by the fall of lime, but not enough to prevent him returning to work as soon as his nerves were straightened out.

FORMER LOCAL CHINAMAN

Now a Member of Chinese Imperial Commission En Tour.

Chan W. Hoey, formerly running a Chinese laundry in West Duluth, is now an attache of the Chinese imperial commission recently sent here from China, studying methods. With typical stoical persistence Hoey pursued his way in this country and secured the education which he had been seeking. He was particularly friendly toward a West Duluth real estate man, who desires that his name be not used. A few days ago this West Duluth man received a letter from his Chinese friend, dated at Berlin, Germany, the Chinese commission being on a tour of the principal cities of the world.

The West Duluth man told The Herald about his first acquaintance with the young Chinaman. In the early '90s this young Chinaman, who was then in the laundry business in West Duluth, manifested an ambition to get to the front by an investment in West Duluth real estate. In this desire he was aided by the teller of the story, and thus the acquaintance began. The hopes based on this investment proved elusive, and the young Celestial drifted away from Duluth, finally reaching Boston, where he acquired a good English education. He took up the study of electricity and became an expert electrical engineer, practicing his profession in different cities of New York state.

Last year the West Duluth man met his former client in Chicago, where he was in charge of the private electrical system of one of the largest and finest chop suey houses in the city. The West Duluthian noted how thoroughly the once "Heathen Chinee" had become Americanized, and had developed into a man of good address and gentlemanly bearing.

A day or two ago, the real estate man received a letter from his Mongolian friend, dated at Berlin, Germany, telling of his connection with the Imperial commission which visited this country in January. In the letter the writer said that they had at the time he wrote, already visited England and France and intended going to Denmark, Vienna and Rome, and then take a steamer from Naples for Hongkong.

Mr. Hoey also gave in this letter, some of his impressions of the cities he had visited. He said that in Berlin and Paris, the streets are very wide and clean, but that Sunday is not observed as strictly as in "your country." He notes that it is a common custom for men and women to drink and smoke together in public houses, but adds that he has never seen a drunken man or woman on the streets of Berlin or Paris as he has sometimes seen in this country.

The penmanship and spelling of this letter is much better than that of the average high school student, and there is not much fault to find with its composition and style. The West Duluth man expressed his decided conviction that the Chinese are not by any means the worst class of immigrants that come to these shores.

MESABA SOUTHERN ROAD

To Make Important Extensions of Its Line This Summer.

VIRGINIA, Minn., May 5.—(Special to The Herald.)—The Mesaba Southern railway, owned by the Northern Lumber company of Cloquet, will make important extensions of its line the present summer. One branch will leave the present road near the new headquarters camp four miles north of the city, and will extend into a body of timber containing about 15,000,000 feet, directly north of town, the new line to cross the Duluth, Rainy Lake & Winnipeg railway at a point a mile and three-quarters north of Virginia. The other branch will run from the old headquarters camp west into 59-15, where the company owns a body containing 60,000,000 feet of timber in the district north of Buhl.

Ground was broken this week for a second addition to the Fay hotel. The new addition will join the present structure on the south and will be 24x82 feet in size and three stories high. It will contain twenty-four guest chambers, bringing the total number up to eighty, and will make the Fay the largest hotel building north of Duluth.

A two-story addition 35x50 feet in size is to be erected this season to the hotel owned by the Duluth Brewing & Malting company and operated by J. J. Sullivan as the New England Cafe. Excavations for the foundation have been started.

A majority of the merchants of the city have again resumed the practice of closing their stores at 8 o'clock evenings.

Bishop Morrison of Duluth is in the city and will meet the ladies of the parish at the home of Mrs. James Lavigletta this afternoon at 3 o'clock and the gentlemen at the residence of Dr. J. H. Crowe at 5 o'clock.

J. E. Carroll, city engineer of Crookston, was in town this week. He intends to apply for the position of engineer to look after the paving of Chestnut street.

E. Z. Griggs, son Harold, daughter Nellie and Miss Sarah Saxon returned yesterday from Tarpon Springs, Fla., where they spent the winter.

Mrs. A. E. Bickford, who has been ill at St. Mary's hospital in Duluth for the past two weeks, has sufficiently recovered to leave the institution. She is now visiting friends in Superior.

Frank Hughes departed yesterday for Rochester, Minn., to be present while his brother, Henry, of Grand Rapids, is operated on for appendicitis.

C. J. Crandall, the Duluth attorney, who was in town this week, is considering the matter of locating in Virginia.

A tennis club has been organized for the season and the grounds have been placed in condition for games.

THE BALTIC MINE

Of the Rhodes Mining Company Making Record for Wetness.

Virginia, Minn., May 5.—(Special to The Herald.)—The Baltic mine of the Rhodes Mining company near Sparta is making a record as a wet one. Two vertical shafts are being sunk on the property 100 feet apart and in these shafts are installed six No. 9 Cameron pumps and three Prescott sinkers and all are kept busy to the limit, having a combined capacity of 3,000 gallons per minute. On account of the great flow of water, progress in sinking is necessarily very slow, but it is hoped to place the property in the shipping list the present season.

On the other hand the Brunt property being opened up by the same company near Mountain Iron is particularly dry and work is proceeding nicely. The new 8x18 vertical shaft is down to a depth of 120 feet and the engine house and other buildings are nearly completed. It is expected to ship 100,000 tons from this property the present year.

J. P. Carey of Eveleth has received the appointment to look after the state mining leases in the Virginia district this summer. He will move his family here from Eveleth.

James Tretheway and Frank Bond, employes of the Cole & McDonald Exploration company, have returned to the city after spending the winter drilling on the Cuyuna range. John Handy, who is looking after the work of Cole & McDonald in the Bovey district, spent Sunday in town.

Archie McDougall, in charge of the Syracuse, Bangor and Mohawk mines of Pickands, Mather & Co., was in town on business this week.

C. T. Fairbairn is on the Marquette range looking after the mining properties of the Republic Iron & Steel company.

BATTLESHIPS IN RACE.

Four New Terrors of the Sea Make Fast Time.

New York, May 5.—When the battleships Maine, Missouri, Kearsarge and Kentucky, the first squadron, first division of the North Atlantic fleet, under command of Rear Admiral Evans, left Guantanamo, at 3 p. m. last Saturday, it was known in advance that the Maine and the Missouri would race to New York under natural and forced draft, and nearly every dollar the men had was wagered on the result. The Kentucky and the Kearsarge were also to test their racing powers, and nearly all the money aboard those ships was put up in bets. At 8 a. m. Sunday the signal for the start was made from the Maine, and for two hours the battleships steamed under ordinary draft, the Maine finally 1,200 yards in the lead. From 10 a. m. until 2 p. m. the ships raced under forced draft, and at 12:30 p. m. the Missouri overtook the Maine and led her by 1,500 yards when the test under forced draft was ended.

The pressure of steam generated on the battleships was unusual, and when the squadron reached port, late yesterday, the ochre funnels were black with soot and burned paint. The entire fleet admit that the Missouri will probably carry the honors for target practice and speed tests.

According to the best reports obtainable, the Missouri, commanded by Capt. E. C. Pendleton, has the highest average in great gun and torpedo practice, and unless the Ohio's average exceeds that of the Missouri, the latter ship will capture the trophy now held by the Oregon. Her 12-inch gun record is 37 hits in 37 shots, and she also has a record of 12 hits in 12 shots with her torpedoes.

MIRACLE OF SURGERY.

New York, May 5.—Little Vincenza Cefolor, curly haired and rosy-cheeked, stood last night on the platform in the hall of the Academy of Medicine before a hundred physicians and surgeons as a living example of a miracle of surgery. Vincenza was 13 years old last month.

Last November, while playing with a revolver in her home, the weapon was discharged. The bullet entered the abdomen, three inches above the navel and two inches to the left of the middle of the abdomen, passing clean through the left lobe of the liver, traversing a small opening between the stomach and a coil of intestines back of the liver and puncturing a hole as big as a 10-cent piece in the spinal cord, finally lodging in the muscles of the back, two inches to the right of the spine.

The injury was somewhat similar to the wound from which President McKinley died, and almost identical with that which caused the death of Marshall Field, Jr. That the child did not die is attributed to the prompt treatment she received. She now looks healthy and can walk, though her feet drag some.

A portion of the spinal vertebrae was removed and the torn edges of the spinal cord were sewed together.

Bright's Disease Cured

DIVISION OF THE OWNERS

Choice of Payement Apparently Lies Between Ceder and Creosote.

Question Will be Decided at Meeting of Those Interested.

Apparently the choice of a pavement for Second street lies between cedar blocks as the least expensive, and creosote blocks as the most expensive pavement.

Some of the property owners favor getting as inexpensive a pavement as possible. Many of them objected to the improvement in the first place, and they are now anxious to have it cost as little as possible.

There is another faction that is anxious to make a thorough job of it, and lay the best pavement they can secure.

Quite a number favor tar macadam, but there is also considerable opposition from those who believe it to be too slippery.

The question will be decided at a meeting of the property owners, which will be held in the city council chamber on Monday afternoon, at 2 o'clock.

The bids, which were opened yesterday morning, have been checked over, and the following are the lowest bids on the different kinds of pavement:

Cedar blocks, Sang & Preston..$56,816
Tar macadam, Geo. R. King..$61,247
Asphalt, Barber Asphalt Co...$79,638
Creosote blocks, P. McDonnell..$85,766

For the convenience of the property owners, in figuring out the comparative cost of the pavements, the following table, showing the cost per front foot, is given:

Cedar blocks .....$5.46 per foot
Tar macadam .....$5.88 per foot
Asphalt.....$7.75 per foot
Creosote blocks.....$8.24 per foot

From this table, it will be an easy matter for each property owner to figure out his assessment, by simply multiplying by the width of his lot.

GRAND JURY FINISHES WORK

Steve Bukovich Indicted for Manslaughter in the First Degree.

The grand jury completed its work for the term with the return of two more indictments yesterday afternoon.

Steve Bukovich, who is accused of killing his brother, Marco Bukovich, in a fight at Hibbing recently, was indicted for manslaughter in the first degree. Bukovich shot his brother and was himself seriously wounded in the side by a knife. He was in the hospital for some days. When a grand jury believes that an assault was made in the heat of passion and was not premeditated the manslaughter degree is permissible.

John Johnson, of Ely, charged with holding up another man for a small amount of money, was indicted for robbery in the third degree.

After the grand jury was discharged County Attorney McClintock moved the court for the discharge from custody of Bert Williams, the colored man who has been held in jail since Feb. 13 last, awaiting action by the grand jury. Williams is accused of burning the hats of Rose Eckels, his mistress, and with smearing blueberry jam over her raiment. After his arrest the Eckels woman was summoned to appear before the grand jury, but she left the city and the authorities have been unable to apprehend her. The woman repented of her action in having Williams arrested and it is believed that she got out of Duluth with the purpose of preventing any evidence against him. Williams made application after the March term opened for a discharge, but the court denied the application and he was held another month to give the authorities another opportunity of locating the woman. She is believed to be in Chicago.

No true bill was returned against Peter Shatka, the Eveleth policeman who was charged with taking $10 from a prisoner and keeping it.

Several indicted persons were to appear this afternoon for arraignment and to plead.

DULUTH IS FORTUNATE

White Sox Well Treated in Schedule of New League.

Home on Holidays and at Winnipeg on Empire Day.

With home games on July 4, Decoration day, and Labor day, and with two games in Winnipeg on Empire day, May 24, Duluth has been exceptionally well treated in the schedule of the Copper Country and Northern baseball league.

Duluth has sixty home games, opening here on May 28 with Fargo, and remaining home until June 13.

Calumet has the greatest number of home games, with sixty-six. This is owing to the fact that many of those games which would be played in Lake Linden are transferred to Calumet.

Duluth and Winnipeg have an equal number of home games, and the other teams a few less.

The schedule has not yet been finally adopted, but it is referred to the board of directors for their approval. Some minor changes may be made, but it is understood that it generally meets with the approval of the clubs, and it will probably be allowed to stand with but few changes.

The schedule committee has made a special effort to avoid long jumps, and to keep the transportation expenses as low as possible.

The following is a copy of the schedule of games for each team at home:

RAILROADS

WILL BUILD TO BORDER

Great Northern a Competitor of Rainy Lake Road.

Lake Strike Helps the Railroad Construction Contractors.

According to a report from International Falls, Minn., the Great Northern road will have trains operating into the town before the completion of the Duluth, Rainy Lake & Winnipeg line. W. F. Brooks, vice president of the Koochiching company, says he has assurance from the officials of the Great Northern that their extension will be rushed as fast as possible, and that it will be completed before the advent of the Duluth, Rainy Lake & Winnipeg.

The disagreement between the Rainy Lake road and the Koochiching company is explained by Mr. Brooks, who says that the determination of the railroad company to cross the river at Pitcher's Point instead of International Falls, resulted from the refusal of the latter to accept the proposition of the Bridge & Terminal company, which practicaly is the same as the Koochiching company. The proposition was for the bridge company to turn over its charter to the railroads entering International Falls, they to operate under it on an equal footing.

Brooks claims that President Cook of the Rainy Lake road objected to this arrangement, insisting that as his road was to be the first one there it should have exclusive rights to the charter. The matter is not yet a closed incident, but negotiations are still in progress, and may result in a satisfactory agreement which will result in a change in the present plans of the Rainy Lake road.

HELPS THE CONTRACTORS.

Lake Strike Means More Men for Railroad Construction Work.

The lake strike, while injuring the railroads operating between Duluth and the iron ranges in one way, is helping them in another. Because no boats are running the ore trains will be taken temporarily out of service, unless the strike situation improves very shortly, and this will throw hundreds of men on the three roads and at the Duluth, Superior and Two Harbors docks out of employment and cut into the earnings of the roads themselves to a serious extent. Many have already been released.

Throwing this number of men out of employment on the docks, at the mines and in the train service is proving of benefit to the contractors having in charge new railroad construction and repair work by supplying them with all the labor required, where, up to the day the strike was called, there was a big shortage in the labor supply, and the contractors on the range lines were worried over the outlook.

Now the conditions have changed. The Iron Range road has had standing orders for men for extra gangs and construction crews all spring, but these crews are pretty well filled up now, and few, if any orders for men are on the books of local employment agents. Much the same is true of the Missabe and Great Northern range lines. When the men are thrown out of work as a result of the strike they look for another job, and take the one that is the most convenient, which in this case happens to be along the railroad. The wages amount to $2 a day, and while the work is not so pleasant as that to which this class of men has been accustomed, it is a good deal better than nothing, and is gladly accepted in most cases.

Elsewhere in the Northwest there is still a big shortage of labor. A report from Minneapolis says that 20,000 men are wanted by Minneapolis employment agencies. According to this report, fully 8,000 men are wanted to work on railway extensions in Montana, while Dakota is calling for 2,000 men for railway work. The demand is almost equally heavy in other states of the Northwest and in Canada. The National Employment Co. of Duluth yesterday received an order for a large crew of men to work on the extension of the Great Northern from North Dakota into Canada.

FOURTH LINE TO COAST.

Soo Trains Will Be Run Over Harriman Roads to Seattle.

Minneapolis, May 5.—Intervention of the Harriman interests may result in making the Soo practically another and fourth trans-continental line from Minneapolis to Seattle, says the Journal. It is prophesized that when the Soo line reaches Spokane, this summer, it will immediately be offered the Harriman rails for its trains from Spokane to Seattle. Thus the system will have a direct route to Seattle from Minneapolis.

With the Hill interests beaten in time and distance from Minneapolis to Spokane, it is prophesied that Harriman will not be slow to offer his assistance to the Canadian Pacific protege, and a very short route to Seattle from Spokane.

RECEIVERS' CERTIFICATES.

Those of the Pere Marquette Are Approved by Judge Lurlon.

Cincinnati, May 5.—The application of Judson Harmon, receiver of the Pere Marquette Railroad company, for an order permitting the issuance of receivers' certificates to raise money to pay Michigan taxes levied against the Pere Marquette railroad, under the law that was recently sustained by the supreme court of the United States, was approved by Judge Lurten of the United States court, yesterday. Counsel for all parties were present.

The order made by Judge Lurton authorized the issuance of the certificates, and made them a first lien on all Pere Marquette property in Michigan. It was stated that all parties had satisfied themselves that the issuance of the certificates was necessary, and that there was no other alternative. The certificates, as authorized, will bear 5½ per cent interest, payable quarterly, and the principal will be payable every six months, beginning next February. It is stated that about half of the certificates will be taken by Michigan banks and the other half by the New York banks.

ROBBED AND BURNED.

Postoffice Cash at La Crescent Taken and Building Destroyed.

La Crosse, Wis., May 5.—The postoffice building at La Crescent, Minn., was destroyed by a fire, which is thought to have followed a robbery, early yesterday. The loss to the building was about $1,000, partly covered by insurance. Search in the ruins developed the fact that a tin box which had contained about $20 in money and stamps, had been broken open and that the cash was missing. This leads to the belief that the building was robbed and then set afire to cover up the traces.

NORMAL SCHOOL NOTES

The Juniors had charge of the program in chapel this week. Monday, President Bohannon read: Tuesday, Rev. Mr. Rice of the First Methodist Episcopal church gave a talk on "Character." He read one of Lowell's poems and based his talk on the essentials of character, as exemplified in the poem. The address was one of the best that has been given at the normal and it was enjoyed and appreciated by all. Wednesday morning, the Third and Fourth grades of the training school sang "A Rose Song," by Schubert. Rev. Charles Fox Davis of the Lester Park Methodist church addressed the scholars Thursday morning. His talk was on the subject "The Value of Hard Work." He spoke briefly on the value of application, while in school, and all the hours of labor during the school days would bring their profit after the school was left behind. Friday morning Mr. Bohannon read one of Ruth McEnery Stuart's quaint negro stories. Mr. Bohanon has read several of these stories before, and the scholars always enjoy hearing them.

The Glee club held its weekly practice in the music room Friday afternoon. The club decided to give a brake ride party next Friday afternoon. The girls will have an informal luncheon at the school at 1 o'clock and the ride around the boulevard will follow during the afternoon.

The first year class is planning a party for next Friday afternoon. At the class meeting held Friday, committees were appointed, who will have charge of the arrangements for the party.

• • •

The music for commencement arrived this week and the chorus has been practicing on it, under the direction of Miss Mason, the musical director.

• • •

The catalogue for the normal school for the year 1906-1907 is in the hands of the printer and will be ready for distribution next week.

• • •

The Seniors are busy planning their class-day exercises. School closes June 8, and the class day exercises will probably be given on June 7. At the class meeting it was decided to have the class pictures taken at Zweifel's studio.

Work on the dormitory is progressing rapidly. Two stories have been completed and the work on the roof started. It is hoped that the building will be completed by July 1.

advice and on his assurance that his report would present the case fairly. It turned out that so far as Kansas was concerned that the state authorities abandoned their attack.

"One does not care to bandy words with the president of the United States. It is not easy to differentiate between Mr. Roosevelt the president, and Mr. Roosevelt the individual. He has given of his advice most generously on every subject, from the size of our families to the mistakes of federal judges, and some error is inevitable now and then to the most conservative man under such circumstances.

"We say flatly that any assertion that the Standard Oil company has been or is now knowingly engaged in practices which are unlawful is alike untruthful and unjust.

"The commissioner's report upon which the president's message is based, opens with the statement that the manufacture of refined oil in this country is about 26,000,000 barrels annually. It is important, but it would nevertheless have been fair for him to have stated that over 15,000,000 barrels of this annual manufacture is exported, and with its manufacture, or the price, the American public is not concerned.

"He next calls attention to the fact that the Standard Oil refineries are located at centers of distribution, while the independent refineries are usually in the crude oil fields. This fact if borne steadily in mind will answer very many of the criticisms which he later indulges in. He charges that this location of refineries and the natural advantages following it were obtained by means of unfair competitive methods, but beyond this mere assertion does not go into a history or explanation of these alleged unfair methods at all. He says that 'the development of the pipe line system by the Standard Oil company was the result of special agreement with the railroad companies.' What he can mean is past our comprehension. As a matter of fact the development of the pipe line system by the Standard Oil company was in the face of violent hostility on the part of railroads which naturally were opposed to the introduction of such means of transportation. At enormous cost and in the face of steadfast railway opposition at an early date, the Standard Oil company installed the pipe line method for handling crude petroleum. The first line was extended from the Western Pennsylvania oil fields to Bergen Point on the Atlantic coast. This line diverted an enormous amount of freight from the railway companies, which fact they did not view with complacency.

Passing from this point, Comsioner Garfield takes up the question of favoritism, which he alleges has been shown by various railroad corporations to the Standard Oil company. The first specific cases of alleged discrimination to which he directs attention is in New England territory. It is charged that we enjoy a monopoly in certain parts of that section, because some of the railroads there refuse to pro-rate. The man who could be deceived by such a statement must be pretty dense. First, it is the New England roads ought to pro-rate, but refuse to do so. It must occur to some one, somewhere, that perhaps the New England roads and not the Standard Oil company are blameable. Second, a very casual inquiry would show that the New England roads are simply doing what they are forced to do by natural conditions, and that Mr. Garfield's attack, to be effective, should be directed at Long Island Sound as a means of freight communication. Obviously we have an advantage by the use of our own pipe lines from the Western oil fields to the coast, and the use of water transportation thence to New England, over any one who uses all rail transportation from Western points. But this advantage is one which it is not possible to correct by any legislation, unless it is proposed to bankrupt the railroads in order to meet water competition. Yet we are not alone in this method of transportation. Some of our competitors do the same thing, and deliver oil at the points in New England that we do by the same process.

"Mr. Garfield claims that the refusal to pro-rate on the part of the New England railroads has given the Standard Oil company control of New England territory, and enabled it to maintain exorbitant prices for kerosene. Yet while it is admitted that the New Haven road has recently begun to prorate, this alleged condition of control has not changed in any way, nor have the prices of kerosene been affected The New England roads believe they can make more money by a refusal to pro-rate, and if in so doing they are violating the proprieties, clearly they and not the Standard Oil company should be made the object of attack.

"The commissioner is peculiarly unfit for the subject of 'rebates.' The public may well take his word that he made an exhaustive examination, and yet withal he says that 'with one or two exceptions, the investigations of the bureau have as yet discovered no rebates in the technical sense on interstate business.' These exceptions were on business done wholly within the state of California, over which neither Mr. Garfield's bureau nor the interstate commerce commission have any jurisdiction. But in those cases the alleged rebates were fully explained to Mr. Garfield, and involved no turpitude whatever. It was a new business on the Pacific coast, and if it had been systematized there were overcharges, not to the Standard Oil company alone, but to every one engaged in the business.

"He says the Standard Oil company has habitually received from the railroads, and is now receiving, 'secret' rates and other unjust and illegal discriminations. It is hardly fair or manly for him to add the sentence, 'of course there may be other secret rates which the bureau has not discovered.'

"In dealing with the discriminations which are alleged to be violations of the interstate commerce law the plain answer is that if Mr. Garfield is correct, it was the duty of the interstate commerce commission to have taken action and brought not alone the Standard Oil company, but the railway companies involved, to book. As the violations in this respect do not fall within the jurisdiction of the bureau of corporations, any statement on the part of Mr. Garfield respecting this subject is gratuitous and valueless.

"Again, he has no control whatever over state rates, which by the law are put under the jurisdiction of the state authorities and over which neither the bureau of commerce nor that interstate commerce commission have any control. But, all of this aside, there have been no secret rates nor unlawful discriminations in the interest of the Standard Oil company. Take the case of rates from Whiting to East St. Louis upon which he lays so much stress. While discussing it at great length as an important 'find' he qualifies and explains it all by the statement that Whiting was a suburb of Chicago within the 'switching district' of that city and that all freight rates from Whiting had for many years been the same as those from Chicago.

"This practice had obtained for twenty years and had applied to all kinds of merchandise and to say that a rate that had been used thus freely and openly for that period by every one was a 'secret' rate is manifestly unfair. Moreover, our oil refinery is the only one at Whiting or within 100 miles of it, so that the socalled discrimination, clearly could not have worked any harm to any competitors shipping oil from Whiting or its vicinity.

"Mr. Garfield's claim that by the use of low interstate rates the Standard Oil company gained an unfair advantage is equally unfortunate. At great expense we constructed pipe lines from the Kansas and Indian Territory fields to Whiting. If our competitors did not do the same thing shall it be said that any one is unfair who does not give them the advantage of this enterprise of ours?

"It is quite true that having our oil at Whiting and desiring to transport it to points in the interior of Illinois we used the state rates. To say that a man in Ohio who had never expended a dollar for a pipe line to Whiting should be able to transport his oil to an inland town in Illinois over an all-rail line at the same rates that we enjoyed by reason of our pipe lines, must appear absurd to anyone. Are we to have no advantage because we constructed these pipe lines? Is the amount invested and the interest on that investment to count for nothing? Take two men going to Boston, one uses an eight thousand dollar automobile to go to New London, and there takes the train. Is he to have no advantage in rates from the man who leaves New York and travels all the way by rail?

"The case of a shipment from New York to Vermont of which mention is made is susceptible of like explanation.

"Respecting the use of private cars of which Mr. Garfield makes much, it is only necessary to make answer in his own words. He says that owing to the relatively slow movement of tank cars in the petroleum oil trade, the mileage allowance of rental does not appear to result in an excessive profit to the car tank owner.

"It is asserted over and over again in the report that the Standard Oil company profited by secret and unlawful freight rates. Yet in the same connection it is admitted in the report that all of these rates are covered by tariffs filed with the interstate commerce commission precisely as the law provides and therefore cannot be either secret or unlawful.

"The commissioner uses the curious phrase at one point in his report that, 'although a tariff or a rate has been filed with the (interstate) commission, in compliance with the terms of the law, none but the favored shipper may know of its existence.' As the interstate law explicitly provides that every tariff of rates so filed must be posted at every freight station and open to the inspection of every shipper, it is hard to conceive of the commissioner's temerity in making such an utterance.

"The president's message complains of 'the way in which the law is evaded by treating as state commerce what is in reality merely a part of interstate commerce, . . . although the forms of law may be complied with.' Yet this very method of making a through rate by a combination of two separate state rates has been held to be by the interstate commerce commission as lawful and proper.

"The statement that the 'Standard Oil company has largely, by unfair and unlawful methods, crushed out home competition' is fully answered by the fact that home competition has always existed, is steadily growing, and that there are now at least 125 competitive refineries in the United States.

"As to the claim that changes in rates have been made since the commissioners' efficient work began, all the Standard Oil company has to say is that any such changes have been made without its suggestion or effort.

"The grief which the president expresses in his message over the inability of the railroads to combine and protect themselves from the shippers will probably arouse amusement.

"The president says, respecting this investigation, that the facts are not in dispute, only the inferences are disputed. The Standard Oil company furnished the facts, and a man with a muck rake dug out such as under his manipulation he felt would prove damaging.

"The Standard Oil company has been investigated over and over again, at the instigation of its rivals, and it always welcomes such investigation, when conducted in good faith, and fairly. We are engaged in a large and honorable business. We are conducting it honorably and we sincerely believe in conformity to law."

they openly talked along the lines of the Somerville candidacy and indicated that instructions had been received from the national capital to see that Somerville did not lack publicity.

Senator Nelson fears that the candidacy of Jacobson for it would, it is stated, injure his own candidacy. Jacobson is a representative Norwegian and his heading the ticket would make it all the harder for Nelson to land. Somerville would remove this difficulty and reduce the Norwegian color of the ticket. With Jacobson, Lomen and Iverson all on the track, Nelson is afraid that he will be ruled off in favor of a Swede. If Somerville lands, this will leave the field open for a Swede secretary of state, E. A. Nelson of Hallock; a Norwegian state auditor, S. G. Iverson; and a German state treasurer, C. Dinehart.

Better proportions on a state ticket could hardly be imagined. It is declared, and that they would be pleasing to Nelson is unquestioned. It is generally reported about the state house that Nelson will throw his support in favor of Somerville rather than Jacobson.

As the preconvention campaign advances it grows more evident that Andy Stephens of Crookston is in the race simply to spoil Jacobson's chances. Stephens, it is understood, is hooked up with the corporation interests, which are vigorously opposing Jacobsen who lashed them so persistently while a member of the legislature. Stephens, it is understood, is making his attack against Jacobson, not against the field, in order to land the nomination.

What has become of Senator Hawkins' boom for lieutenant governor? This question brought ominous silence when asked at the state house this week. It is rumored that Lord and Hawkins, together with Diment, have joined hands and are far in their retreat to the rear.

One prominent politician of the state declared that there was considerable talk of Alvah Eastman for chairman of the Republican state convention. It is rumored that peacemakers are on their way to Princeton to placate R. C. Dunn, so that he can be induced to countenance the selection. It is declared by this politician that Eastman is the choice of the Jacobson faction.

Johnson's outlook to carry Ramsey county this fall is very good, in view of Mayor Smith's re-election, which leaves intact the excellent city and county organization, headed by that past master, R. T. O'Connor. Without any organ, Mayor Smith won out against a vigorous campaign, directed against the party managers behind him. His election was a triumph for the local organization, which so excellently handled Governor Johnson's campaign in Ramsey county two years ago. It is estimated that the victory means a majority of 5,000 for Johnson in Ramsey county, where he is very popular in both parties. Expressions of his strength are being conceded every day.

Shippers in the southern part of the state are all worked up over the treatment they received at the hands of the state railroad and warehouse commission at the recent hearing on the proposed reduction of freight rates, and it is hinted that C. S. Staples will have to look to his laurels if he desires another term. The shippers protested against being grilled by C. A. Severance, the attorney for the railroads, until they had submitted their case entire. The commission ruled offhand that Severance had the right to confuse the witnesses as much as he desired while they were testifying before the commission. A number of influential Mankato shippers, despite the fact that they were represented on the commission by one of their own townsmen, Commissioner Young, took their hats and coats and left the room.

The scene was dramatic. Young left his seat to placate his outraged constituents, who protested that they had not had a square deal. George S. Loftus added fuel to the fire, and the whole affair tended to throw the commisson into disfavor with the southern shippers as well as the shippers of the state. The railroads submitted their case without any cross-examination from the shippers, and the shippers were of the opinion that the same show should be given them. Commissioner Mills ruled offhand against them.

Those who are familiar with conditions claim that there is an excellent chance for the Democrats to capture a seat on the commission if the proposed freight rates are made an issue. There is much bitterness over the last hearing, and some prominent shippers would work night and day to get one of their members on the commission, either by defeating Staples for the nomination, or by defeating him at the poles. George S. Loftus, it is argued, would make an excellent run, and incidentally put into circulation a large amount of railroad money.

"What is home without a mother? What is a campaign without the stump speeches of S. R. Van Sant? Party workers are trying to determine what part Van Sant will take in the next campaign. It is argued that since he has taken up his residence in Minneapolis he would be particularly useful as a stump speaker. The state campaigns have been featured for many years by the orations of Van Sant and he has always been depended upon to land the entire G. A. R. vote. If Dunn takes a hand in the campaign it is likely that Van Sant will be stumping the state for Johnson as he did two years ago. There is some talk of effecting a reconciliation between the two so that Van Sant can take the stump and lead the party on to victory. Tom Girling and William Grimshaw have been suggested as a committee to bring about the reconciliation.

F. W. Betz of Fairmont is being talked about as a possible candidate for state treasurer. He was at one time a member of Van Sant's staff, and it is stated that his county and several other adjoining counties are lined up for him. His candidacy would embarass Dinehart somewhat but that candidate is considered to have such a lead over his opponents as to be beyond danger. Carney Koerner is, in the general opinion, as good as counted out. All the claim he advances is that he is the son of an ex-state treasurer and has fed at the public crib for the last twelve years as a clerk in the office, not even having held an executive position in the office. There is a general opinion that the state treasurer's office would be better off with some new blood. The bankers of the state, it is understood, are working for Dinehart. He also has the united backing of the alumni of the University of Minnesota which is no mean support.

It was reported this week from an excellent source that P. E. Hanson had committed himself as favoring the candidacy of Charles A. Lindberg of Little Falls who is to oppose Buckman. This means that the Brower support will be thrown over to Lindberg which makes the outlook for that candidate very favorable. Mr. Lindberg made a visit to the state capitol building this week and it is reported at that time he received the promise of support from Hanson.

WORK THAT TELLS.

Plenty of It Has Been Done Right Here in Duluth.

Cures that last are cures that tell. To thoroughly know the virtues of a medicine you must investigate the cures and see if they prove permanent. Doan's Kidney Pills stand this test, and plenty of proof exists right here in Duluth. People who testified years ago to relief from headache, kidney and urinary disorders, now declare that relief was permanent and the cure perfect. How can any Duluth sufferer longer doubt the evidence?

J. H. Tomlin, lather and contractor, of 112 West Palmetto street, Duluth Heights, says: "What I said in recommending Doan's Kidney Pills six years ago was not only true, but the cure I described at that time has been permanent, and I am pleased to inform other sufferers of this fact. My case was a severe one and it clung to me persistently for two years. The backache finally got so bad that I was obliged to lay off work for days at a time, and I suffered such pain that it hurt to bring the slightest strain on the muscles of the back and loins. The kidney secretions were irregular and I was unable to rest well at nights. All these irregularities yielded promptly to the treatment and the result was a permanent cure."

If his present plans are carried out, and there is every reason to believe they will be, Professor F. T. McIntyre, the famous scientist and authority on the occult, bids fair to create a sensation in the world of physical research, and again demonstrate his remarkable power over the unseen or dormant forces of the human mind.

Briefly, Professor McIntyre proposes an occult or "odic" chain from the Atlantic to the Pacific coast, this "chain" to be composed of psychical believers throughout the country who will work in accord along specified lines of research and experiment. This eminent investigator even suggests the possibility of messages being telepathically transmitted from one "operator" to another, and then to the next, and so on until a communication may be flashed across the country simply by the forces of the various brains composing the "chain." Whether this is part of his plan Professor McIntyre would not say, but confined his remarks principally to the wonderful things that might be done by a more universal understanding of psychical laws and phenomena, and their demonstrated value in all the affairs of everyday life, health and prosperity.

"It is a mistake to suppose," said Professor McIntyre, "that psychical powers and ability are confined to only a few men of unusual character, and that a person has to devote a lifetime of study to gain a mastery of these mental forces. That may have been the case in the past, but the contrary is true now. I have proved that these powers lie dormant in every brain, and need but the right touch to be awakened and put to work. Any one who is able to read and think, and who is willing to expend a little time and effort, may call forth their full power."

"It is true that for long years past the understanding and use of these forces were confined to the 'adepts' and 'mystics' of India and the Far East. But now they are at the command of any man or woman who wants to use them. You or your neighbor may practice Personal Influence, Magnetism, Hypnotism, Suggestive Therapeutics or Mystic Healing; you may read the thoughts and characters of others and influence them without their knowledge, control the psychic forces for your own welfare, health and success—these and scores of similar things you may do if you want to.

"How? Well, until a recent discovery which I made, it meant a long and severe course of study and special training to acquire these powers, but I have perfected a method whereby it is reduced to a simple proposition easily understood and mastered. Ever since making this discovery and realizing its great value to all mankind, I have been anxious to have thousands of men and women try my system and conduct a series of experiments along psychical lines, so as to demonstrate to the world at large what I know can be done by any one who so wills. The results are sure. I know that what often are called 'marvels,' 'miracles,' 'supernatural gifts,' etc., can be accomplished by almost any one by means of the system I have discovered.

"To this end I have had printed an explanation of my discovery and system in a finely illustrated treatise, telling exactly how the remarkable results are obtained. This book I am sending absolutely free to all who are interested and who will send me their names and addresses. I have many letters from persons who are amazed at what my system has enabled them to do. Here are samples of the kind of letters I receive every day:

Professor W. A. Barclay, the noted practitioner of Oriental mystics, writes: "You are without doubt the greatest genius in the world. Your systems of personal influence are the most practical and immediately efficacious of any that I have read of or tried. Your system of reading character, projecting thoughts and controlling people are away beyond and in advance of any other thus far brought to light. Anyone can master your systems." Dr. H. A. Lounsburg, Wheatly, Ontario, writes: "I have thoroughly investigated the methods and inventions of Professor McIntyre, and can say that his system is scientific and surpasses anything in the line of therapeutics that has come to my notice." Mr. Wm. H. Jacobson, Highwood, Ill., writes: "I can heal others who are ill, as well as myself, as if by magic. I could never accomplish this without your powerful system." Mrs. J. A. Rust of Itasca, Minn., writes: "If people only knew what these hidden forces could do for them you would have many followers." The Rev. E. G. King, pastor Christian church, Upper Lake, Cal., writes: "I cannot commend your system too highly, and I am willing to answer any inquiries in regard to it." Fred S. Brett, Apartado 285, Guadalajara, Mexico, writes: "I have done wonderful things in influencing people with your system. Have had over 50 people under my control and compelled them to do startling things. This system is truly marvelous." While Mr. James Kubal, a prominent business man of Chicago, writes: "I never dreamed such things possible. The system has made a different man of me. I did not know I was so full of magnetism."

All who read Prof. McIntyre's book, full as it is of astonishing facts, marvelous revelations, startling theories and explanations, accounts of mysterious phenomena and surprising experiments, and profusely illustrated with striking pictures, must become convinced of the truth of this renowned scientist's claims and statements, and believe with him that the powers of the mind of any man or woman are practically without limit. All that any one who wants a copy of this valuable book has to do is to write a letter or postal requesting a free copy, addressing Prof. F. T. McIntyre, Room 1324, No. 126 West Thirty-fourth street, New York, N. Y. A large edition has been printed, and no one will be refused who writes for this intensely interesting brochure.

He stands for good roads, drainage and immigration, declaring that they are the paramount needs of Northern Minnesota.

THE WOMEN'S COUNCIL.

In these columns ,from time to time, has appeared matter regarding the usefulness of women's activities in municipal affairs. Instances where they have worked valiantly and successfully for better, purer, cleaner and sightlier cities have been given, all to point the moral that woman's influence is always for that which is good and clean and wholesome, and to indicate to the men that they must not underestimate this influence, either in the home or in the community.

There is right here in Duluth an organization of women that has been doing potent work for the good of the city, and that is keeping up that work and planning it upon broader lines for the future. This is the Women's Council, made up of representatives from the various women's organizations of the city. An outline of some of the work upon which it is engaged may not be out of place.

Good work has been done along the line of preserving the natural beauties that surround Duluth. A campaign against disfiguring signs and bills pasted upon scenic rocks has been relentlessly waged, with good success. Many a tradesman who had been spoiling scenery with his posters and painted signs, when informed that the women of Duluth did not approve of it and would like to have him quit it, has promptly agreed to do so. He has generally found it a waste of money anyway, for it is perhaps the very poorest form of advertising. There are still a few signs of that sort left, but they will not long stand against the campaign that the Women's Council is putting up against them.

Another line of useful and effective work is that for the culture and improvement of the school children of the city. For the girls there is a summer cooking school in the basement of the Adams school building, in which 120 girls were enrolled last year. This summer it will be resumed, and much good will result. For the boys, who aimlessly face an unoccupied vacation from school, there is gardening, in which many of them have been interested. The boys' gardens that have resulted from the influence of these club women have done an infinite amount of good to the boys and through them to the community.

The Council is also interesting itself in early closing and child labor. While early closing is the rule in Duluth, and while there is less child labor in Duluth than in most places, there is always something to do along these lines, and the Women's Council is doing it, watchfully and earnestly.

Last but not least is the subject of public playgrounds, which the Council hopes to see established in Duluth. That is a matter that they are taking up with the municipal authorities, and it is important. Public playgrounds for children afford about as much real enjoyment and do about as much good as anything into which money for public improvement can be put, and the Council is armed with arguments that cannot fail to appeal to the authorities.

This organization is doing great work, and it is doing it well. Nothing less than the fullest sympathy and support should be accorded it by the voting half of the population.

INTEMPERANCE.

Nearly everybody knows that intemperance causes physical effects that are disastrous and far-reaching, though they creep on insidiously and are seldom fully realized until they have gained a foothold from which it is hard to dislodge them.

Also, nearly everybody realizes that most of the ills that flesh is heir to are due to incorrect and unwholesome methods of living.

But it is a puzzle, sometimes, to many who see a man who leads a blameless life, who does not smoke and never touches intoxicants, but whose life is nevertheless made miserable by ill health. Those who do use intoxicants are likely to say to to themselves: "Well, what's the use of being temperate, anyway? That fellow suffers more than I do, and he does not touch a drop."

But before taking a view like that it is well to inquire whether that man has not been intemperate in other ways than drinking. That is but one manner of intemperance, and there are scores of others. He may have been intemperate in his eating, for intemperate eating brings its stern punishment as surely as does intemperate drinking. The man who gorges himself with food, who consumes abnormal quantities of tea and coffee, cannot call himself temperate simply because he drinks no liquor.

Temperance in all things is the only sure rule of life that leads to good health and peace of mind. There is hardly anything, no matter how good, that cannot be intemperately used to the injury of the user. A sot who had made a record for consuming strong drinks once said that if he had drunk as much soda water as he had whisky he would have been dead long before. Maybe he would; he certainly would have been none the better for it, and he could hardly have failed to experience evil results.

Dyspeptics use "predigested foods" and "health foods", and yet if they become intemperate in the use of even apparently harmless things, and refuse their stomachs the substance that gives them wholesome exercise, they may make their conditions very much worse.

The good things of life are good only so long as they are used temperately. Excessive use dulls the sense of enjoyment, and intemperance wrecks the body, mind and soul. It would be difficult to suggest a good thing that cannot be misused with evil results unless temperance is made the rule of life.

FOREIGN AID.

The president has made his position clear in the matter of foreign donations to the relief of the San Francisco sufferers.

When he refused a donation from a German steamship company, on the ground that the United States is amply able to take care for its own, his action resulted in a division of opinion. Some people and newspapers said he did just exactly the right thing, and that it should be a source of real pride to the country to take care of its afflicted people without foreign aid.

Others, on the contrary, said that the president was bumptious in refusing foreign aid; that it was none of his business anyway, and that it was an abuse of authority for the president to deny the people of San Francisco aid from foreign sources if the foreign sources wanted to give it.

Both were right. So was the president, as he clearly explained in his message to congress. He says, in effect, that it would not look well for this country to accept outside aid through the federal government, but that if the foreign aid is offered directly to the people of San Francisco, "no official action was taken or could be taken in regard to it."

On the whole, an overwhelming majority of the people approved the president's action in refusing to accept, in behalf of the government, aid from foreign interests, especially as his refusal was couched in the most gracious and grateful terms. At the same time, the same people that approve his stand will see no wrong in the acceptance of foreign aid by San Francisco when it is made directly to the relief committees, and not through the government. There is a distinction, and it is really a difference.

SEEKING FAIR PLAY.

It is very encouraging to note that Ohio, after all her defeats in that endeavor, has decided to make another attempt to curb the Standard Oil company and to confine it within the reasonable limits of decency in its dealings with the public.

Standard Oil business is centralized in Ohio, which has long been the chief seat of its power. If the grasp of the monopoly can be loosened in Ohio, there is hope for the rest of us. There might be even hope that in Minnesota, where the Standard Oil company has long been powerful enough to defeat attempts to require a really effectual test of its products, reasonable regulations could be pushed through the legislature. Minnesota now has a test which makes the oil safe, and prevents the sale of oil that is likely to explode. But it has no test of quality, and there is nothing in the law to prevent the Standard Oil company from selling cheap, dim, watered stuff that will hardly burn at all. And in some of the country districts where they will stand it, that is what is sold.

It is nothing particularly new in the workings of the Standard Oil company that has spurred Ohio on to the attack. Its offenses against law and justice are no worse now than they ever were, and it is even possible that in some cases they are not so bad. But public sentiment has changed. While there has never been any public sentiment favorable to the monopoly and its depredations, there has been a lack of a sentiment sufficiently vigorous and aggressive to make the fight against it win.

Now the people, fully aware of the injustices that have been worked upon them for many years, are determined that they shall have fair play. The legislatures, which because of public inattention have been failing in their duties in all important respects, will be closely watched. A legislature conscious of the fact that the people are looking on is morally certain to become very busy in behalf of the people, which explains the recent reform activities of legislatures that have been notorious for years because of their corruption and their treacheries to the public.

Here's more power to Ohio, and to all the states that are grimly determined to enforce fair play. Nothing more is wanted. Nothing more should be done. But the people are entitled to fair play, and they are going to get it.

THE FREE ALCOHOL BILL.

The Washington correspondents appear to be of the opinion that Senator Aldrich has a death grip on the free alcohol bill, and that he does not propose to let it go. In other words, the senate committee on finance has the bill, and it is not going to report it out to the senate. Why? Because Aldrich is relation-in-law to the Standard Oil company, and free alcohol for power and light would compete with gasoline and kerosene, which the Standard Oil trust makes and sells.

There is no other reason, and this bill in itself will be a pretty fair test of the good faith of the senate. If the result now indicated takes place it will be an effectual answer to those reactionists who have been pleading for the senate as a "deliberative body" that does what is best for the people but does not do it hysterically and excitedly, the way the house does it.

It is true that the wood alcohol interests have opposed the bill, but they are only a cover for the Standard Oil people, and their business would not be afected in any noticeable degree by taking the tax off denatured alcohol. However, doubtless many of the makers of wood alcohol have been convinced by Standard Oil arguments that their industry is really threatened, so some of them are in good faith in their opposition to the bill.

So much is expected from the free alcohol bill that it will be another proof of the guilt of the senate if it refuses to pass it. It has been shown beyond dispute that a vast number of industries would be benefitted very materially if they could buy alcohol for a few cents a gallon. Small motors for innumerable purposes would become common everywhere, and would do the farmer's work and even, in many cases, part of the household work. The question is not new. For a decade they have been trying to get free alcohol, and so far, thanks to Aldrich and his fellow-traitors of the senate, without success. If the effort fails again at this session, it will be pretty nearly the last straw, and the infinite patience of the American people will cease.

When public patience with the United States senate does finally cease, there will be a great rattling of dry bones in that hoary, stupid, venal and infamous circle of senators that throttles all legislation for the benefit of the people and pushes through all legislation that benefits the trusts.

A MECHANICAL SERVANT.

Tucked away in an inconspicuous corner of The Herald the other evening was an item that must have quickened into life the spark of hope in the housewife that long and bitter experience with "hired help" had well nigh extinguished. It came by wire from Springfield, Ohio, and it told of an inventor who had made a machine that promised to do much of the work now necessarily left to servants, or done by the economical housewife herself.

The machine, said the story, will rock the baby, wash dishes, scrub the clothes, separate the cream on the farm, run a sewing machine and "do numerous other things". Operated by a small gasoline engine, with intelligence almost human, it will turn to and handle chores about the house that have heretofore been handled only by human hands.

The dispatch was brief, and gave but little more than a hint of the possibilities of the contrivance. What it will do is very important. What it will not do is perhaps more important.

It will not insist upon the use of the piano. It will not ask for Thursday and Sunday afternoons out. It will not hand a large share of the household supplies out the back door to needly relatives. It will not entertain the policeman on the beat in the kitchen and feed him the expensive wines and cigars of the head of the house. It will not talk back. It will not strike for an advance in wages. It will not threaten to leave every time a word of reproach is uttered. It will not depart with slender notice just when it is getting its duties well enough in hand to be valuable. It will not get married just when it has made itself so indispensable that the housewife does not know how she could get along without it. It will not wear the fine clothes and millinery of its mistress in her absence on a visit to mother.

It will do none of these things, but, according to its inventor, it will go about its duties without a word of complaint, never tiring, never getting into tantrums, never over-sleeping in the morning.

Meanwhile the housewife, having set the kindly machine about its business, can go back to bed, loiter over her dressing table, entertain company, or do what her sweet will dictates.

It's a lovely picture, but no doubt there is another side to it. Printers who depend upon gasoline engines for power are notoriously bitter men of dark visage and evil tempers, whose natures have been soured by the eccentricities of their engines, and it would be fearful indeed if the introduction of the gasoline engine into the home should result in spoiling the sweet and amiable dispositions of the housewives. The eternal combat with the servant problem were far better than that.

HOTEL GOSSIP

"On one of the first deer-hunting expeditions I ever took, a woodsman friend who was with me told of the friendly spirit which existed between men in the woods, particularly among sportsmen, and said that one man who met another in the forest would do as much for him, even if he were an entire stranger, as he would for a brother," said J. F. Hall of Madison, Wis., at the Lenox.

"I thought he knew what he was talking about, and decided to act on his implied suggestion, and do what I could to help out anyone with whom I came in contact while in search of the wary deer. This idea got me in trouble, and ultimately put me in such an unpleasant frame of mind that I decided to act on my own hook thereafter, and offer assistance to no one in distress.

"It all came about through the good luck of another man, and my own bad luck. The other fellow was a veritable fool for luck. First, he was lucky in getting a deer in a country where professionals weren't even getting a shot, and then he was lucky in having a sucker in the shape of poor me happen along. His first name was John. It isn't necessary to tell the last. As a matter of fact, I have forgotten it. When I first saw John he was very much excited. He had just killed a four-prong buck, and was standing at its head, admiring the beautiful animal. He told me how it happened. It was practically the first time he had ever been in the woods, and this was the first deer he had ever killed. He had been sitting on a stump eating his lunch when the buck came out of the brush a hundred feet distant and stopped while he shot it. That was all there was to it. There is nothing like beginner's luck.

"The man was three miles from the wagon road, and alone. He was helpless with the big animal. I thought of what my woodsman friend had told me, and offered my services, which were gladly accepted. Together, we dressed the prize, and then I offered to help him carry it. I had never tackled such a job before, and didn't know what I was getting into, or I would have gotten out earlier in the game. But I had my foot in it ,and was caught in proper shape.

"It was a warm day for the season of the year. I'll bet the buck weighed 200 pounds dressed. We slung him between us on a long pole and started for the road, the animal swinging back and forth in a most exasperating manner. At the end of 200 yards I was half dead, and after half a mile I thought I would drop. Of course, we rested frequently, but that didn't help out much. While resting, I told John of how short of meat we were at camp and how badly we needed venison. He expressed sympathy.

"Finally we reached the road, after the hardest three hours' work I had ever done in my life. I was sweating blood, and my shoulder was so sore that my whole body hurt. It was awful. While we were sitting on a log, and John was discussing for the twentieth time how he killed the deer, two swell guys from the city drove up and stopped. They admired the buck greatly.

"Not to go too deeply into details, they offered John $15 for it, and he accepted quicker than a wink, without so much as even offering me enough for a meal. He pocketed the $15, thanked me for my services, and then climbed into the buggy with the other two and started for town, leaving me like a snared rabbit by the side of the road, hungry, mad and five miles from camp.

"The last I saw of the outfit was the buck's head hanging from the back of the rig as it rounded a bend in the road. The animal's mouth was open, and if it hadn't been dead I would have sworn that it was laughing at me. That's what I call ingratitude."

"Indianapolis is summed up pretty well in an article contributed to a souvenir of the city issued by the Commercial club," said B. N. Haste of Indianapolis, Ind., at the Spalding. "The writer says that, in a word, Indianapolis, from its social side, is seen to be a typical democratic city, a favorite dwelling place for people of moderate means, and a natural center for those who value culture and the higher things of life more than the accumulation of wealth, and that is about true.

"A characteristic is the absence of great fortunes and the general diffusion of comfort throughout the whole population. There are no great residences, but scores of miles of comfortable homes. Even the wealthier people are characterized by simple, unostentatious living. Slums are unknown, and the tenement block has not made its appearance. Cheap and efficient railway service spreads the residence section over wide areas, almost every house having its yard.

"The leadership of the city comes directly from the intellectual classes. Associations in the interests of art, science, literature and the public welfare are numerous and powerful. The labor classes are intelligent, and have unusually fine leadership. The trades are well organized, but dangerous struggles between capital and labor have not afflicted Indianapolis, partly because of the character of its citizens, and partly because of the commanding influence or public opinion."

"Floodwood isn't a very big town, but it is a busy one, nevertheless,' said M. M. Schussler of Floodwood, Minn., at the St. Louis. "We are almost too busy to think of anything but business up our way. They are loading out thirty cars of ties and pulpwood from the St. Louis river at Floodwood every day. This work will require several months' time, and it is estimated that 3,500 cars will be required.

"We have plans matured for the erection of a creamery at Floodwood, of 300 pounds capacity a day. There are about 500 farmers in that vicinity who will furnish the milk, and altogether there are about 500 cows.

TWENTY YEARS AGO.

Taken From the Columns of The Herald of This Date, 1886.

In the district court today, Samuel Crawford was placed on trial for stealing lumber from the Parnhart Lumber company. He is an alleged "Park Point pirate," having been arrested at the same time as Rogers, Burns and Brown who pleaded guilty last term and are now in state prison. The jury, after being out about half an hour, returned a verdict of not guilty and Crawford was discharged.

Mrs. A. H. Foster, the milliner, has removed her stand to 30 East Superior street, old postoffice.

At the meeting of the village council last evening, S. F. White and other residents on Fourth and Fifth streets asked that the council refuse to grant a license to anyone to sell intoxicating liquors on said streets. The prayer of the petitioners was granted, on motion of Alderman Daugherty. The recorder was instructed to advertise for bids for the construction of the Superior street sewer.

Dr. Howes, one of the proprietors of the flour mill to be moved here from Brainerd, will remove his family to Duluth and take up the practice of his profession.

C. B. Nimero expects to occupy one of the stores in the new Smith building at Rice's Point with his drug business as soon as it is completed.

Daniel Donovan was today appointed a regular policeman to protect the much burglarized citizens of Fourth street.

Rev. C. S. H. Dunn, the new Methodist minister, arrived from Stillwater with his family this afternoon and will preach his first sermon to a Duluth congregation next Sunday.

John Donaldson and Patsy Cardiff, two Minneapolis pugilists, under the management of Ed Hilton, give a sparring exhibition tonight at the Duluth theater. They offer $50 to any Duluth man who will stand up before either of them for six rounds.

W. G. Crawshaw and family leave Rice's Point this week for Pennsylvania, where they expect to settle permanently.

The following real estate transfers have been recorded :

George J. Gross, Jr., to George P. Wilson, lot 39, West First street, First division, $4,500.

E. W. and C. H. Clark to Charles A. Long, lot 6, block 58, lot 12, block 43, lot 7, block 5, Endion division, $1,500.

James Austin to John Flynn, lots 65 and 67, West First street, First division, $10,000.

Monahan & Mullen to William M. Barton, lot 1, block 39, Endian, $750.

H. C. James to M. Doran, undivided one-third blocks 70, 62, 72, 74 and 98, and lots 105 to 112 inclusive, block 60, Third division, $8,800.

THE WEATHER

Conditions were rather showery and unsettled this morning. Occasionally it would clear up, but the next moment threatening clouds would hurry up, and showers would appear imminent. We didn't quite get the frost last night, though there was plenty of it in the Northwest. Tonight there is likely to be a heavy frost, according to the weather man, who says it will be some warmer again Sunday afternoon. Last night's lowest temperature was 34 degs., and yesterday's highest was 54 degs. Says Mr. Richardson of conditions:

"Light showers fell over the central valleys and portions of the South and Northwest, due largely to the influence of slow moving disturbances central over Ontario and Texas. The western high pressure area has advanced its center to Montana, causing cooler weather in the Northwest and central valleys and frosts and freezing temperatures in the Northwest. This latter condition will occur in this section again tonight, but the weather will be fair until Sunday night, with milder temperature Sunday afternoon attending the easterly and southerly movement of the Montana high pressure area."

Following were last night's lowest temperatures, as recorded by the weather bureau:

FLASHES OF FUN.

Washington Star: "What is your favorite play?" asked the girl who quotes Shakespeare.

"Well," answered the youth with long hair, "I believe I like to see a man steal second as well as anything."

Cleveland Leader: "Say, doesn't our congressman do anything but draw his salary?"

"Oh, yes."

"What?"

"He spends it."

Chicago Tribune: "That life insurance agent finally succeeded in getting you to take a policy, did he?"

"Yes; I had accepted so many of his cigars, before I found out what his business was, that when he tackled me for my application I hadn't the face to stand him off."

Baltimore American: "I am like the persecuted heroine in the melodrama," complained the carriage to the team.

"Ho, ho!" answered the latter, with a horse laugh.

"Yes, I am," persisted the carriage. "Just see how I am driven from home."

Philadelphia Catholic Standard: "I want to get some bird seed," said the customer.

"Don't try to plague me, smarty!" cried the new clerk from the country. "Birds grow from eggs, not seeds."

Washington Star: "That orator is a most explosive speaker," remarked one statesman.

"I should say so," answered the other. "One of his speeches makes me think of a lot of exclamation points with a few words scattered through them."

Philadelphia Ledger: "Gentlemen, loyal subjects, brothers," began the czar. The members of the douma listened respectfully.

"You have been duly elected."

Cries equivalent to "Hear! hear!"

"Well, that's honor enough for any Russian. Just try to have a good, sociable time. I'll run the government without your assistance."

Reflections of a Bachelor.

New York Press: It's a good deal nicer losing money in a poker game than trying to win it working.

It tickles a woman to death to lose her rubbers in a mud puddle and get her feet wet, because she thinks it is a sign they are small.

Opportunity comes to every man, but generally when it does he is too busy earning bread and butter for his family to be able to take it.

The way to make a woman real happy is to bring her a potted plant on a thousand-mile railway journey that she could buy around the corner for 10 cents.

If they arranged the seats in churches like those in theaters and had footlights the congregation would be so sure it was enjoying itself that it would want to pay money to get in.

Saturday Night Talk

Catastrophes and Faith.

A company of serious-minded gentlemen were once discussing the knotty theological problem of the degree of responsibility which should be attributed to God for all the painful mysteries which shadow and sometimes utterly darken human life. Various explanations were put forward, none of them completely satisfactory, until finally one of the wisest and most devout of the entire group said: "Well, we must confess that God does some things and allows other things which we could not conscientiously do or allow." A short while before his death Oliver Wendell Holmes thinking of the suffering and woe in various parts of the world broke forth with the remark. "Oh, how can God bear it!"

These illustrations may suffice to make more vivid and concrete the wonder which comes to many thoughtful souls with regard to God's part in the awful calamities which occasionally visit the human race. How can He sit serene in His heavens, when He beholds smiling fields desolated by a volcanic eruption, or a proud and splendid city almost wiped from the face of the world by an earthquake? How can He endure the sight of men and women and little children overtaken in their tracks by sudden death, or fleeing by thousands, homeless and penniless from the pursuing monster? And how on our part can faith in the goodness and power of the Sovereign of the universe be maintained in the face of such awful wholesale destruction of life and property?

One who would answer such questions, even partly, ventures modestly upon the effort, conscious that God's ways are not man's ways, and that the child cannot fathom all the motives which influence the father in his government of the household, or justify to his immature reason all the disciplinary methods employed by the father. And yet we can frame the outlines of an explanation and at least suggest certain considerations that make for faith.

Here we are in a world which has periodicaly been the theater of great calamities and of little ones, too, for to some who read these lines the recent disaster on the Pacific coast is no harder to explain than some personal bereavement or trial. Confronting then the mysteries big and little, we are reduced to these three theories: First, there is no God and never has been one in the universe. Second, there is a God, but He is a malevolent and not a benevolent Being. Third, there is a God and He is the loving Father of all men.

The outcome of the first attitude of mind is unfaith, but does denial of the existence of any God make trouble any more rational or easy to bear? The outcome of the second theory is pessimism, but is pessimism to be tolerated for an instant in a world where pleasure manifestly outweighs and outlasts pain, and where people hang onto life because they honestly look upon it not as a curse, but as a boon?

The outcome of the third theory is faith, faith in spite of seasons of doubt and depression. The possessor of such faith reasons, first of all that God knows better than man what lessons an individual or a city or a nation needs to learn, and how these lessons can best be learned. Perhaps the only way a nation steeped in prosperity can be made to realize the worth of spiritual things is by beholding the quick and complete destruction of costly material objects. Perhaps, too, an age which worships man and glories in what he has wrought, can be brought back to a sense of God only through some spectacular event which shows how puny a being a man is.

Again he who holds on to his faith despite tragedy comprehends the fact that God has not yet perfected this outward universe or made it fit to be the habitation of a perfected humanity, and that the process of eliminating sin must often necessarily involve pain and temporary disaster, and, once more, the believer realizes that God is always the chief sufferer when trouble befalls His earthly children, and that He would spare an individual or a nation the chastening blow if it were not for the fact that it is sometimes essential for the perfecting of life. And so we say with the quaint old German poet:

So come then and welcome the blow and the pain
Without it no mortal can heaven attain
For what can the sheaves on the barn floor avail
Till the thresher shall beat out the chaff with his flail?

THE PARSON

A Breaker of Idols.

Hartford Daily Courant: If, after this term in the presidency and his play spell in foreign parts, Mr. Roosevelt returns to Washington as a senator from New York, it's as sure as sure that he'll terribly widen the breach already made by those "bowdacious" youngsters, Beveridge, La Follette and Rayner, in one of the senate's most sacred traditions.

Fancy Theodore Roosevelt sitting dumb in the chamber for a whole year out of deference to the grave and reverend senators. He couldn't do it; and he wouldn't try.

They had been talking about a friend—oh, not knocking—and it reminded one of the pretty girls of a little incident in the life of that same friend. She did not mention her name, and names, for one reason and another, have been eliminated from this little sketch. The first pretty girl said:

"She—" meaning the friend who figured so prominently in the incident she was about to relate—"was once very much interested in a nice looking fellow right here in Duluth. I would not have been surprised if she had been in love with him at one time, and that he once loved her. The engagement was broken off, I believe, and it seemed such a pity, too.

"At any rate, they decided that they would traverse different paths, but the parting was not such a chilly affair as to preclude their speaking when they met on the street. But after the affair was broken off, they saw very little of each other.

"The girl did not see him from one end of the winter to the other. But one day, just before Easter, she met him on the street. They did not stop to exchange greetings at all. She nodded to him very pleasantly, and he, seeming to be greatly surprised, took off his hat.

"She nodded to him pleasantly."

"Shortly after that they met on the street again. This time the greeting was less strained on both sides. The next time they met by accident in a restaurant. She had dropped in for luncheon and sat down at an inviting table, near the window. Some one was sitting directly opposite, but she took no notice of him until he put his newspaper down, and she discovered that it was he.

"She was somewhat annoyed, and hoped that he would not think that she was trying to re-enter his affections and force a reconciliation. She told herself that she did not care anything about him, anyway. There was no need of showing that she did not relish the situation, however, so she decided to be very pleasant, but at the same time quite distant.

"'Have you been out of the city?' she asked, very casually.

"'No,' he said, 'I've been here right along.'

She caught him looking at her, and perhaps it revived some of the old memories.

"'We have been getting some very nice weather lately,' observed the man.

"'Hasn't it been beautiful?' said the girl, as she nibbled some celery.

Then there was a period of silence, during which both occupied themselves with their food.

"'Your mother—she's well, I hope,' said the girl.

"The man looked very grave. 'She is dead,' he said.

"The girl looked pained. She could not understand it. She felt sure that if his mother had died, she would have learned of it some way, even if she did not see him at all often.

"'Why, when did—'

"Just then they were interrupted by a mutual acquaintance who sat down at their table. He greeted the girl and then said: 'How do you do, Mr. So-and-so.'

"When the girl heard the name she almost sank to the floor. Then the realization of the mistake she had made flashed through her, but she was too feeble to say anything for quite a while. Finally she said to the newest arrival:

"I have made a great mistake."

"'You really must introduce me to your friend. I have made a great mistake and I do so want to apologize. I have been speaking to him for some time, imagining he was someone else, and I feel terribly mortified.'

"'There is no need of feeling that way,' said the man, in a kindly tone.

"Then the newest arrival introduced the man, who proved to be a popular saloonkeeper."

Of course, it would never do to mention names here—but the saloonkeeper is very good looking and likes books.

"While we are speaking of that same restaurant," said the other pretty girl, "I want to tell you of an experience a friend of mine had there. It seems to be just the place for all kinds of adventures of the magazine short story sort.

"This friend I speak of was sitting at a table, waiting for a waitress to reappear with the order which he had given her a long time ago. He was reading his paper but not deeply engrossed in it, you know, so he could look around and observe. When you are waiting for your food to come from that mysterious region where the waitresses go and some never come back, one of the things you can do to pass the time away beside read the paper and reread the letter you happened to get on that day, is to observe other people in the eating place.

"While my friend was in the midst of his observations, a closed carriage—doesn't this sound like one of Harold MacGrath's tales?—rolled up to the door and a beautiful woman got out. At least, I suppose she was beautiful. They always are in incidents of the kind or when they are saved from drowning.

"To be sure, her hat was set somewhat rakishly on her head and she acted somewhat after the manner of the comic opera prima donna when making her first entrance, but she attracted very little attention. Most of the patrons of the place had already secured their food. She waltzed back to my friend's table and sat down.

"Of course, he was too polite to stare at her but managed to get a very fair idea of what she loked like. She looked rather swell—not at all flashy, you know and her hair did not look as if it had been taking the gold cure. Just the same, she acted rather strangely.

"She figetted around in her chair and once an audible giggle escaped her. Finally she startled my friend across the table by leaning over and inquiring, anxiously:

"'I beg your pardon but am I acting silly?'

"The fellow was too polite to tell her that she was but she seemed to realize her peculiarities and went on to explain:

"'Do you know, I went to a little birthday party this afternoon. Only a few friends, you know, and we had some wine to drink. I believe it must have gone to my head, for I felt rather funny when it came time to take a car and instead I took a carriage and came here. What would you suggest that I order to make me-er-feel better?'

"The man suggested a cup of black, strong coffee and said that he felt sure no one could tell there was anything the matter with her and wasn't there anything he could do. Yes, he could put her back in the carriage and never, never let on anything if they ever met again. He did meet her and she is the wife of—well, it would never do to tell her name."

They were standing with many others watching the workmen put up the Bernhardt tent, last Sunday afternoon. The foreman was yelling orders and the roustabouts were scurrying hither and thither pulling on ropes and doing other things which reminded one of the annual visit of the Ringling Brothers' show.

Of course, everybody was talking about the divine Sarah.

"They'll have that tent so snug that no one can even sneak in," said the sweet young thing.

"Yes,' replied her escort, "but I don't see why a fellow should pay real money to go inside. Seems to me you could stand outside here, for nothing, and hear her sing just as well."

"And hear her sing just as well."

The sweet young thing bit her lips and turned around, to see whether anyone overheard the observation.

He was probably the same young man who declared that he had seen Madame Bernhardt before but it was several years ago and he thinks it was in a piece called "Wang."

HIGH SCHOOL SENIORS AS THESPIANS AGAIN

The Cast is Selected for the Play Which Will be Given by Members of the Graduating Class on the Occasion of Their "Class Night."

The cast for the play to be given by the Seniors at their class night exercises has at last been selected and the work of rehearsing will be rushed from now on. As usual, Professor Custance will have charge of the affair, and this in addition to the work on the music for class and commencement nights, is likely to make him a very busy man from now until the close of school.

The play, a two-act farce comedy, is unusually brilliant and with a well trained cast will undoubtedly make a big hit. The action commences at the home of Robert Drew. His daughter, Violet, and a governess, Dorothea Primrose, are the only ones at home as Mr. Drew is away on business. Violet is very much in love with Jack Kennard and is very anxious that he should come to the Drew home and stay during her father's absence. Miss Primrose, however, is an obstacle in her plans and she has a very difficult time getting the nervous governess away, ostensibly on a shopping tour.

Somewhat frightened at being alone in the house with only the servants, Violet tells Dennis Milliken, the Irish butler, who furnishes most of the comedy of the piece, not to allow any peddlers to enter, and then sends a note to Jack. Jack arrives and while he and Violet are eating supper, an innocent umbrella mender finds his way into the house and encounters Milliken at the head of the stairs. The loyal Irishman throws the peddler down stairs, at the foot of which the latter lands on a cat with disastrous results to the latter.

One of the servants rushes in crying "You've killed him?" and Milliken thinks she refers to the peddler and is terror stricken. The maid, grasping the advantage of having Milliken under her thumb by letting him persist in his error, tells him that she has hidden the body and will keep still about it if Milliken will obey her absolutely. The terror-stricken butler promises and his troubles begin.

Miss Primrose comes home unexpectedly and Jack is hidden in a closet. With an idea of frightening the governess into leaving, Violet tells her of ghosts which at times frequent the place, and Jack, overhearing the conversation, groans sepulchrally. Miss Primrose orders a search of the house, and they find Jack, but not before he has had time to find a sheet and pull it over himself. Miss Primrose faints, and poor Milliken, with thoughts of the murdered peddler in his brain, is overwhelmed.

Jack runs for the doctor to attend the governess, and quite wins her heart by his tender care of her while she is recovering from the shock. As a result, he has no difficulty in gaining her consent to an immediate marriage with Violet, and they are at the parsonage when Mr. Drew reaches home. He has no objections to the union, but realizing how lonely he will be without Violet, he asks Miss Primrose to marry him, and her consent brings about a happy ending to the whole affair. The maid releases Milliken by telling him of her deception, and in a spasm of generosity, old Mr. Drew gives the butler enough money to bring his sweetheart, Kathleen, from "Ould Ireland."

Arthur Dunning, who made such a hit as the nervous and very embarrassed pastor in the class plays, will take the part of Milliken, and he has mastered the Irish brogue in a way that insures him equal success as the butler. Violet Drew will be ably handled by Ethel Ericson, who was the hostess in "The Elopement of Ellen," the second of the class plays. Jack Kennard, her sweetheart, will be played by Charles McLennan. The waiting maid, who leads Milliken such a life, and is stage struck, is Lella Sparks, who has taken a prominent part in high school theatricals.

Dorothea Primrose, "a governess with nerves," will be played by Madge Millar, who distinguished herself in the class plays as one of the college girls in "The Flying Wedge." Miron Bunnell will take the part of Mr. Drew, and Charles McFadden as an English coachman, with aspirations but no aspirates, contributes to the fun of the entertainment.

BALL TEAM IN ACTION.

Local Boys Playing the First Game of Their Season.

This afternoon, the high school baseball team is playing the first game of the series which is to decide the high school championship of the head of the lakes, with Blaine school at Superior.

The local boys are considerably weakened by the edict issued by Principal Smith Wednesday regarding making up work, several of the team's fastest men being cut out, but Capt. Crassweller was very confident when the boys left this afternoon, and said he was sure they would give the Blaine fellows a run for their money. The line-up is as follows:

Catcher	Cummings
Pitcher	McDevitt
1st base	McKinley
2nd base	Cole
Short stop	Caulkins
3rd base	Crassweller
Right field	Ryan
Center field	Bowen

PHILOMATHIANS TO ACT.

The High School Club Girls Are Busy Rehearsing "Antigone."

The Philomathians are planning to end their year in a blaze of glory and their final program to be given in the near future will eclipse all former ones.

The principal feature is to be a presentation of Sophocles' "Antigone," by the girls of the club, and rehearsals are being held daily under the direction of the teachers of the English department. The cast is as follows:

Creon, king of Thebes ..... Marie Erd
Haemon, son of Creon .....
..... Gertrude Hoopes
Tertius, a prophet .....Fern Doremus
Antigone, daughter of Edipus .....
..... Pearl Hector
Ismene, sister of Antigone .....
..... Delia Smith
Messenger ..... Hattie Stahlbusch
Guard ..... Evelyn Cash
Chorus ..... Fifteen Greek maidens

High School Notes.

The Sophomores held an unimportant meeting Wednesday afternoon. Treasurer Poirier reported $46.45 in the treasury and President Coventry requested all the boys to get out for the baseball team.

The Agassiz club will hold a meeting Monday afternoon in order to arrange for the annual picnic. This morning, about thirty of the students who are taking geology went to Thomson in order to look over the power company's work there and study the geological formation of the region. Several of them returned on the 1:30 train, and the rest will be home this evening.

Captain Phillips of the faculty will have his men out every night next week at the athletic park. He is as confident as ever.

The drop in prices at the lunch room went into effect this week. Sandwiches are now sold for four cents and milk and cocoa for three.

IN POLITICS.

The shrievalty contest has been the talk of the town during the week. Everything else in the field political has seemed of little importance, and has been for the time being forgotten. Since early in April vague rumors have been afloat to the effect that some deal existed between W. J. Bates and Jack Miles, whereby the latter was to assist the former in his candidacy for the shrievalty nomination on the Republican ticket.

As time advanced these rumors assumed more definite form, until it became known that an agreement really existed between Bates and Miles, drawn up for a monetary consideration. This made the situation decidedly interesting, and it became all the more so when it was learned that John T. Armstead, a third Republican candidate for sheriff, had put himself in writing in a letter to Miles in a manner that might injure his chances for victory, if the facts became known.

The publication in The Herald last night of the inside facts in the matter created quite a sensation locally and on the ranges, and brought out the agreement and letter that were known to exist. These make very interesting reading. Reports concerning each were so exaggerated, and differed so widely, that the parties most intimately concerned decided that it would be much better to have the letters printed, allowing the general public an opportunity to judge the situation for itself, without having to depend upon unreliable reports. Today the public is so judging, and doubtless a variety of conclusions are being arrived at.

Some say that Bates, Armstead and Miles are now left out of the running altogether, while others claim that Bates and Armstead, the two leaders, have as good a chance of victory as they did before. No doubt exists as to Miles' position, however. It is agreed that he has about as much chance of victory as has a snowball in a hot place of being turned into a cake of ice. He has flirted with the double cross in a way that cannot but disgust the voters, and if he ever gets into office in St. Louis county it will be little short of miraculous.

On the face of it, it looks as if Mr. Armstead had come out of the mixup in better shape than either of his opponents. The publication of his letter to Miles will probably hurt him to some extent, but not seriously, so far as the general vote is concerned. His reference to labor leaders, unions and secret societies were injudicious and are not likely to be of any benefit to him, and may cost him some votes. Two labor leaders in particular, whose names are mentioned, will be thrown into an unpleasant frame of mind, and the Masons and Elks will not express delight over the references to themselves. On the whole, however, it is believed that Armstead's chances are not seriously affected. He is, in fact, better off than he was before the mixup, in that his most dangerous rival, Mr. Bates, is hurt a good deal more than anyone else, except Miles, and he didn't count, anyway.

If Armstead had not written that unfortunate letter, bets would be freely offered today that he would be the next sheriff of St. Louis county, and even under the existing conditions probably several bets of this kind could be found, if one took the trouble to look for them. Mr. Bates is very popular, and has a large following, particularly on the ranges, but his part in the present trouble cannot do otherwise than reflect to his discredit. Re-election was virtually assured him before the trouble, for it is the rule in St. Louis county that "one good term deserves another," and there was little doubt expressed that Bates would be elected a second time, before the facts concerning the Miles' agreement leaked out. He has been an efficient and capable sheriff, and during his term of office has made new friends and retained the old.

Even if Mr. Bates should get enough votes to elect him, there remains the question of legality. Under the law the most a candidate could spend in this county should be less than $500. Mr. Bates spent $500 in getting Miles' signature affixed to the agreement, but the claim is now made that because he had not filed for the nomination when the agreement was drawn up he was not at that time a candidate. Whether this would hold in court or not is a question. The agreement itself shows plainly enough what Mr. Bates' intentions were, even though he had not filed. It is said that the opinions of two attorneys have been obtained, and that they agree Mr. Bates was not a candidate at the time the $500 was paid over.

O. G. Larson and J. P. Hoffman are two Republican candidates for sheriff who are in no wise mixed up in the trouble. Both probably feel that their chances of winning are bettered by the publication of the Armstead letter and Bates-Miles agreement. Some of the Democrats are also getting interested and putting forth the claim that a strong candidate from their ranks will profit by the trouble, provided either Armstead or Bates gets the nomination. A rumor that Larson is to withdraw is denied by himself. He says he will be in to the finish.

Senator E. B. Hawkins is to be home from the South tomorrow morning, and when he arrives it is expected that he will make public an announcement concerning whether or not he will remain in the race for lieutenant governor. His friends appear to be of the opinion that the senator will say he has dropped out of the contest entirely.

Three or four weeks ago The Herald said that Senator Hawkins would probably drop out of the running, and for some time past there have been definite rumors that such would be the case. Late last week a close friend of his in Duluth is said to have received a letter announcing that he had decidde to pull out of the contest, although the request was made that there be no public announcement at the time, it is said. The matter was supposed to be a secret, but it leaked out, as secrets will, and now it is generally understood that Senator Hawkins has as good as withdrawn. The man who is said to hold the letter maintains silence as to its contents to everybody but his closest friends, advising others to wait until the senator himself arrives before trying to find out his intentions.

Friends of Representative N. F. Hugo are of the opinion that the withdrawal of Senator Hawkins removes practically the last obstacle from Mr. Hugo's path to the speakership of the house. It has been agreed all along that it would be an impossibility for Duluth men to land both the speakership and the lieutenant governorship, and the victory of Senator Hawkins would necessarily have meant the withdrawal of Mr. Hugo. The latter intended to remain in the contest, however, until Senator Hawkins either won a victory or was defeated at the polls.

Railroads of Minnesota are in marked disfavor with Duluth Republicans, and with the city as a whole, not to speak of members of the party from other sections of the state. This is because better rates have not been promised for the Republican state convention, which is to be here in June. The best rate so far promised by the several roads, it is said, is one fare for the round trip. This will mean $4.30 from St. Paul and Minneapolis, where the Democratic state convention and the Elks' convention were in the past given a rate of $3 for the round trip.

The Republican convention will be larger than either one of these, bringing probably 2,000 or 2,500 people to the city, and Duluth people and others interested cannot understand why it is that just as good a rate cannot be given for the June event. They feel that the attendance at the convention will be affected to a certain extent, and say there is no reason why they should be discriminated against in favor of the Elks and the Democrats. Otherwise preparations for the convention are progressing in fine shape, and there is every reason to believe that the gathering will be a success from the standpoint of entertainment and hospitality on the part of the people of Duluth.

E. L. Fisher, retiring postmaster, is a possible candidate for sheriff on the Republican ticket. His friends, and he has a lot of them, have been talking for some little time past about getting him to run for the office, and while he has not yet agreed to do so, it is believed there is an excellent chance of his entering the field. Mr. Fisher has a strong following in the city and county, and would, it is believed, prove a formidable rival.

Capt. Ray T. Lewis was approached yesterday and asked if he would again become a candidate for the house of representatives, on the Republican ticket. He said he hadn't given much thought to the matter as yet, but that he would probably file for the nomination in the near future.

"If you want to say something for a man in politics," said the captain, "I wish you would put in a good word for A. L. Cole for governor. He is an able man, and has accomplished much for the betterment of Northern Minnesota. From the standpoint of Duluth and Northern Minnesota, he is the best of the lot of gubernatorial candidates, and I sincerely hope that he will be elected to the position to which he aspires."

Representative J. R. Morley of Owatonna, Minn., which is in the First district, was in the city the other day looking after headquarters for the Steele county delegation to the Republican state convention. He secured headquarters at the St. Louis hotel. This delegation is one of the smallest in the state, consisting of only ten or twelve men. Mr. Morely says that while there is quite a Jacobson sentiment in the First district, he believes the delegations from Steele and one or two adjoining counties will come to the convention under instructions to cast a solid vote for either Lord or Diment for governor. One or the other of these candidates, he says, will probably drop out of the race before convention time. Which one it will be will depend entirely upon the wishes of the people in the matter.

"I believe delegates this year will be more independent by far than they have ever been in the past," said Mr. Morley, "and that it will not be so easy for one candidate to switch his followers' vote to another as it has been in the past. At some conventions that have been held, you know, one candidate, when he saw there was small chance of being elected, would frequently give the suport of his followers to a man whom he would himself select, and his followers would agree to the plan. I don't believe there will be much of that done at the June gathering. If one candidate drops out of the contest he will not be able to further control the votes of his supporters. They will vote for whom they choose, regardless of his wishes in the matter. This will be something unusual, but if you watch proceedings I think you will see that what I say is true."

Mr. Morley has for several terms been a prominent member of the house and has been conspicuous in dairy and food legislation.

H. R. King of Grand Rapids, Minn., which is in the Fifty-second district, was in the city this week. Mr. King is looked upon as a possible candidate for senator from his district. Either he or Daniel Gunn of Grand Rapids will get into the race, it is understood. Both will not enter, but an amicable understanding will be arrived at soon whereby either one or the other will get into the game.

Duluth is about as much interested in who shall represent the Fifty-second district as she is with political affairs in her own districts, for the interests of Duluth and St. Louis county are closely allied with those of Itasca county and the Fifty-second district as a whole.

Ole Mausten of Aitkin, present state senator from the Fifty-second district, is a candidate for re-election. Sever Swanson of Moose Lake is also a candidate for the nomination, on the Republican ticket. Another possible candidate who is talked of is C. D. De Laitre of Aitkin. If he enters, with one man from Grand Rapids, it will mean that at least four men will be in the field for the position of senator, and should A. L. Cole be defeated in the race for the nomination for governor, he may also try for state senator from the Fifty-second district, all of which will mean an interesting and exciting political battle in the Fifty-second. Conditions there are not dissimilar to those existing in the Forty-ninth, where there are four candidates in the field for state senator.

LABOR WAS NEVER SO SCARCE IN NORTHWEST.

Minneapolis, May 5.—Never before in the history of the Northwest has there been such a shortage of labor as exists at present, and this condition is true in spite of the fact that wages now offered are at a record breaking figure.

There are at least 20,000 men wanted by Minneapolis labor employment agencies, and although tempting wages are offered in numerous large signs in front of the agency, but few men are applying to satisfy the abnormal demand.

Fully 8,000 men are wanted to work on railway extensions in Montana. Dakota is calling for 6,000 hands for railroad lines. Calls are on file in Minneapolis for 2,000 men for railway work along the Columbia river. Fully 4,000 more men are wanted for small jobs. Common laborers who a few years ago were satisfied with $1.50 are now getting $2.25 a day, and in some cases $2.50. In addition employers are in many cases offering laborers free sleeping quarters, well heated.

DUN'S WEEKLY TRADE REVIEW

The Only Drawbacks to Business Are the Labor Controversies.

New York, May 5.—R. G. Dun & Co.'s Weekly Review of Trade says: The violent decline in prices of securities is no criterion of business conditions. Railroad earnings have continued to surpass those of the corresponding period in any previous year, the gain for April being 9.3 per cent over the same month of 1905, and other standards of measurement make equally gratifying exhibits. Liabilities of failures last month showed a decrease of over 40 per cent, in manufacturing, and 12 per cent in trading branches of business as compared with the previous year. The only drawbacks regarding the future are the labor controversies and the stringency in the money market, neither of which may prove of more than temporary duration. Manufacturing plants report little idle machinery and trade in seasonable merchandise feels the impetus of settled weather. Foreign commerce for the last week shows gains of $1,909,972 in exports and $2,943,729 in imports as compared with the same week last year. Commodity prices are well maintained by a good demand, and the crop outlook is fully as bright as usual at this date while in many departments an increased acreage is under cultivation. Of greatest importance to the iron and steel industry of all the events of the past week was the strike of longshoremen on the lake water front. If the struggle is not promptly settled it will soon become impossible to maintain pig iron production at the highest point on record. Otherwise the strikes on May 1 were not of sufficient magnitude to affect the progress of the steel business. Textile mills maintain activity although new business comes forward slowly.

Tanners evince a disposition to operate more conservatively which has checked the upward tendency of hides. Leather has developed some irregularity, hemlock sole holding firm, while union and oak backs are neglected.

Manufacturers of footwear are occupying a most independent position because of the liberal contracts now unfilled.

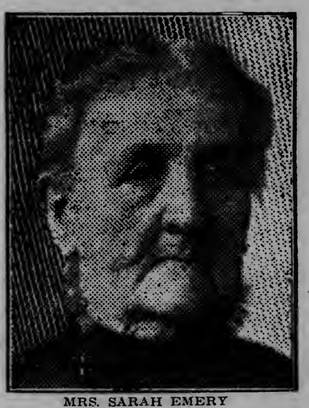
Failures this week in the United States are 212 against 215 last week, 199 the preceding week and 212 the corresponding week last year. Failures in Canada number 31 against 20 last week, 18 the preceding week and 23 last year.

Works on His Farm at 84

MR. REUBEN EMERY

Mr. and Mrs. Reuben Emery of Caro, Mich., aged 84 and 80 years respectively, unite in praising Duffy's Malt Whiskey, to which they both give credit for their remarkable healthfulness and vigor.

It makes the old young, and the young strong.



MRS. SARAH EMERY

Mr. Emery, who is nearly eighty-five years old, is as active as a boy, and takes pleasure in performing the most difficult and fatiguing work on his farm at Caro, Mich. Mrs. Emery, who is seventy-nine years of age, finds Duffy's invaluable as a tonic stimulant and strength-builder and cheerfully testifies to the great benefit she has derived from its regular and judicious use. This comely old couple have raised a family of thirteen children, all of them healthy and sturdy.

The following letter from Mr. Emery is expressive of his deep appreciation:

"I am now nearly eighty-five years old, having been born in Staffordshire, England, August, 1821. I have been a very moderate drinker of intoxicants for the past sixty-four years, and have taken scarcely any medicine but Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey in all that time. I have had a doctor only twice in my life, and have always been able to, and even at present, do all work necessary on my farm at Caro, Tuscola Co., Mich.

"My wife, Mrs. Saran Emery, has been benefited by the use of Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey. She is now seventy-nine years old.

"Some years ago when Mrs. Emery was run down, our family doctor, Clark, of Caro, Mich., recommended Duffy's, and after taking it for a short time she was restored to perfect health.

"We both highly recommend the use of Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey for every one, young and old, on account of its wonderful rejuvenating and strength-building qualities and will cheerfully answer all letters of inquiry. We are at present staying with our daughter, Mrs. Kresin, but will return to our own farm at Caro, Mich., in the spring. "REUBEN EMERY, "730 Chestnut St." "Port Huron, Mich., Jan. 7, 1906."

Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey

If you wish to keep strong and vigorous and have on your cheeks the glow of perfect health, take Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey regularly, according to directions, and take no other medicine. It is dangerous to fill your system with drugs; they poison the body and depress the heart, while Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey tones and strengthens the heart action and purifies the entire system. It is the only whiskey that is recognized as a medicine, and contains no fusel oil. This is a guarantee. Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey has stood severe tests for fifty years and has always been found absolutely pure and to contain great medicinal properties.

CAUTION.—When you ask your druggist or grocer for Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey be sure you get the genuine. It's the only absolutely pure medicinal whiskey, and is sold only in sealed bottles—never in bulk. Look for the trade-mark, the "Old Chemist," on the label, and make sure the seal over the cork is unbroken. Price, $1.00. Medical and doctor's advice free. Duffy Malt Whiskey Co., Rochester, N. Y.

FROGS SING AND DANCE

L. C. Harris Engages in New Venture on Park Point.

His Pond is Said to Contain Fifty-Seven Varieties.

Frog culture and the study of frogs has been taken up by Attorney L. C. Harris. At least this is the claim set forth by his neighbors on Park Point, who listen daily and nightly, with different degrees of feeling, to the discordant notes of 1,893 frogs, which have taken up their habitation on the property of Mr. Harris. It is claimed that he is raising them for the market, and that his pond is the noisiest one in the state of Minnesota.

There are young frogs, old frogs, bull frogs, green frogs and yellow frogs. Some have low voices and some can reach high C. Tenors are particularly numerous. They are a happy lot, and seem well satisfied with their home, for they sing every hour of the twenty-four. The neighbors maintain that Mr. Harris has trained them so they can sing in relays. Six hundred and thirty-one sing for eight hours, another 631 for the next eight hours, and 631 during the remaining hours of the twenty-four. The bunch that goes on at 9 o'clock in the evening appear to be the oldest hands at the business, judging by the joyous melody that arises from their vibrant throats.

It is also said that W. H. Bliss, whose property adjoins that of Mr. Harris, is a partner in the business deal whereby Duluthians who love frogs' legs are to be supplied with this delectable dainty. Be that as it may, the frogs are there, and in numbers sufficient to supply the whole town for a week, and at the rate newcomers seem to be arriving the supply is inexhaustible.

Mr. Harris is deeply grieved that people who profess to be his friends should accuse him of evil intentions upon the lives of his pets. He says they are for ornament only. His explanation of how the pond came into existence is quite simple, and, according to it, his noisy guests are abiding with him only temporarily. Other Point residents will regret exceedingly to hear this piece of news, for it was hoped that the collection would remain intact during the summer, so it could be advertised as an additional attraction to lure people from the city across the canal.

Mr. Harris has just completed a pretty summer cottage at the corner of Twenty-eighth street and Minnesota avenue. The cottage is placed on piles, quite a little above the ground. The owner thought it would be a good idea to fill in the space underneath, giving a solid foundation, and with this object in view the services of a sand sucker was engaged to suck sand from the bay and throw it around the piles. In this process, water is sucked along with the sand, and the result of putting the outfit in operation was the forming of a pond of considerable size under and around the cottage. The very first night this pond was in existence it became literally filled with frogs. Mr. Harris denies that they were imported by him from Superior or France. He says the water either coaxed them out of the ground, where they had been hibernating, or else the sand sucked them from their homes in the bay and rudely dumped them into the pond.

Anyway, the frogs are there, and the racket they make is said to be driving the people who live within five blocks of the place to drink. Mr. Harris asserts that the pond will be entirely drained away in a short time, as soon as the sucker quits working. On the strength of this promise his neighbors are taking no violent measures to put a stop to the concert, but if the promise is not fulfilled, it is claimed that Mr. Harris will need all his legal talents to extricate himself from the tangle into which he will be thrown.

The pond is said to contain fifty-seven varieties.

FLOURISHED LOADED GUN

Charged with carrying concealed weapons, with which he is claimed to have threatened the life of Henry Nolte of the firm of Little & Nolte, Alexander A. Forbes, a well known mining speculator, was arraigned in the municipal court this morning.

Mr. Forbes is claimed to have entered the office of Little & Nolte, and to have inquired for Mr. Nolte. The latter was out at the time, and Mr. Forbes is then claimed to have drawn the revolver, and to have exclaimed: "Tell him that I have that for him."

When arraigned in court he entered a plea of not guilty, but the evidence against him proved sufficient to convict, and he was fined $50 and costs with the alternative of sixty days in jail, by Judge Cutting.

Mr. Forbes stated that he carried the weapon with him when he was compelled to be out of doors at Hunter's Park in the evening, and that he had not returned home Thursday night and still had the weapon in his possession on Friday morning.

The statement seemed to cause an unholy joy to several residents of Lakeside who happened to be in court at the time, and heard it.

COMES FROM NORWAY.

Rev. T. B. Barratt to Preach in Norwegian-Danish M. E. Church.

Rev. T. B. Barratt, a prominent divine of Christiania, Norway, will conduct services tomorrow morning at the First Norwegian-Danish M. E. church, Twenty-first avenue west and First street. Mr. Barratt is a graduate of Oxford college, England, and is said to be a man of excellent education.

He is in America to raise money for certain missionary work which is being carried on in Norway, and is here with the sanction of his bishop in Norway. At tomorrow evening's ceremony services he will preach and sing.

NO DISTURBANCE IN CUBA.

Washington, May 5.—Senor Quesada, the Cuban minister here, totally discredited the story emanating from Florida to the effect that a revolutionary movement has made headway in Eastern Cuba. The minister said there was no sign of disturbance in Cuba.

TRAINS TO BOVEY SOON

Missabe's Alborn Branch to be Finished by July 1.

Tracks Will All be Down by the Middle of June.

Unless unforseen obstacles prevent, the Duluth, Missabe & Northern's Alborn branch will be completed by June 15 and the first train will run into Bovey, the western terminus, on the first day of July as has been planned.

The work is pretty well along now and there is apparently nothing to be done that cannot be accomplished before the dates mentioned. The citizens of Bovey, Coleraine and other places affected by the new branch are jubilant and the officials of the Missabe road are much pleased with conditions.

Track has been laid eleven miles west from Alborn, and to a point six miles east of Bengal and seven miles west of the same station. Grading has been completed as far as Snowball and all bridges, save one at Lawrence Lake outlet, have been practically completed.

"The track for the Alborn branch will, in all probability, be laid by the 15th of June, as expected, and the first train will probably reach Bovey by the first of July, the date that has been figured on right along," said W. A. McGonagle, first vice president and general manager of the D., M. & N., this morning.

"At first, business will not warrant us to put on a regular passenger train on the new branch, so that until traffic increases, a combination train will be run over the line, connecting with the through trains on the main line. A through car will be run from Duluth to Bovey, which will be of untold importance to residents of the Western Mesaba. The car will be attached to the regular morning train out of Duluth and will be hooked on to the combination, at the junction point.

"The service will be improved as fast as possible and in proportion to the increase in business, which will undoubtedly come as a result of the completion of the branch."

Excellent progress has been made on the branch thus far and there is every indication that Bovey will hold its celebration of the Glorious Fourth, in honor of the nation's birthday and the advent of the trains to that metropolis, as planned.

HAPPENINGS

OF THE

Duluth Business University,

105, 107 West Superior St.

School will continue in session all summer—no vacation.

The Diary Record of the college for March and April shows 113 calls for clerical help, in response to which fifty-two young men and women were recommended to positions—the demand in proportion to the supply being greater than during any previous two months in the history of the college.

Among those who enrolled at the college during the past week, are: Alfred Muellerweiss, Alpena, Mich., John Limeaux, Superior, Wis., Bertha Russell, Rush City, Minn., John Denny, Sault Ste Marie, Ont.

The following young people left the college during the past week to accept the following positions:

Henry Morrison, assistant bookkeeper for the Kelley-How Hardware Company, Blanche Pelz, stenographer for the Works Biscuit Company, Marie Lawrence, stenographer and bookkeeper for Nelson & Johnson, Eveleth, Minn., Edward Dumbrosky, bookkeeper for Knudsen, Ferguson Co., Nellie Lowe, stenographer for D. G. Cutler & Co., Judith Gustafson, stenographer for the Aroma Coffee Co., Troy Nubson, stenographer for Glaskin, Comstock Co., and Myrtle Lyon, stenographer for Reilly & McPhee, attorneys, Cheboygan, Mich.

Special classes will be organized during the summer months for public school teachers who wish to take a short course in any department of the college.

MYSTERY MAY BE CLEARED UP

Through the efforts of the publishers of the Bulgarian News at Hopkins, Mich., the mystery of the six Minneapolis murders may yet be cleared up.

The publishers of the Bulgarian News have been working on the case since the day of the murder, and they now claim to have important information, which will lead to the arrest of the guilty parties. They have traced all of the members of the gang, and claim they have found some who are willing to talk.

The murders have caused much excitement among the Macedonians and Bulgarians throughout the country, and the plot behind the murders is said to have been much deeper than at first supposed. Kire Dimitri, one of the murdered men, was well educated and not of the class that would be found working on a railroad.

EAGLES MEMORIAL.

Services to be Held Sunday Afternoon at Folz Hall.

Tomorrow will be Memorial Sunday for the Fraternal Order of Eagles. Each year on the first Sunday in May services in memory of dead members are held, and tomorrow's services, which will be held in Folz's hall at 3 o'clock, will be in observance of that custom.

An appropriate program has been prepared on which Miss Florence Hyland and Miss Alice Cooley are down for solos, and Miss Teresa Lynn will be accompanyist. Fhaten's orchestra will give several selections.

John H. Norton and Alderman William E. McEwen will be the speakers of the day.

Busy on the Mataafa.

Capt. Reed and the members of his wrecking crew are making up for lost time on the wrecked steamer Mataafa, at the harbor entrance. Bad weather made a cessation of work necessary for a week, but during the past two days, the Reed tugs have been busy at the wreck and the pumps are going merrily. It is said that considerable patching and pumping must still be done before she can be moved.

CLAIM LAW OBSERVED

Members of Modern Samaritan Imperial Council Express Views.

Favorable Report by St. Paul Investigating Committee.

Although no official statement has been given out by the Imperial Council of the Modern Samaritan organization relative to its attitude in the question which has been raised by a West Duluth subordinate council as to the legality of the order as a fraternal beneficiary society under the state laws, members of the Imperial council express the views that nothing will come of the controversy, and that they have no fears but that the state insurance commissioner will rule that the organization is living up to the law.

In a general way, the contention of the West Duluth subordinate council is said to be that the organization has not the representative government that is required of all fraternal societies under the state insurance laws. Members of the Imperial council say the organization could not and would not have a license to do business in Minnesota if this were true. They further claim that the constitution of the Modern Samaritans provides for a Grand council which shall elect representatives to the Imperial council and that this provision, whether the members of the society take advantage or not of it, qualifies the organization as a fraternal society.

The constitution provides for the organization of a grand council which may elect one representative to the Imperial council for every 2,000 members within its jurisdiction. The Modern Samaritans are as yet without a grand council. The matter has been agitated to some extent, the initial step being taken this spring by Minnesota council that sent out a circular letter issued by the Imperial council urging the institution of a Grand council, and soliciting a petition to the Imperial council for such organization.

Astoria Council, No. 5, of St. Paul, the second largest in the order, took the matter up and the discussion had a wide latitude, the whole government of the organization receiving attention. As a result in the council's appointing a committee of seven members to proceed to Duluth and present certain questions to the Imperial council relative to the government and affairs of the order and to make an examination of all the financial transactions, with instructions to make a full report back to the council.

The committee, among the members of which were F. E. Hamman, assistant cashier of the American Exchange National bank of St Paul, and C. A. Bombach, deputy state auditor, and several other prominent business men, arrived in Duluth April 5 and proceeded to carry out the instructions given by the council. Not only were the questions asked and answered, but the committee went through all the books and accounts and even checked up the organization's funds in the various banks. At a regular meeting of Astoria council, held May 2, the report was rendered.

The report set forth in detail what the committee had found, and closed with the following:

In conclusion, we desire to say for the benefit of the members present, and, in fact, the entire membership, that in our judgment the order is in first-class condition, and that no member need worry or have any anxiety along that score. We find that the Imperial officers are A No. 1 business men, and the affairs of the order are conducted in a business like manner; that they are absolutely honest and had nothing whatever to conceal from your committee, but instead were anxious that every little detail of the workings of the order be shown and fully explained to us.

Your committee feel assured and have no hesitancy in saying that whatever action is taken by the Imperial officers will be for the best interests of the order of Modern Samaritans. We think they deserve great credit for the manner in which they are conducting the business of the order, and the committee most heartily recommend them to the kindliest consideration of the members of the order and urge upon every Neighbor to give them their hearty support, which will be the means of making the order of Modern Samaritans, a Minnesota organization, one of the banner fraternal societies in existence. Respectfully submitted,

MANY MEN OUT OF WORK

Practically nothing is doing at the Duluth, Missabe & Northern ore docks at West Duluth and receipts are a great deal lighter than usual at those of the other two roads which tap the Minnesota iron ranges. And all is a result of the marine strike.

Several thousand men in this part of the state are out of employment owing to the shutting down of the open pit mines and the discontinuance of many of the ore trains. Miners, train crews, dock employes and others are those affected most.

Most of the open pit mines on the Mesaba range have shut down and practically the only mines in operation on both the Mesaba and the Vermilion ranges are underground. These latter can continue to mine ore when the others are idle. Ore is loaded direct from the mine to the ore cars in the open pit mines, so that when the docks become crowded and the ore cars full, mining must cease. The underground mines, on the other hand, can keep right on, adding to their stock piles.

The Missabe road is perhaps more afected by the tie-up than the other roads, for the reason that it taps more open pit mines. The night crew on the road's docks in Duluth has been laid off and only a portion of the regular day crew is at work. Only a few of the ore trains are running.

The Great Northern is a little better off. Full crews are still at work on the docks at Allouez and, while the receipts are not quite as large as usual, few ore trains have been discontinued.

The Duluth & Iron Range road's docks at Two Harbors are not exactly the busy places they usually are at this time of the season. Some of the ore trains have been discontinued and the full quota of men on the docks is not at work.

To say that the men who are enjoying an enforced and unlucrative idleness as a result of the tie-up, are entirely in sympathy with the men who are waging the present war for the recognition of the lake pilots' union would hardly be telling the truth. Some of them are rather bitter.

NEW PLANT IS SECURED

H. J. Wessinger to Establish Plant to Make His Inventions.

To be at West Duluth—Appliances Already Have Large Market.

West Duluth is to have another industry and one that promises to be a valuable addition to the industrial development of that portion of the city.

H. J. Wessinger has closed the purchase of blocks 218 and 219, Third division of West Duluth, and will erect thereon the Wessinger Iron Works. This plant will manufacture mechanical appliances that are the inventions of Mr. Wessinger. He has a number of these, nearly all of which are used in connection with mining machinery. He is chief mechanical engineer of the Oliver Iron Mining company and in this capacity has charge of the mechanical equipment of the mines and has devised a number of improvements that he has placed upon the market.

For two years or more these have been manufactured at a plant at Depere, Wis., and the demand for them has grown to such proportions that the plant there has been almost entirely given over to this work. For some time Mr. Wessinger has been anxious to have his own plant and has now brought this about, selecting a site at West Duluth, after considerable investigation and deliberation.

A building 45 by 159 feet will be erected at once and additions made as the business warrants, ground ample to allow enlargement having been secured at the outset. The site is 266 by 400 feet. The immediate expenditure will be about $25,000 and twenty-five men will be employed at first. Associated with Mr. Wessinger will be his brother, William E. Wessinger, who is in the same department in the Oliver Iron Mining Company.

The acquisition of this industry will be welcome news to West Duluth. Its success is unquestioned for it will manufacture a product which does not come into competition with that of any other manufactory but has a field all its own. No other institution can encroach upon it and the value of the inventions is such that the demand for them is steadily growing.

Emptied Into Man Who Attempted to Enter Woman's House.

Milwaukee, May 5.—An Evening Wisconsin special from Chilton, Wis., says: George Sawyer was shot and killed here last evening by Mrs. Joseph Schultz, whose home is on the outskirts of this city.

It is alleged that Sawyer attempted to force his way into the Schultz residence when he received the contents of an old army musket. He was a ditcher and about 45 years old. Mrs. Schultz is now in the county jail.

CITY BRIEFS

Thomas M. Mackey, the well known Chicago evangelist, who has been holding successful meetings in Minneapolis for the past nine weeks, is at present in Duluth for a much needed rest. Tonight he will speak at the Star of Hope Mission, 622 West Superior street. The Hardal sisters will sing at this service.

Thomas Thorburn will conduct tomorrow morning's services at Westminister Presbyterian church.

Agnes Anderson has instituted a suit in the district court for a divorce from Gustaf Anderson on the grounds of cruelty and habitual drunkenness. She alleges that they were married in this city, June 2, 1900, and have no children. Mrs. Anderson is 27 and her husband 38 years of age. John Jenswold represents Mrs. Anderson.

At the First Swedish Methodist church, corner of Twentieth avenue west and Third street, Rev. John A. Anderson will preach both morning and evening, and Miss Alice Sjoselius will sing.

A study club will be organized in the near future under the direction of the Theosophical society. All interested along this line of thought are invited to become members. No expense will be attached to a membership. Further particulars will be announced later.

Rev. M. S. Rice will speak at the Young Women's Christian association on Sunday at 4 p. m. Mrs. S. D. Flickr will sing.

The ministers meeting will be held Monday, May 14. Rev. F. C. Weed of Superior, will review Prof. Foster's book, "The Finality of the Christian Religion." This is a postponement of one week.

Patrick Kelley was tried in the municipal court this morning on the charge of keeping his minor child out of school, but was acquitted after showing that he had made arrangements to send the boy to a private business college.

Dr. Kline has let the contract for the building of a residence at the corner of Twentieth avenue east and Fifth street to George Coleman.

May 3, Mr. and Mrs. F. A. Keller of 516 Fifty-fourth avenue west, celebrated their silver anniversary. A very enjoyable time was spent in games and music.

IN VERY BAD CONDITION

County Board Finds Miller Trunk Road Almost Impassable.

Four Commissioners Make the Trip From Eveleth.

A highway almost impassable, in places where the bottom seemed to have dropped out, a steel bridge shot up by senseless hunters, and a team mired within the city limits of Duluth, were the observations made yesterday by a county board committee that went over the Miller trunk road from Eveleth.

The committee was comprised of Commissioners E. M. Patterson, Neil McInnis, John Sundeen and P. J. Ryan. The city members took the train to Eveleth, where they joined Commissioners McInnis and Ryan, and the party set out to drive to this city, leaving Eveleth yesterday morning at 7 o'clock. They were met by another rig from Duluth, and the trip ended here at 10 o'clock last evening. Considering the condition of the road, the commissioners made fairly good time.

Commissioner Patterson says that the Miller trunk road is in the worst condition that he has ever known it. He says that the frost in the ground seems to have held all the water that fell since last fall, with the result that the road in many places in a veritable sinkhole. Portions of the road that last year were in fine condition are now almost impassable, and will continue to be until the ground dries out.

The commissioners are very much exercised to find that some person or persons have been shooting holes through the steel trusses of the new $4,000 bridge over the St. Louis river, this side of Eveleth. High power rifles have evidently been tested, and the bullets have torn holes through the steel web in many places. It is claimed that if the practice is kept up the bridge will soon be ruined. The commissioners have offered a reward of $50 for information that will lead to the arrest and conviction of the persons who are responsible for the damage.

The commissioners expect the county board to take some action toward repairing and painting some of the bridges on the road. Some steps will probably be taken by the board to remedy the existing conditions on the road.

SUGAR MEN INDICTED

Grand Jury Charges Violation of the Elkins Anti-Trust Law.

New York, May 5.—The April federal grand jury in concluding its labors yesterday handed down sealed indictments in the sugar rebating case. The indictments are against the following:

The New York Central railroad.

The American Sugar Refining company.

The New York Central & Hudson River Railroad company, and Nathan Guilford, vice president of the company. The American Sugar Refining company of New York and C. Goodlee Edgar and Edwin Earle, the latter two being wholesale sugar dealers of Detroit, Mich.

The New York Central & Hudson River Railroad company and Nathan Guilford, vice president, and F. L. Pomeroy, general traffic manager.

The American Sugar Refining company and the American Sugar Refining company of New York and C. Goodlee Edgar and Edwin Earle.

Nathan Guilford, F. L. Pomeroy, C. Goodlee Edgar and Edwin Earle.

The first six indictments were found under the "Elkins Anti-Trust law," which provides penalties of a fine not exceeding $10,000, or imprisonment not exceeding two years, for giving, granting, applying for, or accepting any rebate or concession from the regular freight rates, as published by a railway company as a common carrier.

The seventh indictment found against Guilford, Pomeroy, Edgar and Earle, charges them with having collectively conspired to violate the provision of the Elkins anti-trust law.

It is not probable, it was stated last night, that any of the defendants will be arrested on a warrant, but all will be notified by the federal authorities that an indictment has been found, and be requested voluntarily to appear and give bail for an appearance at the next term of the federal court in June. In the case of a corporation it is presumed that the president or some other important executive officer of the company will appear and answer to the indictment.

It is Dangerous to Neglect a Cold.

How often do we hear it remarked: "It's only a cold," and a few days later learn that the man is on his back with pneumonia. This is of such common occurrence that a cold, however slight, should not be disregarded. Chamberlain's Cough Remedy counteracts any tendency of a cold to result in pneumonia, and has gained its great popularity and extensive sale by its prompt cures of this most common ailment. It always cures and is pleasant to take. For sale by all leading druggists.

Thin Hair

Yes! We had noticed that your hair was looking pretty thin, and that it lacked luster and life. But we didn't like to speak of it! Of course you know that Ayer's Hair Vigor is a regular hair-grower, makes the hair soft and smooth, gives it life and strength. This isn't the kind of hair that falls out! And, too, it keeps the scalp so clean and healthy.

SECULAR SHOTS AT PULPIT

New York Post: The telegraph states that the Chicago ministers did not, in their Sunday discourses, ascribe the San Francisco disaster to "an avenging Deity." It was considerate of them to let God off so easily.

AN APPEAL TO WIVES.

Cure the Drinking Husband by Using Orrine---Can be Given Secretly.

No more terrible affliction can come to any home than the craving of husband and father for strong drink. We appeal to wives, mothers and sisters to save the husband and father or the brother or son with Orrine, a scientific and positive cure for the drinking habit.

The patient simply takes Orrine No. 2 or the secret remedy Orrine No. 1 which is in powder form and as it is perfectly colorless, tasteless and odorless, can be given in food or drink without the knowledge of the user. The price of either form is $1. The craving for strong drink will be destroyed; in fact, the drink will not be missed when Orrine is used.

Orrine is sold under a positive guarantee that it will cure the drink habit if directions are followed. In every box is a registered guarantee which entitles you to a refund of your money if Orrine fails to effect a cure. You run no risk whatever in using this remedy. There is no loss of time or absence from home or business, no sanitarium treatment. In fact, Orrine strengthens the nerves and restores general good health while curing the drink habit. Treatise on how to cure drunkenness free on request. Orrine Co., Washington, D. C.

Wives, save the happiness and prosperity of your home with Orrine.

Orrine is for sale by F. W. Kugler, 108 W. Superior St., Duluth.

A Philadelphia evangelist who was accused of saying that the earthquake was a punishment for San Francisco's wickedness, promptly declares he was misquoted. What he said was that the calamity was intended as a warning of the brevity and uncertainty of life.

Springfield Republican: The death of the "black pope" scarcely gets the notice it deserves. Luis Martin, general of the Society of Jesus, was a remarkable man and perhaps one of the ablest of the long series of the successors of Loyola. He was ordained priest in France when he was 18 years old, in 1864, being a Spaniard by birth. In 1877 he became rector of the old University of Salamanca and there he gained fame as a theologian. When Anderledy died in 1892 he became general of the Jesuits. Luis Martin much opposed the "alleged "Americanizing" of the church of Rome and from his point of view was quite right. The Society of Jesus has always been more papal than the pope.

VIEWS OF THE PRESIDENT

On Rate Bill Are Expressed Informally to Newspaper Men.

Washington, May 5.—Thirty-six members of the corps of Washington correspondents, representing the leading newspapers and press associations in the United States, met President Roosevelt by invitation, in the cabinet room of the executive offices yesterday afternoon, to discuss with him the status of railroad rate legislation, and to learn the president's views as to certain pending amendments to the Hepburn bill.

The meeting lasted more than an hour. While the president made it clear at the outset that he desired not to be quoted directly as to the views he might express, he said that he was perfectly willing that his views should be known and be stated in the language of the members of the press who were present. With this understanding the informal discussion which ensued took a wide range as to the rate measure and proposed amendments to it. The president talked with frankness in the expression of his views, in answering questions which were propounded to him from all sides, and in explaining the attitude of himself and the advocates of the suggested legislation. Necessarily, the discussion was in a nature academic, but it was interesting and informing. The discussion dealt chiefly with the various propositions for a court review, from the broad amendment proposed by Senator Bailey of Texas to the restricted amendment offered by Senator Long of Kansas. The president in beginning, indicated clearly and positively that he would be satisfied with the enactment of the Hepburn bill as it was reported to the senate from the committee on interstate commerce. He pointed out, however, that some advocates of railroad rate legislation—as sincere friends of the legislation as he himself was—believed it would be wise so to amend the measure as to provide specifically for a review of the decisions of the interstate commerce commission by the courts.

To this end the proposition evolved by Senator Allison of Iowa, which now practically has been agreed upon by the Republicans of the senate, was accepted by the friends of the measure, including the president. The president expressed the opinion that the effect of the Allison proposition already is embodied in the Hepburn bill, but it also is his opinion, as he stated it yesterday, that if there is the slightest doubt that the Hepburn bill by implication, does not carry the effect of the Allison proposition, it ought to be incorporated explicitly in the measure before its enactment into law. Personally, he favors the narrower restriction of the amendment of Senator Long, but some other advocates of the legislation do not favor that amendment. He made it clear that the judgment of the friends of the measure was so evenly balanced on the question of the Long amendment that it was scarcely worth while to make a contest for it, as a year or two of the laws' operation would demonstrate clearly whether it would be necessary further to amend the act in the way proposed by Senator Long.

The president assured his hearers that he and every advocate of the pending measure would be satisfied perfectly with the Hepburn bill with the amendment proposed by Senator Allison.

WORLD'S ARMIES AND NAVIES

To Participate in Jamestown Exposition at Hampton Roads.

Norfolk, Va., May 5.—The greatest naval and military exposition of the age will open its gates on the historic shores of Hampton Roads, April 26, 1907. It will be known as the Jamestown exposition, in honor of the first permanent settlement of English speaking people in America. Three centuries of important events will be commemorated in this history-making exposition. Every acre of land and water around the exposition grounds has played a part in the great drama of events from the arrival of the frail vessels with their little colony of English pioneers, April 26, 1607, to the passing of the French and American fleets with the remains of the founder of the American navy, John Paul Jones a few days ago.

The first English settlers, who founded Jamestown, in 1607, and made the vast territory of Virginia an English colony, influenced the destiny of America and saved it from the clutches of Spain, then the most powerful nation on the sea. The importance of the settlement of Jamestown is therefore apparent, and the great exposition now in progress of preparation will be a worthy celebration of an event of such magnitude and far-reaching influence.

In the trying times of the American revolution the country around where the exposition is located was a bloody battle ground, and at Yorktown, but a few miles away, the last great British army surrendered to the Americans and the decisive blow was dealt which gave independence to the American colonies.

During the bloody war between the states, when two opposing ironclads met in battle for the first time, it was in the harbor of Hampton Roads, just off the point where the exposition grounds are located. The fight between the Monitor and the Merrimac was significant in more ways than one and denotes the passing of the wooden ships and the establishment of the ironclads in the great navies of the world.

The important events which have transpired in this locality led to the selection of this historic ground for an international exposition in which the great navies and armies of the world could be brought together in friendly parades and manoeuvers. The American congress appropriated money for this grand affair and the president invited the nations of the world to participate in the Jamestown exposition. It will be primarily a miltary and naval exposition, on the most extensive scale ever undertaken in any country, but there will be numerous other features to give it all of the attractions peculiar to world's fairs and great industrial and commercial expositions.

SUB-COMMITTEE

Of National Democratic Committee to Assist in Congressional Work.

French Lick Springs, Ind., May 5.—Thomas Taggart, chairman of the Democratic National committee made the following announcement last night:

"At a conference held in Washington some weeks ago between National Chairman Briggs of the congressional committee, Senator Bailey of Texas and other prominent Democrats, the advisability of appointing a subcommittee of the national committee to co-operate with the congressional committee was fully discussed and it was deemed advisable by all that a subcommittee from the national committee would be very beneficial in assisting the congressional committee in the coming campaign, and as the result of this conference the subcommittee has been selected:

"J. H. Guffy, Penna.; R. H. Johnson, Texas; J. Taylor Ellison, Virginia; Urey Woodson, Kentucky; Roger Sullivan, Illinois; Timothy G. Ryan, Wisconsin; John J. McGraw, West Virginia."

Chairman Taggart of the national committee will also be a member. Headquarters will be opened in Washington and a meeting of the subcommittee and the congressional committee will be held at an early date.

CASS LAKE YARDS

Of the Great Northern Are to be Greatly Extended.

Cass Lake, Minn., May 5.—(Special to The Herald)—The chief engineer of the Great Northern has announced that the yards in Cass Lake will be extended several thousand feet east. The yards at present are divided into eleven tracks constituting over 39,000 feet. But they are far too small for the enormous number of trains coming in. The engineer says that 800 feet will be added to each track and a new track installed which will be over 3,600 feet in length. This will mean an expense to the road of over $50,000. Pike Bay is directly east of the yards. Thus it will be necessary to fill in the bay in order to build the additional track. The steam shovel is expected to be here the latter part of the month and as soon as it arrives the work will be commenced. J. Newman will superintend the laying of the track.

BURNETT

Burnett, May 5.—(Special to The Herald.)—The Duluth, Missabe & Northern is doing a lot of improvements here this spring. They have put up a modern water tank of the latest type. They are now putting up a coal chute and also a new building 100 by 80 feet, which is equipped with baths, steam heat and up-to-date toilet rooms. A reading room will also be maintained in the same building. It will be ready next week. In all, it is a fine structure and a credit to the place as well as the railway company. The old building is being remodeled and made up to date.

Joseph Gouthier is building a new store and will be ready for business some time this month.

R. L. Moore is putting up a new dwelling house.

Z. Benache is building an addition to his house.

R. B. Mitchell is moving his family to Burnett this week to reside here.

Mr. and Mrs. Bronseau were Duluth visitors this week.

The steam shovel is working day and night in the gravel pit, and gravel is being distributed on the new Boxey line.

A new car repairer's building is just finished and makes a fine repair shop.

The Missabe road is to build an addition to the depot after it is moved some 3,000 feet from the present location, so the public may get their goods without interference with the work trains which now block the roadway. This will be a good thing.

A new steel bridge is being put across the Cloquet river, which will be ready next month.

The logs are now being driven to Cloquet, down the Cloquet river.

A log driver was drowned last week in the river here. His body has not yet been recovered.

C. H. Blackburn was a Burnett visitor last week. He has been away four years to his old Kentucky home. He is going to work at Kelsey.

Mrs. A. T. Hanes was a Duluth visitor last week.

Mrs. A. H. Church visited friends in Duluth, Monday.

William Taylor attended the B. of L. F. dance in Duluth, last week.

The first straw hat of the season was seen Wednesday. Temperature 78 degs.

A steam derrick for trapping Goodwin cars has been placed in front of the sand house track, and will soon be in operation.

W. W. D'Aoust, night telegraph operator, was in Duluth this week visiting his folks.

good as coin here and thus avoid the delay that would ensue if bills of exchange were issued on Eastern or foreign money centers.

In every section of the city the relief work is now going on without a hitch, and nowhere, as far as could be learned, was there any real distress. Another happy feature of the situation is the prospect for a restoration of free and full supply of home lighting and cooking facilities. The local gas company is now prepared to turn gas into its mains as soon as the word is given, and it is expected that this authorization will be received within a few days. Gas will be furnished to a house as soon as the pipes and fixtures there are found all right. This will be a great boon to householders, the majority of whom are still subject to the inconvenience of cooking their meals on stoves erected in the street. Some anxiety is still felt over the purity of the water supply. City Chemist Gibbs said yesterday that samples of water taken from the taps at various points about the city, were found to be so full of bacteria that sewer pollution was indicated. He still urges citizens to boil all water used for drinking purposes, under any circumstances, and a laboratory has been established at the state university for the analysis of the supply from different points. It is now admitted that the sewers have broken over the mains, and it is also feared that the reservoirs have been polluted, owing to the number of people in camps on the water sheds.

In connection with the recent boycott movement on China, it is interesting to note that the steamer China, sailing for the Orient today, is taking a shipment of 1,000 tons of flour to China, where for the past few months no flour has been sent from this coast. Steamship officials says the recent boycott in China has been broken, and that this is the first flour shipment of any note to be sent to the Orient for months. A large proportion of the liner's cargo consists of raw material from the East, consigned to Japan.

SUBURBAN PROPERTY IS HAVING A HEALTHY BOOM

Several Different Tracts Have Been Placed on the Local Market This Spring, All of Them on the Easy Payment Plan—Other Real Estate News.

"This is the era of suburban property purchase for improvement," remarked a prominent local real estate broker, who has been following closely the trend of events in the Eastern and Western markets as well as the local real estate field, the other day.

He referred to the tremendous movement that is now taking place in suburban property in New York, Boston, Buffalo, Rochester, Philadelphia and other Eastern cities, and which, up to the time of the earthquake in California, was a special feature of the Pacific coast realty situation. Never before in the history of the country, it is said, has there been so large a demand, or so rapid sales of suburban lots for home building, quickly reached by street and railway lines.

In this particular phase of the realty movement, however, Duluth has not yet shown up so well as other cities. The demand has been trending in that direction, however, and already an awakened interest in suburban homes is being noted. It is claimed that in no other city has there been a greater inducement offered people to build than right here in Duluth, where rents have been steadily increasing to a point where many have felt that it is cheaper to build than to pay rent. With this desire to build, there has been a turning to the residence sites available in suburbs, many of which in Duluth are given an excellent car service.

This awakened interest in suburban property has had results. The owners of that class of property are turning the market to their advantage. Even in Duluth there has been this year some very important arrangements made to open for home building at low prices, well located lots in the outlying portions of the city, and which can be reached in a very few minutes by means of the street cars.

About two weeks ago the owners of the large acreage, starting from the head of the incline railway and running back through Duluth Heights, represented by C. P. Craig & Co., put the property on the market for home building on the easy payment plan.

This week the Davis Real Estate company, represented by the same agency, has placed in the market another immense tract of land, on the easy payment plan. This is Crosley Park addition, that territory between the golf grounds and Lakeside, beginning about two blocks north of the street car line and extending clear back to the hills, a tract comprising 280 acres, located on a gradual slope toward Lake Superior.

Crosley Park addition passed into the control of the Davis Real Estate company, a little over a year ago, after some time had been spent in conducting negotiations for clearing the titles. It is bounded on the west by Forty-ninth avenue east, and on the east by Fifty-fourth avenue east. Only a small proportion of the lots in the addition are owned by others than the realty company. The land has been platted, and through it from east to west runs Oneida street, which is macadamized, while Fifty-seventh avenue east, which runs through the park in another direction, is improved, and Fifty-first avenue east is to undergo extensive repairs this season.

Fifteen years ago, Crosley Park lots were sold in large numbers from $150 to $350 a lot, one-third cash and the balance in one and two years at 8 per cent interest.

This year, the new owners are putting out the lots, over 2,000 in number, at from $15 and $25 to $85 per lot, on cash payments of $10 per lot and the balance in sixty equal payments.

It is the idea of the Davis Real Estate company not to put the property on now with the idea of encouraging the purchase by individuals of just one lot at the low prices given, but to offer an inducement for people to buy in blocks of lots, which several people have already done. It is practically an acreage selling proposition right in the city limits, the land being admirably adapted for garden purposes.

The sale of the old Hosmer block at 13 and 15 East Superior street, by A. L. Ordean to J. W. Hoffman this week was the third largest transaction in Superior street business property that has been closed within a few days through the office of W. M. Prindle & Co. The property, comprising a two-story brick store, with a frontage of 50 feet, was sold for $50,000.

Another of the sale was that of the Norris property comprising a 75-foot frontage on the lower side of Superior street, between First and Second avenues east, to the Shogomac company, for $37,500, or on the basis of $500 a front foot. A brick hotel and store building occupies the ground.

The third sale comprised another 75-foot property on Superior street between Second and Third avenues east to the Shogomac company for $20,000. Besides these large sales, W. M. Prindle & Co. report negotiations closed for two residence properties in the East end, one for $7,500 and the other for $2,650; a lot in West Duluth for $300; a house and lot in the West end for $750 and a house and lot on West Fourth street for $2,800.

Joseph Sellwood has purchased fifty feet on the southwest corner of Superior street and Eighteenth avenue East for $8,000. He paid $5,000 to Aloysius Fortman for the corner lot and $3,000 to A. G. Alexander for the lot next to the corner. It is understood that Mr. Sellwood expects to improve the property this coming year with a handsome double house.

N. J. Upham & Company report the sale of a residence property at 219 Nineteenth avenue East to F. Goran and Carl G. Mellin, for $5,650; a residence at 721 West First street to E. O. Clund, for $3,150; a residence at 1126 East Third street to Jessie Turnbull, for $1,750; a residence at 1009 East Fourth street to Jessie M. Gray, for $4,200. The firm has several other good sized sales that are near the point of being closed.

A. A. Fider has bought the residence property where he is living on Third street between Eleventh and Twelfth avenues East, from F. O. Cooley, for $1,575.

* * *

D. J. Wahl has sold J. C. Elmer a residence property at Sixth avenue West and Second street for $4,675.

Peter Beschambossel has sold James E. Walsh a house and lot on the upper side of Fifth street, between Lake avenue and First avenue East, for $3,100.

L. R. Helbing & Company were awarded the contract for the heating and ventilating plant at the West Duluth new school building designed by A. Tertrybery, on a bid of $8,577. The plumbing contract was awarded to Stack Bros., whose bid was $2,123. L. R. Helbing & Company also secured the heating and ventilating contract for the Sixth street school, for $8,963, while the American Heating company's bid of $2,897 for the plumbing and gas fitting was accepted by the board of education.

The southwest corner of Second street and Third avenue west, where the Y. M. C. A. building is to be erected this year, has been cleared during the week and arrangements are being made to get the foundation plans ready at once so that bids may be received the latter part of this month. The building committee is comprised of John Miller, W. S. Moore, John D. Stryker, F. E. House and Philip Bevis.

Bray & Nystrom, the architects, report the following contracts awarded this week: Hospital building, costing about $12,000, for Dr. C. W. Bray, at Eveleth, to N. F. Marion of Eveleth; A. L. Agatin's residence at Twenty-fourth avenue east and Fifth street, costing about $10,000, to Otto Johnson; E. G. Emons' residence at Lakeside, costing about $5,500, to William Fawcett.

The architects will have the plans out for figures this coming week for a brick 6-flat building to be erected by French & Bassett on First street, between Fourth and Fifth avenues east, adjoining the improvements made in that vicinity by the same firm two years ago.

What We Think.

In our opinion the best residence avenue in the city is Twenty-third avenue east.

What Others Think.

At least what some of our leading business men think, is shown in the annexed diagram, which gives the names of those who have already built their homes thereon.

Some Pertinent Facts

At its head stands the Stato Normal school, it is already completely improved, being paved with tar-macadam, and it has the easiest grade of any avenue in the choice residence district of the city.

The Essential Point.

We control the choice unoccupied corners on this fine avenue—see diagram—so, if you want any of this property for a home

Come and See Us.

Build Your Home at Lakeside

WHEAT IS STRONGER

Reports of Snow and Hail Throughout Northwest Cause Bulge.

Flax is Weaker in Duluth, With Fairly Active Trading.

Duluth Board of Trade, May 5.—Bullish news in plenty made a firm wheat market and prices were higher in all of the American markets at the close today. Reports of snow and hail throughout the Northwest came in all day and the Indian shipments of wheat proved small. Liverpool closed unchanged, Paris ¼c lower, and Antwerp unchanged to ⅝c lower.

Broomhall estimates the world's shipments of wheat for this week at 10,000,000 bushels, of which quantity Europe will take about 8,800,000 bushels. The shipments last week were 10,040,000, and those a year ago, 10,944,000 bushels.

The Kentucky crop report shows that the condition of wheat in that state is 97. Last month the condition was 98, and a year ago 92. At harvest time last year the condition was 79 and the crop turned to be an average one.

The May option was ½c higher in Duluth, 1⅛c in Chicago, ⅝c in Minneapolis, 1c in New York, ¼c in St. Louis, and ⅜c in Kansas City. There was no session of the Winnipeg market yesterday, it being a holiday. The July option closed ½c higher in Duluth, ⅜c in Chicago and Minneapolis, unchanged in New York, where the market closes an hour earlier than Duluth on Saturdays, ⅞-1⅛c up in St. Louis, and ⅛c higher in Kansas City.

Corn was weaker in Chicago, the July option closing ⅜-½c lower. Corn was ¼d lower to ⅜d higher in Liverpool. July oats closed ⅛c up in Chicago.

Car receipts at Duluth were 45, against 1 last year, and at Minneapolis 149, against 97 last year, making a total for the Northwest of 194, against 98 last year. Chicago received 4, against 3 last year. Winnipeg received 149, against 75 last year.

Clearances of wheat and flour aggregated 85,000 bushels.

Clearances of corn were 306,000 bushels.

Wheat was fairly active during the entire session of the Duluth market. May wheat opened ⅛c higher at 79⅝c and advanced steadily to 80c, at which price it closed a gain of ½c over yesterday. July wheat opened ⅛c higher at 80c, declined to 79⅞-80c at 10:01, rallied to 80c at 10:03, advanced to 80¼-⅜c at 11:30 and declined to 80⅛-¼c at 11:50. The closing price was 80¼c, a gain of ½c over yesterday. September wheat opened ⅜c higher at 78¾c, was inactive during the session and closed unchanged at 78c.

Flax was active and weaker during most of the session of the local market. Flax was ¼c lower in Antwerp and ¾c lower for Laplatta and unchanged for Calcutta linseed in London. May flax opened ⅜c lower at $1.14½, rallied to $1.14¾, declined to $1.14⅜ and rallied to $1.14½, at which price it closed, a loss of ⅝c from yesterday. July flax opened ½c lower at $1.15½, declined to $1.16 and ranged between that and $1.16⅛ during the rest of the session, closing at $1.15, a loss of ¾c from yesterday. September opened ⅞c lower at $1.16, rallied to $1.16½ and closed at $1.16¼, a loss of ¾c from yesterday. October flax opened unchanged at $1.15, declined to $1.14⅞, rallied to $1.15 and closed at that price, unchanged from yesterday.

May oats and oats to arrive and on track were ⅛c higher and the other coarse grains unchanged.

Following were the closing prices:

THE CHICAGO MARKET.

Wheat Opens Quite Firm With an Exceedingly Light Trade.

Chicago, May 5.—The wheat market opened firm today with an exceedingly light trade. The demand was small and offerings were scarce. Shorts were the best buyers and the chief cause of the steady feeling was the small amount of grain shipped from India. July opened a shade lower to a shade higher at 78¾c to 78⅞c, and advanced to 79c. Minneapolis, Duluth and Chicago reported receipts of 189 cars against 211 cars last week, and 101 cars a year ago.

The market was firm all day on a good export demand. The high mark for the July option was at 79⅝c. The close was firm with July up ⅝@¾c at 79½c.

The corn market was firm, chiefly because of a fair demand by commission houses. Offerings in general however, were very light. July opened a shade to ⅛c higher at 45⅝c to 45¾@⅞c and sold up to 45⅞-46c. Local receipts were 153 cars with 36 of contract grade.

The high point for July was 46c. The close was firm with July up ⅜c at 45⅞@46c.

In common with the other grain markets, the oats market was exceedingly quiet. There was almost no news effecting the market and none of any importance. Trading was very small. July opened a shade higher at 30¾@⅞c and sold up to 31c. Local receipts were 171 cars.

The provisions market was steady and quiet, trading being very small. July pork was unchanged to 5c lower at $15.20 to $15.25. Lard was unchanged to 2½c higher at $8.37½ to $8.40. Ribs were unchanged at $8.50.

Close: Wheat—May, 81c; July, 79½c. Corn—May, 47c; July, 45⅞@46c. Oats—May, 33¼c; July, 30⅝c. Pork—May, $14.92½; July, $15.10. Lard—May, $8.30; July, $8.37½. Ribs—May, $8.35; July, 8.50. WISE INVESTORS
Don't put all their eggs in one basket, nor buy only high priced stocks; they recognize that $100 or $1,000 invested in MERITORIOUS low priced stock is good, and will, on an advance of a few cents per share pay a larger percentage of profit than would $1 per share advance on high priced stock.
The W. I. don't buy simply because a stock is cheap, but he does not hesitate when mine and management have merit.
Careful investigation is invited and will prove that the BUTTE AND ST. LOUIS
Mining Company OWN a good mine and is well managed. Previous "ads" have given a dozen reasons why investors buy this stock. There are now three more, viz: a strike 14 inches wide of $24 ore in No. 3 East; machinery to be installed this week; stock selling in St. Louis, Butte and elsewhere.
The large profits are made by investors with judgment and courage who invest in the beginning of an enterprise.
Butte and St. Louis stock has advanced 40 per cent; the subscription stock is limited to 50,000 shares, a part of which can NOW be had of your Duluth broker at 70 cents per share.
There are five veins on the property, three developed. Ore assays $15 to $100.

STRENGTH EXHIBITED

By the Stock Market and Reading Made Large Advance.

Report of Settlement of Coal Strike Had Good Effect.

New York, May 5.—The opening dealings in the stock market today offered an active and irregular market. The extent of yesterday's advances attracted realizations at some points while at others the rise was extended. Anaconda rose 2, Northern Pacific and General Electric 1¾, Reading, Smelting, Locomotive, Hocking Valley a point, and United States Steel preferred ¾. St. Paul ran off 1½, New York Central about a point, and American Car ⅝.

A general decline in prices ceased when the enormous buying of Reading began which carried it up ⅝ to 124. Other coalers participated in the rise, which was due to expectations of favorable developments at the miners' convention. All of the heavy losses were made up, and in many cases there was a good advance besides. Tennessee Coal gained 5, Minneapolis, St. Paul & Soo and Central of Jersey 3, Hocking Valley, Lead, Great Northern preferred, Delaware & Hudson and Northern Pacific 2½ to 2¾, Smelting 2 and Atlantic Coast Line, Ontario & Western, Union Pacific, Erie Second preferred, Amalgamated Copper, Brooklyn Transit and many other industrials 1 to 1½. New York Central fell off 1¾ before the rally.

The movement of prices became much confused. A sharp reaction was checked by a new spurt in Reading to 5 over last night. The other coalers responded, but the general list was rather heavy after the bank statement appeared. Delaware & Hudson rose 5, Ontario & Western 2¾, Erie 1⅜ and Norfolk & Western 1. Chicago & Alton sold at a decline of 6¼ and Western Central 5½. Reading, after reacting 1⅜, was pushed up again in the final dealings to near 126. The closing was irregular.

Stock Gossip.

Chicago Journal: Yesterday there was an interchange of opinions and beliefs between some of the leading bankers and capitalists of Wall street, nothing formal, but rather a grouping of ideas in a casual sort of way, and the upshot was a general agreement on several propositions, viz: That the worst of the urgent liquidation has been seen; that there is no longer any danger, barring accidents, of any of the big people being caught in difficulties; that more money generally than is needed has been sent to San Francisco, a large part of which will return as soon as the panicky desire on the part of the San Francisco banks to strengthen themselves has subsided; that the losses, which fall upon the foreign insurance companies, will be financed on the other side rather than by the sale of American securities, and that the new conditions, arising from the inflow of foreign gold and the enormous liquidation brought about by the San Francisco disaster will make the money market conditions easier,, and make the duration of that ease longer than could have been hoped for a few weeks ago. There is no let up in general business, the crop outlook is good, and there is nowhere in sight any evidence of an abating of prosperity.

Walker Brothers to Paine, Webber & Co.: The market today opened steady and inclined to be strong. The feature was the strength in Reading, and after the news that the miners had come to terms for three years there was a rush to cover. It made large advance. Many of the specialties were strong. The bank statement which was not good caused some little selling, but it did not last long, but the market closed steady. The whole tone of the market is now much better and the important question will be the money market. Rates appear to be easing up, but we cannot expect cheap money for some time. Market is apt to drop into dullness after the excitement of the last week.

Logan & Bryan to Paine, Webber & Co.: The stock market closed irregular, strong in spots, but in the majority of cases there seemed to be an easier feeling at the close. The bank statement was unfavorable and a surprise to the street, but its evil effects were offset by news that the coal strike had been settled. This was the all important item of news, and removes one of the unfavorable features. A further rally would not be surprising, but we doubt the wisdom of buying stocks on this sharp bulge. We would rather sell them.

The Cotton Market.

New York, May 5.—The cotton market opened firm at an advance of 3 to 5 points in response to higher cables and bullish week end statistics. The advance to a new high level for the week attracted heavy realizing, but there was active buying of July, which was on demand for the account of shorts and spot interests and prices advanced to a net gain of about 6 to 8 points soon after the opening. Later there were slight recessions under realizing, but the market showed a generally steady undertone.

Cotton futures closed very steady. Closing bids: May, 11.24; June, 11.10; July, 11.09; August, 10.92; September, 10.62; October, 10.54; November, 10.53; December, 10.55; January, 10.60; February, 10.62; March, 10.66. Spot closed quiet; middling uplands, 11.90; middling gulf, 12.05; sales, 1,416 bales.

Copper Gossip.

Boston to Paine, Webber & Co.: An unfavorable statement was offset by the settlement of the strike, and the markets remained fairly stationary. From now on the principal factor of interest in the market is the money rate, and as soon as we see any indication of a permanent lower rate for time money we will consistently advise the purchase of stocks. For the present we expect a traders' market, and stocks should be sold on the rallies.

THE PRODUCE MARKETS.

The following prices, with the exception of those on hay, feed and meats, are the official quotations of the Duluth Produce exchange, and shippers can rely upon them as being correct The list is corrected daily by the secretary, and it shows accurately the market condition up to 12 o'clock on the date of issue. The weekly market letter, published on Fridays, is not an official statement of the exchange, but the information is gathered personally from the different dealers.

OUR LATEST MONEY MAKING OFFERING IN A NEW SOUTHERN NEVADA CAMP.

In the new camp of FAIRVIEW our engineers were first on the ground and have secured after a thorough personal examination of the district and its properties, by our Mr. L. L. Patrick, one of the best properties in the district, indeed the best money could buy. We are going to make of this one of the first and biggest mines in the district. We want you to join us in this enterprise.

We expect to make a shipper of the FAIRVIEW KEYSTONE right from the grass roots. It has shippers for neighbors on three sides and end lines the original discovery.

The company's holdings consist of Boulder No. 4, right in the center of the richest strikes, and the Sandstorm, Apex and Pinacle, in a rich section of the district.

The same ledge from which ore is being shipped on two sides of the FAIRVIEW KEYSTONE on three different properties can be traced directly through the Boulder claim.

This ledge averages from 4 to 8 feet wide and every pound of its oxidized croppings on the Keystone carries good values and all the float is impregnated with Gold and Silver.

On the Nevada Hills property, 500 feet from the Keystone, this ledge explored at depth carried an 18-inch streak which runs $4,000 to the ton; the average for the ledge is $150 per ton. Stock in this mine for $2.00 per share in New York.

The same ledge on the Ridge & McLaughlin property on the opposite side gives a $200 average with a 15-inch streak, running $4,000. On the Wingfield group, the average four feet is $800.

For Many Years Fairview's Treasure Vaults Have Been Waiting for the Hand That Would Unlock Them.

FAIRVIEW This new and wonderfully rich camp is located at the base of Fairview Peak in Churchill county, Nevada, 45 miles from Fallon, and 60 miles south of Hazen on the Southern Pacific. For more than forty years it has been known to be a highly mineralized section but until three months ago the ledge from which the rich float came was not located. The old Comstockers thoroughly prospected the country. None of the ore pans. For this reason they passed right over the rich deposits. The old overland stage route traveled by thousands or argonauts in the days of '49 and of the Comstock, cuts the district squarly in two, and it has remained for the latter day argonauts to uncover and develop the wealth of its hills.

THE FORMATION OF THE FAIRVIEW KEYSTONE COMPANY'S GROUND, AS WELL AS THE ENTIRE DISTRICT, IS IDENTICAL WITH THAT OF THE GREAT CAMP OF TONOPAH, AND IS OF A PRONOUNCED TRUE FISSURE CHARACTER, AN ABSOLUTE ASSURANCE OF PERMANENCY.

The ores of the Fairview district carry predominating silver values which average four-fifths silver and one-fifth gold. They resemble in appearance, as well as comparative values those of the Tonopah camp, indeed the Fairview ore cannot be distinguished from that which comes from the Tonopah Extension mine. Our Mr. L. L. Patrick has just returned from the Fairview district, and he pronounces it the BIGGEST THING IN NEVADA.

Every mining engineer who has visited the Fairview district shares with Mr. Patrick his views on this old, yet new, section of a great mineral producing state. Do not overlook this opportunity. One good investment is worth a life time of labor. Stocks in good mines are better than money in any other class of securities, and we have the best—we are "IN AT THE BIRTH" on another money-making venture. The earning power of money invested in mines is vastly greater than in industrials or any other class of securities, and the investing public is fast appreciating this fact. GET IT NOW. Do not wait until Fairview Keystone is listed and pay the other fellows profit. Be one of the first. Take advantage of another exceptional offer made by this firm. Our guarantee goes with every statement we make. Our every mining venture has been a conspicuous success. All our companies have made good. We have

We are now offering you stock in a company at 20 cents per share, which will absolutely MAKE YOU A HANDSOME PROFIT. If you do not avail yourself of this offer, jot it down and see if our prediction for profits from Fairview Keystone does not come true. It is the first man in every new mining district who makes the money. We have been in the vanguard of every stampede in Southern Nevada, and our clients have secured the benefits of what we have secured. Stock in the coal strike commission, for such period of time as may be agreed upon mutually between the representatives of the anthracite coal mining companies and our scale committee, provided that all men who suspended work on April 1, or since that time, or who have been dismissed because they stated that they would refuse to work if a strike were declared, are reinstated in their former positions and working places.

THE ANTHRACITE MINERS VOTE TO ACCEPT SCALE

"Second, that the scale committee proceed at once to meet the representatives of the coal companies, with a view to securing an agreement upon this basis.

"Third, that the convention remain in session until Tuesday and the scale committee shall report to the convention at that time.

"Fourth, that the suspension of work shall continue until an agreement has been made and its terms approved by the convention.

"This recommendation was suggested by the full scale committee and was adopted unanimously by the convention. A telegram to Mr. Baer, proposing the conference on Monday was sent. If a favorable response is received the sub-committee will proceed to New York to arrange details of settlement, and will report to the convention Tuesday morning.

Scranton, Pa., May 5.—There will be no strike of the anthracite miners. That is now a settled conclusion, for such is the advice of President John Mitchell, and National Secretary-Treasurer Wilson and others of the leaders who today addressed the convention of the miners before the report of the scale committee was presented. Their addresses fully forecasted the report which the committee would make.

The suspension order will be raised, and the miners will go back to work upon the terms of the award of the anthracite strike commission of 1903, which the operators were willing to have continued, and will later seek to obtain through the conciliation board or by arbitration the bettering of conditions which they complain are working hardships on them.

Eager for the recommendation of the scale committee to guide them in deciding whether there shall be peace or war in the hard coal fields, the delegates to the United Mine Workers' convention reassembled at 10 o'clock this morning in the county courthouse. The sub-scale committee, to which was referred the detail of formulating the proposal to be submitted to the convention met again before this morning's session to put the final touches on their report. Of the two alternatives before the committee which would insure a peaceful solution of the question, the acceptance of the anthracite award had a strong support. It was urged in behalf of this plan that it would defeat the evident intention of the operators to force a strike and to arouse public sentiment against the United Mine Workers.

Those favoring the continuance of the 1903 scale refrain from asking the operators to arbitrate on the basis proposed by George F. Baer and his conferees, on the ground that the plan is unfair and does not include all the conditions which the mine workers want adjusted.

The conciliation board as the arbitrating body for local grievances is a part of the acceptance of the 1903 plan. The members of the scale committee who favor returning to work under the old scale say they will be able to strengthen the union for a more decisive struggle in the future.

Many of the delegates regard the acceptance of any of the operators' proposals as a defeat. They are of the radical element and were strong for a strike at any cost when they arrived here on Thursday. Since hearing the discussions in the convention they have not modified their opinions much, but are willing to entertain the suggestios of John Mitchell and his advisers. It is difficult for them to understand why the union will not lose prestige with the public if it sends the men back to work without gaining any concessions after keeping them idle for six weeks.

In addressing the delegates, after the convention met President Mitchell said he is opposed to a limited form of arbitration, that such a form of arbitration would jeopardize what the men already have; that it might take from the income of the higher paid men and add it to that of the men receiving less money. "I am unalterably opposed to any scheme that will tend to reduce the wages of any class of employes," he said, "it is not right to take a cent from any of them."

GIVES FUND GOOD START

Check for $25 From Mrs. J. M. Gidding for Bethel Home.

Appeal of This Institution for Aid is Peculiarly Strong.

During the week an appeal was made through The Herald for a more generous and thoughtful support of the Bethel Rescue Home by the people of the city, St. Louis county and the northern part of the state. The Home is in arrears nearly $1,500 dollars, and that this work which is doing so much for the forsaken and discouraged women was not receiving the necessary support was brought to the attention of the people. The following letter was received this morning by The Herald from Mrs. J. M. Gidding of this city:

"Enclosed is a check for twenty-five dollars which I sincerely trust will head a subscription sufficient to cover the indebtednes of the Bethel Home, one of the most worthy institutions in the city. The work of the Bethel Home has been a noble one and should not be allowed to drag for want of sympathy and support and I, for one, hearty endorse The Herald's appeal to the people."

That the work of this institution is one that appeals to every woman of the city is an assured fact and to many of them the fact that the home was in financial difficulty came as a surprise. To the sheltered and protected women, the thought of the unfortunate ones comes with a very strong appeal for sympathy and support and a prompt response will doubtless be received by the Home management by many others.

In speaking of the work this week, Miss Mary Shannon, superintendent of the Home, said: "I cannot speak of the girls and their personal sorrows. Our portion of the Bethel Journal might be made very readable and in speaking of the work in public, the appeal might be greater by citing individual cases, but it is impossible for me to betray the confidences of these girls, my friends. The need of the work is perfectly apparent and I can cite you figures and statistics, but to tell a personal story of one of these unhappy women is impossible."

Mrs. Gidding's check has been forwarded to the home and it is hoped that it may be the begining of a subscription that will remove all indebtedness from the institution.

EARNS $156,000 A DAY.

United States Steel Corporation's 'Velvet' for April Was $13,000,000.

New York, May 5.—The net earnings of the United States Steel corporation in the month of April, based on data already received, were in the neighborhood of $13,000,000, or at the rate of $156,000 a day. Earnings for April were below those of March, which is quite natural as March broke all monthly records from the standpoint of production and deliveries and was a long month. The earnings in May are expected to be near the earnings of March.

The strike on the Great Lakes, if prolonged, may cause some shrinkage in the net income of the corporation, although it will not be as effective as it would have been several years ago, when shipments of iron ore helped to swell the earnings of the company.

ELECTRIC COMBINATION.

Thirty Million Dollar Merger of Light, Power and Traction Companies.

Portland, Or., May 5.—The Oregonian says that by a deal involving a consideration of $30,000,000, every light, power and traction company in the lower Willamette valley, including Portland, using electrical energy, has been consolidated.

The purchasers are E. W. Clark & Co., E. & W. Seligman & Co., and Pratt & Co., New York. The various companies absorbed and the estimated value of each are:

Portland General Electric Company, $10,000,000; Portland Railway Company, $12,000,000; Oregon Water Power & Railway Company, $5,000,000; Citizens, Light & Traction Company, of Salem, Or., $500,000; Vancouver Light & Power company, of Vancouver, Wash., $200,000, and the Union Light & Power Company, of Silverton, Woodburn and Mount Angel, Or., $100,000. The headquarters of the new company will be at Portland.

HONORS OLD SETTLERS

The Board of Education Names New Buildings in Their Memory.

Heating and Plumbing Contracts for New Structures Are Let.

Two of the pioneer settlers at the Head of the Lakes were honored last evening by the Board of Education, when the two new school buildings in Duluth were named in their honor.

The West Duluth school was named the Ely school in honor of Rev. Edmund F. Ely, father of Henry S. Ely, and one of the most prominent figures in the early history of Duluth.

Mr. Ely was a Presbyterian missionary, who came to Duluth first in 1833, from New York. He returned to New York, and later came to the Head of the Lakes and settled here. He built the first school in Oneota, and was its first teacher. Later he was appointed the district superintendent of schools, and was a very prominent figure in the early days of Duluth. He died at Santa Rosa, Cal., about fifteen years ago.

The other school, which is to be built on Sixth street, was named the Nettleton school, in honor of William Nettleton, another early settler. Mr. Nettleton was one of the men who worked the hardest to have the town of Duluth established, and he was largely responsible for having the city named "Duluth" in honor of the great French explorer.

The board, in choosing these names, acted in accordance with the wishes of a number of the old settlers now living, who felt that the names of these pioneers should be fittingly commemorated.

Bids were opened last evening for the plumbing, heating and ventilating systems in the new buildings.

L. R. Helbing & Co. of 322 East Superior street secured the contracts for heating and ventilating, both of the new buildings. Their bid for the Sixth street school was $8,063 and for the West Duluth school, $8,577.

Stack Brothers of 117 West First street, were awarded the contract for the the plumbing and gas fitting in the West Duluth school, for $2,123 and the American Heating company secured the other plumbing contract for $2,897.

The committee on buildings and grounds presented its annual report, which contained a detailed statement of the repairs needed by the school buildings this summer.

WITTE AND M. DURNOVO

to this important post for the purpose of carrying out my intentions in regard to inviting my subjects to partake in the legislative work, I was convinced that your proved capacity as a statesman would facilitate the establishment of new electoral institutions. Thanks to your perseverance and enlightened action these institutions have now been called into existence and are ready to be opened, despite the opposition of the revolutionists against whom you have displayed your usual energy and decision. At the same time you were able on the account of your experience in financial questions to co-operate in placing the resources of the state on a sound footing by assuring the success of the new loan. In acceding to your request to be relieved of your functions I cannot but express to you my heartfelt gratitude for the many services you have rendered.

"Your ever well disposed and sincerely grateful, NICHOLAS."

Another rescript of the emperor conveys his sincere gratitude to Durnovo for his "useful and patriotic services when the enemies of public order were striving to disturb the peaceful course of public life' and assures the retiring minister that he continues to be unalterably well disposed towards him.

The members of both houses of the legislature have received invitations to attend the ceremony at the winter palace, May 10, at which the emperor will be present, on the occasion of the opening of parliament.

Despite the government's evident desire to prevent the explosion of popular passions by making a scapegoat of the Witte cabinet, in holding it responsible for the repression of the last few months, and the friendly assurances involved in the withdrawal of the fundamental laws, the liberal papers are extremely suspicious, not believing it to be a sincere change of heart, as the cabinet seemingly will contain men like M. Stishinsky the assistant of the late Interior Minister Von Plehve, who is held to be responsible for the oppression of the provincial authorities, and Prince Shirinsky Shakmatoff, the assistant of the former procurator general of the holy synod, Pobedonostseff. Even the Novoe Vremya says it is useless to attempt to claim that M. Goremykin is more liberal than Witte. The paper expresses the belief that Witte is only temporarily eclipsed and says the country cannot afford to dispense with the services of a man of his ability.

TEN PERSONS KILLED

Altoona, Pa., slightly; Engineer J. F. Fickes, of No. 18, dislocated shoulder; Fireman A. T. Cook, of No. 18, leg broken; J. H. Collins, conductor of No. 18, slightly; W. Osborn, fireman of No. 18, slightly; J. R. Carpenter, Williamsport, Pa., slightly; Mrs. Zera Triflegmeir, New Orleans, bruised head; W. J. L. Miranet, train porter, Jersey City, cut over eye; C. H. Smith, road foreman of engines, Philadelphia division, injured arm and head.

Two others sustained trifling injuries.

With the exception of the four last named, all of those injured were on the east bound train.

The disaster in one sense is the result of a costly freight wreck, which occurred at Union Furnace, Pa., last night. An eastbound freight train burst an air hose, near the forward end of the train, and twenty-seven loaded cars piled up over and blocked all tracks. On such occasions the Petersburg branch is used by the company for the movement of its passenger traffic.

The Chicago section of the Chicago & St. Louis express train, No. 21, was one of the trains caught behind the wreck, and it was given orders to come west to Altoona by way of the Petersburg branch. It was the first train to be started west over that branch. About the same time train No. 18, known as the Chicago Mail, left this city to round the wreck by way of the same branch. The two trains met head on, a short distance east of Clover Creek Junction, while running at fair speed. The collision came as a result of a misunderstanding of orders on the part of the crew of the Chicago & St. Louis express. The two engines ploughed into each other, and were wrecked, as were also the coach attached to the Chicago Mail train, No. 18, and five mail cars. The latter train, on reaching Altoona from the west, had the coach attached to the rear, but when it was sent south, over the Petersburg branch, the coach was directly back of the engine. It carried about twenty-five or thirty passengers for the East. It was almost demolished. The wreckage covered the track for a considerable distance, and some of the killed and injured were pinned under the coach.

The news of the wreck was conveyed to this city, and the first orders of the railroad officials here were to dispatch physicians to the scene from Huntington, Williamsburg and Hollidaysburg, and then to send wreckers to clear away the debris and render all the aid possible.

FOOD OR STIMULANT.

Ask your doctor if when he orders a patient to drink lots of pure milk he advises the addition of a large quantity of whiskey. He'll tell you "no" very emphatically. Yet there are people who, when ordered to get Scott's Emulsion, will accept some wine, cordial or extract of cod liver oil and think it is the same thing or better. If you want and need cod liver oil in its best, purest and most easily digested form, get Scott's Emulsion. If you want whiskey, that's another matter, but don't look for the same results.

SCOTT & BOWNE, 409 Pearl St., New York.

LITTLE BOY SHOT.

Receives Bullet in the Breast While Playing Bandit.

Winona, Minn., May 5.—Reports have reached the city of the probable fatal shooting of the 5-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Ole C. Ash, of Lanesboro. It was in a "play" hold-up that three boys, who were playing truant, coaxed the little fellow into the woods and shot him in the breast with a 32-caliber revolver.

The ball was extracted by physicians who say the child may live. A boy by the name of Dent and two sons of John Welch, aged 11 and 14 years, are charged with the act though no arrests have been made. The shot was heard by Mrs. Haberstad and the groans of the wounded child brought her to his assistance. She carried him five blocks to his home.

The boy's jacket shows a burn which indicates he was shot at close range although the boys who are suspected say they did not shoot their playmate, but declare the bullet came from the gun of a hidden marksman. This is improbable in the face of the burned condition of the wounded boy's clothing.

KILLED BY ELECTRICITY.

Madison, Wis., May 5.—George Leque, aged 21, of Sturgeon Bay, traveling lineman for the Bell Telephone company, met his death yesterday, while fifty feet in midair. He stepped upon an arc span belonging to the electric light company, and then reached up and took hold of another wire. His weight caused the arc span to sag and touch a live wire below, and a circuit was established. He was "frozen to the wire" and his comrades reached him before he fell. Three physicians worked over him for an hour, but could do nothing.

The success of the day's work depends upon the quality—not the quantity—of the day's breakfast.

It isn't how much you eat that counts—it's how much nutriment your stomach gets out of it.

Apitezo

for breakfast is the proper beginning of a successful day, because it is all nutriment, and so easy to digest that it never induces that sleepy feeling which accompanies the use of many other foods.

Apitezo contains all the necessary food elements (including those found in beef and eggs) and supplies in addition the blood-energizing vegetable iron which most foods lack.

Apitezo is a crisp, delicious cereal good for everybody. Eat it every day for a month and you will want to keep on eating it. Serve with milk or cream as preferred.

Apiteze Biscuits, 15c the package. Apiteze Grains, 10c the package.

Sold by grocers everywhere.

LABOR

NEWS ABOUT THE UNIONS

Most Interest Centered Upon Great Marine Strike Now On.

Printers Win an Important Victory in Duluth This Week.

Tonight—Bakers and Confectioners, Kalamazoo block; Boilermakers, Axa hall; Brewery Workers, Kalamazoo hall; L. T. P. A., Labor World hall.

Tomorrow — Typographical, Labor World hall; Theatrical Stage Employes, Lyceum theater.

Monday—Building Structural Alliance, Labor World hall; Barbers, Labor World hall; Stone Masons, Axa hall; Tug Firemen and Linemen, Labor World hall.

Tuesday—Carpenters, Rowley hall; Machinists, Kalamazoo; Painters, Decorators and Paperhangers, Labor World hall; Sheet Metal Workers, Labor World hall.

Wednesday—Marine Engineers, Labor World hall; Meat Cutters, Labor World hall; Steamfitters, Labor World hall; Plasterers, Kalamazoo hall.

Thursday—Builders' Laborers, 221 West Superior street; Plumbers, Labor World hall; Steam Engineers, Lyceum; Cooks and Waiters, Labor World hall; Stationary Engineers, Axa hall.

Friday—Tile Layers and Helpers, Labor World hall; Lathers, Labor World hall; Iron Moulders, Sloan hall; Federated Trades assembly, Labor World hall; Bricklayers, Axa hall.

Of course the attention of labor just now is centered on the marine strike and the threatened coal strike. However, as the marine strike is an established fact, and the coal affair is only among the probabilities, and possibly not that far advanced, the former is getting the bulk of attention.

So far not much has occurred in Duluth in connection with the marine strike. The tugs of the Union Towing company have been laid up, owing to the firemen being ordered out. The masters and engineers were, therefore, laid off, as the tugs could not run without the firemen. The firemen of the Tomlinson steamer Socapa quit work a few mornings ago, but the steamer got away on her trip yesterday morning. And that is about all that has happened in the strike so far as Duluth is concerned.

The hope in labor circles now is that the strike will be of short duration. Of course the unionists wish the strikers to win, and they believe that some compromise will be reached. The unionists as a whole have great faith in President Keefe of the longshoremen, and think he is too shrewd a man to plunge into a strife without seeing hope of settlement ahead.

• • •

The local Electrical Workers' union, No. 31, of the International Brotherhood, met Thursday night and expressed itself in sympathy with the strikers of the Electrical Workers' union in Minneapolis, who are asking eight hours and more pay from the Northwestern and Tri-State Telephone companies. The local union voted to extend to all members on strike every assistance possible in the cause of the eight-hour day, and a good living for their families, with enough to lay up against the chance of running foul of the dread high voltage wires and the general danger to life and limb.

• • •

The members of this union in Duluth who are in the employ of the Zenith Telephone company have asked for a uniform increase of 25 cents a day in wages and the company has until May 10 to answer.

• • •

Two members of the Cigarmakers' local union, Julius Dworschak and Frank Piering, have gone into business for themselves. They have started the La Della Cigar factory, at 605 East Fourth street. Both are well known.

• • •

The Federated Trades assembly will meet next Friday night and it is not unlikely that the committee on obtaining permanent grounds for the labor day celebration will have a report to make. The present chairman is Henry Deroche and he is quite energetic in this cause.

• • •

The Typographical union feels that it has won an important victory in Duluth during the past week. F. H Lounsberry & Co., one of the leading job printing firms of the city signed the union scale after remaining with the Typothetae since last October. The shop is now unionized and has granted the 8-hour day. Mr. Lounsberry was secretary of the local branch of the Typothetae. The printers are generally victorious everywhere, some of the biggest firms of the country succumbing recently.

• • •

At its meeting this week, the Builders' Laborers union initiated 18 new members and has a large list of applications still to be acted upon.

• • •

The plumbers' union and master plumbers have signed their season's contracts, the basis being the same as last year.

• • •

All of the building trades are rushed to death and scarcely men enough can be supplied for the contracts which have been let.

SHOOTS HIS SWEETHEART.

Mature Lover at Racine May Have to Answer Murder Charge.

Racine, Wis., May 5.—Lillian Cole, aged 28, was shot and perhaps fatally injured by her lover, Henry Canenos, aged 48, yesterday. Thursday night he took her to a theater, and yesterday morning went to her home and accused her of being cool to him, which she denied. Then he shot her three times. He is a hotel cook.

Floods the body with warm, glowing vitality, makes the nerves strong, quickens circulation, restores natural vigor, makes you feel like one born again. Hollister's Rocky Mountain Tea. 35 cents. Ask your druggist.

RICH STRIKES ARE MADE

Upon the Ground of the Manhattan Mizpah---Sulphide Ore is Found in Main Shaft of the Seyler-Humphrey.

Manhattan, Nev., May 5.—A succession of rich strikes made upon the ground of the Manhattan Mispah, which end-lines and side-lines the Dexter, Consolidated and Pine Nut, have made that property the scene of great interest in this camp, during the past week. Several of the leasers have proved the Consolidated ledge, which trends directly from that company's property on to the Kentucky's claim and several of them are now sacking ore, which runs $100 to the ton. Patrick, Elliott & Camp, who control this property, this week let a number of new leases, and the Mispah ground is today one of the most actively developed in this camp.

Miners working on the Seyler-Humphrey last week uncovered in the west drift of the company's main working shaft, the first deposit of sulphide ore found in the Manhattan district. It has heretofore been presumed that it would take great depth to reveal sulphides in this camp, but the discovery made on the Seyler-Humphrey ground at a depth of forty feet is one of the most favorable character, and it will contribute towards establishing Manhattan as a permanent camp. The sulphides submited to an assay test revealed values in excess of $100 per ton.

The scene of this find is that of the original discovery of gold in the Manhattan district and the property has almost weekly furnished the sensation of the camp. It was in the Seyler-Humphrey that the richest specimen ore was found in the Manhattan camp, attracting the attention of hundreds of mine operators and sightseers almost from the time which the first stampede to the district occurred. The company is preparing a shipment of ore to the smelter which runs high in values, and a contract has been made with a new mill at Central to treat the milling grade ore of this property.

In the main working shaft of the Seyler-Humphrey a west drift is being run to catch the vein which was uncovered on the surface and which gave phenomenal assays, that contributed very much to the early fame of the camp. Ore, and quite a quantity of it, that runs as high as $20,000 to the ton was taken from this rich vein and it is believed that at a depth, it will develop into the biggest thing in the camp.

ONE LEGEND OF COPPER MINE

Diamond Set Ring Found on Finger of Skeleton---Property Bears Earmarks of Having been Operated 200 years or More Ago.

There is an interesting legend handed down by the Indians in connection with the property of the Hidalgo Mining company, which is located in Mexico, about eighty miles from the town of Douglas, Ariz. The property is on a mountain and bears all the earmarks of having been operated at least 200 years ago, possibly longer. The surface in places is covered with old fortifications made of stone, arastras and other evidences of early occupation, and in addition there is a large dump showing that the property is old.

Last year or the year before two young Americans leased the dump and began shipping it. While engaged in loading the rock they discovered two skeletons, one that of a woman, on one of the bony fingers of which was a diamond-set ring. The setting was upside down, showing conclusively that the bodies had been buried not less than 150 or 200 years, for in that period diamonds were always set in rings in that shape.

The ring was turned over to Professor Douglas, after whom the town of Douglas, Ariz., was named, and the professor sent it to Tiffany & Co., of New York for examination. The stone was pronounced genuine and of three carats. Indians say that a battle was fought on the site of the Hidalgo many years ago and that the skeletons are evidently those of some of the tribe who were victims of their opponents, although it is not known who the warring factions were.

The Americans have made a lot of money out of the dump, notwithstanding they have paid out 45 per cent. royalty since they took hold of it. In excavating the ground they ran across slag, indicating that the early operators of the ground used some sort of a process for smelting the ore.

The Hidalgo property is owned by Charles J. Cutler, Ed. L. Mahoney and others of Butte and William Adamson, formerly of Butte, but now mayor of Douglas, Ariz., and one of the leading spirits of that section.

In regard to the property the International-American, published in Douglas, says:

"W. M. Adamson returned yesterday from a visit to the Hidalgo mine, nine miles west of Nacozari, where extensive development work is going on. This property was secured by the Hidalgo Mining company, composed of local people mostly, three years ago and some surface development was done. Mr. Adamson was one of the original stockholders in the company, which, however, discontinued work for more than a year. Mr. Adamson was so impressed with the showing that when he retired from the Copper Queen company after the smelter of the company was completed he made a proposition to the company to take a bond on the Hidalgo and put his individual means into its development. This was arranged and he at once made a camp and started the work.

"The results were so favorable that he determined that the mine was worthy of more extensive development than he felt individually able to carry. He invited some of his old friends in Butte, Mont., to join him in the further development of what he considered a most flattering copper showing. After the Montana people became interested hoisting machinery was installed. This was early in this year.

"The shaft has now reached a depth of 300 feet. In the bottom is the best ore that has yet been encountered in any of the workings. Mr. Adamson's visit to the mine was for the purpose of examining this ore, which he describes as a sulphide mixed with quartz. Drifting from the 300-foot will now be started. The drift to the east will be run to cut a vein that is 275 feet wide o nthe surface. The vein will be cut at a depth of 500 feet from the surface. The drift to the west will be run 35 0feet to cut a body of ore encountered in a surface tunnel.

"Mr. Adamson is very much elated over the showing in the Hidalgo, and if his expectations are only partly realized there will be another important copper producer added to the Sonora list in the near future."

CRIPPLE CREEK DISTRICT

Lower Workings of El Paso Mine May be Soon Recovered by Pumping---Wishbone Cyanide Mill Will Start Early in July.

Colorado Springs, Colo., May 5.—The lower workings of the El Paso mine, which were recently drowned by the tapping of the main water course, though still under water, may be soon recovered by pumping. Water is receding in the C. K. & N. and Old Gold, on Beacon Hill and in nearly every mine on Raven Hill, in proportion as it is being lowered in the El Paso.

The Pittsburg Leasing company, which holds a ninety-days' option on the Rose Maud for $75,000, has just shipped several tons of ore from the 400-foot level, returns from which are estimated to reach $50 a ton.

The Wishbone cyanide mill, on Mineral Hill, will start early in July with 150 tons daily capacity. Several big veins of low grade ore opened on the north slopes will keep the mill running. The dry process of cyaniding, an innovation here, will be tried.

The Portland shaft house, recently burned, is being rapidly rebuilt. The mine put out 7,500 tons during April, or about two-thirds of the usual tonnage. The regular dividend, $180,000, will be paid in July, and in addition the extra, $120,000, may be paid. Owing to the fire loss only $250,000 was disbursed in April.

Much interest has been shown in a placer field, eighty-five miles west of Colorado Springs, on the Colorado Midland road. An area of fifteen miles east of Salina is covered to a depth of 75 to 100 feet with a tufta formation, or volcanic dust, which came from Pike's Peak crater when it was active in prehistoric times, contains pay gold, when treated by the cyanide process. It is a dray placer proposition. Assays show a trace to $40 values. The Chicago Salida company has been in the field for some time. Numerous prospectors have rushed in and staked claims. Steam shovels are used in mining. The dust can be treated for 80 cents a ton, it is claimed.

The old Mint property, on Creede Mountain, near Empire, Colo., has passed into the possession of the American-Gilpin Mining company. A shoot carrying a two-foot streak of fine smelting ore, and an immense body of mill stuff, has been opened. The new owners will vigorously develop the property. The old adit will be advanced to intersect the shoot found in the new workings. Regular shipments are being made, returns from seventy-four tons giving $4.50 a ton saving on the amalgamating plates, and twelve tons of $35 concentrates.

The Jefferson-Calhoun Mining company has purchased the Jefferson, West Jefferson, West Calhoun and Capital Prize on Quartz Hill, near Central City, Colo. The company is composed of Chicago and Western Pennsylvania capitalists. New machinery will be installed, buildings erected, Jefferson and West Calhoun shafts sunk to 1,000 feet depth, and vigorous development made at $100,000, probable cost. Production will wait on these improvements. The property is over the Central and Lucania deep tunnels, just west of the Newhouse tunnel, hence its veins will be cut at 2,000 feet depth. The surrounding area has produced $50,000,000 in gold.

The ores from thirty-two patented claims of the Wilfley group of mines, near Kokomo, Colo., are being sampled by the projectors of a mill. The old mill is turning out large quantities of high grade concentrates. Large quantities of iron sulphide ore, rich in gold, silver, lead, iron and zinc, have been exposed in the Wilfley and Milo mines.

The Fortune Dyke Gold Mining company, operating at Gold Hill and Jamestown, near Boulder, Colo., are pushing development in order to maintain steady shipments.

A shipment of smelting ores from the Hillhouse mine in Russell district has returned values as follows: Gold, $159; silver, $.9; copper, $62. Total, $250. Providence, R. I., capitalists recently acquired possession of the mine, which has a good record, with but little development. Other mines in the Central City region are showing up well.

ACTIVITY AT NORTH BUTTE

Rich Ore Uncovered on 1,700 Level of Jessie—Thomas F. Cole Transfers Former Heinze Properties to Red Metal Company—Arthur C. Carson to Take Charge.

Butte, Mont., May 3.—The work of installing new equipment at the North Butte properties is going steadily on, and indications are that the machinery will all be in place by June 1. At that time it is estimated that 1,500 tons of ore will be hoisted through the Speculator shaft each day, and the stockholders will doubtless realize handsome profits during the remainder of the year.

Exploration on the 1,700-foot level of the Jessie resulted in the discovery of some ore bodies of as high value as those encountered in the same property at a lesser depth.

Under the able direction of Arthur C. Carson, the North Butte properties are being developed in a thorough manner, and the ensuing year will probably place the mines belonging to this company in the front rank of Butte producers.

A deed to mining properties in Silver Bow county, formerly under the control of A. Augustus Heinze and his associates, was filed in the office of County Clerk and Recorder Gilroy this week. The deed is from Thomas F. Cole and wife of Duluth, Minn., to the Red Metal Mining company, incorporated under the laws of New York. The consideration named in the big deed is $1. The Red Metal Mining company is subsidiary to the Butte Coalition, the former being the operating and the latter the holding company in the combination. The two companies named are reputed to be the successors to the interests formerly held by the United Copper company.

The deed was executed at Duluth, April 23 last. By its terms the following property is transferred to the Red Metal Mining company:

Ellen, Applegate, Copper, Copper No. 1, Copper No. 2, Lucky Jim, Robin Hood, Smuggler, Defender, Bachelor Girl and Lucky Star lode claims, one-half interest in Dropper, one-sixth in Harris, Lake Copper lode claim, mineral rights under a number of lots in Fausett, Kemper, Talbott & Jones and Rice additions to Butte, interest in Dayton strip, Rarus, Johnstown, Pennsylvania, Tramway and Snohomish lode claims, two-thirds interest in Mountain Chief, Little Ida, one-half interest in Mountain Chief, two-fifths in Vulture, Minnie Healy, Zone, Oden and Seward lode claims, mineral rights under lots in Warren & Kingsbury addition to Butte, one-fourth interest in Parnell lode claim, thirty-one thirty-sixths interest in Nipper, four-fifths interest in the L. E. R. lode claim, one-half interest in the Fairmount, Balm lode claim, Schwizer lode claim, one-half interest in the Belmont, Copper Trust lode claim, Rejected, five-eighths interest in Receiver, mineral rights under certain lots under the Belmont and Leggat & Foster additions to Butte, one-half interest in Taffy lode claim, one-eighth interest in Black Diamond lode claim, one-fourth interest in Black Warrior lode claim, Calliope lode claim. Interests in the following lode claims: Pompey, Wild Goose, Clinton, Montana, Kincaid, Lioness, Scottish Chief, Exemption, Highland Chief, Memorial, Halsey Blackfoot, Robert Emmet No. 1 and Robert Emmet No. 2, all of the Corra and Rock Island lode claims, interests in the Old Glory, Silver Queen and Kentucky lode claims, mineral rights under certain lots in the surface of the Snoozer lode claim and in certain lots under the following additions to Butte: Blackfoot, Henry, West Excelsior and Great Western.

It is stated in the deed that a portion of the property described is subject to a mortgage for $1,000,000 given by the Montana Ore Purchasing company to Stephen E. Nash, as trustee, bearing the date of Sept. 28, 1897. Also other portions of the property described in the deed are subject to a mortgage for $2,500,000, given by the Niper Consolidated Copper company to Max H. Schultze, as trustee, the mortgage bearing the date of June 8, 1901.

Word was received from New York during the past week, stating that Arthur C. Carson, general manager of the North Butte properties, had been appointed to take charge of the operations of the Red Metal company. Mr. Carson has announced that George Moulthrope, for many years foreman at the Pennsylvania mine and one of the best known miners in Butte, has been promoted to the superintendency of all mines formerly operated by F. Augustus Heinze but now controlled by the Red Metal company. The promotion is a material one and the many friends of the ex-Pennsylvania foreman will be pleased to learn of his well deserved recognition. The position to which Mr. Moulthrope succeeds was the one held by William Kidney during the time that Heinze was operating the properties. Mr. Moulthrope will have direct supervision over all the mines owned by the Red Metal company, which is subsidiary to the Butte Coalition company.

The Butte-Milwaukee Mining company is increasing its Butte possessions. During the week it bought the Florence and Stonewall claims, located north of the Col. Sellers, which gives it five claims and a portion of another in that mining district and five or seven claims in the Argenta district of Beaverhead county. The Florence has a seventy-foot shaft on it and has a twenty-five foot vein of ore that carries from $7 to $10 in silver and gold per ton. The croppings on this claim are iron, indicating copper below.

HEINZE IN NEW COPPER FIELD

Looks Over the Mines of the Bingham Consolidated—Property Likely to Be Taken by American Copper Company, Now Being Floated by J. A. Coram—A. D. Thomson of Duluth Interested in Giant Chief Company.

Salt Lake, Utah, May 5.—After two days spent in an inspection of the properties of the Bingham Consolidated company, F. Augustus Heinze, the Butte mining operator and politician, left Salt Lake for New York and Boston. He declined absolutely to talk about the business that brought him here, though his friends declare that he was more than pleased with his first peep into the mines of Bingham. It had been his purpose to make one day in the camp serve his purpose, but on his return the first night he stated that he wanted another day in the mines, and he took it. As the annual meeting of the Bingham Consolidated company was postponed pending Mr. Heinze's inspection of the properties, the presumption is that it was for the purpose of his determining what should be done in the future. It is the belief in mining circles here that the Bingham properties and the Balaklala, in California, are headed for the American Copper company, the flotation of which is being engineered by Joseph A. Coram, with Mr. Heinze associated. When rounded out this proposition will have taken over several properties in Butte and the mines of the companies mentioned, together with their smelters, and, as this is not to be carried through until July, it is possible that no changes in the Bingham Consolidated will be made at the present time, unless it may be in the manner of handling the properties, as suggested by Heinze and his engineers.

Alfred Frank and other Heinze engineers have been much in evidence at the Bingham camp for some time past and it is significant that during the big operator's stay here another big company for the camp was launched. H. I. Wilson, the Butte hotel man and operator, who was a member of the Heinze party, together with Willard E. Snyder, who was prominently identified with the rounding up of the Bingham Consolidated company's properties in the earlier history of the company, were members of the board of directors of the Giant Chief Mining company, which entered into possession of a large group of patented mines wedging into the United States company's possessions. These include the Rough and Ready, Grand Cross, Giant Chief and other mines, which have a record of having produced over $1,250,000 from surface workings, together with the properties of the old Ilion company of Ilion, N. Y. A. D. Thomson, the Duluth operator, and several Eastern bankers are identified with the proposition, and while his name does not appear on the curface there is a feeling here that Mr. Heinze himself is also in the game. At any rate it is his engineers who are to plan the campaign at the properties and the statement is made that they will be placed in the producing lists again before the dawn of another year.

S. A. Higbee, who is operating the Big Fourteen company's property in the State line district, southwestern Utah, is in the market with a carload of ore that carries $900 in gold and something over 1,000 ounces of silver per ton. He is taking ore from a twenty-inch streak in a ledge discovered on the surface by him a short time ago and he expects to clean up a fortune before his lease expires.

It is expected that contracts for the structural steel for the 5,000-ton concentrating mill of the Boston Consolidated company will be awarded during the coming week. The necessary buildings in which to house the force of workmen, store supplies, etc., are now practically completed and Engineer A. J. Bettles states that work will be pushed rapidly as soon as the grading is completed.

The Comstock and California mines at Park City are to be consolidated and a $1,000,000 company organized during the next few days to operate them. W. S. Cornick, the well known banker, owns the Comstock and the stockholders of the California company yesterday attached their signatures to an agreement with the banker to have the two groups of claims handled together. The new company, it is said, is to be organized on lines that will permit of taking in other mines in the camp and a powerful corporation, with many fine properties is expected to be the ultimate outcome of the move just made.

It is now stated that the Hoperine company's property at Stockton, is likely to fall into the hands of the United States Smelting, Refining & Mining company. A half dozen combinations have been after this property for weeks, and when the deal with Peter Haack of Los Angeles was broken up two or three weeks ago it was believed that either the American Smelting company or Samuel Uewhouse would land the prize. The Hoperine is undoubtedly one of the biggest lead-silver-coppper mines in the state and its acquisition by the United States company would be a fine stroke of business.

LAKE SUPERIOR COPPER MINES

Baltic Amygdaloid Lode Forty Feet Wide in the Superior Mine—Sinking Shaft on Challenge Property Resumed—The Keweenaw Company Steadily Adding to Its Territory by the Purchase of Adjacent Tracts.

Calumet, Mich., May 5.—Work in the crosscut on the third level of the Superior mine has penetrated the hanging wall of the Baltic amygdaloid bed. The formation is slightly more than forty feet wide at that point, with copper bearing values for the entire distance. Drifting upon the formation at the third and second levels will be started immediately, the second level drift having been discontinued a short time ago to permit the concentration of work in the crosscut. Sinking in the shaft will also be resumed, and it will be bottomed at the fourth level as soon as possible.

Sinking in the shaft which is being opened on the Challenge property of the St. Mary's Mineral Land company, has been resumed, after a suspension of three months. Work was discontinued the first of the year because the old hoist had reached practically the limit of its capacity. It will do service for a short time more, however, and the new hoisting engine from the Nordberg shops at Milwaukee, Wis., will go into commission soon. The Challenge shaft has attained a depth of 430 feet. It had not been decided how much further the shaft will be sunk before starting development work on a lateral scale, but sinking will be continued to an additional depth of 100 feet at least. The Challenge shaft is vertical, but the crosscuts which are required to reach the lode are short, owing to the steep pitch of the formation.

Sinking in the new shaft which is being opened on the property of the King Philip Copper company is progressing steadily and it should be bottomed on the solid rock in a short time. The overburden at that point is fifty feet thick and the shaft is going down one foot a day, having already passed a depth of forty feet. The opening is in the form of a vertical drop shaft, but it is so constructed that it can be converted into an incline shaft when the skip road is built.

No steps have been taken at the Winona mine yet toward the opening of the new shaft south of No. 3, but the warm weather makes such action imminent. It will be necessary to survey for the site of the shaft first. The location will be determined largely by the results of the investigation of the depth of the overburden. Capt. John Broan, formerly at the Champion, has succeeded Capt. J. O. Peterson, who has been in immediate charge of the underground work at the Winona mine for the last seven years.

It is reported that the Calumet & Hecla Mining company has secured control, through one of its subsidiary corporations, of a tract of 250 acres of land northeast of the Mohawk mine in Keweenaw county, and plans exploratory work there this summer. No confirmation of the report can be obtained, but it apparently is well authenticated. The tract which is reported to have been secured by the Calumet & Hecla interests is known as the Bacon & Jacobs property and it carries the Kearsarge amygdaloid belt.

Since the formation of the Keweenaw Copper company the corporation has steadily added to its territory by the purchase of adjacent tracts and its area, either owned outright or controlled, in Keweenaw county now aggregates more than 15,000 acres. During the last few months the Keweenaw company has secured control through associated interests practically the entire shore line of Mosquito Lake, besides extensive tracts of adjacent property, as well as many miles along the banks of the Montreal river and the shore of Lake Superior on either side of the mouth of the stream. Mosquito Lake constitutes an immense reservoir of lasting water supply at an elevation of 500 or 600 feet above Lake Superior,

ON THE MESABA RANGE

Steel Corporation to Open Mine in Section 26, 58-17---Mahoning Mine Will Ship About 1,000,000 Tons This Season---Longyear Was Acquired by Jones & Laughlin.

Eveleth, Minn., May 5.—(Special to The Herald.)—Following diamond drill operations in progress for a year or more, the Steel corporation is preparing to open a mine in Section 26, 58-17, near Eveleth. The company controls ten forty-acre tracts in this section, and it is said that enough is known of the ore depositis to practically assure the development of a mine rivaling the giant Fayal in importance. In the same field are the Malta, Pettit and Hobart properties. The new mine will be developed by both the underground and open-cut systems. Four of the remaining forties of Section 26 are in the possession of Governor Higgins of New York and associates.

The Williams mine at Biwabik, formerly known as the North Cincinnati, is being reopened by the Thomas Furnace company of Milwaukee. The property has two shafts, one of which was sunk shortly before operations were suspended, three years ago. The ore does not run high in metallic iron, but it is of good structure, working well in furnace practice, and it is expected the property will henceforth operate steadily until exhausted. A shafthouse is being constructed over the new shaft. Ore shipments will be started in about a fortnight.

The Mahoning Ore Co., half of the capital stock of which is owned by the Cambria Steel company and the remainder by the Steel corporation, Republic Iron & Steel company and other interests, will ship about 1,000,000 tons from its Mahoning mine this season, an amount which has represented the annual output of the property for several years past. The company owns a very large acreage, as yet undeveloped, in the Hibbing district, some of it adjoining its present gigantic producer, and sufficient is already known concerning the ore bodies to indicate reserves of truly enormous extent.

The Longyear mine, at Hibbing, has been acquired by the Jones & Laughlin interests, and not by Pickands, Mather & Co., as reported in some quarters. The Mayas Iron company's property, on the Eastern Mesaba, will make an initial shipment of about 150,000 tons this season, it is expected. The ore is going to Two Harbors, over the Duluth & Iron Range road. The deposit at the Mayas is so located on a hillside that it is mined very cheaply, the ore being dumped through chutes directly into the cars beneath. The overburden, which is very shallow, is being removed by steam shovel.

It will not be long before the Western Mesaba extension of the Duluth, Missabe & Northern road is in commission, and the development of the Steel corporation's Canisteo, Holman and other mines will then go forward rapidly. It has been necessary to haul all supplies and material by team from Grand Rapids, and during the winter this furnished profitable employment to farmers in the vicinity, many of whom netted from $800 to $1,000 for their few months' work. It is a conservative estimate that 100 teams were employed in the freight transportation during the winter. At one time seventy of these were engaged in hauling coal to the Canisteo and Holman properties, where in all about 8,000 tons of the fuel were delivered. Other commodities handled were lumber and various other kinds of construction material, boilers and machinery. The average load for a four-horse team ran between 8,800 and 10,000 pounds; the record was 15,500 pounds, or more than seven and one-half tons. The biggest load hauled by a single team was 8,800 pounds.

THE MENOMINEE RANGE

Option on Morgan Property Taken by Rhodes Iron Company---Ore Body at Baker Property Penetrated by Corrigan, McKinney & Co.

Iron Mountain, Mich., May 5.—(Special to The Herald.)—The newly organized Rhodes Iron company, of which John C. Eden of Chicago, is president and which is operating a number of mines on the Mesaba, has taken an option on the Morgan property, in the Iron River district of the Menominee range, and is preparing to begin diamond drill operations there. The Morgan is very favorably located. It adjoins the Caspian mine of Pickands, Mather & Co., and the McGillis and Fogarty properties. Some exploring was done on the tract a few years ago, but not enough to determine its mineral worth. It is understood that the Rhodes company is also to come into possession of the Section 12 mine, adjoining the Baltic and the Fogarty, and considered one of the most promising properties in the district. The mine has been opened up to the third level on which a fine body of ore was recently encountered. It is controlled by the G. W. Youngs Mining company. The Buffalo & Susquehanna company has abandoned the Kinney property, a tract in the Iron River field, nothing having been found there, and has transferred the drill to the Buchholtz property, where it is now in commission.

Difficult operations, extending over a period of several months, have been successfully concluded by Corrigan, McKinney & Co. in the Stambaugh valley, the ledge overcapping the ore body at the Baker property, having been penetrated at a depth of about 100 feet. The overburden was quicksand and gravel, and the work of sinking through it constituted a problem which other companies that at different times held the tract under option, did not care to tackle. Both the drop method and the lathing system were used by Corrigan, McKinney & Co., and although the sinking was very slow and tedious it has been attended with entire success. The ledge proved to be an ore formation running about forty per cent iron. It was not intended that the shaft should strike the clean ore and it was put down at a location some distance from the point where the deposit was penetrated by the drills. Now that the shaft has been ledged, the sinking will progress much more rapidly. It is expected that a fine mine will be opened up.

An extensive cave-in occurred recently at the old Quinnesec mine, near Norway, Menominee range. About an acre of ground gave way and fell a distance of about a hundred feet into the abandoned workings with a crash that for a time occasioned consternation among the people of the location, it being thought for a while that an earthquake had occurred. The waterworks pipe leading from the pumping station to the reservoir was broken by the collapse of the surface beneath it. There are no building at the mine, except the old engine house, from which the machinery has been removed, and no particular damage can be done if the entire surface gives way. The Pewabic Mining company's property at Wauceda, which has been in course of development for the past year or two, will this season ship somewhat more than the 25,000 tons forwarded last year. The ore is low in metallic iron, but there is a considerable body of it and it is the expectation that the quality will improve with depth. It is reported in mining circles that the Clergue interests have become interested with the S. Dessau company in the Millie mine at Iron Mountain. A circumstance presumably confirmatory of this is that the Millie has been shipping some ore to the steel plant of the Consolidated Lake Superior company at the Canadian Soo. The freight on this ore has averaged about $30 a car.

THE MARQUETTE RANGE

Cleveland Cliffs Company Has Added Considerably to Its Holdings---New Shaft on Breitung Hematite Property Completed.

Ishpeming, Mich., May 5.—(Special to The Herald.)—The Cleveland Cliffs Iron company, one of the biggest "independent" operators in the Lake Superior region, has recently added considerably to its mineral holdings on the Marquette range. In one case it has taken over a lease to the Iron Duke property for a term of ninety-nine years. The instrument is executed by Albert M. Bigelow, president of the Iron Duke Mine, a corporation organized under the laws of New York, but which never maintained an office in Michigan. The consideration named is "$1 and other valuable considerations." The Iron Duke lands are 160 acres in extent and adjoin the Cleveland Cliffs company's holdings northeast of the city limits of Ishpeming. Since 1899 they had been held under lease by the Marquette Mining company, of which D. R. Hanna of Cleveland is president. The tract, however, has never been developed. By the terms of the lease the Cleveland Cliffs company will pay the sum of 5 cents a gross ton for all iron ore taken from the Iron Duke lands.

In the territory a few miles southwest of the city of Marquette, a field in which indications of ore have been found, but which has never been systematically explored, the Cleveland Cliffs company has taken over a tract of some 1,600 acres of land from the Pittsburg & Lake Superior Iron company and will at once test it with the diamond drill. According to the terms of transfer, the Pittsburg & Lake Superior company reserves an undivided one-half interest in all the mineral rights, it being expressly stipulated in a contract entered into between the two corporations that should producing mines be located at any time within the tract the Pittsburg & Lake Superior company is to be paid a royalty of 15 cents a ton for all ore assaying 58 per cent in metallic iron. Ore showing less than 50 per cent iron is to be paid for at the rate of 5 cents a ton. It is also provided that in case a mine is opened either company is to have the first right of purchase from the other, the price for the undivided one-half interest to be agreed upon mutually. It has been the popular opinion that the district being outside the mineralized area of the Ishpeming and Negaunee fields, it had little prospect of witnessing the development of mines, but the fact that the Cleveland Cliffs people have found it desirable to become interested is held to indicate that they have knowledge of mineral values not shared in by the general public. The general trend of their Marquette range exploration of late years has been in that direction. The Cleveland Cliffs company's new Austin mine, to the south of the new field, is developed on lands of the Pittsburg & Lake Superior company.

Another step in the movement instituted a year ago by the Cleveland Cliffs company for the reforestization of its large area of cut-over lands will be the establishment of a forest-tree nursery

One of the leading events of the month will be the presentation of the great play, "The Reformation of the Sixteenth Century," which will be presented at the Lyceum theater Thursday and Friday evenings, May 24 and 25, under the auspices of St. John's English Lutheran church of this city. Many people prominent in musical and dramatic circles will take part in the affair, and a large list of patrons has been secured.

Clubs and Musical

The annual meeting of the Saturday club was held last Saturday afternoon at the library. The officers elected for the ensuing year are: President, Mrs. H. S. Ely; vice president, Mrs. Julia M. Barnes; Second vice president, Mrs. Imogene Lectra; recording secretary, Mrs. A. H. Brocklehurst; corresponding secretary, Mrs. E. L. Paddock, and the two board members elected were, Mrs. A. W. Nichols and Mrs. John Currie. The club will continue the study of Russian history and literature until Christmas during the next club year, with three lectures on Russian literature by Prof. James A. Merrill of Superior. For the remainder of the year and the year following, the art, history and literature of Italy will be the study.

The annual meeting of the Bishop's club was held Tuesday evening at Cathedral hall. The election of officers took place and resulted as follows: President, Miss Ella McHugh; first vice-president, Mrs. H. S. Ely; second vice-president, Mrs. D'Arcy of Superior; secretary, Mrs. D. P. McDonald; treasurer, Mrs. Bellperche; librarian, Miss Teresa Lynn, and historian, Miss Nellie Hally.

Following the election of officers an informal social hour was enjoyed. Miss Florence Hyland sang, and readings were given by Miss Agnes Poirier and Miss Shesgren. The club will study Spain next year.

First Wedding Reproduced for Fortieth Anniversary

By EMMA PADDOCK TELFORD.

My Dear Mrs. Telford:—

Will you kindly inform me what preparations are to be made for the celebration of a wedding which is to take place this month, it being the fortieth anniversary? What decorations should be used and favors suitable to the occasion? Respectfully,

MRS. I. A. B.

It seems to me that in celebrating the fortieth anniversary of your wedding, the most delightful thing for guests, host and hostess alike, would be the reproduction as far as possible of the original wedding in stage setting, costumes, decorations, refreshments and entertainment.

If not too late, why not write to each to your expected guests, asking them to come dressed as nearly the style of a half century ago as they can manage. If the entire costume is not practicable the women can do their hair and dress their necks as was the custom then, and the men can affect the old style hairdressing—parted in the middle of the back and brought around in front of the ears. Any old family pictures or illustrated books of that period will give a pattern to go by. Ask them also to bring with them or send in advance as many old ambrotypes or photographs of themselves as they can find. When they arrive number the pictures, arrange in rows on a large table, have pencils and slips of paper ready for each guest, then let each one in turn examine them, writing the name of the subject opposite the number on the slip of paper. Offer a prize for the one who is able to recognize the greatest number of pictures.

Have the rooms decorated with old fashioned flowers, keeping to one general scheme of color. If you use yellow, and nothing is more sunshiny for early spring, there are yellow tulips, yellow pansies and the dear "daffy-down-dillies." If you prefer to carry out the idea of the fortieth anniversary, which is ruby, use dark red flowers, the rambler roses, dark tulips or carnations.

If you have any of the old dishes of a half century ago, use them and be thankful. If not, the prettiest you have. For the refreshments try also to reproduce the past. If native born Americans, there was doubtless chicken in some form, pressed or in sandwiches; tongue, pickeld oysters, old fashioned home made pickles, ice cream with ginger pears or brandied peaches, wedding fruit cake, pound cake, gold and silver cake, and coffee. If you have a piano get a book that has the old war songs, "When Johnnie Comes Marching Home," "Dixie," "Bonnie Blue Flag," "When This Cruel War Is Over," "Maryland, My Maryland," "Tenting Tonight," etc. Then take the goood old sentimental ballads, "The Mocking Bird," "Rosalie, the Prairie Flower," "Juanita," singing in concert, unless the spirit moves for some one to sing the solo all joining in the chorus.

If you have room to dance, tread a few measures of the square dances for old time's sake, the lancers, money musk, Virginia reel. Try the old fashioned games once more, Copenhagen, Forfeits, Pillow, Keys and Post Office, and see if your muscles are as limber and your thrills at being "chosen" as keen as they were forty years ago. If you have a fireplace, even though it be simply a gas log, turn the lights down low, and sitting round it, give each one an old fashioned riddle, song or story.

Try to reincarnate the old atmosphere and make yourselves the gay young people of forty years ago, just for tonight. It is astonishing how many long forgotten incidents will come back to you in such environment. For favors why not use some of the pretty Easter flower boxes or baskets in violets or roses of satin ribbon or crepe paper with a slice of wedding cake in each?

Smart Models for Street, Reception, Dinner and Evening Wear

Every spring time there are more gowns that are absolutely necessary. All the other costumes can be chosen after these dresses are home and ready to wear when occasion demands. First in importance is a smart street dress, and no pains should be spared to have this gown becoming. Of all the gowns a street dress has most constant wear, and hence should be particularly attractive. Essential, too, in the spring, is a handsome afternoon dress for weddings, luncheons, etc. This gown may be of voile or rajah, or of some light silk that will be suitable also the following winter. The third gown that must be provided is a pretty evening dress—not necessarily very expensive, but of a new and becoming model and of some material quite unlike those from which the winter ball gowns have been fashioned. From La Nouvelle Mode are taken the five attractive spring toilettes that are described below.

There is no material so serviceable as crepe de Chine and for this is always in style. There are many new varieties of crepe this year, among them the foulard crepe de Chine, from which is made the first gown here illustrated. This gown is of deep rose pink, made with an elaborate guimpe of lace and embroidered net. On the shoulder cape are "motifs" of Valenciennes, the same idea being carried out on the side panels of the skirt. A decided empire effect is attained by the narrow black velvet girdle. Tiny bow knots of the same ribbon are placed in front and back of the waist, and in the centre of each bow knot is a small rhinestone buckle or button. The skirt, which is joined on to the waist, is unusually full, falling loose from the gathers over the hips. The train is very long, as is necessary with all empire gowns.

Of lavender silk is the next gown illustrated. This shows the bolero effect that is at present so popular for all street dresses. The vest is of Valenciennes lace with five small bow knots of pale mauve satin placed down the centre. The satin scarf on the bolero of the same pale shade of satin edged with lace. The bolero is tucked over the shoulders and embroidered in the same shade of silk on the sleeves, as well as the jacket. The bolero is edged with narrow Valenciennes ruchings. The scarf passes through two dull gold loops. On the skirt is a wide band of embroidery edged with lace and plaited taffeta ruchings.

The evening gown shown is of white chiffon elaborately lace trimmed. The model is elaborate, trimmed with lace shirring and considerable hand embroidery. The bodice is made with a bolero effect of cloth of silver, the same forming wide panels down each side of the skirt. The sleeves are formed of five rows of gathered valenciennes.

The tailor gown in Fig IV. is of blue serge, the jacket embroidered in the same shade of silk and relieved with the little white-embroidered liner collar. The high plaid belt makes the jacket like one of the new empire models. The skirt is long, simply trimmed about the knee with two rows of braid.

Of fine check voile is the last gown shown. This waist also shows a lace guimpe and on this gown also the revers, or shoulder capes, are trimmed with medallions of lace applique. The binding is all of taffeta the same shade as the material. Cuffs and belts are of tiny straps of the silk over white. The train skirt is trimmed with taffeta bands and large lace medallions.

Flowered Silks for Dressy Gowns

By A. T. ASHMORE.

Of all the new materials this year flowered and figured silks are perhaps the most attractive. Every day there seems to be offered new designs of new colorings in the different qualities of silk and taffeta, so that if there is to be only one silk gown in the outfit it is a most difficult task to choose between the bewildering array of attractive materials. There is certainly more variety now than was the case even a week ago. The advance spring silks are at last pretty well sold out, so that the textures now ordered are sure to be in every way quite new.

For the spring, taffeta gowns should be as cool as possible. It is often said that in this climate only two outfits are necessary—one for winter, the other for midsummer—so sudden and decided are all changes of temperature. This is, of course, an exaggeration, and yet it is the greatest mistake to have the spring gowns made of too heavy materials. For lining, as light a silk as practicable should be chosen, and many of the simpler silk dresses are lined with lawn. China silk is sometimes made use of, but this as a rule gives little satisfaction. For the sake of economy, lawn or percaline lining is used. There should always be a full silk ruffle at the end of the skirt, so that the dress will hang out well about the feet. On all formal afternoon occasions skirts are now being cut with a decided train. A few models have the round skirt, just touching all around, while the shirtwaist gown still clears the ground sensibly and comfortably.

Princess gowns will be worn right throught the summer, and while this style is by no means the only one in vogue, it is unquestionably the most popular design. Empire gowns are being modified so as to be made becoming to the American woman, but this requires a master hand, and any other model is infinitely safer. A sort of half empire effect can be attained by sloping the wide belt well down in front and allowing it to come up almost to the end of the bertha in back. This idea is seen on a few of the new French models and is already being adopted to no small extent. The bolero and princess gown that is all in one piece makes an especially useful style of dress, as it always looks well for street wear, even in the light shades.

Check and plaid silks are extremely fashionable this spring and are being made up in the most elaborate way with lace and hand embroidery for handsome afternoon gowns. A black and white striped silk is immensely serviceable at all times, and while not popular in cloth or voile is seen a great deal in silk. Lavender check is particularly pretty but indeed so are all the spring shades—blue, pink, green, etc. The striped silks are as popular as the checks. Striped louisine and striped chiffon taffeta are both good, the effect of course depending largely upon the color that is combined with white.

The majority of flowered silks have this year a white ground, but still there are to be found some exceedingly pretty striped taffetas having a little embroidered figure or flower. For example, a tan and white stripe with a small blue forget-me-not flower, the gown being made up over blue silk and having a touch of deep blue velvet in the trimming. With a yellow straw hat trimmed with different tones of blue this gown would be exquisite.

Jars of Damascus Brass Now Used for Jardinieres

Jars of Damascus brass with quaint ornamentation, many of them having duplicate representations of ancient hieroglyphics, are among the popular jardinieres in use this season for the piazzas of summer cottages, drawing rooms or even for lawns. In company with other decorations for summer estates, jars and jardinieres generally are more ornate than ever, but to be entirely acceptable must follow the antique in one way or another. Unlike the models of last season that were made with flat bottoms resting on the floor, all the new designs, whether of brass or porcelain, are set upon feet that raise them several inches from the ground.

Upon the Damascus jars are very frequently seen Assyrian horses and ancient warriors, and besides these there are conventional patterns in hammered brass, showing flowers and small scroll designs that are decidedly effective. These jars are quite within the reach of the purse of the average woman, for it is possible to buy plain designs for $1, others anywhere from that sum up to $100.

Japan, the Flowery Kingdom, furnishes us with much that is decorative in the way of garden ornaments, and one design that hails from this country is made in imitation of teakwood, with strange dark red and brown Japanese birds and flowers upon it, which can be bought for the small sum of $15, which is small considering its beauty and effectiveness.

Terra cotta jardinieres, plain and with curious Japanese flying fish, are favorites with many and these can be purchased for 75 cents and upward. Unglazed jars in combinations of green and brown can also be purchased for the same price.

Window and porch boxes in imitation of carved Italian marbles are most luxurious looking and are used in the grounds of handsome estates along with quaint sun dials, marble fountains and all the other decorative features of the up-to-date summer garden. Replicas of noted friezes are reproduced in these boxes and some of them are rarely beautiful. While for the most part, they are quite expensive, good plaster copies can be bought for a reasonable sum.

Innumerable designs of hanging receptacles for flowers to be had for comparatively small sums, the most artistic of which again bear the imprint of Japan. Quaint baskets of dark brown wicker, either with handles or without, are fitted with long slender glasses in which Wandering Jew, English ivy or other vines or flowers can be kept for an indefinite period. Others in glazed porcelain, in light green, blue or deep red and dark indigo blue in curious cornucopia shapes, resembling dogs' heads or elephants' heads are most attractive.

There are hanging baskets in brass and porcelain attached to ropes hung on pulleys that are very ornamental when filled with growing vines. Some are hung under rustic canopies, which make them doubly effective. In green or brown, heavily glazed, these baskets cost from $2 up, while the ones made from stamped or hammered brass sell for $1.50 and upward.

Using One's Mind

A well trained mind is a valuable asset in life for a woman, and if she is not one of the few blessed by nature with it she should strive to attain it. The old tradition that women have no minds to cultivate has fallen entirely into decay, but it is still true that many appear to have none, and at mature ages use theirs with infantile inefficacy.

The fact is that the average woman never has used her mind at all, or so little as not to develop it. By development is not meant intellectuality, but through sheer, though unconscious, mental laziness many women have never exercised the original brains with which they began life, and so the mind is no larger or stronger than when one was a little child. Every part of her has grown except that.

This is undoubtedly due to the fact that the average woman, ever since she was a little child, has had some one to think for her. When she was a scrap of a tot and wanted to rig a plaything, some parent or other relative, thinking it hard, and loving her, did it for her. She reaped the benefit without working it out for herself. As she grew older she was forbidden or allowed to do things by her mother, who thought out the why and wherefore, but rarely if ever let her daughter reason along with her.

As a girl she is told that a thing is or is not proper for a young lady, and after she marries her husband decides for her.

The result is that when it comes to any but the most trifling things she is incapable of deciding or doing anything, and she is far more likely to "forget" than to remember. A woman who can go down town to do a morning's shopping without taking a list of her errands with her is an exception.

A man goes through his entire business day without ever using a list, unless occasionally he has been called upon to do something so entirely foreign to his life that there is reason for its escaping his memory. But the difference between the man and the woman's way of doing is entirely one of mental practice.

A man trains his mind from the time he is a small boy and is obliged to rig a home-made line if he would go fishing. Mother will not do that for him, and father is not there to do it; if he would fish he must make his own tackle, and from that time on he works mentally for what he desires to have.

A dwarfed mentality, the feminine and childlike tendency to "forget," is more serious for a woman living a business life than one who spends her days in her own home. Forgetfulness is one of the chief faults among young women down town, and is more responsible for inefficiency than a desire to shirk work.

A man who employs many women in his office or business will say that he does not always feel as certain that one will carry out an order given as he would if he had given it to a man. If a woman understands that the order is important, or that it is to be done immediately, she will execute it; but if it seems to her unimportant, or may be done as well in an hour as that moment, it is by no means positive that it will be done. The matter may have been one of the utmost importance, and failure to do it may have serious consequences, but the only excuse she has when asked is that she "forgot."

There is no way so certain of training one's mind as always to work out a way of doing the thing that is to be done; not asking some one else to do it, or to tell how it should be done. A woman rarely looks up an address that she wishes; she gets some one else to do it for her; if she confronts any difficulty she promptly sits down and says "I can't." She is too childish to be ashamed to be defeated by a thing.

Any woman who thinks that because she knows how to do things herself, she must do them; that no one will do them for her, makes a great mistake. One who does for herself all the time, if she has some one to do for her is foolish or over-independent. But it is extremely valuable to be able to do things, and the very fact that a woman has a well-trained mind will make her able to know when to use it, and when to let some one else do the thinking. She will also, if thrown upon her own resources, not be the pitiable and helpless creature many are because they never made themselves use their minds.

Tempting Ways of Cooking the Finny Delicacy, Filet of Sole

By EMMA PADDOCK TELFORD.

Filet of Sole.

My Dear Mrs. Telford:—

Very kindly publish a recipe for filet of sole; also how to remove the bones from it. If it is not asking too much of you, will you also publish recipe for Delmonico and O'Brien potatoes—in fact all the recipes. Thanking you, I remain, very respectfully,

MRS. J. J. V.

I think you will have trouble finding the real English sole in this country, but the more plebeian flounder answers the purpose extremely well, and the majority of people do not know the difference. Get as large ones as possible. Ordinarily the fish man will remove the bones for you,—but you can do it yourself without much trouble. Take off the head first, then with a sharp knife make a deep incision down the length of the back, being sure that the blade reaches the bone all the way. Now, using the knife, loosen the flesh from the bone each side of the cut working toward the fins. Turn the fish over and repeat the process on the other side, when the whole bone can be lifted out. Take the scissors and cut away the fins, then remove the skin from the fillets by laying each piece flesh side up on a board or stiff paper, then dipping the thumb and finger in salt, hold the filet firmly working the skin loose with a downward pressure of the knife.

Having the filets ready they may be prepared in several different ways.

To Fry.

Wash the filets, wipe dry, dust with salt and pepper, roll in flour, then in beaten egg and lastly in fine bread crumbs. Place the dish in the refrigerator until about twenty minutes before you wish to serve the filets. Then fry in deep boiling hot olive oil or lard. When done dish with fried parsley as garnish.

To Saute.

Dust with salt and pepper. Put a lump of butter or a couple of tablespoonfuls of olive oil in a frying pan, and when hot add a slice of onion and a few sprigs of parsley. Cook two or three moments, then add the prepared filets and cook to a delicate brown.

Filet of Sole in Turbans.

Take the bones and fins of the fish, cover with water, add a tiny bit of onion and parsley, and simmer gently for half an hour. Strain and return the liquid to the fire, adding a half teaspoonful salt. Roll the filets into a turban and fasten with a wooden toothpick. Immerse gently in the boiling water ,adding at the same time a tablespoonful lemon juice. Cook about ten minutes until firm and white. Take out, season with pepper, stand on end in a hot dish and cover with a bechamel sauce made by cooking together a tablespoonful each of butter and flour, then pouring in a cup of mixed milk and the liquor in which the fish was cooked. Garnish with cress.

Filet of Sole With Mussels.

Wash a quart of fresh mussels, cleaning with a knife, then put in a saucepan over the fire long enough to have them open. Watch and stir frequently. Remove the mussels from the shells, and strain the juice through a collander. Put the juice back in the same pan with the fins and bones of the sole or flounder, add a sliced onion, two sprigs parsley, a clove, part of a bay leaf, a salt spoon of salt and a cup of white wine. Simmer ten minutes, strain, then make a white sauce as before, using a tablespoonful each butter and flour and a cup of the fish liquor and milk. As soon as this reaches the boiling point add the filets and cook four minutes on each side. Remove, lay on a hot dish and put the mussels in the sauce long enough to heat thoroughly through. When well heated, arrange about the filets. Have the yolks of two eggs beaten, add to them a tablespoonful of the hot sauce and a half tablespoonful butter. Take the saucepan from the fire, add the egg mixture, stirring gently, then pour over the dished filets and mussels.

Filet au Gratin.

Make a forcemeat of fine bread crumbs, moistened with melted butter and seasoned with a little minced onion, shredded parsley, salt and pepper. A few mushrooms minced are also an addition. Season the filets with salt and pepper, and having buttered the bottom of a pudding dish, or if preferred, placed on the bottom a thin slice of fat pork for each filet, lay the fish on this bed. Now spread with half the forcemeat, adding to it a generous sprinkling of minced pickle, lay a second layer of filets on the first, cover with the remainder of the forcemeat and more pickle, and over all sprinkle a thin layer of fine, well buttered crumbs. Pour into the pan a cup of veal or chicken stock and an equal quantity of white wine and bake in a steady oven for twenty minutes. Remove to a hot platter, or, preferably, serve in the dish in which they have been cooked with a garnish of sliced lemon and parsley.

Delmonico Cream Roll.

Peel and chop fine a half dozen raw potatoes. Add just enough cream sauce to hold the potatoes together, the amount depending upon the size of the potatoes. Put into a buttered casserole or shallow baking dish and set in a pan of hot water in the oven. Cook until the potatoes are done, then roll over like an omelette. Let them stand a few minutes longer to crisp slightly, but they must not brown. Turn on to a heated dish and garnish with thin slices of crisped bacon and parsley.

The O'Brien potatoes I do not know by that name. It would seem, however, that they might be potatoes boiled in their jackets, then steamed until mealy. I will try to find out, however, what the method of preparation is, and will then let you know.

Lingerie Pillows in Odd Shape for Baby

Dainty as the little creatures that rest their heads on them are the new baby pillows which are being exhibited in the shops that make a specialty of infant's belongings. Everything about these pretty head rests is of the most dainty order, the material of which they are made being only the finest and sheerest obtainable and the embroidery done in softest French cotton.

Among the different shapes popularly used, the heart-shaped pillow is perhaps the best liked, for the reason that it combines so much of sentiment about it. Beside the shape, which is symbolical, the pattern worked over its surface shows sprays of tiny forget-me-nots done in white cotton.

All the embroidery and decoration on these pillows are done in white, as being especially typical of the innocence of babyhood. In some cases the work is more solidly done, but there should be nothing that is harsh to hurt the tender head of the baby. About the heart-shaped pillow is a three-inch wide ruffle of the finest handkerchief linen, of which the slip is made, hemstitched about the edge. Real torchon lace edges the carriage pillow, which is also hemstitched in a three-quarter inch hem.

A pretty crib pillow is oblong with a ruffle at each end only, and is embroidered in an attractive design of butterflies. Another design shows swamp grasses with fleur-de-lis and summer insects sipping the honey from them.

In every case the slips are separate, being buttoned on, the pillow slipped in from an opening at the back, so that it can be removed at any time when the slip needs laundrying. One can pay almost any price for these infant accessories, but even the cheapest seem high to a woman with a small purse. Probably an exceedingly simple design can be purchased for $5, but nothing for less than that price. Most women prefer making and embroidering their own pillows in anticipation of the little new comer, and if this is done they can be gotten up much more reasonably and the work is always a labor of love.

A very pretty design, especially suitable for a small baby, is that composed of Empire wreaths, which, interlaced with perhaps loops and festoons of ribbon, make a most attractive pattern. Down is used for the pillow part, and should always be of the lightest and softest obtainable.

Things Women Should Not Do in Trying to Clean Paintings

At house cleaning time, when every-thing is being renovated, many industrious housewives attempt to freshen their pictures by applications of cleansers. Now, touching canvas or paper with chemicals or simple home remedies is a hazardous undertaking, according to an expert workman, and one that often results in completely destroying the values, especially in pastels and water colors. If pictures done in either of these mediums are soiled or the colors blurred, the only remedy is to have them retouched, and this must be done by an artist.

"I have known women to attempt to wash pastels," said he, "with the result that the delicate shades disappeared and the picture was practically spoiled. Imagine trying to get a small speck of dirt from a large patch of beautiful water color with a wet cloth. There would be a white spot left every place the cloth touched, and the picture would be ruined unless an experienced person could be found to retouch it with shades that exactly correspond, otherwise it would have a patched effect with a line plainly visible where the fresh color was applied.

"Many women attempt, also, to freshen oil paintings by applying a raw potato cut in half, so that the starchy end can be rubbed over the canvas. Oil paintings will, of course, stand much of this home cleaning before any real harm is done to the colors, but the starchy substance has exactly the same effect in deadening the sharp lines as the alkali in soap if it were used in water. I have known women to apply lemon to expensive oil paintings, with the result that the colors were so deadened it cost several hundreds of dollars to restore them to their original beauty. Aside from wiping off oil paints with a soft chamois, and dusting with a light feather duster, or else blowing the dust from pastels or water colors, the less these beautiful ornaments are cleaned at home the better they will look.

"There is more freedom in the treatment of engravings than in any of the others, and if a woman is expert in the use of chloride of lime in removing spots and stains from cloth, etc., and feels sure that she not only knows the right proportions, but just the length of time it takes the acid to remove the soil, they can be cleaned quite successfully at home. Care should be taken not to let them stay in the solution too long, or the paper will be bleached so white that it will almost be destroyed, and the lines of the subject will become so dim they will lose their strength. On the other hand, if the engraving is not left in the cleanser long enough the spots will not be removed, and the work will count for nothing.

"My advice to the woman who wants any kind of a picture cleaned is to spend a few dollars and have it done properly by one who understands the business, especially if they are valuable."

NOTICE TO CONTRACTORS.

Sealed proposals will be received by School District No. 2, Itasca County, Minn., from May 5 to 12 o'clock M. May 19th, 1906, for the heating, plumbing and ventilating of a new High School Building to be erected at Coleraine, Itasca County, Minn., according to the plans, specifications and details on file at the Duluth Builders' Exchange or the office of the architect, J. J. Wangenstein, Duluth, Minn.

All bids must be accompanied by a certified check for $250.00, payable to E. J. Anderson, Treasurer, said check to be forfeited by the successful bidder in case he fails to enter into contract and furnish a satisfactory bond in an amount equal to the contract price agreed upon, within five days after the award.

The said school district reserves the right to reject any or all bids.

The sealed proposals must be marked "Bid for the Heating, Plumbing and Ventilating of Greenway High School, Coleraine, Minn.," and addressed to the undersigned, in care of J. J. Wangenstein, Architect, Duluth, Minn.

By order of School District No. 2, Itasca County, Minn.

Jumpers and Play Aprons for Tots' Outdoor Wear

A Practical Play Apron.

The days of the shovel and pail are at hand, and provident mothers are getting the little folks out of door toggery in readiness, so that they can dig to their hearts' content and not be afraid of soiling their clothes. It is bad enough to be dressed up on formal occasions, but when play time arrives small boys and girls want to be prepared for it, and for this there is nothing quite so satisfactory or practical as the jumper, which is a combination of apron and overall.

Jumpers are made from simple checked gingham, denim or chambray, the denim being perhaps the best wearing material of the three. They can be slipped on over the little house frocks, for, being ample in width, they can accommodate both the petticoats and the skirts as well. Or if the day be warm enough, the dress may be slipped off, leaving the petticoats and undergarments and the jumper worn over these, which provides for an easy redressing of the little ones when the play hour is over.

The play aprons are so simply made that there is scarcely a need for patterns, being a straight piece of cloth hemmed, shaped out under the arms and held with broad straps across the shoulders, a pleat being arranged at either side of the front and back to provide the necessary fulness. This style apron is worn over the little dress, and as the season advances and the days grow warmer, it will be worn over the underwear only, leaving the arms and neck bare.

Still another play apron is something of a combination of a pleated Russian blouse and an old-fashioned apron. It is full length and somewhat shaped to the sides, three box pleats back and front, being stitched to below the waist line and then left free to give the skirt fulness. The sleeves are full length, and the cuffs and turn down collar trimmed with a white tape.

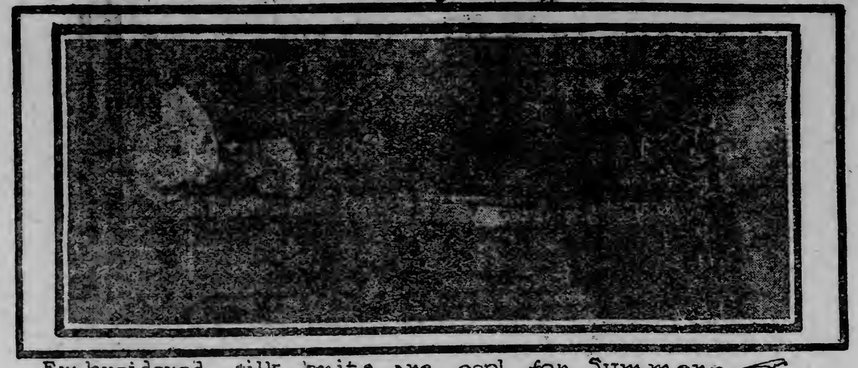
Sun bonnets are the favored headwear for the small folks; that is, favored by the mother, for the little ones themselves usually perefer no headgear at all. However, the doctrine of hardening children need not extend to burning their delicate skins, and light and comfortable little bonnets of white and colored lawns will afford protection without any discomfort. These are made scoop shape, flaring a good deal, fine featherbone cordings, run close together, keeping them in shape and not affecting their laundering or cleaning qualities. The back has a full shirred crown, and the front of the scoop is finished with a ruffle or two of simple embroidery.

Black undressed kid for general wear.

New gauntlet style for duck costumes.

Embroidered silk glove for long sleeves.

White glace kid for dressy occasions.



Embroidered silk mits are cool for Summer.

Mitts Are to be Worn With Thin Gowns in Hot Weather

Gloves are a subject of vital importance to womankind this summer, since fashion deems them such a necessary part of the wardrobe. Since the demand for the long styles to wear with the short sleeves the supply has lessened, but the manufacturers are now turning them out in such numbers that it is expected there will be a slump in prices before many weeks.

For the extremely short puffed sleeve the long evening gloves must be worn, in order to wrinkle becomingly and not show an expense of bare arm. For dressy occasions the white glace are best liked, though the undressed kid are in perfectly good taste.

For general wear, particularly for the woman with a limited purse, a pair of long black gloves is the most practical thing possible. They can be procured now for $2.75 a pair and upward.

There is a new gauntlet style that is well liked by women for white duck costumes, especially with the pony coat or other styles that have long sleeves. They are also serviceable for driving.

For wear during the hot summer days there are several styles of silk gloves, both long and short, that will be seized upon to wear with light-weight gowns. One is a short white kid glove, embroidered about the wrist and across the back of the hand, while the other is in the shape of a mitt, silk and embroidered in white. The mitt reaches to the elbow without wrinkling, and has the advantage of being not only cool, but becoming.

Blue and White Rooms Liked by Society Girls This Season

To have a blue and white room is the aim and ambition of society girls just now, and scores of summer homes are being renovated to the extent of having the sanctum sanctorum of the daughter of the house turned into a real sky parlor, so far as the color scheme is concerned. Even the charming flowered chintzes are being sacrificed in dens and boudoirs for sky blue satin damask, which is the material that has caught the taste of the summer girl.

For window draperies, upholstery, shirt waist boxes, hat cabinets, handkerchief and glove boxes, picture frames and waste paper baskets, made up after the Renaissance design, decorated with quaint French prints and gold passementerie such as has been so popularly used with the flowered effects, the damask is utilized.

It comes in the most charming patterns. One of the most popular is that of the French Empire wreaths interspersed with polka dots, all in the same shade. The fabric is composed of silk and linen, with the silk thrown up on the right side, and is not expensive, as it is very wide, selling at $2.90 a yard, fifty inches wide.

In the blue room the paint is ivory white, and the underdraperies for the windows the same tint. Dressing tables may be made of the damask, the mirror framed with it. Among the dainty and pretty accessories for the toilet table made up in the damask are the picure frames, which are covered with the fabric, bound with narrow gold passementerie, the opening for the photograph outlined with it and perhaps a decoration added, consisting of a small French print of some old time French beauty.

Collapsible waste paper baskets are fascinating made up in the damask, and the shirt waist cabinets are dreams of loveliness. Beside the French wreath design, there is another showing a watered effect over the material, which is almost as well liked as the other. There is really nothing that can be used in a girl's room that does not lend itself to this attractive material, and the effect when finished is most satisfactory.

Women Depositors Use Banks as Boudoirs

Though women do strange things in banks, it's in the waiting rooms that the most unusual occurrences take place. Their eccentricities are more conspicuous because they are supposed to be businesslike when they have large accounts, and the vanities that most of them possess seem out of place.

According to a maid employed to assist the women depositors in one of the largest New York city banks where they are especially accommodated, their peculiarities are decidedly humorous.

"Now, intelligent and businesslike as many of them are, you'd think that they would carry purses or bill books in their chatelaine bags," she said, "but no—the wealthiest of them put the rolls of bills in their stockings for safe keeping, or in a pocket made in their petticoats. Now, imagine a woman walking out of here with two or three or even five thousand dollars tucked carelessly in her hose, and yet I have had them tell me repeatedly that its really safer than in a wallet worn around their necks, while as to putting it in a purse, they would not consider it safe for a moment.

"One woman comes here regularly every morning to deposit a certain sum of money, which she carefully extracts from her stocking. She is wealthy and lives up in the Nineties, yet she walks down town and back just to save the car fare, for she tells me that by keeping the pennies she will never know want. I have often heard her say that people are poor because they spend too much on food and so she eats but two meals a day. Usually after she banks she is so exhausted from the long walk that she sits in a corner and sleeps for two or three hours before tramping home.

"Though a waiting room in a bank seems hardly a place for eating lunches, yet many of them bring their mid-day meal every time they come to either deposit or draw money, and sit around eating sandwiches and drinking cold tea, coffee and milk, instead of going to a lunch room. These are some of our millionaire depositors, too, and women who can afford to have luxuries at every meal.

"Frequently they rush in and ask me to button their waists, or help them with a collar, or even with their hair, declaring that their maids are busy or had left and that they were in such a hurry to get to the bank that they had no time to get properly robed. It is no uncommon thing for them to bring a change of clothing and put on a fresh shirt waist in the middle of the day, or a fancy waist for a matinee. On several occasions I have seen women bring in handsome dinner gowns, which they have put on just before the bank closed, so that they would be ready for dinner or a late afternoon reception. Of course most of this is done by out of town women, yet frequently city depositors who live way up town bring in a fresh collar or shirt waist when they intend to remain in the shopping district all day.

"Along with the changes in clothing there are towels, brushes, combs, powder, etc., in fact everything that they would need in their own dressing rooms, and they have a really comfortable time here getting themselves in shape.

"There is one woman who insists on bringing me her old clothes, and she rarely comes in without a bundle of them under her arm. Many of these she has already cut and made into bandages, which she tells me will be handy in case of sickness, and suggests my giving them to my friends.

"The women who bring in their pet dogs do the funniest things. Some of them brush and comb the animals despite my protests, and put on fresh ribbons, so that they will look well when they go out on the street.

"One woman brings a drinking cup for her pet to eat and drink from, and feeds it dainty tid-bits at the lunch hour. Another insists upon using the silver mugs that our patrons dring from, declaring that their dogs are quite as clean as the women who use the cups. I always get the soap dish when I see them putting the mugs on the floor, and once or twice the women have taken their pets and left in anger because I said that their animals must use the soap dish and not the mugs."

THE CENTENNIAL RECALLED

Just Thirty Years Have Elapsed Since President Grant Opened Philadelphia's Exposition---The First of the Big American Shows.

Philadelphia, May 5.—(Special to The Herald.)—Thirty years ago, on May 10, 1876, the Centennial Exhibition at Fairmount Park in this city was opened by President Grant in the presence of 250,000 people. Up to that time it was the largest and most comprehensive enterprise of the kind that had ever been attempted. More than that, Gen. Joseph R. Hawley of Connecticut, president of the Centennial commission, and the public-spirited citizens of Philadelphia, who privately subscribed $1,000,000 besides expending as a municipality $1,125,000, conceived and carried through their plans in a period of profound financial depression. The state of Pennsylvania appropriated $1,000,000 for the building of Memorial Hall and congress also voted assistance. Philadelphia had been selected as the place for holding the exposition, meant to commemorate the 100th anniversary of American independence, against the rival claims of Washington and New York because of its central location, facility of access, ability to provide for crowds and their transportation, its available park space and its historic buildings and associations.

Four hundred and fifty acres of land were set apart for the purposes of the exposition, 236 of which were enclosed and used. Within this space 200 buildings of all kinds were erected in two years, putting from sixty to seventy acres under roof. The main exhibition building was then the largest covered structure in the world. It cost $1,500,000, occupied twenty-one and a half acres of space and had twelve miles of exhibits, the contributions of thirty different countries. Machinery Hall coverel twelve avres and Agricultural Hall ten acres. Besides these there was Memorial Hall built for permanence, Horticultural Hall, the United States Government building for which congress appropriated $500,000, the Women's Pavilion and the Shoe and Leather building. The total attendance until the exhibition closed in the autumn was in round numbers 10,000,000 persons. In spite of the hard times people came from every part of the United States, often making great sacrifices in order to attend. One of the results testifying to the educational value of the exposition was seen in the love of art and tasteful furniture and decorations which from that time continued to increase throughout the country.

The Philadelphia Centennial Exhibition was the fifth of the great national shows. The first had been the Crystal Palace exhibition at London in 1851, under the direction of the London Society of Arts. It had nineteen acres under roof and eight miles of exhibits contributed by 15,000 exhibitors. During the one hundred and forty-four days it was open the attendance was 6,170,000 and the receipts $2,444,718, leaving a net surplus of $700,000.

The second great exhibition was the International Exposition at Paris in May-November, 1855. This had a roof area of twenty-four acres, with 24,000 exhibitors, and was visited by 4,500,000 persons. Afterwards came the second French exposition in 1867 and the Vienna exposition in 1873. Besides these five, there were smaller exhibitions in 1855 in New York and in Cork, Ireland, and one in London in 1862.

Since 1876 the Chicago World's Columbian Exposition of 1893, the Paris exhibition of 1900 and the Louisiana Purchase exhibition at St. Louis in 1904 have far surpassed "The Centennial" in size, cost, magnificence and variety of exhibits. Yet Philadelphia's show probably had greater influence upon the people of America than any of these, both because it was the first ever seen in this country, and because it marked by unmistakable material proofs the progress of the United States and its importance in the family of the nations. Nowadays we accept these things as maters of course; but at that time, inspite of all our boasting and self assertion, we had to show the world the actual facts before we could quite convince ourselves of the truth of our own declarations.

At Philadelphia the celebrated Corliss engine, then the most powerful in existence, was the centre of attraction. The crowd never tired of watching the tremendous sweep of that great machine. Yet the most important exhibit in the whole great show, and the one which has held the most far-reaching effect upon human affairs, was an insignificant little apparatus, seen by comparatively few and attentively considered by still fewer. This was the telephone, shown by Professor Alexander Graham Bell. The first telephone instrument bore no resemblance whatever to the perfected instrument used by the Bell companies in 1906. "Homespun and rudimentary," Sir William Thompson called it, but the essential parts were there and it did its work.

During the autumn of 1876, Mr. Bell and his co-worker, Mr. Thomas A. Watson, using telephones connected with a telegraph line extending two miles, from Boston to Cambridgeport, talked together for some time with complete success, being the first men who ever communicated by telephone over any greater distance than a few yards. But it was at Philadelphia that telephonic conversation was first carried on in public. It is said that the first complete message ever sent was Hamlet's soliloquy—a selection which hardly seems calculated to encourage telephonists, or, indeed, any other class of human beings.

In the year following the Centennial exhibition the first Bell telephone company was formed, and almost immediately a succession of law suits began which lasted for many years; but the company gained every one of them and firmly established its patents and the rights appertaining. After a few years the business became so extensive that Mr. Watson began to think that a certain prediction of his made in 1877 and immediately repented of as too improbable, might possibly be fulfilled. This prediction was to the effect that in 1900 there would be 100,000 telephones in the country. It was so far fulfilled, or rather over-fulfilled, that there were nearly 650,000 telephones in this country in 1900; and in the present year the Bell companies count more than 2,500,000 subscribers. The rapid growth and general adoption of the telephone has been far and far beyond anything which could have been imagined in the early days of the instrument, when only a few scientists even faintly understood its immense significance. The Philadelphia exhibition would have been worth all it cost and more had its sole result been to bring to the attention of the world the invention of the now universal talking instrument.

TOWN and COUNTRY GOWNS

A NEW ARRIVAL IN COATDOM

THE COUNTRY CLUB COSTUME

THE HAND MADE MODES IN LINEN

NOVEL EFFECTS IN EMBROIDERY

A GIRLISH DINNER GOWN.

The Week-end House Party Brings the Two Together—Smart and Modish Traveling Frocks—The Country Club Costume—Outdoor Pursuits and More or Less Formal Calls—The Knack of Clever Dressing for Such Occasions.

Hostesses nowadays are vastly given to deprecating their own belongings and entertainments, and oftentimes this leads to the mystification, if not the undoing, of the unsophisticated guest.

"Just only an informal dinner; a few of ourselves," she will telephone; and the invitee, as the French so expressively term the guest, gets into her second best dinner frock, omits her more impressive jewels, and arrives to find that it is a truly regal function, some 10 or 20 small tables, a caterer in command, and everybody—save her own mortified self—wearing her best bib and tucker.

The hostess in her country house is even more given than is her city sister to this misleading mode of invitation.

"Do run out on the 5 o'clock express on Friday afternoon," she will write. "There will be nobody but ourselves, and if things get too dull for you to stand over Sunday, why we can telephone to town for one or two of the boys to come out. Don't bother with luggage (it is quite the correct thing, you know, to say luggage instead of trunks or baggage) just bring along a suit case, and that's all. The trap will meet you at the station. Now, don't forget, the 5 o'clock express from town; and don't bother about dress; a shirtwaist suit will do."

All this does sound most alluringly like a quiet and restful time. But the experienced guest has learned by now full well how to read between the lines; and she shrewdly guesses that there will be a dance at the country club, very likely, on Saturday night, and doubtless every other woman in the place entertaining a house party for it. Then there are usually a few visits to make, a trip to the races—for it is quite the thing to be somewhat horsey in society—a game or two of golf or tennis or scoush, if not all three of them; and then there is the inevitable bridge, to be played after dinner every evening, and all of this seemingly simple program demands a change of costume, and costumes appropriate to each and every item on the menu de plaisir.

One little Southern girl, up North for a visit to distant relatives, received just such an invitation a week or two ago. In her own small town South, where hospitality is rife, the expectant hostess always explained just what the prospects of entertainment were. Whether it would be a dinner, a garden party, a dance, or what not, the guest was always prepared beforehand, and knew just what to put in her trunk according. But up here North just an invitation similar to that quoted was sent, and taking it literally she merely took a suitcase and her dressing bag, on arrival to find what she termed "a company dinner," with every woman decollete, a dance at the country club to follow—and she with only her traveling gown and a selection of lingerie blouses to wear!

Now, there are certain rules and laws as inflexible as those of the Medes and Persians, which altereth not, which the week-end guest is expected to observe. One of these, and perhaps the chief one, is that her trunk be of such size as to be readily accommodated upon whatever conveyance is sent to meet her at the station. The necessity for sending a baggage wagon to the depot is one that is recognized only when a number of guests are expected at once.

The trunkmakers have risen to meet this obligation beautifully. Now one can purchase what is known as a week-end trunk for somewhere in the neighborhood of a $10 bill. This is usually of some fiber material, covered in patent leather, the corners well protected with sole leather, and when empty is so light that one can readily lift it by the handles. There is a single tray in the top, and a little partition that slides into any one of two of three grooves, thus making a special place for a hat underneath the tray. An evening gown, one for afternoons, a little country club dress—if one be athletically inclined—and some few blouses will be easily packed into this, and the tailor-made in which the journey is made will complete the necessary outfit.

By the way, this so-called little country club frock is the invention of a leading Fifth avenue tailor. He includes the great majority of names in the social register among his clients, and, although he does charge what may seem an exorbitant price for a simple little gown, nevertheless there is usually such a chic smartness in its every line that the fastidious in dress pay it unhesitatingly.

The hairline striped serges and flannels, the open-checked mohairs, the cream-white panamas and cheviots are what are preferred for those simple little gowns. There is a shirtwaist top, usually left open at the throat and with a broad sailor or a Dutch collar. The sleeve may be either half or three-quarter length, and loose enough to be comfortable without rolling up for golf or tennis. One can, of course, fill in the open throat with a silk or a sheer linen chemisette, but it is far smarter to wear the throat open and exposed nowadays. The skirt to this must clear the ground all around, but is not to be of ankle length that formerly prevailed. It must be fitted, however, with the heelless shoes that are worn, for a skirt that catches when one takes a backward reach or run in tennis or squash is a danger to be avoided.

The impression that is made upon arrival often either makes or mars the pleasure of a visit, and so a smart chapeau and a faultlessly tailored gown are selected for the journey. A sheer lingerie or linen blouse, faultless gloves and shoes and a smart veil—and the veil is well-nigh as important as the hat—complete the toilette. And, by the way, it were just as well to have the coiffure attended to the last moment ere leaving the city. The best hairdressers will so wave the hair that it will retain the curl for several days when so requested, and if a hair net, one of the all-over invisible kind, be deftly adjusted at the last moment one can be sure of a correct coiffure that will "stay put" for the period of the visit, at any rate.

A smart gown that will do for luncheons and possible afternoon drives and visits were a wise addition to the week-end trunk. While occasion may not arise to need it, still the consciousness that it is there is a comforting one. Of course, when this is included, a hat somewhat more dressy than the one worn upon arrival will be required, and gloves to match.

The Craze for Coats.

The Coat is Prominent Upon Everything, Perhaps, Except the Ball Gown—Coats of Many Persuasions—Snappy Little Jacket Effects for Tea Wear and the Bridge Coat.

The craze for coats amounts to a perfect furore in the season's fashions, and one wonders just where this craze will reach before the season's done.

For one thing, the popularity of the princesse gown and the corselet skirt—and these are two very different things, be it known, although the average dressmaker will persist in confounding the two and making the titles interchangeable—accounts in a large measure for this, and the revival of the styles of the Louis period seems to have done the rest.

In the princesse gown, as accepted by the fashionables, some addition is necessary to adapt it for street wear. That old-fashioned phrase, "goin' out in her figger," which Mary Wilkins uses in her novels of New England life, would seem to be peculiarly appropriate to those princesse frocks when worn out of doors; for, if correctly fashioned, they must define every line and curve of the figure faultlessly.

This brings the little bolero prominently to the front, for the latest cut in this is such as to give the impression of an outdoor wrap without in the least interfering with or covering up the essentially smart lines of the gown.

And abbreviated in the extreme are the best of these. Just below the line of the bust shows them at their most fetching best in front, while the shoulder blades mark the lowest line to be touched in the back. And, really, this is all that is essential to either appearance or health, for this brings protection just where it is most needed—over the chest and lungs—and makes for that little finishing touch which the street toilette demands.

Those smart and really French-looking little caracos are at their smartest when worn over a very full skirt. Some of even the best makers in New York commit the error of posing them over skirts that display stitched-down pleats over the hips and a flat effect generally for the skirt top. This brings about a lack of harmony in the lines of the costume and really militates against its success. The flowing line of the loose little coat should be met with an equally loose and flowing line in the skirt, else the balance between the two pieces of the costume is lost, and it looks more like a grievous misfit than anything else.

Quite the opposite to the favored bolero is the new design in auto coats. These are expected to cover up the gown effectively, to have full-length sleeves approaching a cape size in fulness, and to be so loose and easy of fit as to be almost baggy all over.

But where the coat reigns supreme is in those semi-negligee garments that appear only in the intimacy of family life. The little coffee jacket of the morning hours, which one may wear even to the breakfast-room without at all incurring an infraction of the ethics of dress, cannot be too dainty. It must, of course, as befits the time and place, be of rather simple cut and plain appearance. There are some charming ones in China silk and crepe de chine, to say nothing of all of those of lingerie persuasion, which to see is to covet and to covet is usually to possess.

The extreme of looseness characterizes the breakfast jacket, and accordeon, side and sun pleatings are all called upon to lend their aid to achieving the desired voluminousness. An open neck and a half sleeve, too, are characteristic of the later mode, and both lace and ribbons are liberally used for trimming effect.

The tea jacket, on the contrary, makes use of elaborate materials and rich effects. Brocades, Chinese and Japanese embroideries, and even chiffon velvet, are favored for these, and there is simply no limit to the expense that an extravagant mondaine can indulge in where the tea jacket is concerned.

The modes of the Directoire period, as well as those of the later Louis, are seen at their most charming best in the dinner jacket. This is intended to be worn as an accompaniment to almost any skirt that is considered dressy enough for dinner wear. Lace, brocade, velvet or moire silk is usually chosen, and the jacket may be brought into harmony with the skirt in the addition of little rosettes of velvet or ribbon, buttons to match, or some one or another of those seemingly insignificant devices that suggest themselves instantly to the clever dressmaker.

Exquisite lace jackets are shown in crochet, fashioned without seam or joining at any point, except where the sleeves are put in. And even that is done with the crochet hook and made an essential part of the design. Some almost as pretty ones are shown in Paris lace, in Battenberg and other modern manipulations of braids and lace stitches; and one sees nearly every length, from a short bolero to a polonaise effect, where the coat comes well below the knees.

Description of Illustrations.

A New Arrivel in Coatdom.

Coats of all sorts and descriptions threaten to develop into a perfect furore of fashion ere the coming season is ended. Nowadays not only is there a coat—or, perhaps, more often and more truthfully, an apology for a coat—to each and every costume, but there must be one or two odd ones as well, so planned that they may be worn with almost any type of costume. Of such genre is the charming little model pictured—an embroidered linen, the entire work wrought by hand and expressing to an emphatic degree all of the charm of the modish broderie anglaise. The design is such as can be readily fashioned from an embroidered flouncing, if one does not care to undertake the trouble of working it by hand. The charming little garment is fashioned with shoulder and side seams only, and left to hang loose and full both front and back. The sleeve is a loose pagoda affair, ending just below the elbow, and the arm-size is left very loose and full, so that the filmy sleeve beneath is not crushed in donning the coat. The neck is cut in a deep V, a shaped collar bordering the opening, and the requisite fastening is provided for in braid frogs in groups of two down the front.

A Girlish Dinner Gown.

The problem of having a decollete gown fashioned after a girlish effect, and still keeping it altogether a la mode, so far as richness of materials and trimming are concerned, is oftentimes a difficult task. The average dressmaker usually produces something far better fitted to the dowager than the debutante when she essays the costly styles, and in striving to avoid this effect she usually goes over to the other extreme and presents a frock that lacks distinction in its every line. The Parisian maker, however, has cleverly met the situation in this model, in which several of the current features of fashion are deftly incorporated. The material is a rose-pink chiffon taffeta, relieved with little Richelieu pleatings and much white Chantilly lace. The decolletage is bordered with sprays of pink-ribbon roses and a little foliage, the lace crossing both bodice and sleeve after a berthe fashion, and the silk softly drawn into a crush girdle with a fanciful cut steel and gilt buckle. The skirt is an elaborate design, but still simple in outline. With tuckings over the hips to afford a flat effect, there is a deep flounce applied below the knee, this being ruched at the top, and with tiny featherbone cords run in tucks to hold the shirrings in place. The hem is faced with a rose-pink velveteen, this for the double purpose of weighting the edge and affording protection to the soft and sheer silk.

Novel Effects in Embroidery.

The lingerie blouse is so firmly fixed in fashionable favor that there is danger of its deteriorating and being overdone, were it not for the fact that the brodeuses of France, those clever and usually convent-bred girls, are constantly evolving novelties in the shape of embroideries and other fancy stitcheries wherewith to embellish this fascinating item of the wardrobe. A delightful example of this is furnished in the subject of the illustration. The shallow shoulder yoke, which is but recently restored to favor, is embroidered throughout, solid or blind embroidery alternating with openwork in the design. Where the linen is cut away a backing of Valenciennes lace is provided, which makes for a delightfully chic effect, and without entailing an undue amount of work either. The linen is applied to the yoke in tiny band-run tucks, appliques of lace making for a panel effect, those panels each showing an elaborate design in orchids heavily embroidered. The sleeve is especially fetching, following the three-quarters rather than the half-length model, with a huge star-shaped rosette of lace appliqued on the puff, and the cuff showing the orchid design heavily wrought. A double ruffle of linen, edged with whipped Valenciennes, makes for a soft and dainty finish.

The Hand-made Modes in Linen.

The vogue of the princess style of gown is one that Dame Fashion smiles upon in almost every material upon the counters today. A Parisian example of its possibilities in linen displays a most fetching little frock, all hand-made throughout, and with real Irish crochet entre-deux topping flounces of hand embroidery. The fetching little bolero is a separate affair, intended to be worn as a coat, and merely adds that note of finish which serves to distinguish the street toilette from that of the house. The princess frock is fastened in the back, the top part being merely shaped pieces of embroidery, handwrought upon the linen, alternating with entre-deux of crochet. From the bust down the gown is deftly fitted by means of tiny hand-run tucks, each pinched in at the waist; to make a smooth fit, and continued in sheath shape over the curve of the hips. Above the knee the flounces start, each taking a becoming lift towards the back and deepening as the skirt descends. The little bolero displays an upward or inverted V slit in the back, the corners rounding at the front, while the sleeve is a tucked puff with an elbow frill for a finish.

"The Woman in the Alcove," by Anna Katherine Green—"A Checquered Destiny," by Junius L. Hempstead—"The Life of Animals," by Ernest Ingersoll—"A Woman's Heart," by Olive Ransom.

Anna Katherine Green must be conceded to be a master of the art of sustained thrills in literature, and a wizard at continuous mystery. In her detective stories you pursue the mystery from chapter to chapter with keenest interest, and if you think you have solved it before the last chapter you generally find that you are mistaken. Her latest story, "The Woman in the Alcove", is an excellent example of this. It is a very poor book—to read yourself to sleep with. If you take it up at bedtime and get into the swing of its action, you are pretty likely to lose some sleep that night. It is a great criminal romance, one that stirs the curiosity on the first page and keeps it alive and unsatisfied until the last page is reached. The book, which is most acceptably illustrated by Arthur I. Keller, is published by the Bobbs-Merrill company, Indianapolis.

"A Checquered Destiny," by Junius L. Hempstead, is evidently named in sturdy defiance of the campaign for simplified spelling, but that has nothing to do with the story. It is a swashbuckling romance of old England, with plenty of strong knights and fair dames, and a surfeit of action. It is published by the Ben Franklin Publishing company, 45 and 51 Rose street, New York.

Ernest Ingersoll's new book, "The Life of Animals," is to be illustrated with colored plates, more than a hundred unpublished photographs from life, and many original drawings. It is the life of the animals to which the author devotes himself—the part they daily play in the world around them, not their position in a museum or in a scheme of classification. The whole is treated in the light of the latest facts. The Macmillan company promises Mr. Ingersoll's book for issue before June.

The publication of "A Woman's Heart," by Olive Ransom, adds another name to the list of mysterious authorships, for Olive Ransom is the pseudonym of a brilliant New York woman who has written other and successful books under another name. For many reasons she prefers to remain unknown. She is now in New York, living the life of a recluse. "A Woman's Heart" is heralded as a work of real literary distinction. It is the revelation of a woman's passionate love for a Catholic priest, and curiously enough, deals with a relation that has manifested itself in several recent books, notably "The Lake," by George Moore, and "The Garden of Allah," by Robert Hichens. It is also the motive of Henri Lavedan's play, "The Duel," which is being successfully played in New York by Otis Skinner. "A Woman's Heart," which is made from the manuscript left by Katherine Pesheonet, embodies a very frank discussion of Catholicism. Monastic celibacy is attacked from every conceivable standpoint, yet the writer is always noble, womanly and elevated in thought and word. The story will cause much discussion.

Three men have become famous as "sea anglers" in America, Ex-President Grover Cleveland, the late Joseph Jefferson and Charles Frederick Holder. The latter's "Log of a Sea Angler," covering forty years of sea angling, has just been published by Houghton, Mifflin & Co., and a more exciting and astonishing series of fishing adventures it would be impossible to imagine. But when it is learned that the author spent five or six years, winter and summer, on the Florida reef, it can be seen that he had an unusual opportunity, and he made the most of it. No one will gainsay Mr. Holder proved that tuna fishing was possible. The first big tuna he took with rod and reel towed his boat twelve miles.

Fox, Duffield & Company have in preparation a new and cheaper edition of "The Gentlemen in Touraine," by Richard Sudbury (Charles Gibson). "The District Attorney" is the title of a timely new novel by William Sage, dealing with present-day political and financial life, announced for early publication by Little, Brown & Company. It is the story of a son with high ideals and a father of the modern financier type, and the inevitable clash with its dire consequence. Mr. Sage is the author of "Robert Tournay," a story of the French Revolution; "The Claybornes," a story of the Civil War, and "Frenchy, the story of a Gentleman."

Certainly the publishers are sparing neither effort nor money in placing before American boys the brightest, best, and most inspiring kind of literature. The May American Boy is simply filled with what boys want. Mr. Stratemeyer's new serial, "In Defense of His Flag," a splendid story of two boys fighting on opposite sides in the Civil War, begins in this number. Then there are three more chapters of Mr. Hawkes' final animal story, "Shaggy-coat;" the concluding chapters of "The Adventures of Joe and Dan;" "Four Boys in Camp," by J. L. Harbour; "Risen From the Dead," a story of the sea; "Daniel Boone," a fine story of that sturdy pioneer and Indian fighter; "The Boarding of the Lion," describing the great sea fight between Paul Jones on the Bon Homme Richard and the English war vessel, Serapis; "Why the Storks Build Their Nests on the Housetops," a humorous story in dialect; "The Bad Boy of the Sixth Grade," a school story, and the conclusion of "A French Frog and an American Eagle."

Topics of wide public interest and importance are treated in an able manner in the World Today for May, and the illustrations in this valuable 15-cent magazine are, as usual, very fine. This is especially true of the five full-page portraits. Particularly timely is the editorial on "New-Fashioned Honesty," and the article by C. Arthur Williams on "The Truth About the Senate." "St. Louis After the World's Fair" is described by its mayor, Rolla Wells, to be in a remarkably prosperous condition. His own biography is pleasantly written by a prominent St. Louis Republican, in the same issue of the magazine. "Shall We Still Insure Ourselves?" is a pertinent question well answered by Elliott Flower. In "A Discussion of the Athletic Situation" W. T. Reid, Jr., head coach of Harvard university, points out the good and the evil of the present methods of playing football. Ernest Poole gives some graphic stories of Russian newspaper life and the stupidity of the police.

"The Man With the Muck Rake" is the title chosen by Ellery Sedgwick, editor of the American Magazine, for a vigorous editorial in the May number protesting against the excesses of the "literature of exposure." After indicating the courses advocated for the nation by the extremists, both conservative and radical, the editor points out a third course—that of the "square deal," which, he says, in the end will prevail. The cover of the magazine gives picturesque notice of the feature of this number; the first installment of "The Mystery," a novel of adventure by Stewart Edward White and Samuel Hopkins Adams. The "mystery" begins with the first chapter when the shaft of light shoots out of the sea and the schooner that "steers herself," without a soul on board, is sighted.

The Pilgrim for May—the New Pilgrim, under new management, in new form, from its new home—makes its appearance resplendent in apple blossoms and with all the fragrance of the out-of-door season. The cover designed by Darr) is one of the most striking and artistic of any of the magazines this year. The title page contains a handsome automobile, which gives a cue to the leading article for May—"The Passing of the Hoofs," being a comprehensive and beautifully illustrated article on the evolution of the horseless vehicle. There is an engaging child's story, "The Memoires of Dorothy Dean," by Ada T. Drake. "The Cash Value of Woman's Beauty" is one characteristic of the author, Gilson Willetts, and is handsomely illustrated. Reginald Wright Kauffman contributes another of his most entertaining short stories, "A Domestic Unpleasantness." "A Memorial Day Offering," by Roy Farrell Green, and a short story, "The Comrade Who Fell Out," remind us that May is the month of Memorial day.

The May World's Work publishes under the general title of "Selling Diseased Meat," a symposium of articles that reveals startling and unhealthful conditions in the Chicago packing industry. It is not literature of exposure, or personal scandal, but a description of a wretched system that menaces public health. Dr. W. K. Jaques, former director of the Chicago municipal laboratory in charge of meat inspection at the stock yards gives "A Picture of Meat Inspection," in which he shows that the authority of the United States inspectors does not extend to meat for domestic use and shows the inefficiency and consequent corruption of the local inspection. Thomas H. McKee, a New York lawyer who was sent to Chicago by the World's Work to make a special investigation reveals "The Failure of Government Inspectors" and shows that the United States stamp is only a good advertisement for the packers. Dr. Caroline Hedger, of the University Settlement in Packingtown, in "The Unhealthfulness of Packingtown" describes the terrible living and working conditions of the stockyard workers. This group of articles is adequately illustrated.

The month of May brings the birds, the blossoms, and a beautiful number of Country Life in America. I. Howland Jones tells us of "The Beautiful Garden at Blair Eyrie" and the devices for planting that blend the estate into the landscape. How evergreen shrubs are used for picture frames, and the material for the paths is carefully considered in the scheme of color. "Shall we Plant Fruit Trees for Beauty" by Thomas McAdam is accompanied by five full page illustrations of fruit blossoms undoubtedly the feature of the magazine. In John Burroughs' "Love and War Among the Bluebirds" we have a tale of double mating and a double duel, a sympathetic naturalist's study of our beautiful spring birds. "Outdoor Portrait Photography" by Matilde Weil describes one of the most interesting departments of photography—that of figure students in the open air. By this is meant not the usual snap-shot of the amateur, but a serious attempt at picture-making.

The May Garden Magazine is inspiring in its practical instruction and advice to making a garden after the first flush of spring is past. The key-note is struck in showing how the suburban garden can be started late to flourish until the winter frosts arrive. A leading article explaining how this may be done with a great many plants which commonly flower early, is by Herbert Greensmith; L. G. Tabor, has an article with plans for planting a hardy border of flowers in the suburban garden, one that is especially designed to give perfect color harmonies all the year round. Particularly seasonable is John Dunbar's review of the great spirea family; the most beautiful of all the early flowering shrubs.

In the May Ainslee's there is the first installment of a two-part story by May Sinclair, author of "The Divine Fire." It is entitled "Mr. and Mrs. Nevill Tyson," and if we may judge from the opening chapters it will easily surpass anything Miss Sinclair has ever done—which is very high praise indeed. Elizabeth Duer's charming novelette, "The Lord of the Isle," is another noteworthy feature in this issue of Ainslee's. W. A. Fraser, James Branch Cabell, Kate Jordan, Mabel C. N. Williamson, and other well-known writers contribute short stories, and there are two clever essays and some charming poetry besides. The cover design is by C. Allan Gilbert.

Representative of the "Indiana group" of writers at its best is the Reader for May, this being the "Indiana number" of the magazine. Not in the sense of being a "write-up" of the state, though this is the idea a special number generally conveys. The May Reader is an "Indiana number" because it is written by native Indianians or by those who adopted the state and were adopted by it at an age so early as to identify their whole lives with Hoosierdom. And not alone is it the product of Indiana writers, but the illustrators whose work appears in this number are also Hoosiers who have "made good" in their more decorative department of literature. An added feature of great attractiveness is the reproduction in full color of examples of the best work of four members of the "Indiana group" of artists. The three-color cover design for the Indiana number is by Franklin Booth, while the frontispiece is a full-color reproduction of Otto Stark's picture, "Crocheting." "The Cloud," by T. C. Steele; "Close of a Summer's Day," by William Forsyth, and "The Wane of Winter," by J. Ottis Adams, all reproduced by the four-color process, are the other examples of the work of Indiana painters.

The usual complete novelette, a comedy in one act, nine short stories, papers on live subjects, poems of a high standard and the best wit that's in the market—such form the contents of Lippincott's Magazine for July. "The Strange Case of Doctor North," a detective story of a new kind, is the novelette this month. The author is Nevil Monroe Hopkins, and he has produced work which is alive with thrills and thoroughly American from first to last. In this story a smart silk umbrella with a silver handle causes a deal of trouble to its pretty owner, and an amateur detective comes out ahead of the "force." The means by which the crime was really committed are certainly the most novel in all detective literature. A first-class play for acting is the comedy, "She Borrowed Her Own Husband," by the well known playwright, Rupert Hughes. It bristles with fun, while there is an underlying seriousness in the situation.

In Harper's for May there is a widely diversified group of travel articles that make congenial reading for the universal wanderlust of springtime. The opening article is Mrs. Lonidas Hubbard's account of her "Explorations in Labrador," in which she describes her unusual experiences and gives the sum total of their result. Clifford Warren Ashley's graphic narrative of whaling days is concluded in "The Blubber Hunters," illustrated by the author. Thomas A. Janvier contributes one of his characteristic articles in "A Return to Mexico," with photographs of the scenes he writes so delightfully about; and Henry James concludes the account of his return to New York in a paper of much power. In "Briartown" Nature Sketches," Harold S. Deming takes the reader into the heart of the woods and shows him a drawn battle among the birds and other animals. In contrast to this is a remarkable study of "How Men Feel in Battle," by Gen. S. H. M. Byers; author of "Sherman's March to the Sea"—a powerful interpretation of soldiers' emotions by a soldier.

Louis Joseph Vance, author of "The Private War" and "Terrence O'Rourke, Gentleman Adventurer," is now writing a series of stories for the Popular Magazine, based on the adventures of Faraday Bobbs, a bright, hustling young American who makes a business of going wherever history is being made, and there taking photographs for the public prints. It will be seen at once that such a character offers tremendous possibilities, and, if we may judge by the first two stories, published in April and May, Mr. Vance is making the most of his opportunities. The May number of this interesting publication contains a wealth of stories, long and short, which remind one in a way of the lives of famous men, inasmuch as there is always "something doing" in them.

Scribner's Magazine for May opens with an article by E. S. Curtis on "Vanishing Indian Types," dealing particularly with the tribes of the Southwest. The illustrations are from the remarkable series of photographs which Mr. Curtis has been engaged in securing for six years. In this article are photographs not only of the striking facial types of the Apaches, but views showing the region in which they live, their camps and their industries. There is no higher authority on "The Railways of Africa" than Sir Percy Girouard, who has been connected with the development of the railway system there for many years, and at one time was director of the Soudan railways—the great tropical lines of Africa. No country in the world is so difficult in climate and configuration for the railway builder. There are already in existence in Africa about 6,000 miles of railway, many sections of which will in the future fit into the great dream of Cecil Rhodes—the Cape-to-Cairo railway.

There is a constantly increasing number of magazines of out-of-doors, but a "garden number" of one of the standard magazines is a pleasing novelty, and this is what the May Century offers its readers. "The Gardens of Cornish"—that Cornish where so many American artists and writers live and garden—are described by Frances Duncan, author of "Mary's Garden." "The Architectural Treatment of a Small Garden" is discussed; and George W. Cable, the Northampton authority and genial writer, tells all about "Where to Plant What," a sketch to inspire every reader to set about making things grow. Helen Evertson Smith describes "An Ancient Garden" (an old garden at Sharon, Conn., "sketched in" in Revolutionary times)—a garden of delight she pictures it; Miss Betts furnishes a colored frontispiece of "Nelly Custis in the Mount Vernon Garden," and there is an account, by Francis E. Leupp, Indian commissioner, of "The Old Garden at Mount Vernon." Full advantage is taken of the opportunities for illustration offered by these articles, and a number worthy of May is the result.

Success Magazine for May makes a feature of the life and accomplishments of George Westinghouse, inventor of the Westinghouse air brake, and the head of the great manufacturing companies of that name all over the world. Arthur Warren, who was associated with him for so many years, presents, under the heading "The Genius of George Westinghouse," an intimate sketch of this great master mind, who has had so much to do with the development of the great American railway system, and who has maintained his high position untouched by the storms of financial or political scandal. In "The Habit of Governing Well—Manchester," Samuel Merwin gives the second of his studies of municipal government. He describes the business-like administration of the city of Manchester, Eng., where municipally-owned tramways and gas companies turned over their profits to the city, amounting one year to a reduction on of a quarter of a million dollars from the taxes.

To the May Housekeeper Prof. D. Lange contributes a most interesting article on "Rambles Among Our Wild Flowers." The article is illustrated profusely with photographs taken by the author, and is not only a delightful chat about pleasant trips to the country, but is very helpful as a practical aid to the photographing of flowers. Emily Ruth Calvin continues the absorbing serial, "The Quaintness of Bobby." A short story by Emma Lee Walton, entitled "The Rehearsal," tells the history of an unexpected elopement.

The special features of the May number of the Review of Reviews are an illustrated article on California's catastrophe, with views of prominent San Francisco and Stanford University buildings; a character sketch of George P. Baer, the head of the anthracite combination, by Frederic W. Unger; a discussion of the railroad-rate question by Interstate Commerce Commissioner Charles A. Prouty, and ex-Commissioner J. W. Midgley, of the Western Traffic association; a review by an impartial observer, of the Chicago municipal-ownership situation, including a survey of the results of the April elections; a congressman's comments on consular reform, by Representative J. Sloat Fassett of New York; an account of "Publishing Large Interests," by Frank Parath; "The New Era in Colombia," by Francis P. Savinien; an illustrated description of the work of the New York postoffice, by Louis E. Van Northal; a sketch of the proposed Bering strait railroad, by Herman Rosenthal; and illuminating papers on "The Farm Mortgage of Today," by Charles M. Harger, and "The Need of Better School Records," by William H. Allen.

"The Grandeur of the Summits" is the title of an article in the May number of the Four Track News. This is a beautifully written and artistically illustrated description of the ever changing vision and majesty of the Rockies. An article on Saratoga entitled "Dame Fashion's Rendezvous," by E. R. Baker, will be found especially entertaining. Articles entitled "Spring-time in the High Alps," "Unique Quebec," "Corsica and the Corsicans," "The Paris of the Orient" and "The Isle of Pines" lead the reader into many delightful foreign lands: "How They Do Things in Texas" is characteristically described by Gilson Willets; Josephine Wilhelm Hard contributes a near-to-nature article under the title of "An Adirondack Carry."

The biggest new idea in the National for May is embodied in Charles Ferguson's suggestion that the nation shall charter university cities and allot them liberal shares of the arid lands now being made fertile by irrigation. With far-seeing swift sanity and glowing eloquence, Mr. Ferguson pleads for a chance here to show the world how to build at once scientific cities and useful universities. This article deserves and will doubtless receive close study. Other special features of the number are: "Haydon Jones, Newspaper Artist," with many examples of his work; "The Pink Countess," an Italian idyl by Charles Warren Stoddard; a greeting to the American people from Gen. Reyes, war minister of Mexico; "Adventures of a Special Correspondent," by Gilson Willets; "Affairs at Washington," lavishly illustrated, by Joe Mitchell Chapple; "An Anglo-Saxon Revolution," by W. D. P. Bliss, and "Note and Comment," by Frank Putnam, in which the federal courts are considered as a good working substitute for an absolute monarch.

He will be a difficult reader to please who does not find much to interest him in the May number of the Atlantic. It opens with a leading article, "Man and the Actor," by Richard Mansfield, in which the foremost American actor writes with sincerity and eloquence on the meaning of an actor's life and of the present conditions upon the American stage. It is followed by a remarkable paper by John Burroughs in his best vein entitled, "Camping with President Roosevelt," containing a full and breezy account of President Roosevelt's camping trip in the Yellowstone country two years ago, and incidentally presenting one of the most intimate pen portraits of the president that has ever been written. Charles J. Bullock's paper on "Life Insurance and Speculation" is a comprehensive, thoroughly informed and lucid presentation of the whole subject. The stories form a specially notable and various group by H. M. Rideout, Florence Converse, Chester B. Fernald and Elsie Singmaster.

The Engineering Magazine for May opens with an admirable discussion by M. A. Oudin, of American commercial relations, especially as relates to the certainty of future need and future search for larger foreign markets. It is pointed out that the movement will inevitably involve serious international problems, for which the United States should in wisdom prepare now by closer attention to economic and industrial questions and their solution. The second article in the number deals with another matter of keen present importance—the attempt to force the use of the metric system. The author, H. H. Suplee, points out clearly the fallacy of the position of the metric advocates, the enormous confusion and expense into which American industries would be plunged, and the disastrous results which would follow the proposed meddlesome paternalism. There is a very interesting and beautifully illustrated account of the new railway work in the Philippines, by L. W. Bennett, the engineer in charge of construction.

The New England Magazine for May combines sea articles and tales with the timely topics, the good stories and artistic essays of its usual plan. One of these sea articles leads in the number, "The Whale and the Whaleman," by William S. Birge. To all New Englanders it is at once an interesting discussion, whether this old time industry bids fair to be revived again. New Bedford has a strong and substantial argument pro. "Ancient Pemaquid: the Jamestown of New England," by H. O. McCrillis, reveals to us history before history, for while we are accustomed to date New England history from 1620, Pemaquid goes back to 1607. The record of its stately street and forts read like the account of a buried city.

Many thoughtful persons are interested in the rapid spread of the theories of those advocating the drugless methods of healing, and today there are many thousands of intelligent persons who believe that nature is the great curative agent; those interested in these theories will find matters of interest in the current issue of Suggestion (Chicago), a magazine of the new psychology devoted to the cultivation of will power, character building, thought force, rational hygiene, nature cure, psychic research and allied subjects.

Smith's Magazine for May contains a signed article by Governor Hoch of Kansas, entitled "The Conscience of Our People Is Now Awake," which should interest anyone who is concerned to the slightest degree in public affairs. Following the article by Governor Hoch is another article by Henry Harrison Lewis, descriptive of the work that the governor of Kansas has been doing in the past few years. Governor Hoch has never hitherto contributed an article to any magazine.

The May Delineator, with a complete display, pictorial and descriptive, of the latest Spring fashions, contains a wealth of suggestion for those who wish to be smartly gowned, and many other features of interest to women. Hon. Justice David J. Brewer contributes an article on "Woman in the Professions," in which he comments on the significance of the fact that the status of women has changed in the last half century. Miss Winslow's club story, "The President of Quex," drawing near its end, deepens in interest, and the author supplements the installment with a chapter on "Club Women and the Child Labor Question."

The five May issues of the Youth's Companion will contain an amount of the best reading equivalent to two 400-page novels or books of history, travel or biography. A serial by Adeline Knapp, called "The Downfall of a Boss," opens in the first May issue. It is the story of a girl who, put in control of a country newspaper office, manages by her bravery and honesty to win a notable victory over an unscrupulous politician. Ralph D. Paine contributes a capital story for the athletic youth, entitled "The Coxswain's Training," and Grace M. Gallaher another for the athletic girl, called "A Real Player." Prof. Lanciani, Rider Haggard and Assistant Secretary of Agriculture Hays are among the special contributors to the Companion's May numbers, the article by Prof. Lanciani on "The Vast Riches of Herculaneum" being of special interest in view of the recent destructive eruption of Vesuvius.

The April-June Forum maintains the high position of the authoritative American quarterly review of politics, finance, science, literature and art, and prints in addition several special articles of importance and timely interest. Henry Litchfield West, writing of "American Politics," discusses the great questions now before congress, including the Philippine tariff, the statehood bill, and that for the regulation of railroad rates. "Foreign Affairs" are reviewed in illuminative style by A. Maurice Low, with special reference to the sweeping Liberal victory in the recent general elections in Great Britain; and to the international conference at Algeciras on the Moroccan matter. Alexander D. Noyes, on "Finance," is unusually instructive, especially in his analysis of the insurance situation up to date, with reference to the report of the Armstrong committee.

The May number of Farming breathes the spirit of Spring, and is especially strong in articles covering the necessary work to be done on the farm at this season of the year. The care of the livestock, the things to be done in the field and orchard, and all the other departments of farm activity throughout the country are discussed by men who are authorities in their lines. The illustrations are of a very superior kind.

The Popular Science Monthly for May opens with a beautifully illustrated article by Professor Ralph S. Tarr of Cornell university, giving an account of the scenery and geology of Watkins Glen and other gorges of the Finger Lake Region of Central New York. The article is timely in view of the fact that an effort is being made to set aside Watkins Glen as a state reservation for the benefit of the public. Reverend Edward Everett Hale, Jr., University, an authority par excellence upon the subject, writes about the trout and salmon of the Pacific coast. It is a scholarly article and thoroughly readable. It is profusely illustrated by the clever hand of Sekko Shimada, the Japanese artist.

The recent terrible conflagration in San Francisco offered the first opportunity in many years for photographing a great city on fire. A host of camera artists flocked to the scene, many of whom represented leading papers in the East, but the glory of distancing all competitors fell to Leslie's Weekly, it having received the very first photographs to reach New York showing the ravages of the earthquake and the city swept by the flames. These pictures form the chief feature of the current issue of this enterprising publication, which is practically a San Francisco number.

Forty-eight years ago men were arising to meet, mastr and overcome the varied and vexed problems of national, state and local import. The exigencies of those days called for the services of many brainy men. At the time written of, Lincoln and Greeley were deeply intrenched in the public mind, and no publication more faithfully portrayed and illustrated the saw historical events than Frank Leslie's Illustrated Newspaper. During the weeks of 1906, Leslie's Weekly has reproduced from the valuable old files a number of interesting illustrations and articles depicting the stirring events connected with this important period in our earlier history. In the current issue of the Weekly a noteworthy reference is made to Frank Leslie's personal work as it was carried on by him in the summer of 1858 in his strenuous crusade against impure and distillery milk, on which evil some cities are just beginning to take action.

The April number of the Pacific Monthly is unique in its design and subject matter. It is all with outdoor spirit. The first glimpse the reader gets into the magazine brings him in touch with views of the picturesque activities of the fresh water harbor of Portland, Or, which has played, and which is still to play, such an important part in the making of that city. Pierre Fleurot tells of a loafing afternoon and evening which he spent watching the idle tramp ships and human beings that anchor for a time along the Canyon where the Finger Lakes Glen and other gorges of the Finger Lake Region of Central New York. The article is timely in view of the fact that an effort is being made to set aside Watkins Glen as a state reservation for the benefit of the public. Reverend Edward Everett Hale, Jr., University, an authority par excellence upon the subject, writes about the trout and salmon of the Pacific coast. It is a scholarly article and thoroughly readable. LARGE AMOUNTS PAID FOR STAMPS

Stupendous Sum Planked Down for European Section of W. W. Mann's Great Collection.

In these days of "big things," the one-time scoffed-at stamp collector is keeping pace with the swiftly-moving procession, if indeed he is not setting the pace.

In testimony of this statement, witness the sale, a few days since, in London, of a portion, only, of the collection of W. W. Mann, for the sum of $150,000, spot cash. When it is considered that this stupendous sum was planked down for the European section only of Mr. Mann's great collection, which of itself comprises nearly 100 large volumes or alubums, some slight conception of what the entire collection must be may be obtained.

It is understood that close to $100,000 cash awaits the decision of Mr. Mann to part with the volumes containing his Australian stamps alone, and the balance of his collection would undoubtedly bring more than twice as much, giving the entire collection a cash valuation of approximately $500,000. That this aggregation of stamps did not cost the owner such an amount goes without saying. The tremendous increase in values of stamps during the past score of years has netted Mr. Mann several hundred per cent profit on his investments.

Many large sales of stamps have been made in the United States within a dozen years. One of the first large collections sold was that of F. DeCoppet, whose holdings were sold under the hammer in New York in 1893. This collection was so large that eight nights were required to dispose of it, and the total received was about $30,000. This was regarded as a big figure in those days, although nowadays stamp collections of that size are sold without exciting great comment.

In 1896 a Boston firm bought a collection from N. C. Nash of that city, for which more than $30,000 was paid, and in 1897 the same firm paid William Thorne of New York $45,000 for his collection. At that time this was one of the largest and finest collections in the United States.

Mr. F. F. Olney of Providence, Rhode Island, one of the leading philatelists in this country, and president of the American Philatelic association, owned a very fine collection, composed chiefly of unused stamps, sold this collection for $30,000 cash in 1900. In 1903 the collection of the late William A. Smith of New York was sold at auction in that city for $30,000 and the collection of Mr. Hunter of New York sold at aution for $27,000. Numerous collections have been sold at auction in New York, Chicago, Boston, Philadelphia at prices ranging from $3,000 to $10,000.

In 1900 a Chicago man named Burton, who had previously obtained a good deal of newspaper notoriety by exchanging a valuable hotel in Wisconsin for a collection stamps, sold a portion of the collection at auction for upwards of $10,000.

The largest single stamp purchase made in the United States was the sale, less than two years ago, of the famous Ayer collection, known to philatelists all over the world. This collection was made by a wealthy lumber dealer by the name of Ayer, residing at Bangor, Me. Mr. Ayer became suddenly seized with the stamp collecting fever and became so engrossed in the fascinating hobby that he devoted a large portion of his time and spent vast sums of money in his efforts to complete, so far as possible, his collection. He wrote to dealers and collectors in all parts of the world in his endeavor to obtain certain stamps necessary to complete certain countries. He accumulated one of the finest collections in the world. Having completed the collection for many countries, so that there was nothing further to seek, he lost his interest to some extent, and sold his holdings to a Boston firm for about $100,000. Mr. Ayer is a shrewd, hard-headed business man and he is reported to have remarked to a friend who questioned him, that he made a handsome profit on the money he put into the collection, to say nothing of the great pleasure its accumulation had given him. It is said Mr. Ayer has now started another collection, which will be confined to stamps of certain countries only.

Several collections of stamps from single countries have changed hands in the United States at surprising figures. It seems almost impossible that a man could accumulate a collection of the stamps of one country valued at thousands of dollars but such cases are numerous. Specialists not only strive to get one stamp of each kind, but try to get various shades, varieties in printing, sheets and blocks. Ordinary collectors are satisfied to have one specimen of each stamp issued.

Very recently M. S. Lombard of Boston sold his collection of French stamps only for about $10,000 and Mr. Crehore of the same city sold his collection of the stamps of Hawaii for about the same figure. Mr. H. J. Crocker of San Francisco values his collection of Hawaiian stamps, which is the most complete in the world, at $35,000. A Boston firm not long ago sold a single Hawaiian stamp on the original envelope for $5,000, which is the highest price any stamp ever sold for in the United States. Sales of stamps at from $1,000 to $4,000 have been made in this country and there are hundreds of stamps that have been sold in the United States for upwards of $100. The record price is held by a stamp of the island of Mauritius, for which the prince of Wales paid nearly $7,500 less than two years ago at an auction sale, although the British Guiana stamp printed on wrapping paper, owned by M. Renotiere of Paris, would sell at a much higher price if put upon the market.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, mannufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from ten drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

Indisputable Evidence.

You have read our oft-repeated statement, "In use for over 30 years." It was in the early sixties that the prescription now universally known as Castoria was first made use of. With a record of over fifty, under five years of age, out of every hundred deaths, it was the AMBITION OF EVERY PHYSICIAN to discover a remedy suitable for the ailments of infants and children that would decrease this distressing mortality. In Castoria that relief has been found.

Let us take the statistics covering the deaths in the City of New York for the past 30 years, and here we find the benificent effect of a combination of drugs excluding opiates and narcotics so long sought for, namely: CASTORIA.

Of the total number of deaths in New York City in 1870, 50 per cent. were under five years of age; in 1880, 46 per cent.; in 1890, 40 per cent.; in 1900, 35 per cent. only. Just stop to think of it.

Until 1897 no counterfeits or imitations of Castoria appeared on drug store shelves, but since that date Mr. Fletcher has been called upon to suppress a number of these frauds. While the record for 1900 does not come down to our expectation it is owing to the carelessness of mothers when buying Castoria. The signature of Chas. H. Fletcher is the only safeguard.

The Week in Stageland.

AT THE LYCEUM

Lew Dockstader's Minstrels to Appear Next Friday and Saturday, With Saturday Matinee.

The old-time rivalry between big minstrel shows has passed away, so far as Lew Dockstader is concerned. He is so strong in his own personality, and so popular with the public, and his company is so much larger and better than anything ever seen before in minstrel shows that both he and his show stands in a class by themselves, and no other minstrel presumes to compete with him. His is the only minstrel show known as a week stand minstrel show, with a very rare exception occasionally, in one or two Western cities, where, perhaps, one or two other minstrel shows, once or twice a year, play an engagement of a week in one theater.

Dockstader also occupies the unique distinction of being the only minstrel who plays in any of the Broadway theaters in New York, and his enormous success at the New York theater, during the month of January, this year, may keep him off the road altogether next season. He has rejected numerous offers to establish a permanent minstrel theater in New York, giving as his reason that even New York would possibly not support a minstrel show in a large theater, and that there is much more money for him in appearing for several weeks in New York, and filling in the remainder of the time on the road. His last engagement of six weeks in New York was so extraordinarily successful that the next one will undoubtedly continue for at least three or four months. Of course it goes without saying New York will only have the biggest and best of anything. It is the only city where theaters command $2 a seat outside of boxes, and that fact itself would give that city commanding position to enable its managers to dictate absolutely to the managers of attractions terms and time, and its managers make a life-time study of the desires and demands of their public. That is why the verdict of approval in New York is so eagerly sought after by all kinds of amusement managers. By the same token New York sets its seal of approval upon Dockstader as being the best and only minstrel show it wants to see on Broadway. Now, then, if Mr. Dockstader takes upon the road identically the same company, in every detail that is seen in New York, it goes without saying that he is giving the biggest and best minstrel entertainment of any before the public, and that is what he guarantees the public that he does. When he appears in this city every singer, dancer and comedian that was seen in New York will be seen here. A comparison of the programs of the performance in New York and here will confirm that fact. He will be here at the Lyceum on Friday and Saturday next, with a Saturday matinee.

LYCEUM BOOKINGS.

"The Land of Nod," is the last big musical attraction to come to Duluth this year, this production is put out by Fred C. Whitney, who has handled nothing but the best, including Lulu Glaser, Schumann Heink and others, this is the original company and includes Wm. Norris, Knox Wilson and many other favorites.

* * *

"What Women Will Do," will be at the Lyceum for two nights soon. This attraction has a good cast and is playing the popular priced houses throughout America.

* * *

"The Acton-Taylor Stock company is booked for an engagement at the Lyceum beginning either May 28 or June 4. The company includes a number of good actors and actresses and a good selection of plays.

THE METROPOLITAN

The Dainty Paree Burlesquers on Sunday Afternoon and Evening Only.

The Dainty Paree Burlesquers, who created a very favorable impression when they visited the Metropolitan a week or so ago, will return to that playhouse tomorrow for two performances only, Sunday afternoon and evening. The organization is one of the largest on the burlesque circuit and its entertainment created no end of merriment on the occasion of the company's last visit. The usual Metropolitan prices will prevail at both performances.

W. H. Longstreet, manager of the Metropolitan, has announced a determination to book occasional attractions at his house when they can be secured, although the regular season at the Metropolitan has ended.

THE NEW BIJOU

Another High-Class Vaudeville Program Promised for the Coming Week.

Patrons of the Bijou will witness many clever vaudeville acts the coming week. The Roberts Four head an excellent bill presenting their clever and only act of its kind entitled "The Doll Maker's Dilemma," which has been heralded all over the Eastern cities as being very clever and original, and different from all other vaudeville acts.

Addison and Livingston will present their comedy sketch entitled "A Debut in Vaudeville." These artists were one of the big hits at the Bijou last season, and will no doubt make the same fine impression this engagement.

The original Bobby Mack, known as one of the best Irish comedians, will appear in an original monologue with plenty of good singing and dancing.

Thelma De Vern, female baritone singer and operatic star, will render several classical and popular selections.

The Washburns, polite vaudeville entertainers, will present an up-to-date novelty.

Zenoz, one limbed aerial performer and daring wire artist, will perform some difficult feats of slack and tight wire walking and also gymnastic feats upon flying traps.

Morey Long will render "Can't You See I'm Lonely," a late song hit, illustrated with colored views.

The moving pictures will be extra good, showing "The Moose Hunt in the Wilds of the Far Northwest."

Matinees will be given daily at 2:45, and evening performances at 8 and 9:30. Seats may be ordered by old phone 1354-K for evening performances. Regular performances on Sunday afternoon and night. Special school children's matinee every Saturday.

NEW YORK THEATERS

Review of the Season Now Ending---A Failure of Dramatists, But the Public Has Made Good---A Deficiency of Plays.

New York, May 5.—The time has come to turn back the leaves of the program book and consider what may have been the meaning of the theatrical season now ending. Two things, I think, are evident: There has been a general failure on the part of the playwrights to maintain, to say nothing of raising, the level of their output; and at the same time there have been evidences of a marked advance in intelligence and catholic receptiveness on the part of American audiences. This may sound as if Broadway were lifting itself by the bootstraps, and that is just about the case. Of all the arts the drama is most closely identified with its public and dependent upon it for inspiration. A poet in a garret may pour forth his soul for all time with a few dollars' worth of ink and paper, a painter at the expense of so much color and canvas. But the work of the dramatist does not exist until it is given concrete form in actors and scenery and presented for the many in the open playhouse. And this, in a country where the theater is organized on a purely commercial basis, is a consummation not easily attained. The source of the drama is in the popular consciousness and the author does not rise above the source.

The standard exponents of the English drama Pinero and Jones, have given us nothing. The young and promising Hubert Henry Davies has also been silent. From H. V. Esmond we have had an early work, "Grierson's Way," which though interesting, proved unsatisfactory alike to the critical and popular mind. R. C. Carton has given us one play, the farcical "Mr. Hopkinson," which, though above his recent average, is more remarkable for the acting of Dallas Welford than for its intrinsic qualities. We have made the acquaintance of our new English playwright, Alfred Sutro, and both of his plays have revealed talents of a very considerable scope, but neither of a his pieces has proved consistent or sustained. "The Waifs of Jericho" was a curiously undigested lump of satirical comedy of manners and crudely parsonical melodrama, and "The Fascinating Mr. Vanderveldt" was a slender comedy of manners that ventuated in conventional and inexpensive moralizing. In short, we have not had one real English drama even remotely approaching "The Second Mrs. Tanqueray" or "Iris," not one comedy that deserves to be mentioned in the same breath with "The Liars" or (peace to its ashes) "Whitewashing Julia." Shaw and Barrie have been very much in evidence, but of them later.

The output of the American playwright has been larger, but scarcely more hopeful. William Gillette's "Clarice" was half-heartedly received both in London and in Boston, and has not yet reached Broadway. George Ade has reached two admirable comedy ideas, both of which were impaired—ruined, in fact—by a cheap and conventional unreality in their theatric development. "The Bad Samaritan" was stillborn, and "Just Out of College" has not reached more than a semblance of life. Augustus Thomas put out two star vehicles, both remarkable for acute observation, embodied in laughable "lines," but both lacking any real grasp upon character or organic comic and dramatic force. For Gillette, Ade and Thomas the season has been actually or virtually a failure. John Luther Long's "Dolce," an enjoyable one-act comedy, was put on for three performances.

Richard Harding Davis gave us "The Galloper," a fresh and successful farce, but inferior in all respects to "The Dictator." In "Her Great Match" Clyde Fitch refurbished various flaring stale materials with a very high order of graceful and romantic imagination, and for once achieved a whole composition of simple, well-ordered and consistent development; but though the play deserved and achieved success, it nowhere reached—or attempted—the level of the best elements in such plays as "The Climbers" and "The Girl With the Green Eyes."

There have been the usual number of pieces from new playwrights—"The Tittle Mart," from Winston Churchill; "Gallops," from David Gray; "The Prince Chap," from Edward Peple, and "The Little Father of the Wilderness," from Austin Strong and Lloyd Osborne, the two latter of which show promise, but none of which stands in any high rank, even in the American drama.

It is a curious fact, one which I think is wholly creditable to popular taste, that the great successes of the season have been plays dealing with strong dramatic material. "The Girl From the Golden West," of which David Belasco claims authorship, is a mere rehandling of scenes and situations long familiar to the cheaper orders of melodrama, and has no quality of interest, aside from the skill of manipulation with which it is put together, the ability of the actors and the real beauty of the stage decorations and management. But Milton Royle's "Squaw Man" handles a new character and a new situation with considerable freshness and authenticity of feeling.

In "The Lion and the Mouse," Charles Klein has given us, if not the most skillful, at least the most vital and interesting American play of the season. There is much, especially in the first act, which is unreal and inept, and the general framework creaks at the joints; but the characters are taken from the life about us in its most interesting development, and the play as a whole has the true dramatic impetus—the drive of character and passion in inevitable conflict. Several American playwrights, and notably Mr. Thomas and Mr. Fitch, have achieved far more accurate studies of character and emotion, but none of them, as far as I remember, has ever given us so vital and moving a theme so vigorously treated. For what it is, and most of all for what it promises, "The Lion and the Mouse" is by far the most interesting play of the season. In the best sense of that much abused word, it is serious drama, and its success is in proportion to its merit. More than any American play of recent years, it has shown that Broadway has a mind and a heart above the realm of farce and musical comedy.

It may be added that the one English play with any real pretense of seriousness, "The Walls of Jericho," proved one of the greatest successes of the season, in spite of wretched acting and stage management, and that Lavedan's "The Duel," a play which was not only serious but deeply and essentially intellectual, won a very considerable measure of success. No playwright or manager can too deeply consider such facts, for they point to a new development of popular taste, and one which is certain to grow with the advance of the years.

It is, however, in the case of Shaw and Barrie that our advance in artistic feeling is most evident. With regard to both of these very interesting men I confess to a misgiving which is none the less persistent because I find it hard to give a satisfactory account of it. At the risk of appearing academic I must say that neither of them seems quite normal, either in the choice of subject or in his methods. The Scotchman is the more nearly normal of the two; but who could imagine him approaching life with the large romantic sympathy of Shakespeare or Menander, with Moliere's well-poised outlook upon the human comedy, or with Goldsmith's broad and mellow spirit of laughter? He is clearly an individual as any of these great people; in fact, his individuality is much more salient and persistent. But it is in this fact that I find the chief cause for misgiving. With the Irishman Shaw individuality proceeds to the extent of a perversity—a deliberate intention to provoke, and even shock. One cannot imagine either of them writing what is summarily but conveniently described as straight comedy or straight drama. They belong too much to themselves to belong wholly to the public, even of their own time. In all popular art, most of all in the drama, such individuality is a weakness, tending always toward the formation of cliques. If Barrie and Shaw were greater there would be no Barrieites, no Shawites—or rather the whole intelligent public would acknowledge them.

Yet all the more I find it to the credit of the American public that it has welcomed them in the way it has. Either of them is a rather stiff proposition for any audience. That both should have been welcomed is little short of a triumph, for their individualities are as different as they are pronounced. And nowhere has this been more evident than in "Peter Pan" and "Man and Superman."

Barrie's attitude toward the human relationships is of adoring, of doting tenderness and comprehension. He knows children and childhood—he is himself a child. But there are two lobes in his brains and they do not work as a unit. His moment of utmost divination of the most round eyed wonder is presided over by a gnome of the earth as it is, who sees through it all, scouts it, flouts it, but does not rout it. In order to follow his play, if you are more than 7 or 8, you also must for the time being have the two lobes of your brain work independently, be under the divided dominance of the spirits of belief and of satire. Many who love fairy stories do not love "Peter Pan," and many who do not love them delight in it. In the first days of its run it was an open question whether it would hold the stage, and it may still be doubted whether it would have had any extraordinary popularity if it had not been for the genius and the popularity of Miss Maude Adams. Perhaps I seem to be disparaging "Peter Pan." Nothing could be further from my intention. Personally it has given me more pleasure than any other piece of the season. And though I believe that it falls short of the very highest dramatic or poetic genius, I gladly paraphrase the verdict of Prince Hal on Falstaff—we could better spare a better play.

"Man and Superman" is addressed to the intellectual adult. Shaw has little knowledge of life as it is, and less love for it. In his mind the gnome of perception has quite driven out the fairy of belief. The result is not life, and, in any true sense of the word, not art. The first condition of getting the best there is in him is that one shall never quite believe in him. That granted, he acts on the mind like a tonic—a substance alien to the state of man that yet shakes it up to its benefit, a poison that rouses one out of lethargy and into beneficent indignation.

The life of Shaw's people is not real life, but by an artfully contrast with outworn ideals, it for the moment impresses us with a sense of reality, and thus kills forever our acceptance of falsehood, or, to be more accurate, of deal truth. Solemn moralists find it pernicious, and sentimentalists find it sordid. But people who are able and willing to play with ideas—and they are the people of real mentality—welcome it for the clarification which its ferment brings.

Here again the question is not of absolute intelligence, for many worthy people find Shaw abhorrent, and it generally happens that Barrieites are not Shawites, nor Shawites Barrieites. It is all the more remarkable then, that in one and the same season both plays have run for long periods to large audiences. This can mean only one thing—that the public has learned to think for itself in the playhouse, that it has become not "the public," but an assemblage of rational human beings, who select their intellectual enjoyment with as much and at least as much discrimination as they bestow upon their dinners. And if they are able to find out two plays which, however different, have this in common, that they are both delicate and rare, they will probably not be found wanting when it is a question of the more staple and nourishing foods—as indeed has been made evident in the more normal if less distinguished American dramas of the season.

By a most fortunate coincidence the season which has seen the highest development of the public taste in the theater has seen also the foundation of the New theater. That the time was ripening for such an institution has long been apparent. With the data before us, it may confidently be said that it is no longer ripening, but ripe. It would take nothing short of blundering to render the project abortive, and there is every reason to believe that it will be managed with as much ability as liberality.

LEW DOCKSTADER,
The Minstrel King Who Will Be at the Lyceum Next Friday and Saturday.

GOSSIP OF THE RIALTO

Richard Golden Now in the Shubert Camp---Ethel Barrymore Recovering---Klaw & Erlanger to Establish London Headquarters.

New York, May 5.—Richard Golden has been garnered for the Shubert camp, and will return to musical comedy soon in the new piece, "The Tourist," which is to be put on in Philadelphia this spring, and, if its opening warrants, will be taken into the Lyric theater, New York, for a summer run.

Ethel Barrymore has sufficiently recovered from her recent attack of appendicitis to visit the theaters now and then. Miss Barrymore is resting at her home on Long Island, and is a frequent visitor to the New York theaters. She will resume her tour next season.

* * *

It turns out that John R. Rogers has settled his long-pending legal difficulties with Klaw & Erlanger out of court, and that the hustling manager is again on friendly terms with the powerful directors of the syndicate affairs.

* * *

"The Prince of India," the big stage representation of Gen. Lew Wallace's novel, closed the past week in Baltimore. In the cities visited so far it has not been the phenomenal success that was expected. It is said that the play will likely be revived next fall and put on for a run in New York.

* * *

Joseph Wheelock, Jr., is a patient in Roosevelt hospital, New York, where he is recovering from an operation caused by a growth upon his neck. Young Wheelock was the star of the George Ade comedy, "Just Out of College," and had but recently closed his season in that piece.

* * *

The Eastern vaudeville world was thrown into a blt of excitement last week by a sudden deal in metropolitan theatricals whereby J. Austin Fynes secures the property occupied by the Fifth avenue theater, at the corner of Broadway and Twenty-eighth street. The house has long been operated by F. F. Proctor, with whom Fynes was connected in a confidential capacity for many seasons. Recently the latter began operations on his own account, and one of his first moves was to take over the Bijou theater in Jersey City, along with a lot of other available theater sites. Subsequently he transferred the Jersey City house to B. F. Keith. The question now asked is whether or not Keith is behind him in the deal for the up-town New York theaters.

* * *

It was stated lately that when Viola Allen presented Clyde Fitch's drama, "The Toast of the Town," it would be her first appearance in a Fitch drama. This, it turns out, was an error. Seven years ago, when Miss Allen was leading lady at the Empire theater, Mr. Fitch's play, "Bohemia," a dramatization of Murger's "La Vie de Boheme," was presented. Puccini's famous opera, "La Boheme," was from the same source. In Mr. Fitch's play Miss Allen was seen in the leading feminine role, Mimi, the same part that Madam Melba has so often impersonated in the opera of "La Boheme." The cast of Mr. Fitch's "Boheme" was a notable one, for besides Miss Allen there appeared Ida Conquest, Elsie De Wolfe, May Robson, Henry Miller, William Faversham, J. E. Dodson, Edward Compton and Ferdinand Gottschalk. It is a singular fact that Puccini, who composed the music for "La Boheme," is to make "The Toast of the Town" into an opera for Emma Eames' use. Puccini is the leading Italian composer of the time.

* * *

Marc Klaw, of the syndicate firm of Klaw and Erlanger, left this week for London The big firm is preparing to establish itself firmly in the English capital, where, strangely enough, it has thus far only maintained a branch office. The London headquarters are also to become the center for the extension to the continent.

* * *

It is more than likely that Edna Aug will be seen in the title role of "Miss Frivolity," a new comic opera by Franklin Bien, which Frank L. Perley expects to produce next season.

* * *

The expected has happened. The playwriting machine of Lincoln J. Carter has not failed, and already the announcement is out that he is ready with a spectacular production of "While Frisco Burns." Nothing like being on the ground floor, and a great many more thrillers will find their inspiration in the Pacific coast disaster.

* * *

Maude Jeffries, who has been playing in Australia as one of the most widely discussed actresses in recent years, will give a series of fifteen performances in Yiddish at the Kalisch theater, in New York, next month. With this engagement Mme. Kalisch concludes her activities in Yiddish drama, in which she first attracted the attention of Harrison Grey Fiske, who made her known to American playgoers. She will devote all her time hereafter to the English-speaking stage.

* * *

Proctor's Fifth avenue stock theater in New York presented its annual new and original production last week. It was a new dramatic version of "Joan of Arc," with Amelia Bingham in the title role. The story of the "Maid of Orleans" has been subject matter for several of the world's great dramatic geniuses, but the Proctor version did not seem to measure with these and was not marvelously successful.

* * *

It developed in a lawsuit instituted by Margaret Anglin last week that the actress had met with an accident during the past summer vacation which had never been made public. This is an oddity, sure. However, Miss Anglin is now suing the New Haven & Hartford road for $50,000 damages sustained in an accident that nearly cost her her life.

* * *

The annual "ladies' day" at the Players' club in New York took place last week and was a brilliant success. The crowd was so large that the punch ran out before the reception was over. It was not stated how much had been prepared.

* * *

The marvelous success of David Warfield in "The Music Master" is best illustrated by the announcement that he is nearing his six hundredth performance of the part at the Bijou in New York this week. And in spite of this long run it is still as popular as ever.

* * *

Artie Hall, the Georgia coon song shouter, well known in vaudeville, was erroneously reported among the dead in the San Francisco earthquake. Miss Hall showed up last week in Los Angeles, minus everything but a little clothing that she saved from the wreck.

* * *

It develops that in the haste to contribute to the relief funds in San Francisco the theater people who have been tendering this cause so many benefits have, strangely enough, overlooked their own people. A complete list of the players who were in San Francisco shows that over 200 were caught, and, while they escaped, most of them lost everything they possessed. So far, the funds have been turned into the general account. There is now talk of a special series of benefits which will be devoted to relieving the immediate embarrassments of the players who suffered by the Frisco disaster.

* * *

An effort was made by the combined colored preachers of Philadelphia to prevent further performances of "The Clansman" in that city, but after hearing both sides of the case, Mayor Weaver decided that there was nothing in the play that called for official action and on this account refused to interfere.

* * *

Arthur Von Seiffertitz, who has created the principal comedy roles in the Irving Palace Theater productions with Conried's German Theater company, is to desert the German stage for the American. He signed a contract with Manager Henry W. Savage last week whereby he becomes a member of the Savage forces. The young German comedian's first part will be an important comedy character in "The Student King," a new comic opera which is soon to be brought out.

* * *

Sam Bernard will go back to his former part of Hoggenheimer next season, when he will produce a new musical comedy under the title of "The Rich Mr. Hoggenheimer." Edgar Smith will write the book of the new melange. The composer for the music has not yet been determined upon.

* * *

Charles Frohman has decided to produce Charles Klein's success, "The Mouse," at the Duke of York theater, in London, on May 21. Edmond Breese, who has been the Lion in the New York production, leaves for England to assume the role there. Margaret Illington is now in the French capital and it is expected that she will play the principal female role.

* * *

Minnie Maddern Fiske gave several matinee performances of John Luther Long's new one-act comedy, "Dolce," at the Manhattan last week. The story is about a singing girl in the Italian quarters of Philadelphia, whose picture Griscom Shandon, an artist, had painted. Some time after it developed that Dolce, the singer is the daughter of a noble Italian family, and while in Florence visits Shandon's studio there. The play begins at this point and is said to be a very charming and delicate comedy, showing a new phase of Mrs. Fiske's art.

Harry Lauder, regarded as the foremost singer of Scotch songs in the British empire, will visit this country next season for a vaudeville tour.

"BRAINS IN YOUR TOES!"

Cries the Stage Dancing Master---The New Dance Discards the Old "Steps" to Become Real Art.

By BEN TEAL,
General Manager of Charles Frohoman's Musical Productions.

What will the new dance be?

That is a hard question to answer. But I can say truthfully and with certainty that it will not be the coon dance or the Indian dance next season. America is completely surfeited with the wold cakewalk or the odd Indian dance, clever as either undoubtedly is. It wants something new. Just as the slap-dash musical comedy, so long popular, has gone the way of all things, and the public is demanding something with more of a plot and more sense, so it is with stage dancing. It must be intellectual as well as attractive, and cleverly rehearsed steps will not do. The dancer must show that she thinks with her head as well as with her feet.

Dancing as a fine art, sunk into a somewhat innocuous desuetude since the time of La Loi Fuller with her "skirt dances," Carmencita and Otero, seems to be coming into its own again all over the world. In Paris everyone is talking of the beautiful dancing of Mlle. Regina Badet, as exemplified in the production of "Aphrodite," at the Opera-Comique. Berlin has gone quite wild over the "dream dances" of a veiled "Countess," and New York has recently set the seal of approval on the Oriental posturing of Miss Ruth St. Denis. These dances are entirely dissimilar, and the popularity of each in its particular sphere indicates nothing of a concerted effort to revive dancing in its higher sense.

That three young women so widely different dancing methods should become popular at the same time merely shows that America, as well as Europe, is glad of the opportunity to see something new and artistic.

The Hindu dances of Miss St. Denis are well-known through the wide vogue she is having in society. She surrounds herself with the mysticism of the Far East, perfumes, incense, "priests" and the like, and her dances consist of rhythmical motions of the body, with scarcely any movement of the feet. In one dance she represents the coming to life of a sacred statue, Rhada, and in another that has become very popular, she represents the motions of a cobra. Miss St. Denis is very beautiful and verly Oriental.

The French dancer, Mlle. Badet, appears first as a bas-relief figure against a wall, into which she seems to merge. Gradually she takes on life, and finally steps down, going into an intricate dance, now lively, now impassioned, now dreamy. It is said to be very fine.

Aristocratic Berlin has a new craze, a sleep dancer, whose identity is kept a profound secret, and who dances with a veiled face. Rumor says she is a countess from Austria, in financial straits, whose brother is exploiting her. Be this as it may, the countess appears every evening to a select circle of notables, many of them from the court. One of the company sits at a piano and plays music grave or gay, the "countess" following the strains with appropriate motions. Doctors have been summoned to the seances to report whether the countess is really in a state of trance or not. They are all certain she is. She is also a spiritualist medium, and as spiritism has been strictly prohibited by the emperor, the court ladies must be very careful that nothing leaks out. It is rumored that the spirits chiefly summoned are those of deceased Prussian royalties, and the opinions of those great dead are by no means favorable on the doings of their living descendants.

The popularity of these artistic dances is an indication that the public is tired of the rough, uncultivated "coon" dance with which it has been surfeited. Just as the coon song has given way to prettier, daintier numbers in all musical productions, so the coon dance must give way to something more artistic. This is an indication of culture on the part of the public, of a near approach to real art, and is most welcome.

There is more of the poetry of motion in the dances of Mrs. St. Denis than in the most intricate "step" dancing of the cakewalk brand. This sort of dancing, the new sort, I mean, appeals to the higher senses, and makes you think. It interprets beautiful things, and can be as expressive as music or poetry. So, as well, does the beautiful "dance plastique" of Mlle. Badet make a move in the right direction. Even to those who do not understand its significance the beauty of her poses will appeal. Such dances as Mlle. Badet's need at present descriptive synopsis on the programs, perhaps, but the time will come when audiences will become so used to their interpretation that they will follow them clearly.

In all the musical productions that I am to make for the coming season, I am trying to approach this in my dances.

WHITE SOX LOOK GOOD

This Year's Team Compares Favorably With Last Year's.

Man for Man, the New Squad Looks Much Faster.

Man for man, the Duluth team for 1906 looks stronger than the Champions of 1905, and if the other clubs in the Copper Country and Northern league are to have a chance for the pennant, they must show a big improvement over last year's form.

It is in the pitching box that the Duluth team shows the biggest improvement. Last year's pitchers were the weakest spot in the team. With any other team in the league but the heavy hitting Champions behind them, Duluth's pitchers last year would have come out with badly shattered reputations. There was no concealing the fact that they were not up to the standard of the rest of the team.

But this year all that is changed. O'Dea has five good men from whom to select his trio of twirlers, and the chances are that the Duluth team will have a staff of pitchers that will be unexcelled by any in the league.

Ferguson is hailed as a wonder, and it is predicted that he will prove one of the finds of the year.

Fool is a youthful southpaw from Ashland. The youngster has everything in the line of curves and plenty of speed. He has been the pride of the Ashland team for two years, and he should make good in Duluth.

Nornstrom is a big Scandinavian from the Iowa state league, with all kinds of speed, and some curves.

Krick is a first-class utility man, a good pitcher and a lively, aggressive player, wherever you put him.

Treadway may have to return to Winnipeg, but if not he will be a valuable recruit. He was one of the best in the Northern league last year.

On the whole, if O'Dea cannot choose a trio of pitchers from these five, that will be better than Powell, Miller and Erickson, he had better resign his job as captain.

Behind the bat, things are not quite so certain. Hunckle looks like a ball player, and Adams, the second catcher, is hailed as a good man, but they have a hard pair of shoes to fill. Big Dan McAleese was as steady as a church, and a good sticker, and it will be hard to find his equal.

The infield will be fast this year—faster than last year.

There is an improvement at third. Weiler was a good comedian, but not much of a ball player, and he has returned to his drug store in Minneapolis. Lovett, who will play the position this year, is a good man. He is a pretty fielder, has a splendid arm, and should not have any trouble in batting better than Weiler.

There is plenty of material for shortstop. Graham is a big fellow, but fast for a man of his size. He has been laid up most of the time he has been with the team, and his arm went back on him early on the trip, but he is a hard worker, and when he has a fair show, should make good.

If he doesn't there is Newman, the speedy little infielder of last year's team to fall back on, and Leighty of the Crookston team will also be along if needed.

At second O'Dea has secured a good man in Livingstone, the captain of last year's Crookston team. Livingstone is a fast fielder, a good sticker, and knows the game as well as O'Dea himself.

O'Dea, the smiling, wily captain of last year's pennant winners, will play at first, and will complete the fastest infield Duluth has seen in years, with the possible exception of the team of 1904, which shattered the club's finances for two years.

It's pretty hard to beat Sam Menefee for an outfielder in the minor leagues, and he will be back with the Sox again this year for the left garden.

McCormick is a young, clean-cut looking player from one of the fast independent teams in Chicago. He has yet to show what he can do.

Baer, the third outfielder, is a big, husky looking veteran, who is said to be strong with the willow.

On the whole, the team that will line up against the Hibbing nine this afternoon is one of which the fans may well be proud, and one of which they can expect big things when the season has opened.

On the day that you make your first purchase of real estate, you become important to Duluth and the city becomes important to you. The real estate ads. should mean much more to you than a mere certain number of lines of type.

FIRST GAME OF SEASON

Opportunity for Fans to See White Sox Work Out.

Two Pitchers Will be Used Against the Hibbing Nine.

Resplendent in new uniforms, and fresh from a three-days' rest, the Duluth White Sox will make their first appearance at Athletic park this afternoon in a game with the fast Hibbing independent team.

Two pitchers will be used by the Duluth team, both Treadway and Pool being given an opportunity to show what they can do. They will be opposed by Freeman, the speedy left-handed twirler, who has been the mainstay of the Hibbing nine for the last two years.

The line-up of the Duluth team in the batting order decided upon will be as follows: Baer, l. f.; Ludwig, c. f.; Livingstone, 2b; Graham, ss; McCormick, r. f.; Lovett, 3b; Krick, 1b; Adams, c; Treadway and Pool, p.

Ferguson, who is hailed as the star pitcher of the Duluth team, will be saved for tomorrow's game with Hibbing.

Adams will probably catch this afternoon, and Hunckle tomorrow. Adams was due to arrive from Chicago today, and the two men will fight it out for the backstop position.

Newman, last year's shortstop, has been finally landed, and will report here some time next week. He is helping the Burlington team out for a few days, and will come as soon as Egan is through with him.

With fine weather the games today and tomorrow should attract record-breaking crowds, as the Hibbing team will put up a strong argument against the leaguers, and it will give the fans the first opportunity of seeing the White Sox work out this season.

CLASS SHOOT.

Second of High Average Competitions Will be Held at Gun Club.

The second shoot in the class series of the high average competition, will be held tomorrow afternoon at the grounds of the Duluth Central Gun club.

The members are divided into three classes, and each man will shoot at 100 targets.

KING OF THE TURF.

Retirement of Sysonby Places Roseben to the Front.

The retirement of Sysonby, probbaly for the entire year, because of a skin disease, will entirely change the complexion of the Eastern racing situation. Heretofore it has been a case of "anything to beat Sysonby," and the turf astronomers have been so busily engaged looking for a star of sufficient magnitude to dim the luster of the great Melton colt that they have rather overlooked the matter of trying to rate the remaining horses as against each other. The news of Sysonby's disappearance from the field of contest naturally throws the public mind toward Roseben, greatest of the sons of the remarkable Ben Strome, who during the past week showed that he could step a mile, step it in a hurry, and beat a good horse at the game. For, in beating Ram's Horn, he undoubtedly beat a great horse, one that went East as the very best representative the West could muster, and one capable, in the judgment of many people, of giving even the great Sysonby an argument. Whether he would have been able to bother Sysonby is a question. If he could it means that even if the Keene colt had been kept in training, he would have been forced to lower his colors to Davy Johnson's great "sprinter." For it is as a sprinter that Roseben has won his spurs. His tremendous success as a record-breaker under record-breaking weights at the "get-up-and-dus!" game, naturally created the impression that he would not go a route. This impression Davy Johnson is trying to eradicate by sending the big horse along this year. There is no reason why he shouldn't go on. Eugenia Burch, a daughter of Ben Strome, likes a long, steady grind for hers, and when the pace is fast she is not very far away. There is nothing in Roseben's pedigree to keep him from possessing the quality of endurance, and the manner in which he beat Ram's Horn at a mile, last Wednesday, makes the big horse the choice of most racegoers for the big handicaps.

JEFFRIES AND O'BRIEN

Former Champion May Come Back to Give Jack a Chance.

Billy Delaney Can See Nothing in It But Jeffries.

It needed an earthquake to get Jeffries back into the ring, but he did come back last week and box three rounds with Jack Root for the benefit of the San Francisco sufferers. Neither the $100,000 that Tom O'Rourke offered Jeff to box before the Tuxedo Athletic club nor the $120,000 that Jimmy Coffroth dangled before him had any power to tempt the big fellow.

But the fact that Jeff actually entered the ring and sparred shows that he is not quite adamant in his determination to shake the rosin of the fighting game off his shoes forever. Let the matchmakers take heart. Jeff may make loud protestations of his love for the farm, "but 'is 'eart is true to Poll." Stick to him, Messieurs, the managers, and you'll have him fighting yet.

Who shall be his opponent? Fitzsimmons? Hardly. Jeff has beaten Fitz twice, and the people want a change. Besides, Fitz, speaking out of the fullness of his heart after his second defeat, said: "Jeff is too much for me." He is.

Who, then, shall coax the retired champion into the limelight? Ruhlin? That is unlikely, inasmuch as Fitzsimmons has beaten him decisively. Then shall it be Jack Root, Marvin Hart or Tommy Burns? The idea is too ludicrous to discuss. Gus Ruhlin would make a far better fight than either of these three, but still more attractive should be a fight between Jeffries and the other conqueror of Fitzsimmons, Philadelphia Jack O'Brien.

Every lover of the game would try his utmost to be at the ringside if these two great men should meet—Jeffries, the most marvellous giant that ever fought, and Jack O'Brien, the fastest, most evasive and most vicious hitter of all the small, quick heavyweights.

Jeff's opinion of the outcome he has told to no man; but no one can doubt his unquestioning belief in his own sure victory. Billy Delaney's opinion is well worth listening to, for he brought out Corbett and Jeff, and what he doesn't know about the game won't do any one much good.

"They don't know Jeff," says Delaney. "If they ever coax him into the ring again they will and he was only beginning to learn to fight when he retired. I predict that, if he comes back, he'll come back faster and cleverer than ever."

Bob Fitzsimmons feels the same way about it, though he isn't saying much. How does Jack O'Brien feel? What does he think of his chances if he should go into the ring against this giant, beside whom Jack Slack, the Staleybridge Infant; Knifton, the Eighty-one Tonner; Ned Baldwin, the Irish Giant; John C. Heenan, and the great John L. Sullivan himself would be mere pigmies?

Why, Jack seems not in the least alarmed. His cock-sureness commands the respect even of those who believe that Jeff's strength and speed would bring him down.

"I'm not worrying Jeffries to bring him back into the ring, and I won't worry if he comes back," said O'Brien to the writer recently. "So long as he stays retired it isn't decent to bother him with challenges. I'm champion of the world now, anyhow, and I don't have to bother him.

"But suppose Jeff comes back, and I'm matched with him. He will have the advantage of two and a half inches in height and reach and sixty pounds in weight. Very good; but fighting isn't a game like weight-lifting or wrestling. Beef doesn't count for such a lot. Speed is the thing. The man with speed and stamina is the man who will win.

"Everybody remembers how Jim Corbett had all the best of Jeffries for twenty-two rounds and a half at Coney Island, and was only knocked out in the twenty-third because he had grown tired from his own exertions. I believe I am faster than Corbett ever was—but assume that I am only as fast as he was, that will be speed enough to fool Jeffries. Besides, I have a great deal more stamina than Corbett had. Doesn't it look reasonable that I can beat Jeffries?

"I'm only twenty-eight years old. I have never dissipated—neither in riot-out living nor even in fighting too much. I have never been under the strain of a long finish fight. All my work, until the last few months, has been in six-round bouts. As a result I am stronger today than ever, and with better endurance. If I am matched with Jeffries I shall take a long time to train, and I'll go into the ring in perfect condition and just as confident as I was when I went against Fitzsimmons."

All of which points to the probability of a most interesting engagement. Who is the Machiavelli of the ring that will set these two great warriors in battle array?

Incidentally it is to be noted that the bout between Fitzsimmons and Jack O'Brien at Tom O'Rourke's Tuxedo club on May 30 has been declared off. Jack O'Brien, wise business man that he is, wanted 10 per cent more of the purse than Fitz should get. O'Rourke let O'Brien go and wired for Tommy Burns, the Western youth, who recently knocked out the mighty Marvin Hart. Tommy accepted, and he is probably on his way East now.

What will Fitz do to Tommy Burns? So far as public form is any guide, it's a shame to treat Tommy so. And yet there were many who figured on public form that Marvin Hart would find Tommy a mere punching bag. Boxing is a funny game, and you cannot always sometimes tell.

It may be that Tommy will land as great a shock at Essington as he did at Los Angeles. If he does, it will be the biggest kind of a surprise to New Yorkers who have seen Fitz doing light training work during the last week. The Grand Old Man of the ring seems to be in good fix right now, save for a blistering of the feet, caused by running too many miles around Central Park in tight shoes.

TOO WET FOR TENNIS.

Courts Have Had No Opportunity to Dry Out This Week.

Wet and rainy weather has kept the tennis players from getting out this week, as the courts have had no opportunity to dry out.

Two or three days of warm, bright, sunny weather would put the courts in good condition and play could be begun.

The first club tournament is being arranged, and the drawings will be announced in about two weeks. Play will begin during the latter part of the month, or early in June.

TROUBLES ADJUSTED

Grand Forks Men Due to Report at Once in Minneapolis.

Baseball News From the Other Cities Around the Circuit.

Grand Forks, May 5.—At last the question of baseball in this city is settled. The matter has been up in the air for some time, and the perseverance of M. Stanchfield has been largely instrumental in keeping the matter intact.

Yesterday Prof. Brannon and Mr. Dinnie of the committee to solicit funds got busy and secured subscriptions to the amount of $1,200 for the baseball team, Mr. Dinnie is out of the city today, but tomorrow he will finish the work and will be able to raise the entire amount required, which is $2,000.

Manager McNeil left today for Bloomington, Ill., where seven of the players are located, to complete arrangements with them for the season. He will assemble the entire team in Minneapolis Sunday, and next week they will play exhibition games at La Crosse, Faribault and a series of games at Watertown. The team will not be able to reach this city until May 12.

The first four games will be played at Winnipeg so that the local team will not appear on the home diamond until May 21. The first games of the season will be played in the old University park, but in a short time the directors of the new park will meet and arrange for its building.

Lake Linden, May 5.—The appearance of several of Lake Linden's ball players in uniform yesterday afternoon was the cause of many glad hearts among the fans, besides demonstrating the season is near at hand. Those who arrived yesterday were Detman, who holds a position behind the bat, hailing from Milwaukee; Salbran and McIntosh, two first basemen; O'Hayer, second base; Lellivelt and Wotell, both outfielders; all excepting the first coming from Chicago. The remainder of the players are expected this evening and it is stated that an exhibition game will be played Sunday afternoon.

The workout yesterday afternoon showed all in fine form and provided the team, as a whole works as yesterday, the pennant will look well in the Sandy city for 1906. The sextette already here are in first class condition; all have excellent whips, and so far, they appear as if they could hold their own.

Houghton, May 5.—Manager Howard Cassiboine, who has been chosen as playing manager and captain of the Houghton baseball team is getting his men in line for a hard season of work and the winning of the pennant of the Northern-Copper Country Baseball league. Transportation has been sent to all of the players and it is expected that about twenty will be on hand for practice this week. Practice will be held every morning for two hours and for a like period every afternoon, probably at the Hancock driving park.

Manager Cassiboine says that he is certain that all of the men are good ones and that he has a good bunch to pick a winning team from.

MICHIGAN AND PENNSY

To Play Football Game at Philadelphia on Nov. 17.

Philadelphia, May 5.—Harvard has refused Pennsylvania a place on her football schedule this fall. Pennsylvania has arranged a game with Michigan, to be played in this city, on Nov. 17. George McFadden, chairman of the football committee, has given out this statement: "The football committee of the University of Pennsylvania begs to inform the public that negotiations, begun a month or more ago, have been consummated by which the two universities enter into an agreement for a period of two years to play football, the first game to be played in Philadelphia, Nov. 17, 1906, and the following year to be played in the West. Such agreement is subject to approval by the faculty of each institution."

The scheduling of the game with Michigan is the very best evidence that Pennsylvania has given up hope of playing Harvard this year.

TEAMS ARE MORE EVEN

Major League Pennant Winners Have No Cinch This Year.

Improvement on All Sides is Noticed in the Teams.

Boston, May 5.—Already it is plain to see that the teams of the major leagues are more evenly matched than ever before.

The championship will be carried off this season by the team having a fair break of luck and up-to-date, aggressive management.

The pennant winners of last year have no cinch on the honors this season, as the Athletics will miss Lave Cross, and the New York Giants have already shown signs of distress without the great Mathewson in shape. The Cleveland club is not sure of Lajoie; Washington will miss Joe Cassidy; Boston has already missed Lou Criger, while Pittsburg has missed the clever Beaumont. There isn't one chance in a hundred that players can be found to fill the places of the men named above. Lajoie, Mathewson, Beaumont and Criger may all return to their teams and help out but time will be lost and other teams grow bolder, until the complexion of things change all round.

President Charley Murphy of Chicago should be happy. He is the only man alive celebrating a victory over a local rival by floating to the breeze a pennant.

The American league clubs of Boston, St. Louis and Philadelphia won the same honors to enjoy their victories in a modest way, looking for more important victories to glory over. But, then, Mr. Murphy is a good advertiser, and naturally enjoys rubbing it into the old chief, Comiskey, although the latter has won honors enough in baseball to load a freight car with. It's too early to pick the winners. The old players will be slow in settling into their stride, but will finish strong, while several young fellows will look good until their weakness is discovered.

The fans should not look for too much. The players are all in earnest and do their best, and often a scratch hit will win a game for some lucky club. Good sport is what the lovers of the game should be satisfied with, for the work of the visiting teams is a treat when they play fast ball. As the boys become more accustomed to the spit ball there will be more batting, and I believe the batting averages this year will be 20 per cent better all round than last year.

I notice a wild yarn going the rounds to the effect that James H. O'Rourke is 63 years of age and still playing ball. A few days ago I received a letter from the veteran dated at his home in Bridgeport, Conn., saying that he had decided to take an active part in the game once more, as he could not find any one to take his place. I would like to say that Mr. O'Rourke is just ten years short of 63. O'Rourke's first professional engagement was with the Mansfields, of Middletown, Conn., in the spring of 1872. For two years before that he played a few games about his home city after leaving high school. I caught in the first game where O'Rourke received money for playing, and that was late in the fall of '70. The game was played at Stratford, three miles from Bridgeport, against the Naugatuck club, and was won by Naugatuck, as O'Rourke dropped a high fly in the ninth inning, allowing the winning run to score. I recommended O'Rourke to Manager Douglas, of the Mansfield club, where he played the season of '72, and I also recommended O'Rourke to Harry Wright for the Boston club that fall. I had two offers, one from Boston and one from Philadelphia, and signed to go to the Quaker City in the fall of '72. Wright wanted a first baseman, and I suggested Jim O'Rourke, and received an answer back from the Boston management saying "O'Rourke can have the job if he will drop the O from his name, as the public in Boston will not stand for the Irish."

A few weeks later Harry Wright came to Bridgeport to see O'Rourke and found him taking care of some cattle on his father's farm, on the outskirts of the town. By the way, that farm is the identical spot where the ball grounds are now located, and Mr. O'Rourke is the sole owner of the ball park, the club, and plays just when he likes.

Manager Wright got his man for Boston, and for several years he was obliged to cut the O off his name. Things have changed since that time in old Boston, until now it is practically essential to have a few Os and Macs on the teams to make good either artistically or financially.

Jim O'Rourke is no freak player, and the work that he is fully capable of performing is first-class, for he was ever a natural hitter and fielder.

The critics and fans never tire of comparing the two great players, Lajoie and Wagner, and very often those who compare these men have no chance to see both men during a season.

The two players have different styles. Lajoie graceful, with no movement for effect, while Wagner will swing his arm and kick up the dust in making the simplest kind of a play in the field.

To the average spectator Wagner would take the prize in a canter. The ball player and close observer would pick Lajoie.

Wagner will fumble and make wild throws, while Lajoie is dead onto the mark and seldom fumbles. He gets a ball away much quicker than Wagner, and while it may seem that Wagner can run bases better than the Frenchman, the fact is that Lajoie only takes chances when called for, and gets there, being fast and a fine slider.

At the bat Lajoie is perfection itself, while Wagner has an awkward style, swinging wildly, and being a poor judge of pace, raising many flies and showing to poor advantage when compared with Lajoie, the grandest batsman the game ever produced, even superior to the great Delehanty. Lajoie cracks the ball as a man would snap a whip, while Wagner fires his club, reminding one of the famous players when willow bats were the rage. Both are grand ball players, and Wagner the most interesting, with his picturesque style, but Lajoie is the finished ball player, the artist without frills, making phenomenal plays look easy, without a rival on the ball field.

The question is how good is Lajoie at the present time. Has he gone back or will he come again as he thaws out this season? T. H. MURNANE.

SPORTING COMMENT

Spring training tours are not all milk and honey.

When you have fifteen or sixteen dead-broke ballplayers on your hands, in a dinkey, little, jerkwater town on the death trail circuit in Iowa, and gaze through the rain-bespattered windows of the "Commercial House," where your ballplayers are eating up about $20 worth of grub a day, at the showers which are putting the Sunday game, on which you counted for transportation to the next jumping-off place, out of business, the world assumes an indigo hue.

The weather seems to be designed for the single purpose of driving your frail financial bark on the shoals of disaster, and with a monotonous persistency it rains on Saturdays and Sundays, and clears up on Mondays and Tuesdays, when the gate receipts would not buy a day's meal tickets.

But once in a while the sun breaks through the clouds, and a Saturday or a Sunday dawns bright and warm and clear, and the hungry fans flock to the ball park like sheep through a pasture gate. A few days like this, you figure, and you will be on easy street, but they seldom come. The fat piece that falls your way from the division of the gate receipts, goes to settle up on an overdue hotel bill for the team, and you have a balance that barely pays your fares to the next town.

This is the hand-to-mouth existence that is generally led on a spring training tour.

This year Capt. Artie started out with his bunch of hopefuls before the New York Nationals had reported for training. He took the trip as a speculation, paying the expenses himself, and he was persistently followed by the hoodoo. He was ill himself most of the time, and laid up in a hospital at Decatur, while the team went wandering about the country like a ship without a rudder. One or two good games pulled him out of the hole, somewhat, but he came back to Duluth with a small balance on the wrong side of the ledger.

"If I had had just a little bit of good luck, I would have made a killing," said the Duluth captain. "We missed three good Sunday games on account of rain, and I was laid up all the time we were down there. The team was crippled most of the time, and could not do itself justice, with pitchers playing in the infield and in the outfield. Even at that, if I hadn't been sick, I think we would have come out ahead of the game, for the fans down there were simply crazy to see some baseball, and we got good crowds whenever the weather was half way decent."

"There is more than one way of getting even with a ball manager," said one of the Duluth players, last evening, to a little bunch of companions, who were smoking and gossiping of their baseball experiences.

"I remember once when I was captain of a little team in one of the bush leagues. I was on the wagon gate, at one of the games away from home, and I saw four fellows from my home town heave in sight. I gave them the mystic signal, and they passed through without digging up the two bits apiece. But the manager of the home team saw me, and he came running over, shook his fist in my face, and threatened to have me expelled from the league for passing in these four fellows. He raised an awful row, and made the boys go out and buy tickets before they could see the game. They took it in good part, but I felt pretty cheap about it.

"Well, we went on to the field and got about half way through the game, when the manager walked in and went over and sat down on the home team's bench. I waited until he got seated, and then I stopped the game, and went over to the umpire.

"'I don't know that fellow over on the bench,' I said. 'He's got to get out.'

"'Why, that's the manager of this team and the owner of these grounds,' yelled the umps.

"'I don't care. He's got to get off the field,' I said, and the umps walked over and led the manager off. He was so mad he was going to slug the umps, and he yelled cuss words at me until the air was blue. And you can bet your last year's mit that those four fellows up in the bleachers didn't miss the chance to rub it in."

"Perhaps it will be pretty poor picking up at Winnipeg this year, eh Artie?" inquired Herbert Noissler, the treasurer of the ball team, who will accompany the players on their trips this year to look after the money bag.

"The grounds this year are right inside the grounds up there, and the ball games will be in connection with the Happyland shows. I guess the Saturday afternoon crowds there will be pretty poor, eh?"

WRESTLERS' TIME LONG

Due to the Fact That They Are Most Abstemious.

Plenty of the Grapplers Who Neither Drink Nor Smoke.

Probably no class of athletes have a longer vogue than wrestlers. Unlike some prizefighters their careers are measured by a span of years, usually from twenty-five to fifty. This is more or less due to the fact that they are a pretty abstemious lot when out of training as well as when in.

In order to last on the mat a grappler must lead a far more careful life than a pugilist if he hopes to make a name and livelihood in his business. For at least nine months in the year he must keep in the best of condition. In fact, he must be in training all of the time. It is different, though, with the scrappers. The fighter who is on top of the heap or who is striving for a title is not required to take as much exercise as the grappler. A pugilist at best engages in a half dozen matches a year, whereas some wrestlers figure in as many contests each month.

Tom Cannon, the dean of wrestlers, who is well nigh in his 60th year, said recently that he did not begin to realize the fine points of his profession until he was near 40. At this age prizefighters are invariably on the down grade. Farmer Burns took up the sport on the mat at 35. Today, past 59, he is capable of holding his own with wrestlers who have not yet reached 30. Like good wine he seems to improve with age.

Tom Jenkins is 40 and may be said to be as many years young. Jenkins has no intention of retiring from the mat. At present he is instructing future defenders of our country at West point in the art of wrestling. Every day Jenkins is called upon to have a tussle with strong and ambitious youngsters. Sometimes Jenkins meets as many as twenty pupils in a day. Yet he finds his occupation congenial as well as profitable. Harvey Parker, for a long time the champion welterweight of the world, is 42. Parker is still up and doing. Parker is no laggard for work. In the various cities where wrestling is popular Parker is usually seen in matches with men much younger than himself. Yet Parker is able to hold his own and defeat his rivals in quick and decisive style. Parker is an athlete who neither drinks nor smokes. He is always in fettle and revels in plenty of indoor and outdoor exercise.

One of the most careful wrestlers in the world as to his mode of living is probably Georges Hackenschmidt, the Russian lion. He is a most superstitious man, and believes that as soon as he quits his present mode of life his great strength will desert him. His observations of the demoralizing effect of "wine, women and song" are interesting. He practices as he preaches and does not advise anything that he does not practice himself. For instance, he likes candy. He says that sweets of the best quality will make some persons strong. It has succeeded in his case. He is an early riser and an early retirer. The simplest of foods are good enough for him each day throughout the year. Maybe once in a while he might indulge in a glass of beer. This is taken with his meals and used more as a stimulant than anything else. He believes in hard work. He says that this is the best mental as well as bodily exercise he knows of. When he is not training he finds plenty to occupy his mind with theatrical engagements or investments.

Another wrestler who attributes his preservation to the simple life is Hughy Leonard, instructor in the art at the New York Athletic club. Leonard admits that he is well nigh to the 40-year mark. But he does not look it. He is a trim set young man, with broad shoulders and a clear complexion. And Leonard's daily routine at the club is not a bed of roses. He has a large class of strong young men, proficient under his instruction, and they are told to go at him for all they are worth. And they do. This sort of work would easily wreck an ordinary man, but Leonard seems to thrive by it. And it is all due to the fact that he is abstemious. Bill Brown, for fourteen years wrestling partner of George Bothner, never drinks. Brown has not changed much in appearance in the past ten years and says he owes his present health and youth to careful living.

Billy Muldoon, who was the champion Graeco-Roman expert for years, is in his 50th year. Muldoon is a physical culturist and has a place where he shows the indolent wealthy how to keep good health.

Turkish wrestlers "go to the dogs" quicker than grapplers of other nationalities. This is mainly due because they are too fond of coffee and stimulants. The Turks believe in superfluous flesh to carry them to victory on the mat. Most of them are naturally strong and vigorous and imagine that obesity is their vitality. In some cases this has proved to be a fact. The late Youssuf and Nouraliah were noted for their bulk and avoirdupois. Youssuf never bothered his head about training on modern lines. He neglected the road and dumbells for cigarettes, potatoes and plenty of coffee and wine. The diet increased his strength and he had no trouble in defeating his rivals easily. It was the same with Nouralah. But as the latter advanced in years he found that his excess weight was a handicap instead of an aid and was forced to retire.

Frank Gotch of Humboldt, Iowa, is 25 years old, and is another specimen of the wrestler who takes care of himself. He is a very abstentious young man and temperate to the extreme in his habits. Gotch was a farm hand in Iowa, wrestling in the hay fields, when Farmer Burns, who was then doing stunts at the county fairs, heard of the phenom. Burns took hold of the young lad and immediately realized that he possessed winning qualities. When the first match was made by Burns for the big farmer lad he was afraid to leave his home town, and after he did get him started he had a hard time to keep him on the road, as the country life appealed to the farmer boy.

Gotch has wrestled many matches and has been up against all the hard ones. He lost the championship of the United States to Tom Jenkins. He is now negotiating with Jenkins for a return match for the championship of the United States. All preliminaries to the match have been arranged, except the date.

Gotch is really only in the prime of his career. Should he take as good care of himself for the next five years as he has in the past, he will undoubtedly be the champion of the world before the five years have elapsed.

ASTROPHYSICAL SCIENCE.

Washington Correspondent in New York World: Speaker Cannon was talking about the queer requests he received for appropriations from investigators of various kinds.

"One time a government scientist asked for $18,000 for the study of astrophysicial science. I asked him what he meant by astrophysical. 'And what do you think he told me?'

"'Why,' said he, 'astrophysical is the study of the sun's rays behind the red.'

"'Think of it! Eighteen thousand of the government's good hard money for the study of the sun's rays behind the red.'

"'What are the sun's rays behind the red?' I asked.

"'Why, the colors of the spectrum outside of the red,' the man of science replied.

"'Can you see 'em?' I asked.

"'No,' he replied, 'but I think I could if I had the $18,000.'"

ONE PUNCH IS ENOUGH

Only Requires Right Blow to Make a New Champion.

All Fighters Sooner or Later Meet With a Defeat.

New York, April 28.—There is an old saying in prize-ring circles that "It only takes one to win." And there never was a truer saying. No matter how rugged a boxer may be, or how strong his jaw, a blow with sufficient force planted on the proper spot will send him to the land of nod, with bells on his toes and jingles in his ears. He may go along for a year and escape it, but if he sticks to the game he will get it sooner or later. Peter Jackson went for fifteen years without getting it, but Jeffries tackled it on finally. Bob Fitzsimmons started boxing in 1880, when Jem Mace made a tour of Australia and New Zealand, and for nineteen straight years he met them, of all sizes and weights, without being down for the fatal ten. Jeffries was the one to turn the trick at the island, in the eleventh round, in 1899. Tom Sharkey is another who went a long time without being knocked out. Built like an anvil, with broad shoulders, thick neck and wide, rugged jaw, a punch on the point seemed to have no more effect on him than water on a duck's back. From 1883 to 1900 people said Tom couldn't be sent to dreamland, but Bob Fitzsimmons said he could, and proved it. He hung one onto Tom's jaw in the second round at Coney Island that made the sailor forget everything for the good part of a minute. Patsy Sweeney is another who had a proverbially tough jaw, but Dal Hawkins had a tougher punch and sent Patricio to the slumber rug. Among those who were considered the hardest to knock out were Joe Goddard, who agreed to let John L. Sullivan hit him fairly on the chin, and offered to bet he could live through the punch; Paddy Slavin, Kid Lavigne, Joe Walcott, Jim Burge, Jimmy Handler and Dick O'Brien, and still all of them took the count of ten when the time came. About the best example that could be named is Marvin Hart. He won fourteen straight fights at the beginning of his career, defeating tough ones like Tommy West, Jim Ryan, Al Weinig and Dan Creedon, only to be knocked out in a round by Bill Hanrahan, who was his fifteenth opponent.

While the belief prevails generally that to knock a man out you must render him unconscious, such is not the case by any means. Considerable money has been decided away in bets by people who didn't know and naturally rendered a wrong decision. "Knock-out" was originated by Billy Madden, or, at least, was first publicly used by him. It was at the time he made the historical tour with John L. Sullivan as his manager when the mighty Bostonian met all comers and offered a bonus to any one whom he failed to knock out in four rounds. It meant "knock out on time," or to render one incapable of continuing for a period of 10 seconds and not to knock him senseless. If for any reason a contestant failed to continue, either through fear or because his seconds threw up the sponge, he was considered "knocked out of time" and did not receive the prize. To go into the matter a little more deeply, there is a rule, among fair sporting men, that governs bets on all events, and it is: "If you can't win, you can't lose." It is intended to do away with all trick bets and catches. It was a ruling always held up by the late Captain Cooke, for years the editor of the Police News and the recognized authority of his day. If "knock-out" meant to knock a man unconscious, the man who wagered that a certain fighter would not be knocked out need never lose. All he would have to do would be to wait until his man was losing and then throw up the sponge. That would end the bout, his man would still be in the possession of his senses and he would win the bet. It is foolish ever to use the word "knock-out" in a bet. A preferable word is "stop," or one even better than that and one every one will understand, is, "win in seven rounds or less," for example. Then if the man on whom you bet was awarded the decision on a foul, made his opponent quit or pinned on the nodland wallop within the stipulated time, you would cash your bet as you would have a right to do. Trick bets are discouraged by the better classes of sports and the one who deliberately plans one and wins on it is not very highly thought of.

With Tommy Murphy, who has earned a rest, temporarily out of the game, and Abe Attell matched with Frankie Neil in 'Frisco and with Joe Bowker in England, it looks as though Matty Baldwin is about the toughest 122-pound boy around these parts at the present time. He has been giving away weight in lumps in order to get on matches, and his recent victory over the sturdy Kid Goodman, whom he defeated at 129 pounds, was considered quite an achievement by Eastern ring followers. It is only a matter of time until Murphy and Baldwin meet, as the managers of both men have agreed to sign articles as soon as Murphy is in shape. Johnny Mack, who looks after the latter's business interests, is desirous of matching him against Terry McGovern and agrees to let the Brooklyn boy come in at 126 pounds. He recently offered Terry $1,500 to box Matty three rounds without a decision, but Joe Humphries, Terry's manager, did not accept. There are four reputable clubs in the East that would grab at a match between McGovern and Baldwin, and there is no question but that a big purse could be secured. It goes without saying that the bout would be a corker. Both boys are of the slam-bang style and mix it from bell to bell. Neither is given much to clinching, and they prefer to fight themselves free. If a match is made between Terry and Baldwin they are almost sure of offers from the four following matchmakers: Tom O'Rourk, Tuxedo Athletic club, Essington; Jack McGuigan of the National Athletic club, Philadelphia; Billy Pierce of the Lincoln Athletic club, Boston, and Billy McCarney of the Washington club, Philadelphia. It is pretty hard to secure good cards in the East, and the matchmakers have to keep their eyes pretty well peeled to get attractive bouts. Here is one that looks good to them, and it should pack any arena in the East to the outer walls.

"I received a rather amusing letter from a friend of mine who has been spending the winter in San Diego," said Harry Pollitz, the boxing promoter, to a crowd of red-hots in the Hotel Jamison, over in Philadelphia, the other night. "It started off with an account of Tommy Burns' bouts with Jim O'Brien and Jim Walker, both of whom he knocked out in a round, and wound up with a description of a battle royal between six colored young men which preceded the main events. I'll read the letter part of it to you: 'Before Marvin Hart's conqueror put in an appearance in the ring, there was a grand go-as-you-please passage at arms between half a dozen swarthy-skinned brunettes named Whistling Billy Bullet Head, Wild Man of Borneo, Smiling Catcher. It was two tilts better than the limit. They were contesting for a roasted goose and I wish you had seen the eyes and watched the lips of the contestants while the master of ceremonies was describing the prize with all the eloquence he had at command. When the bell rang there was a mad rush to the center of the ring, and in a minute it looked as though the audience was throwing boxing gloves at the fighters. After several assaults, Bullet Head and the Wild Man went down for the count. Shortly after Billy and the Bull Catcher were side-tracked and Bad Knee and Smiling Sambo were left to have it out. Sambo was in his bare feet and Bad Knee wore a pair of red half hose that could be heard all over the arena. Neither one had the faintest idea about boxing, and the way they wallowed and slopped around the ring was a caution. Both fell about a dozen times without being hit and they were throwing Arabs, flip-flaps, twisters and back sumersaults at the rate of ten a minute. Finally the yellow in Sambo began to show and his feet became as cold as ice. He was down for eight seconds several times but that was as far as the referee would count, and then he would start at one again. Sambo stood it as long as he could and the last time he struck the floor he made a pillow of his right glove, looked at the referee with an air of defiance and yelled out as loud as he could: 'I don't care how slow you count now, 'cause I'm down this time to stay.'"

As a guide to automobile owners, a map of the road between Duluth and St. Paul has been prepared by the officers of the Duluth Automobile club.

The character of the road is shown in the map, and it will be used in the campaign which the automobile owners of Duluth and the Twin Cities are making for good roads. From Rush City to St. Paul, the road is in good shape, and parts of the road between Duluth and Rush City are also in first class condition.

Near Barnum there is a bad stretch of road, and another stretch near Rutledge. It is also in wretched condition near Sandstone and Hinckley, and there is a bad bridge across Mission Creek. From Mission Creek to Beroun it is rough, but after that it improves, and from Pine City to St. Paul, it become gradually better and better.

The northern end of the road is the part that must be improved, and the club members are trying to interest the farmers and residents of the small towns between here and Pine City in the attempt to improve the highway between Duluth and the Twin Cities.

The accompanying map shows the points where the road crosses the railroad track, the distances between towns, and the character of the road at each point.

HOW TO HURL THE DISCUS

Explanation of the Correct and the Incorrect Methods.

Amateurs' Fault is Improper Holding of the Weight.

BY MARTIN A. DELANEY,
Physical Director Kansas City Athletic Club.

Hammer and discus throwing are unquestionably two of the prettiest and most interesting of field events to watch when good form is displayed by the competitors.

In order to accomplish anything and make a good showing in weight events good form is an essential requisite. Men with weight and strength get fair results, but without the proper form their performance is awkward.

Illustration No. 1 shows the correct way the discus is held by many athletes, particularly by the average discus thrower in this section. In illustration No. 2 the incorrect way to hold the discus is shown. Notice in the No. 1 illustration the dge of the discus is held in the first finger joint, and the weight is thrown back onto the wrist.

When properly thrown the discus should leave the hand smoothly and sail the whole distance of its flight the same way. This is a hard matter for many athletes to accomplish. It is only by hard and constant practice that the proper form of throwing can be acquired and developed. There is one thing that the thrower should impress upon his memory, that is, to slightly raise the wrist as the discus leaves the hand. This will insure proper sailing and get the distance.

THE CORRECT WAY.

Practice the turn until you are familiar with each move and know where each turn will bring you in the course across the circle. When you have mastered this, then the work should be done with the weight itself, always bearing in mind to get the proper form, and never looking for distance. With proper form the distance will come, slowly perhaps at first, but bound to increase in time.

Tall, lanky men are adapted to the discus. They have an advantage over shorter men, as they are aided by the swep of their long arms, and consequently get better elevation, which is very important in the hurling of the discuss.

The thrower will be greatly handicapped if he has a small hand, as the competitor with a large hand can cover the back of the discus and more readily obtain the proper hold.

The double turn is used to the best advantage in discus throwing. The competitor should turn around twice in the circle before he hurls the discus, increasing the speed of each turn until the maximum is reached at the front end of the circle, when the weight leaves the hand. Care should be taken that the discus does not leave the hand in a twist, as it may turn in the air. Doing this will cut off many feet in the throw.

THE WRONG WAY.

The hammer thrower has also to lay particular attention on the developing of speedy footwork and form. The man who throws the hammer should spend considerable time in developing the turn, first without the hammer, then with it. Try the turn any place you can measure off a seven-foot circle.

You may try a few turns of course without the hammer, until you get the turn down "pat," then try with the weight and don't forget to pay more attention to elevation than to distance. The athlete should stand with his back towards the place he intends to hurl the hammer, and at the front end of the circle. His body should be erect, his right foot from twelve to eighteen inches behind, towards the center. The foot he turns on, or the pivot foot (left), should be on an angle of ninety degrees from the direction of the right foot to insure an easy turn, the greater the angle the better the turn. He then swings the weight slowly around his head. Care should be taken to have the arms extended full length when the hammer comes around the right side of the body. To do this the arms may be brought quickly over the head and right shoulder ahead of the weight, in this way collecting the swing again at the right side of the body with the arms at full length. After swinging the weight three times, the third swing being just enough to warrant the thrower making the first turn, the turn is made with the body well in front of the hammer, the body pulling the weight all the time. The faster the turns, the better the result.

The result of the first turn will find the thrower nearly on the same spot he started. The instant the right foot is put down, the left is moved speedily across the circle all the time.

The third turn following, the thrower moves speedily across the circle all the time. At the finish of the third turn the hammer has attained its momentum and simultaneously with the finish of the third turn straighten the body to its full height, the arm raised, lifting the weight as high as possible. Height is most important.

The main object in hammer throwing is to move across the circle at a rate of speed gauging the distance so as not to foul and at the same time increasing the speed of the hammer until the climax, then lifting the hammer into the air for height and distance. Always remember to keep in front of the weight.

Gauging the distance for the turns is where the thrower will find the most trouble, as does the expert as well as the beginner. A good plan is to divide the circle into three parts, the first one for the first turn and the second for the second turn, the third for the third turn.

With big men form is not quite so important as speedy footwork, as a large man has strength to use, which is very important in hammer throwing.

OARSMEN BEGIN SPRING TRAINING

Boat Club Members Now Working for the July Regatta.

The Duluth Boat club oarsmen had their first practice row Wednesday evening, and active training for the regatta in July, will be begun next week.

The weather was too cold and windy to allow the crews to get out on Thursday and Friday evenings, but if the wind moderates they will be out tonight.

There are only two months left in which to train for the big regatta, and the time is short. The crews should be selected some little time before the race, and in fact the sooner they are decided upon, the better.

The rowing committee, however, is anxious to give all the new oarsmen a local examinations for fraternal insurances from $1 to $2 and old line insurance examintions will remain at $5.

The May term of district court will convene Tuesday. There are no criminal cases and no grand jury has been drawn. Judge McClenahan will preside and Court Reporter George Moody will accompany him. There are twenty-three civil cases on the calendar.

The railroad surveyors that have been camped in town for several weeks moved out south of Aitkin last Monday.

A district W. C. T. U. convention will be held in the Methodist church in Aitkin the 15th and 16th. Mrs. B. Laythe Scovell, state president, will attend.

There were ten graduates from four of the county rural schools at Cutler last Saturday.

Watson Bros. of Willow River have finished a gasoline launch with three-horse power motor.

The Aitkin public library will re-open as a free library Saturday. The library was started through the efforts of the North Side Study club two years ago by an association, but has been turned over to the village and a library board is now in control. A tax of $250 was levied for its support during the coming year. There are about 800 volumes on the shelevs for the opening.

The old Marr & Krech blacksmith and machine shop on the main business corner is being torn down to make room for the new First National bank building.

The teachers for the next school year have been selected as follows: High school—F. O. King, superintendent; Lillian Wheeler, principal; F. W. Allin, Trask; Edith Burges, normal department. Grades—Elizabeth Steicher, Ruth Hawkins, Anna Struet, Katherine Coley, Katherine MacLeod, Matie Rose, Oleanor Osborn, Cora Gates, Lila Severance, Mabel Cowie, Anna White, Bessie White.

Dr. W. B. Kelly, who gave up practice several years ago on account of his health and went on a farm, has recovered and has leased his farm, and after taking a post-graduate course at Ann Arbor will return to Aitkin to practice.

Rev. C. W. Lawson is at Evanston, Ill., this week as one of the official visitors to the Methodist theological institution.

The Choral union will give the closing concert for the season at the Auditorium May 10.

BET ON A LOSER AND WON.

Interesting Story of First Bet Made by William Steele.

Lexington, Ky., May 5.—William Steele, who brought A. J. Casseti's great horse, The Bard, to Kentucky, and now has his band of broodmares at Woodburn Farm, where he is mating them to the size of Gold Heels, tells an interesting story of the first bet he ever made on a race. Steele is an Englishman and laid his first bet at Newmarket. He had saved up two sovereigns to bet on the tip he had secured from a famous English trainer, and he got odds of 6 to 1 for his money. The horse he backed took a commanding lead early in the race, and seemed a sure winner. Steele saw a suspicious movement by the bookmaker who held his wager, and he figured the bookie was going to welsh. He saw the latter start off through the crowd, and he hurried up to him, and reminded him that he had made a bet with him. The bookmaker handed Steele the 14 sovereigns just as the horses crossed the winning line, and then the welsher let out as fast as he could. Steele got back to the winning line and found out that some horse had come with a rush and nosed his horse out. The bookmaker had overlaid himself on the race, and when he saw the horse as he thought winning he resorted to flight, and was only too glad to give Steele his money to get away in safety, as he had accepted many big bets on the race, which as it turned out, he won anyway. Steele never saw the welshing bookie again after that, and this is probably the first case of a man making his first bet and actually losing, and still quitting winner.

BRIEF TELEGRAMS.

AITKIN

Aitkin, May 5.—(Special to The Herald.)—Aitkin county is on a good financial basis, its only bonded indebtedness being $8,000 issued for courthouse, now nearly due, and money in the treasury to pay it, and $16,000 issued for road and bridge purposes. The commissioners will now endeavor to put the county on a cash basis of doing business by submitting a proposal to the voters at the next election to issue bonds to take up the floating indebtedness, which amounts to about $60,000. This indebtedness is now in 6 per cent orders and they are eagerly bought up by investors who may oppose their withdrawal from circulation. A saving of about $1,200 a year on interest can be made by the change of method.

W. E. Pike of Duluth attended the Ely club dance Thursday evening.

J. P. Labree of Superior, was in Ely this week on business.

BEMIDJI

Bemidji, May 5.—(Special to The Herald.)—Mrs. Jennie Lee Heffron, wife of H. L. Heffron died at St. Anthony's hospital, Monday evening, at 9 o'clock, from a complication of diseases. Mrs. Heffron was one of Bemidji's earliest settlers, having come in 1896. She was born in Oswego county, New York, in July, 1856. A husband and three children, Clara, Lee and Gussie are left to mourn her loss. The funeral was held Thursday afternoon from the home, Rev. S. E. P. White, officiating. Miss Beulah Brannon of Northome is the guest of relatives and friends in this city.

D. E. Brenneman left Wednesday for Washburn, Wis., where he was called by the death of a sister.

Miss Laura Mayer and Alphonse F. Crawford were married Tuesday morning at St. Anthony's chapel in the presence of relatives, Rt. Rev. Father O'Dwyer, officiating. After an elaborate wedding breakfast Mr. and Mrs. Crawford left for a wedding trip to the South, after which they will be at home during the summer at Devils Lake, N. D. The young couple have been very prominent in the younger set of Bemidji's society, and they have the best wishes of a host of friends.

Miss Blanche Boyer returned Monday from Northome, where she was the guest of relatives for a few days.

Attorney G. W. Campbell returned Tuesday from a business trip to Duluth and the Twin Cities.

Judge Spooner returned Tuesday from St. Paul, where he spent several days on business.

Rev. Neil Gilchrist, pastor at large of the Cookston Presbytery, was in this city a part of the week.

Judge and Mrs. M. S. Spooner, who have been living at the Brinkman hotel since last fall, have opened their home on Lake Boulevard.

The "Beau Not" club gave a farewell banquet at the Markham hotel, Sunday evening, in honor of Miss Ethel Muncy, who left Tuesday with her parents for their future home at Seattle. Seventeen young ladies were present and at the close of the banquet they presented Miss Muncy with a silver loving cup.

Miss Nora Monger of McIntosh is the guest of Mr. and Mrs. I. B. Olson.

The free delivery of mail in this city commenced Tuesday morning. Adam E. Otto is delivering in the first district, which is that portion of the city lying east of Beltraml avenue. Dennis Constantine has charge of the second district, which lies south of Fourth street and west of Beltraml avenue and J. C. Cobb, will deliver the mail for the third district, north of Fourth street.

Mr. and Mrs. F. W. Sprague and Mr. and Mrs. L. A. Hill, with their families left Monday for Saskatoon, Northwest Territory to make their future homes.

Mrs. Carver entertained the ladies of the M. E. church, Tuesday afternoon, at the church parlors. The affair was in honor of Mrs. Muncy, who left Wednesday for Seattle.

W. H. Roberts returned Wednesday from a business trip to Stillwater.

W. L. Brooks of the Lumbermen's bank attended a meeting of the officers of the ninth district of Minnesota bankers, at Crookston, this week. Mr. Brooks is president of the organization.

Rev. S. E. P. White returned Thursday from a trip to Blackduck.

Andrew E. Anderson died Wednesday night at his home in the Malzahn block, of dropsy. The funeral was held Friday afternoon, and was conducted by Rev. E. M. Peterson of the Lutheran church. Mr. Anderson is survived by a widow and four children.

Senator A. D. Stephens of Crookston, a candidate for governor, was in the city Thursday.

Dr. and Mrs. G. A. Jones have returned from San Francisco, where they were at the time of the recent earthquake. Dr. and Mrs. Jones were rooming on Market street and barely escaped with their lives. Dr. Jones says they are glad to be back in Bemidji, and hereafter will make their home among the pines.

Robert Middying, who has had charge of the local Western Union telegraph office, left this week for Deer Lodge, N. D., where he has accepted a position with the Northern Pacific. Miss Mary Davies of Hudson will take Mr. Middynig's place in this city.

A CITY UNDERGROUND

New York Buildings Not Only Pierce the Clouds, But Sink Deep Into the Earth---Five Teeming Stories Below the Street Level.

New York, May 5.—The question has often been asked, "How deep will New York grow?" The answers have been various and mostly theoretical. But with the completion of a new hotel that breaks all records with its five busy, underground floors, the question is more definitely answered than ever before.

When it is stated that the new Hotel Belmont, opposite the Grand Central station, is the tallest hosteiry in the world, the mind readily pictures it towering up twenty-three stories into the air. But when it is also stated that it is the "deepest skyscraper," the imagination momentarily halts at the paradox. Other big structures have gone deeper to find solid foundations, but no other building has five teeming stories below the street level.

Reaching down sixty-five feet into the solid rock of Manhattan, and beneath the giant visible Hotel Belmont, is a little city in itself that shortly will pulsate with wonderful mechanical devices, and throb with the life of a thousand employes.

The Times building, with its four subterranean floors and total depth of 54 feet, previously held the "deep cellar" record. The new Plaza hotel, just begun, will extend 42 feet below the street level. As the biggest office buildings in the city have only two sub-cellars, it would seem that New York will "grow deep," as far as great structures are concerned, mainly for hotel or newspaper purposes.

But how can a hotel utilize five floors underground?

Restaurants and grill rooms to accommodate a thousand and more; great kitchens and bakeries; model laundries; giant furnaces that consume thirty tons of coal a day; big engines, both steam and electric, generating nearly 3,000 horsepower per diem; an ice plant with a capacity of 20,000 pounds every twenty-four hours; a marvelous electrical equipment; a private subway entrance; a narrow-gauge railway; and a spring with a 10,000 gallon daily flow, are a few of the more interesting features that consume part of the 130,000 square feet of floor space on these five lower floors.

Some conception of the tremendous subterranean equipment of the Hotel Belmont may be obtained by comparison.

Unknown or forgotten by the upper world, these five underground floors have all the advanced facilities to light, heat, feed and provide for a dozen comforts that might be demanded by a model suburban town of several thousand inhabitants.

Relying upon these five floors this model town of 2,000 souls would find enough electrical power generated to run 16,000 incandescent lamps of the standard sixteen candle power. Other equipment would make it possible to provide each building with an improved pneumatic tube service, two telephones having a central office and six "hello" girls, a half hundred-weight of ice daily, a perfected vacuum cleaner system, an electric curling-iron heater, filtered hot air in winter and filtered cooled air in summer, as well as provide a central garbage destroyer, a town printing shop, barber shop, model laundry, manicure, and hair dressing parlors, medical and dental attendance, to say nothing of the possibility of ordering meals in almost any language known in culinary art. To prevent mistakes orders for these dishes could be transmitted from each house by a telautograph so that the cook could see your wishes in your own handwriting.

Such is the marvelous equipment on these underground floors, that all this service, and more too, could be provided. Every day nearly 500,000 people will rush obliviously through on the subway encompassed by this busy and self-sufficient little underground city.

In detail, the space of these five floors is utilized as follows: In the first basement on the Forty-second street side there is a large restaurant and grill room for those who prefer the cozier effect of paneled walls and ceilings lower than those of the main dining halls above. In the rear are the kitchen and bakery. The second basement contains barber shops, toilets, manicure and hair-dressing rooms, servants' dining rooms, Subway entrance, store for kitchen supplies, etc., etc. The main laundry, printing office, surgeon's office, telephone and general electrical directing rooms and storage rooms for guests' baggage and hotel supplies are in the third basement, while the engine, power and ice plants, as well as heating and ventilating systems are in the fourth and fifth underground floors.

And all this exists for the comfort and convenience of the thousand or more guests in the twenty-three floors above who little consider what transpires below.

The Belmont has as many floors below the surface as engineering skill of a generation ago permitted above. Since it costs from two to four times as much to build down into rock-ribbed Manhattan as it does to build up into the air the Hotel Belmont has cost as much as a forty-story skyscraper. The amount of rock excavated is equivalent to a shaft ten feet square sunk almost three miles into the earth.

As an answer to the question, "How deep will New York grow?" many experts have declared five floors below the street level is the maximum. But others have expressed the opinion that with increasing land values and the growing height of buildings that six or eight underground floors may be expected in the future.

The chief objection to subterranean floors has hinged on the fresh air question. But the Belmont has made such a marked forward stride in solving this problem that no limitation to depth can well be placed.

Contrary to popular conception, the fifth basement of this hotel is as comfortable as any one could desire. Powerful fans force great quantities of fresh air into all the basement floors, an extra quantity going to the engine rooms in the fifth sub cellar. All this air is drawn from a shaft that opens 300 feet above the street level, and forced over iced pipes in summer.

It remained for California to discover recently that this new hotel, because of its private Subway entrance, would form a connecting link between the Atlantic and Pacific.

The discovery was reached by a line of reasoning of this nature: That a traveler could see the Pacific just before entering a train bound for New York; that he could stay in several hotels en route, and finally step out of the Subway at the Battery and see the waters of the Atlantic without having before been out doors during the entire trip.

"Your Subway is in a certain sense the final connecting link between the Atlantic and Pacific," remarked this observing man from San Francisco. "I came East by the Southern route; stopped off a night at St. Louis, where I stayed at the hotel which is a part of Union station. When I arrived in New York I was told that the new Grand Central station would have a Subway entrance, and when I stepped out of the depot was further informed that the new 28-story Hotel Belmont, opposite the station, would soon open its own Subway entrance.

"Then it occurred to me that on my next trip I could take a last look at the waters of the Pacific, enter my train, stop off at St. Louis at the hotel station, reach New York, go into the Subway from the new Grand Central station, cross over to the oher side, go into the Hotel Belmont, spend th night, take the Subway next morning for the Battery and finally see the waters of the Atlantic without having before been in the open air. Truly this is a wonderful age."

"But you soon can do more stunts than that without going into the open air," interposed a New Yorker. "If you stay at a hotel with a Subway you can go down town and buy almost anything you want at a big department store, go to Brooklyn and Coney Island, or visit the tallest newspaper office in the world and get a view of the whole city without going out of doors.

"I'll have to tell my wife," laughed a man from up state, "how she can come to New York and do her shopping dry shod in the wettest weather, and without a carriage."

The EVENING STORY.

By Aid of Morpheus

By Marvin Dana.

(Copyright, 1906, by Joseph B. Bowles.)

Sitting over their coffee in the evening, the various members of the coaching party were detailing impressions from the day's trip.

By common consent the others paused when Madam la Baronne de Vaux began to speak. The dainty Frenchwoman was a favorite with all, and she was usually sure of listeners to whatever she chose to say.

"Ah, that little village," she cried, gaily. "That little village all of wood, with its wooden church! But in France it had been all of brick and stone. Yet it was like—oh, so very like!—a tiny place quite near our chateau. And it was there that something happened once, something droll, and sweet."

Madam la Baronne paused and smiled, and the sweetness in her face deepened, and the drollness flashed in her black eyes.

"Tell us, please tell us, madam," the others clamored.

"Surely," the baroness replied. "There was a dear old boy lived in the village, and, too, a dear old lady. He was an old bachelor, and she was an old maid. Once, years and years and years ago, she and he had been sweethearts. Somehow they could not, or would not, marry. He went away for years, while she remained in the village always. Then at last he came back, and they were good friends. They were too old to marry, or so they thought. But every evening he called on her, and they sat and chatted on the veranda when the season was right, and at other times they sat in two great chairs before the little fire in the little parlor of her cottage.

"One winter's night, when the air was most biting and their old blood chilled by the frost of it, they sat cozily in the parlor, as always, and the old gentleman, I suppose, was very busy to heap the tiny fire high and to keep the blaze brisk, so that they sat snugly in their huge chairs and basked in the warm glow, and chatted lazily and drowsily of the past days, when love was hot in their young hearts."

Madam la Baronne broke off and ran her merry eyes over the group about her.

"Have none of you read the tale?" she questioned. "No? Well, there is little more. Indeed, I have only to finish now. In the morning, when the bonne entered the parlor to dust it and set things straight, she found the dear old gentleman and the dear old lady in their great chairs before the dying fire in the tiny grate, and they were—sound asleep!"

The baroness smiled, and laughter ran in the circle around her.

"They were married as quickly as the law would allow. Otherwise there must have ben a whisper of scandal. And, oh, I am sure they lived happy ever after; yes, even as happy as before!"

The group chattered merrily over the narrative and thanked the racontense with enthusiasm.

"And now let us have some music," the baroness suggested, and turned to a patriotic American. "Of course, that means you, Mr. Blennen."

Blennen's dark, thin face lighted with a pleasant smile, as he nodded an assent to the general demand, but before he rose from his chair his eyes wandered toward a woman at a little distance from him and there they rested with a suggestion of expectation in their gaze. Almost instantly the woman turned to meet his look, and she spoke eagerly:

"Oh, please, Mr. Blennen."

At the words a glow of pleasure shone from the musicians face, and he hastened toward the piano.

The early summer night of the Hudson valley was soft, languorous, silent, save for the restful droning of the insects. Through the open windows of the great drawing room came the luxurious mingled perfumes of many blossoms. It was a night and a company for music. For Blennen, though the inheritor of a princely fortune, was a master of music. Many critics declared that this amateur was the best living interpreter of Chopin.

When he had finished, and the crowd of enthusiasts at last allowed him to break from their compliments, he went to her.

"It was wonderful, wonderful!" she cried, softly. "Your genius, Vance, is so true—so splendidly true! Ah, when I listened to you, my soul went floating in a magic land of harmony. I—"

She broke off abruptly. Then, with hardly a second's pause, she continued, gayly:

"I should never mind my insomnia if I could lie and hear you playing."

"Poor child! You don't show any sign of it. You are as fresh and dainty, as lovely and superb as ever—more beautiful in my eyes, Grace."

The woman blushed and dropped her gaze in confusion at the passion in his voice. Her silence emboldened him, and he continued in an eager whisper:

"Tell me, Grace, is not my happiness coming to me soon—soon?"

But the woman raised her hand appealingly, whilst she avoided the longing eyes:

"Don't, Vance. No, no, not yet. I am afraid."

The emotion in her voice checked him from another plea, and the anguish of despair gripped his heart.

Blennen, alone in his room that night, reviewed the situation. He was confronted by the vital fact that he loved Mrs. Morse with all his soul, but that the happy issue of his love was of the utmost uncertainty. For fate made him the scapegoat of another man's sins.

Mr. Morse had been a suave villain, of exceptional personal charm when he so willed, a hypocrite, a debauchee, brute. He treated his wife with exquisite courtesy in the presence of others, but, alone with her, he had outraged her every instinct, had beaten and bruised her flesh and scourged her soul. His death had come as a blessed release from the tortures her pride had forced her to endure, but it had left her with a morbid dread of marriage, a conviction that all men were cowardly and cruel, that as her husband had been, so any other might be.

Tonight, as Blennen reviewed the words she had spoken to him, he felt a swift indignation that she must still suffer physically, as her insomnia testified she did.

"No wonder she broods, if she can't sleep nights," he muttered, angrily. "What chance can I have?"

After a long silence he spoke again, and now very tenderly:

"If I could only play to her, for her rest the night through!"

He went to the window and stood looking out at the glory of the river and the night. The spirit of the scene crept to his ear and whispered her name, and the memory o fher and the desire of her filled his soul.

One day the whole party sailed up the river, and made a mountaineering expedition into the Catskills. They did not return until nightfall, and they were hungry and weary. After dinner the company was listless and drowsy; very early, one after another, they began to straggle off to bed.

Blennen came to Mrs. Morse.

"I'm not the least bit sleepy," he said to her, so low that no one could overhear. "And I'm not tired. Of course, you're not sleepy yet; and, even if you were, I suppose you wouldn't dare risk a night's sleeplessness by going to bed so early. So come into the library with me, and I'll play you Chopin for awhile. Will you? Do?"

"It will rest and soothe me," she said. "I am so glad you thought of it."

The great drawing-room was almost deserted as the two passed into the hall, and on to the library, which stood somewhat apart in a wing. This room was sacred to the master of the house; guests rarely intruded unless by particular invitation. When he had established her comfortably, Blennen turned away without a word and seated himself at the piano. At first he played Chopin's E flat Nocturne, but he played the louder passages with a certain restraint, as he had no wish to appeal to other ears than those of Mrs. Morse.

From the nocturne he passed, into a slow waltz, with a wonderful cradling movement, and this he interpreted with unaccustomed softness, with extraordinary lingering over the restful phrases, the more forceful passages, though justly pronounced were but mildly loud.

It had been 11 o'clock when Blennen began to play. At 1 o'clock his litho fingers were darting with incredible ease and lightness through the mazes of the Fantasie-Impromptu.

At 2 o'clock he was gently sounding the wonderful opening chords of the Funeral March, and the magic air that followed was faint, remote as the hymn of a floating soul. At 3, one of the preludes came muted from beneath his touch, a sighing tranquility, a whispered joyousness. At 4 ,he was playing the nocturne with which he had begun, for even his memory was at last feeling the strain to which he had subjected it, since he had ever to hold his hands from the instinctive smiting of certain chords, for the sake of the woman who still rested so quietly before the open window.

A few dying notes, then silence. The shaded light of the electric bulb still shone softly, but the moonlight had long danced from the waves.. In its stead, the mist over the river was purpling warm with the summer dawn.

Blennen moved softly to the window and stood looking down on the woman. She gave no heed to his presence. The dark lashes swept her cheek, her breath rhythmed gently, she was nestled luxuriously amid the cushions—she was fast asleep.

Suddenly, she opened her eyes and stared into his face with the bewilderment of a drowsy child.

"Why, good heavens, there must be a fire," she exclaimed. "See how light it is!"

Blennen looked obediently.

"So it is," he agreed.

"It isn't light," she cried, "not daylight! It can't be!"

"I rather suspect it is, though," Blennen said, quietly.

"And do you mean to say that I've been right here in this chair since H o'clock last night? Sound asleep for hours?" she asked, with amazement that was almost awe.

"I'm afraid you have been," Blennen affirmed, apologetically.

But the widow was far from indignation at this moment.

"Bless me," she exclaimed, rapturously, "it's a miracle! I—asleep for hours! I cant' believe it. You are a magician, Vance."

Blennen seized his opportunity, boldly:

"Marry me, and I'll play you to sleep any night you wish."

Instantly, the woman of the world awoke to the knowledge of conventions. Her eyes dilated a little, and for a minute there was silence. Then she turned to him with a face that was glowing:

"Yes, I will marry you now. Somehow, the fear has passed!"

"Aye, her nerves are the better for just these few hours of real sleep," Blennen thought; but he had the wisdom not to speak aloud.

"But such a scandal!" the widow whispered as she drew her lips from Blennen's.

"Pooh! no one can know! And if they do—"

"And if they do—they will laugh!"

"Yes, they will laugh, as they did at madame's story."

Not If as Rich as Rockefeller.

If you had all the wealth of Rockefeller, the Standard Oil magnate, you could not buy a better medicine for bowel complaints than Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. The most eminent physician can not prescribe a better preparation for colic and diarrhoea, both for children and adults. The uniform success of this remedy has shown it to be superior to all others. CHANGES IN CHARACTER OF PARK POINT HOMES

Greatest Building Movement in History of Point.

Now Spotted With New Residences and Cottages.

The Style Being Gradually Changed for the Better.

Building improvements, aggregating $25,000, are being made on Minnesota Point this season. Never in the history of the point has there been such a large building movement, and never has there been such an excellent class of homes as are now being erected and planned.

The building movement commenced during the latter part of the winter and it has been going forward at a great rate. The point from the Duluth ship canal to the barrens below Oatka beach is spotted with new residences and cottages that have either been just completed or which are still under construction, while in numerous localities foundation work and piles of building material indicate clearly that other improvements are just being started.

L. C. Harris, the attorney, has just completed and moved into a handsome colonial style 7-room house that cost $3,000, at Twenty-seventh street. The house is located on the bay side of the point, facing Minnesota avenue, and was designed by E. S. Radcliffe. Features of the building are the beam ceiling, the fireplace and the Georgia pine finish. The house is 28 feet square.

Capt. S. R. Chamberlain, of the Steel company's fleet, who formerly made his home at Chicago during the closed season of navigation, likes Duluth and its climate so well that he has purchased a number of Minnesota Point lots and on one has erected a fine 9-room frame house, 30 by 34 feet that cost him about $3,000. The building has every modern convenience in the way of water, gas, electric lights and a bath. Capt. Chamberlain is contemplating the erection of one or more summer cottages south of his home to rent.

Adjoining Capt. Chamberlain's house on the north is the pretty residence built during the winter for Dean Foster at a cost of about $2,500. Like Capt. Chamberlain's house the building is now ready for occupancy.

O. C. Hartman is erecting two pretty and commodious frame houses overlooking both the bay and the lake about two blocks south of the end of the car line. They will cost in the neighborhood of $1,700 each. One will be occupied this summer by George Spencer and the other is said to be leased.

Mr. Radcliffe has plans out for a two-story 7-room frame house to be erected near the old pavilion location, for local parties this summer, to cost from $4,000 to $5,000. He has also plans for a modern 8-room house to be erected near Thirty-third street for J. T. Stewart of the Duluth Music company. The completed building will probably cost between $2,500 and $3,000. The foundation work is already under way.

T. W. McAuley has practically completed near his old cottage at Twenty-seventh street a pretty modern 7-room cottage costing about $2,500.

John Ford has a fine new cottage at Thirty-fourth street and Lake avenue that cost in the neighborhood of $2,000 and Bert Williams is building another costing about the same amount in the same locality.

New cottages costing from $900 to $1,0000 have been erected by some five or six other owners and George Van Burgess is understood to be contemplating the construction of a summer residence near the end of the car line that will cost about $1,600.

Several things have been contributing to the large building movement on Minnesota Point in the past two years, but particularly so this year. In the first place there has been a gradual change in the sentiment of people toward the point, and it no longer is considered a place for summer residences alone. Back in the '90s, and even before then, people looked on the point as a very pleasant place to "rough it" during the summer months. With that end in view any old shack or even a tent filled every need and such a thing as a cottage costing more than $100 to $150 was a thing almost unheard of. After Park Pointers were given street car service, they rode for some time in small mule cars drawn over an uneven narrow gauge track. The point was not overcrowded with people, however, and the service seemed for a time to meet the demand.

Gradually the style of the cottages being erected changed for the better. Many people began to find that an outing on Minnesota Point was quite a pleasant and desirable thing and the movement down there began earlier in the spring, while the return up town began later each fall. With the influx of population during the summer months the interests controlling the Minnesota Point street railway line began making improvements to meet the demand of their patrons. The mule cars were replaced by electric cars on wider gauged track. These cars were soon after replaced by other larger and modern cars. The street railway line began to creep farther and farther down the point, following the population and the houses that were being erected. The population began to increase, it doubled, trebled and even quadrupled during the summer seasons with a corresponding increase in the number of winter residents. The better transportation facilities encouraged a better grade of buildings, while the increasing rents in the uptown district began to drive people to seek cheap permanent homes on the point. To meet this demand owners began building a class of houses that were habitable the year around, finding that the investment paid good money. Gradually some of the better of the old style cottages were remodeled and improved to admit of winter habitation. Stores sprang up in several advantageous locations, then came a new school house well down on the point to accommodate the children who would have too far to go if they attended school up town. The residents now have their schools and their churches.

But this is not all. Overshadowing in importance in the way of improvement is the project now under way of giving the Park Pointers water and gas service. The mains are now nearly laid between the canal and Oatka park, and connections are being made to the houses. The thickly populated condition of the point demanded the water service from a sanitary point of view, as well as a convenience. Plans have been considered for a sewerage system on the point, and it is only a question of a little time at the most when this improvement will also be made.

The aerial bridge should properly be considered as the factor that probably gave Minnesota Point its greatest boost as a residence part of the city. The uncertainty of the ferry service across the canal undoubtedly kept many people away from the point for years that would have been pleased to make permanent as well as summer homes there. As soon as the aerial bridge was exploited, lots that could, a few years ago, have been purchased for a song began to shoot up in price, until now an owner of a desirable building lot on the point will hardly consider an offer under from $350 to $600.

The increased street railway facilities, the aerial bridge, the water and gas service, all have had a strong tendency to force a better class of house building. Then, too, the owner of a lot formerly worth $40 or $50, now valued at $350 to $600, began to see the wisdom of building good houses, houses that would rent for almost as much money per month as they could get for the same class of property up town.

All this has had to do with the disappearance of the once popular old shacks. Many of them still remain, but every year, as they become more and more uninhabitable, they are being replaced by modern cottages and houses, and, in a few years more, Park Point will no doubt resemble in many things some of the uptown resident districts. It may be a long time before the point has paved streets or cement walks, and the sand hills and the trees will always make the topography and general appearance of the point differ from other parts of the city, but it may be remarked that at the present time persons are planning a boulevard for teams and automobiles down Minnesota Point, and it is intimated that the time is not far distant when that long tongue of the city will have a first-class hotel.

THE MIGHTY ARMY OF THE SUNDAY SCHOOL

It Numbers in the United States 12,250,000---Embraces About Half the Sunday School Scholars of the World.

Nearly one-half of the world's Sunday school scholars are nephews and nieces, big and little, of Uncle Sam.

If the old egntleman were to undertake some Sunday to call the combined roll of his land's 150,000 schools, and were to call off the names at the rate of thirty a minute, it would take him fourteen and a half government working days (eight hours to a day) to run down through the Zs.

If the old gentleman were to unpeace footing, of the seven great powers of Great Britain, Russia, Japan, France, Italy, Germany and Austria-Hungary, were brought to attention in one long multi-colored and glittering line, this line would be only a little more than a fourth as long as the one made by Uncle Sam's Sunday school scholars similarly marshaled. The strength of all these warriors numerically is nearly 3,800,000, that of our Sunday schools, Catholic and Protestant, almost 12,250,000.

These 9,250,000 boys and girls and 3,000,000 grown-up scholars, teachers and officers equal the aggregate population of Pennsylvania, Illinois and Maryland. The seven states of North Carolina, New Jersey, Alabama, Minnesota, Mississippi — fifteenth, sixteenth, seventeenth, eighteenth, nineteenth and twentieth respectively in population rank—Nebraska, twenty-seventh, and Colorado, thirty-first, are at present inhabited by only as many persons as there are Sunday school scholars in all our states and territories, Alaska and Hawaii included.

The enrollment in our public schools is only 4,000,000 in excess of the Sunday school enrollment — sufficient answer to the argument, sometimes advanced, that the youth of our land is no longer being carefully educated religiously.

Despite our vast strides in manufacturing, agriculture is still our leading occupation, but we have 2,000,000 less worshippers at Ceres's shrine than we have systematically studying the Bible every Sunday.

Pennsylvania's division in this vast army is the most imposing—the only one requiring seven figures to record its strength—1,285,000 scholars, 159,000 officers and teachers; a total of 1,444,000. Canton, the eighth city of the world, has 1,600,000 dwellers, and St. Petersburg, the ninth city, 300,000 less. If all Pennsylvania's mighty division were to encamp in one spot for a Sunday school convention, the metropolis of the state would no longer be the Quaker City, with its 1,300,000 souls, but this tented Sunday school city for a week.

Pennsylvania's public school rolls show 244,000 names less than its Sunday school rolls. The public school enrollment is 17.36 of its entire population. The state's church communicants are stronger than the Sunday school membership by less than 300,000. Its church edifices number nearly 10,000; its Sunday schools over 10,000. It is one of the very few states with a Sunday school for every church and some to spare. New York has 8,000 churches and 6,000 schools; Ohio nearly 9,000 churches and a few more than 8,000 schools. Illinois has nearly 8,000 schools, about 500 in excess of its church edifices. New York is second in number of scholars and teachers, 45,000 less than 1,000,000, and Ohio third with 750,000 scholars and 125,000 teachers and officers. The rank of the states according to population does not hold good in the Sunday school statistics.

The largest denominational corps in this vast army bears the distinguishing badge of Methodism (North). Its full mustered strength, scholars, teachers and officers, is 3,100,000, about 10 per cent of excess of the church membership. This corps comprises about one-fourth of Uncle Sam's Sunday school army, and Sunday in and Sunday out, good weather and bad, it answers the roll call about 1,750,000 strong.

To maintain so gigantic an army demands millions. The current expenses for the Methodist corps alone was $1,100,000 in 1904. The 1,100,000 Presbyterian (North) scholars contributed last year over $500,000 to the support of the various schools, $150,000 to other boards of the church, and nearly $75,000 to general Sabbath school work. A grand total of $725,000.

It would seem that the commanders of this army would be satisfied with its surpassing size. Such is far from being the case, however. The various corps commanders have their recruiting sergeants—I mean missionaries—at work all through the country, in thickly populated states like New York and Illinois, as well as in the sparsely settled regions like the Appalachian mountain counties and the arid stretches of the far West. These lone men and women work so diligently that hundreds of new schools are formed yearly, and tens of thousands of new scholars enrolled.

The Presbyterian church, North, has 121 missionaries at work in thirty-eight states and territories and in Cuba. This little band organized 737 schools last year, and reorganized 316, thus gathering together 37,000 teachers and scholars. The Congregational church has about fifty missionaries, organizing about 500 new schools a year. In the year ending March 1, 1905, the American Sunday School union, non-sectarian, started 1,836 new schools, membership 24,000.

The Baptist church has a force of fifty missionaries, besides 100 colporteurs, who also take an active part in organizing schools. While the missionaries of other denominations go about the country after the fashion of the old time circuit rider, or with a mule team, the Baptists supply their missionaries with gospel wagons in new sections of the country. They also have six chapel cars, which are carried free of cost by Western railroads. There is the car "Evangel" in Indian Territory, the "Emmanuel" on the Pacific coast, the "Good Will" in Texas, the "Glad Tidings" in Wisconsin. The "Messenger of Peace" is shown in Missouri, the "Herald of Hope" travels back and forth along Michigan's steel arteries.

The missionary ventures whenever he thinks there is sufficient population, no matter how scattering, to support a Sunday school. He penetrates into the heart of the wild "mountain white" country, riding and walking several thousand miles in the course of a year. He follows close on the heels of the settler, hoping to replenish his purse in a newly opened country. Oklahoma territory was thrown open to settlement on a Tuesday; the following Sunday Methodist field workers, as their recruiters are called, organized fiftyfour Sunday schools. The veteran missionary of the American union, Martin B. Lewis, has gone into every nook and cranny of Minnesota these last forty-six years. Since 1830, when the American union began Sunday school founding on a grand scale, every foot of the great Mississippi valley has been trodden time and again by its recruiters.

The schools are organized in all sorts of queer places. Rev. J. H. Little, an American union missionary among the mountain whites of Kentucky, organized a now flourishing school in a great cave about forty miles to the north of Cumberland Gap. Rough board screens were erected at the mouth as protection from the weather. Another missionary got the nucleus of a school together in a deserted blacksmith shop. Backwoods lumber offices, abandoned churches, one-room mountain cabins and prairie sod houses, the woods themselves and nature's arbors have been used as places suitable for organizing schools. Wherever it may be most convenient for the people round about to gather, there a school is started.

As a general rule is is not difficult to get a sufficient number of persons interested to make the organization of a school feasible. The scheme of the missionary is welcomed as a diversion, if nothing else. There are few diversions in the mountains or pioneer country. The stiffest problem which the missionary has to overcome is to get hold of the right man for superintendent.

This task is especially difficult among the mountain whites because very few of them can read or write. Their native preachers are generally amazingly illiterate men. The search then is for a devout man who can read, even haltingly. That such men are rare among the mountain whites is proved by the circumstance that Missionary Little and his fellow workers in the region have been compelled quite a number of times to accept, as superintendents, men innocent of any book education whatever—men who have never beheld a schoolhouse, not even in a picture book. Imagine, if you can, such a man leading a little band of, say, forty children, and perhaps one-fifth as many grown-ups. Imagine him an active member of a famous feud family, a man who has killed three men; and, further, imagine him the owner of a flourishing whisky still, a man ready to shoot a revenue officer on sight from ambush. He a devout man—he?

Well, it all depends on the point of view. The average mountain white sees nothing wrong in running a still, in protecting what he looks upon as his rightful property, even to the point of killing; and the clan spirit is so strong in him that he holds it right to kill in a feud. Otherwise, however, this man is a devout Christian. Until the missionary came his way he had never seen a Bible, but he has always believed in it implicity. The belief of the mountain whites in the Bible, even to the whole story, is unshakable. He does not swear. He is kind and faithful to his family. He holds family prayer daily in his cabin. He stands ready to do all he can for the advancement of the Christian religion, but he can see nothing at variance to Christ's teachings in feuds and stills.

In many sections of the country the Sunday school appears first, the church following or springing from it. From Sunday school missions planted by the Presbyterian church that denomination has formed in the last seventeen years 892 churches and other denominations 495—a grand total of 1,387 churches, a yearly average of over eighty-one churches. About 125 churches of various denominations grow annually out of American Union Sunday schools.

Though a mission scholar may never become either a member of an established church or one resulting from his Sunday school, he is, nevertheless, made acquainted with the foundation principles of the Christian religion through the systematic Bible study that is afforded by the international lessons, an American idea growing from the uniform lessons inaugurated by the American union as early as 1826. Taking this and other things into consideration, it is not too much to believe that were Thomas Jefferson alive today he would add emphasis to these words of his, spoken in the infant days of the American Sunday school missionary movement:

"The Sunday schools of America present the only legitimate means under the Constitution of avoiding the rock on which the French republic was wrecked."

CHEMICALLY FED PLANTS

Grow in Size and Beauty---Added to Roots in Either Dry or Liquid Form---Results Are Wonderful.

Now that chemicals have been discovered that will grow unusually beautiful flowers and make vegetables twice their ordinary size in ten or twenty days' less than the regular time for maturity, there is no reason that any woman should have a failure in either a truck or posy garden.

These chemicals put on the roots well diluted with water are such a simple treatment and so inexpensive that they are within the reach of the most limited incomes. One application when the seeds have germinated and the sprouts are just up will be sufficient in many cases, while others will need two and sometimes three doses.

Already most of the members of the smart set who have either hothouses or gardens on their estates are using them with great success. One of the first of the wealthy men to try the method was Cornelius N. Bliss. It had long been his desire to raise prize ferns and chrysanthemums, and he had failed on several points, despite the money and time he spent in perfecting them. When he applied the chemicals in growing the exhibit for the last flower show he was delighted at the size and beauty of both ferns and the chrysanthemums, and when the awards were made he was presented with two and highly complimented for his success.

Roses, orchids, poinsettas, violets, treated in this way are the only blossoms that Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt will wear or have used on her tables or in her rooms, because they are always so much more fragrant, the colors are more vivid and brilliant and she declares that thew grow to a more perfect development. Mrs. Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt, who is fond of flowers also, has a preference for those specialy cared for with the liquid.

Mrs. Clarence Mackay, who takes great pride in her greenhouses, has her rubber plants or palms nourished with it. Practically all the flowers in the Capitol gardens as well as those used in the White House are chemically treated now. And the head gardener swears by them, because last year when he was several weeks late in planting tomatoes, lettuce, beans, etc., and was afraid his vegetables would be poor and backward, this new artificial life stimulant was suggested as a remedy. He tried it, and to his astonishment the vines were not only larger and apparently stronger than he had ever grown, but the beans, tomatoes and lettuce were ready to be eaten several days before those from other gardens that had been put in three or four weeks before his. Then, too, he says that the lettuce heads were remarkably large and the beans of such a splendid flavor that the president spoke to him about them and wanted to know what kind they were.

Strawberries so nourished are extraordinary, according to one woman who makes a comfortable income from her berry patches. She declares that the vines she fed with chemicals are larger, the foliage a deep green and luxuriant, while the berries are twice the average size and of a deep color that brings special prices in any market.

"Then, too, they have a fine flavor and are exceptionally firm and hardy," she says. "For an experiment, I treated one patch, and was amazed at the increased number that grew to maturity on the vines so fed."

It is quite as effective on lawns and shrubbery, and is now being used extensively on golf links, where the desire is to have beautiful greens and sturdy clumps of pine trees or hedges.

It is the inventor who claims for this plant medicine that it is to the flowers and vegetables, what nitrogen is to human beings.

"I know that it will make plants grow in any kind of soil, from sand to powdered rock, for I have experimented with it," he says, "and found it produced splendid results. I had three crops of beans in one season by using it, and they were very good; in fact the best all around ones I ever ate. I have watched its effect on almost every kind of growing thing, and have found without exception that the plants were much more hardy, and that in many cases sometimes twice the average size and of a splendid flavor, and that the foliage was always stronger and a better color.

"In cases of blight from frost, when I have fed it to the roots, I have never known them to die, and I believe that as long as there is any life in plants they will grow if nourished with this chemical. Many times my neighbors have come to me when their flower beds were apparently dead from improper care, and I have succeeded in reviving them by giving the roots this food."

PAST WINTER HAS BIG WRECK LIST

Repeated Losses Show Need of Better Bulkhead Protection.

New York, May 5.—Four million dollars is the estimated loss of marine underwriters for the past winter. In addition to this insured property loss, the North Atlantic alone has exceeded a grim sea-toll of at least eighty-five lives.

The past five months have been particularly disastrous for shipping. Off the New England coast and the maritime provinces of Canada fifty-four ships have gone down. As usual, the schooners suffered most severely. Thirty-seven craft of this description, nine steamers and eight barges comprise a list of disasters representing a money loss of hundreds of thousands of dollars in addition to the human lives swallowed up by the waves.

The worst disaster of the winter in our waters was the wreck of the steamship "British King," off Sable Island, March 1, on her way from New York to Antwerp. At least twenty lives were lost. The winter's list of wrecks began in November with the sinking of the Norwegian steamer Turbin in sight of Clark's Harbor, N. S. Fourteen men went down with the Turbin. A fortnight later the British steamer Lunenburg sunk a few minutes after striking a rock off the Magdalen islands, resulting in the loss of a dozen lives and the cargo. From then until the end of March there was hardly a week without its shipwreck.

These and the more serious steamer wrecks in the English channel have impressud upon underwriters the necessity for more effective measures to prevent the sinking of vessels whose watertight commpartments are supposed to but do not insure them against loss from ordinary punctures of the hull. Watertight bulkheads only make a ship unsinkable when all the doors below the waterline are closed. In most disasters at sea the doors can not be closed by hand and there is an increasing demand for the more general adoption of power bulkhead doors. With this arrangement the doors can be closed from above decks in time of danger merely by the turn of a hand wheel. Without these "Long Arm" electrical power doors thee closing of the bulkhead openings is left to the crew whose first idea is to get on deck as soon as possible. It is a fair estimate, experts say, that not one out of fifty vessels that are now lost at sea would go down if they had the means of quickly closing their watertight doors that the navy department is putting on all the new United States warships.

Rochefoucauld wrote. "We promise according to our hopes, and perform according to our fears." If some of your employes illustrate this truth take up the "Help Want" ads. in The Herald as a course of reading—and perform acording to your interests!

MINING IN BLACK HILLS

Bids for New Stamp Mill of the Homestake Extension Opened---Work on Homestake Slime Plant Progressing well.

Deadwood, S. D., May 5.—Bids for the new 120 stamp mill for the Homestake Extension company have been received and opened. They have been submitted to George Morthland of the Homestake company, who is now busy sorting them out. The eighth crosscut is now being run. It has penetrated 300 feet and has not yet reached the side walls. Manager McHugh is busy with plans for the new mill, and also with the work on the New England property across the gulch. The shaft is down eighty-five feet and the new machinery is proving very satisfactory.

The Golden Reward company has just ordered two electric motors, one for the mill at Terry and the other for the Deadwood mill. Full arrangements have been made for complete electric equipment which will cost about $10,000. Surveyors are busy running the lines from the Consolidated Light and Power plant to both mine and mill. The company will use 300-horsepower, and this will mean great saving in both time and cost in the treatment of ore.

Work on the Homestake slime plant is progressing well, although the San Francisco disaster may delay it somewhat. A large amount of lumber is being shipped from Cosmopolis, Wash., It is feared that the fact that the export and import water traffic usually handled by the San Francisco port, being necessarily thrown now to other seaports along the Pacific coast, may congest the Washington ports and delay the shipment of this lumber. Vincent Kenny of Omaha, who holds the patent on a special make of boiler, was given the order by the Homestake company for a 250-horsepower boiler to be delivered by August. Work has also begun on the steel viaduct which will carry the pipe line for conveying the slimes from Lead to Deadwood. The building itself is going up rapidly and is assuming large proportions.

at Coalwood, Alger county, Mich., this spring. The work is already under way, and within a few weeks there will be about four acres of 2-year-old white pine seedlings under cultivation at Coalwood, as well as other varieties of forest trees transplanted from the Negaunee nursery of the company. A ten-acre wild cherry orchard set out at Coalwood last spring stood the winter very well. But few trees were killed by the cold, although some were broken down by the snow. Twenty thousand Norway spruce plants set out in the vicinity of the company's private fish hatchery at Munising also withstood the winter in excellent fashion. Trees will be planted this spring in the vicinity of Trout bay, on Grand Island, Lake Superior, off Munising. At least 10,000 white pine, Norway pine and Norway spruce trees will be set out at that point. The forestry work of the company in Alger county is in charge of two experts, graduates from the Baltimore forestry school.

The new shaft started a few months ago on the Breitung Hematite property at Negaunee, Marquette range, is completed. It is 175 feet in depth, 7x18 feet in dimensions, and accommodates two skipways and a ladderway. It is located about 400 feet distant from the Mary Charlotte shaft, with which it will be connected by a drift. It is estimated that it will take nearly two months to complete this drift, and until it is finished only the rock removed from the drift will be hoisted through the new shaft. The two mines, adjoining properties, are owned by the Breitung-Kaufman interests of Marquette. Recently at the Mary Charlotte stockpile one steam shovel crew loaded 113 railroad ore cars in ten hours, a record which it is believed will stand throughout the season. It took three switch engines to keep the shovel busy; two for hauling and one for spotting the cars. The occasion of the haste was a rush of boats under charter to take out cargoes of Mary Charlotte ore from the Marquette docks.

haulage plant at the Steel corporation's Blue mine, a member of the Regent group at Negaunee, has been finished, and the new system of tramming has gone into commission. Two motors will be used for spotting the cars in the drifts and for hauling the loads to the shaft, with a third motor retained underground for use in cases of emergency. Besides furnishing power for the haulage system, the new machinery installed will supply current for electric lighting. It is of ample capacity to supply all the lights needed in the various underground workings of the Regent group, and also for lighting the buildings and stockpiles on the surface. In case a need for more haulage power develops, it will be possible to furnish it, as the generating machinery can be operated to furnish 50 per cent more power than its guaranteed capacity.

The Stegmiller mine, in the Swanzy district, south of Negaunee, is being put in condition for a resumption of operations at an early date. The property is controlled by the Steel corporation, but has not been worked for a number of years. Three or four years ago the company erected a large boarding house, near the mine, and prepared to resume active mining, but subsequently changed its plans. The mine has one shaft bottomed in ore, and considerable exploratory work with diamond drills has been done. The property was formerly known as the Brotherton, and was opened for the American Mining company, formerly the iron mining department of the American Steel & Wire company. It adjoins the Princeton mine of the Cleveland Cliffs Iron company.

The work of unwatering the old American mine, in the district west of Ishpeming, has been started, and will be pushed actively until all the underground openings are dry. The property has been taken over by the M. A. Hanna interests of Cleveland, and will again be brought to the producing stage. One pump, capable of working out 1,200 gallons of water a minute, is in service, as are two blowers, which together handle about 2,000 gallons a minute. The latter can be operated successfully for the first 200 feet, after which it will be necessary to pump out the balance of the water in the mine. The property is about 400 feet deep. It was opened in 1850 as the Sterling, and was recognized in 1887 as the American. The mine was not looking badly when work was suspended in September, 1892, owing to the financial straits of the company.

RICH STRIKES ARE MADE

of the camp has a force of men at work, sacking ore, which runs high in shipping values, and the entire forty feet of the double compartment shaft is in a milling grade of rock, all of which pans coarse gold colors.

Fairview, Nev., May 5.—This camp continues to be the scene of unusual activity, and the advent during the past two weeks of large capital in the district has given mining operations a zest which portends well for the future of the camp.

The town numbers about 600 people, and the automobile line which runs between Hazen and Fairview is taxed to its fullest capacity, and the road is lined with freight teams heavily laden, bearing supplies for Fairview and vicinity.

One of the largest deals in the history of the camp was made last week when Patrick, Elliott & Camp of Goldfield purchased from E. C. Dart and associates the Boulder No. 4 claim, which adjoins the original discovery and is admittedly one of the richest properties in the district.

Some extent of the ore deposits of this camp and the indications of permanency can be gained from the fact that the ledge which crosses the Boulder Claim has been proven for a distance of 3,000 feet and carries for its entire width values better than $150 per ton. In this rich gold-bearing ledge there is a streak which varies in width from twelve to eighteen inches and averages well upwards of $3,000 per ton. The formation is identical with that of the Tonopah camp, and the ore closely resembles that coming from the Tonopah Extension mine, Mr. Schwab's first purchase and one of his best mines in the Southern Nevada district.

The announcement was made by Patrick, Elliott & Camp that a large crew of men would be put to work on the Boulder claim owned by the Fairview Keystone company May 1, sinking a double compartment shaft ,as well as a tunnel on this ground to thoroughly explore and prove up this immense ore body.

The predominating values throughout are silver, and an idea of the richness of the mineralization can be obtained when it is known that ore going $4,000 per ton carries comparative value of one-fifth gold and four-fifths silver.

The old overland stage route, which was traveled during the days of '49 and the later days of the Comstock, cuts this district squarely in two, and thousands of people, who traveled this historical road, passed within two miles of the present rich discoveries. The Comstockers prospected the district very thoroughly, but were unable to find the ledge from which the rich float came. The original discovery was made the latter part of 1905, and early in February of this year the first stampede to the district occurred, and the camp now is looking better than ever, and the tremendous investments, which have been made by mine operators, who have been successful in the older camps, gives the Fairview district a future that is very bright.

only 200 feet deep, more than $200,000 worth of copper and silver has been taken from it within the last few years by lessees. The property will hereafter be known as the East Butte Extension No. 3.

During the past week a valuable body of ore was uncovered in the properties of the East Butte Extension company, whose holdings lie close by the ground of the East Butte company. In the Wall shaft ore was uncovered at a slight depth, and as a result there has been considerable elation in the ranks of the Extension stockholders.

The Calumet & Butte company is cleaning out its No. 2 shaft, sixty feet deep, preparatory to shipping ore from a four-foot vein at the bottom. This ore is carbonate, which the company says carries splendid values in copper, a foot of it being richer than the remainder. Some of the vein is malachite and azurite.

Shaft No. 1 is 125 feet deep and is well equipped for development. During the week the company struck some quartz that carried native copper, which it considers a good indication of riches at greater depth. This stringer, about eight inches wide, is pitching in the direction of the main vein, which will be cut deeper than the present workings.

That the mines of the east side are promising is indicated by the development on the Bertha claim, a triangular fraction near the Ballbacker, which is owned by W. D. Thornton and is under lease to William Terry, Henry Mason and Willis Thompson. The vein in this property is fifteen feet wide and carries ore the average of which is between seven and eight per cent copper. This sounds like a pretty large vein for a small mine, but it is all there and the ore is coming from it at the rate of about thirty tons a day. The course of the vein is north and south, while those of the west side are east and west.

• • •

The State Commercial Development company, of which J. E. Wharton is president, has photographed its ground for the purpose of showing prospective investors in its stock the location of the property. This property lies just north of the Eva, Margaretha and Gustavus claims, owned by the North Butte company and formerly comprising three-fourths of the Berlin group. The Eva is a fraction dividing a portion of the Gustavus from the Overman claim, one of the Butte Commercial group. The photographs show all of the mines on the hill and their relative positions, but makes the Butte Commercial ground look rather low on the mountain side.

which is only a short distance away. There are great possibilities in the way of development of water power and that these will receive attention in time is a foregone conclusion.

No. 3 shaft of the Mohawk mine appears to be improving with depth. Near surface the outlook was not very encouraging, but at the bottom of the shaft, which is down to the tenth level, the rock shows improved values in the red metal. The drifts north toward No. 2 appear to be in better ground than these being extended south in the direction of No. 4. The latter shaft has been disappointing. Near the surface it gave more promise than any of the shafts started before it, but at the eleventh level, where it is now bottomed, the outlook it not favorable. Undoubtedly this state of affairs will give way to satisfactory values at increased depth, at least that is the expectation.

One of the most encouraging features in connection with the present situation at the Mohawk mine is the improvement of the bottom of No. 2 shaft, which is bottomed at the thirteenth level, or a depth of approximately 1,400 feet. During the last few months the grade of ground in the bottom levels has improved very materially and the mine will soon be in a position to benefit from the change.

Drifting has been started on the 200-foot level in the new shaft on the Arcadian property. Drifts will be extended both north and south and a crosscut will be extended eastward to intercept a bed about 100 feet from the shaft, which gives some promise in the outcrop on surface. The Arcadian's main lode, that is the one the shaft is sunk in, is fourteen feet wide, but the north drift reveals copper values to a width of only two feet. Recently there has been uncovered at the Arcadian another cupriferous measure, which is forty feet wide. No work has been done on this formation as yet, however, but it probably will receive more extended investigation some time in the future.

No definite plans for the construction of a stamp mill have been made by the Michigan company so far and it is improbable that any plans will be drawn until the system of milling operations which will be used is definitely decided upon. There are so many improvements being made in Lake Superior stamp mill practice that the Michigan management wishes to be reasonably certain of which system is best suited to its rock before acting in its mill construction.

MINING IN IDAHO.

Boise, Idaho, May 5.—Men down from Idaho City report that all of the placer mines in Boise Basin are running full blast with abundance of water. The high mountains are covered with several feet of solid snow, insuring long runs.

Chicago and Alabama men have purchased the South Africa and Accident groups of free gold quartz mines at Idaho City. The former was owned by Mr. Hagar and the latter by C. E. Jones, Mrs. Fred Garrecht and Mr. and Mrs. E. W. Jones. The company will immediately erect two Chilean mills, each of a capacity of fifty tons per day. At one place on the South Africa the ledge is 180 feet wide, and the ore averages $8 per ton. It crosses a point between two forks of Elk Creek, which is forty-five feet high and the bench 700 or 800 feet long. All that will be necessary in mining this will be to pick down the soft ore and wheel it into the mills. Owing to the situation of the mine and mills the total expense of mining and reduction will not exceed 50 cents per ton. The veins on the Accident location are only from a foot to three feet wide, but the ore is very high grade. During the great placer mining days of that section Elk Creek was worked and many men became very wealthy from the product of the placer claims below the ledges, but above the ground was not rich, showing that the major portion of the gold came from these veins. The ledges have been traced for two or three miles, and there are several very promising locations east of these groups.

Several companies are preparing to do a great amount of development on the mines of Big Creek district, southwest of Thunder Mountain, this summer. Considerable work was done during the winter and the developments were so satisfactory that two or three companies have decided to erect mills during the summer. The ores are low grade, but the veins are monsters in size, so that the cost of milling will be very low. The mountains are very high, which will admit of active operations being carried on for years before a hoist or pumps will be needed. A good wagon road will soon be constructed to connect with the Thunder Mountain road.

AT THE SULLIVAN.

Bisbee, Ariz., May 5.—A letter from the Paradise district says that a stringer of very pretty copper ore was encountered on the Sullivan property a few days ago. Manager E. F. Sweeney said that while there was not very much of it, the ore was very rich. No assays have been made for some time. At present drifting from the shaft at the water level is being resorted to. The drift, which is now in about sixty feet from the shaft, will be driven 100 feet farther, it is expected, before much ore can be reasonably looked for. Though the water is going down and does not prevent operations in the drift, yet farther sinking can not be effected without the aid of machinery. It is the intention to put in machinery before long.

VAINEST CITY IN THE WORLD

Some Truths About "Little Old New York"---The Boastful Suburb of Jersey City---Antique Ferries, Horse Cars, Poor Paving and Dominant Ugliness.

The vainest city in the world is the City of New York.

And why is she vain?

Simply like a fat boy. She is vain on account of her size.

New York is the greatest habitual self-describer on record, and every few minutes she anounces to the world that she is the most wonderful town that was ever put together.

Yet absolutely the only thing in which she is truly modern and remarkable is her unique and unequaled collection of skyscrapers.

New York's systems of urban and interurban transportation are notoriously wretched. Her streets are so unsafe that her own statistics show that every day in the year at least one person is killed by vehicles. One express company alone has a record of having killed or injured at least one citizen a day. Her cars can't carry the passengers and the stations and platforms are not big enough to hold the passengers even if the cars could accommodate them.

Her streets are illuminated only partly by electricity and her gas supply is a feeble joke. Even famous Broadway—the thing that the vain New Yorkers love to call the "great white way"—would be mostly a great dim way if it were not for the huge and hideous illuminating devices installed by private capital for advertising purposes.

Her water supply is always on the verge of being inadequate for living purposes and she actually has not enough water to fight a really big fire in the great business districts. She knows it and has known it for many years but she shuts her eye to it and pities other cities when they have a big fire.

More than five years ago she began to put up signs on the corners with the names of the streets on them. Since then there have been three mayoral administrations, and a great part of the streets of New York still lack signs, while most of those that have been put up are on old street lamps that were abandoned when electricity came in. any port town in the civilized world. Lots of these signs are put on wrong, so that they cheerfully direct the stranger to the wrong place. Nobody has ever thought enough of the appearance of the town to take away the old rickety lamp posts and put the signs on less archaic fixtures.

Miles of her busiest streets are still paved with cobble stones. Where they have Belgian blocks the paving usually is laid so badly that the business men work all day in an incessant, crazing hell of noise.

In the last few years New York has managed, after immense mental trouble, to lay down enough modern smooth paving so that she cannot be justly called the worst paved city in the world, which was a perfectly true statement not long ago; but she is as far from being a well paved city as Mars is from the moon.

Your real New Yorker loves to brag about his town in other places, and his favorite remark, made in his loudest voice, is that he would rather be a lamp post on the Bowery than anybody or anything, however glorious, in any other city, however beautiful.

The stranger hurries to see this marvelous town that fills its citizens with such super-Roman pride. Great railroad lines carry him across a continent, hurrying him breathlessly, spending thousands of dollars to prevent a delay of even minutes. Everything is haste, haste, haste. Thus they hurl him at last to the end of the road—and that end is on the west bank of a great river. Vain, "modern," wonderful New York is on the other side.

The stranger gets out of his train, hustles through a throng of steaming horses and pounding trucks and wagons, and finds himself aboard a pot-bellied ferryboat. In a few minutes it is filled with people, who, like himself, have been snapped across country by giant locomotives.

Of course, the railroad ferry darts across the river at top speed, the instant the last railroad passenger is aboard. Oh, does it? Not in New York—the world metropolis, as she loves to call herself.

In the middle of each squat ferry is a huge space for wagons. The boat waits patiently while the vehicles lumber abroad; and if a horse balks, or a mammoth truck gets stalled, the ferry waits as long as her captain dares.

Although the real city sits on an island, and although she has not a single bridge over the Hudson river, and thus depends humbly on ferryboats, she has not a single ferry in all her domain that is built and run exclusively for passengers. Every boat carries vehicles in the center, and long after the people have pushed and jammed aboard, the slow throng of wheeled vehicles crawls on.

Each ferryboat smells to high heaven like a barnyard. Every day a wicked mule or a half starved horse holds up one or more shiploads of people for periods ranging from minutes to half an hour. But it never has struck New York the Great that it might be a good idea to carry wheeled traffic on separate ferries.

They are driving tunnels under the rivers now and they speak of them with bated breath as new instances of the incredible enterprise and gigantic daring of the city. They should have been driven twenty years ago.

When the ferry boat approaches New York the stranger sees a marvelous and beautiful sight—overpowering in its wild, fantastic might; the skyscraper line, seeming to storm heaven like torn mountains. But what is at their bases, along the river front that might be as beautiful as any in the world?

Not a single stone quay, not a single structure that could hold the eye for a minute. He who approaches New York's great scenic water front and looks for magnificent water gates or lordly granite piers and basins will look in vain.

What he sees is a long, unspeakably ugly line of low, oblong sheds, made of wood or corrugated iron, stretching in a dreary row from the Battery to the north as far as the eye can reach.

The boat bumps into her slip and spews her passengers and her trucks forth in one beautiful mass.

New York at last! And the stranger's eyes are ready for the spectacle of the great city.

He is fooled again. Every railroad ferry without exception lands the visitors in the back yard. Instead of debouching on fine open squares, with all the transit facilities of a really modern city, ready to carry the thousands and tens of thousands of daily arrivals to the hotels, business centers and show places, the stranger finds in front of him as tawdry and cheap a street as can be found in the civilized world. This is West street—a muddy, hopeless, generally "low-down" thoroughfare, crowded to the limit with heavy trucks and so vilely paved that every shower leaves it full of pools and rivulets. And the only way to reach the rest of the town is to take a cab or walk through the mud for many blocks or—to board a horse car.

Two of the railroads, it is true, achieved a great modern improvement a few years ago, after much cogitation and amid almost tearful acclamations of joy from the people. They built two covered bridges across West street, so that their passengers might at least get across dry shod and unmaimed by trucks.

These covered bridges are typical of West street, and in a large, general sense, of New York. They are so intensely ugly that they inspire one with the conviction that the carpenters who erected them must have studied for a lifetime to produce such perfections of the unbeautiful.

The same ugliness is rampant all along the great river street. Along all those miles where the treasure ships of the world lie roaring at their piers, where the golden traffic of the globe pours in and out, there is not a single, solitary thing of beauty.

Broadway and the business centers of the city are from a quarter mile to a half mile and more away from all these railroad terminals. The great hotels of the uptown sections are more than two miles away and there is not a single fine driveway leading to any of them. The way is through streets, choked with traffic, noisy with wheels and beset with utilitarian buildings, mostly square as they can be made and loopholed with windows like Fall river cotton mills.

From the railroad ferries to Fifth avenue and Twenty-third street, where the real uptown begins, there is not a monument, not an object of art, not a structure built primarily for beauty and effect.

This is the way New York the Wonderful introduces the stranger to herself.

Arrived in Fifth avenue at last, the visitor draws a breath of relief. Here is the real city of glitter and wealth and elegance! As far as the eye can see up the broad avenue, it is literally hidden by gorgeous carriages and liveries and automobiles in all the thousand weird shapes that the weird minds of automobile makers conceive.

Here everything is modern indeed, from the horses to the lap robes. And then—suddenly—a venerable thing rolls along; high and uncouth and slow and ineffably shabby, speaking eloquently of some old English tavern stable of the time of Dickens.

No, it isn't an advertisement of an enterprising dealer in antiques. It is the great Fifth avenue public vehicle—a stage.

Those Fifth avenue stages were old when New York made its first timid beginning at replacing horse cars by cable traction. They are drawn by fabulous monsters which the stage line carries on its books as horses.

Another amusing thing about the great city is the everlasting attempt to "correct the bridge congestion." The bridge is, of course, the great Brooklyn suspension bridge. (By the way, the stranger who approaches it and looks for the wonder of the world is confronted by a sheet iron entrance that looks like the opening into a boiler shop).

The bridge congestion is caused by the simple fact that something like eighteen trolley lines all converge at the bridge and try to deliver all the cars carried over eighteen tracks to the one single track that leads across the big structure. Naturally there is congestion.

Corrugated iron is a favorite ore material in New York. There is a municipal and private craze for it. Hardly does a public building go up under the combined auspices of the municipal art commission and the unofficial Public Grafters' league before somebody comes along with a few rolls of corrugated iron and pastes a little shed or similar improvement against the granite and marble pile.

Washington market is one of the great iron art works of New York. This market is famous all over the country, and as a matter of fact is one of the great provision markets of the world. It is accepted as one of the sights of New York—and every unbiased stranger who visits it is willing to admit at once it is a "sight" indeed.

Here is where the best people of the city stop. It is quite the thing for my lady to do at least some of her buying personally. If my lady were introduced to the same kind of a market in a fourth-rate city she would gather her skirts around her in horror and run away. But ten to one she will boast of Washington market to her friends who are not so thrice fortunate as to be New Yorkers.

From a market to a hospital is a gruesome step, but New York's great municipal hospital is a perfect sidepiece to the municipal market.

If there is another equally frightful building used for hospital purposes in any other great city, the prying eyes of travelers and exposers have never found it. Bellevue hospital could be transplanted almost bodily into the Middle Ages today without surprising Dr. John of Ardern or Dr. Pare too much. They might wonder a bit at the modern surgical appliances in the operating rooms, but the general hideousness, gloom, murk, smell and unsanitariness of the place would seem quite homelike to those old practitioners.

The town is "just getting around to" everything, and never quite getting there in time. More than fifteen years of fuss and feathers elapsed before it finally "got around" to build its subway, of which it is so inordinately proud now, although the same subway was fully one-half too small when it was planned and is not large enough now by three-quarters. Yet New York looks coniplacently on the entirely inadequate system of four tracks, although John H. Starin warned the city over and over again more than ten years ago that eight tracks would be barely sufficient.

And the subway is run like everything else in the town. Apparently nobody took thought to do anything to make it noiseless, and the result is that it is totally impossible to converse in the cars. That does not strike New York as a fault, however. The ticket windows are arranged for two rows of people to buy tickets simultaneously, but the company installs only one agent in each place. Nobody kicks.

New Yorkers are as vain of their town as the town is collectively of itself. Somehow they have acquired the strange idea that it is game and cosmopolitan not to kick at any kind of abuse.

Ask a New Yorker to tell you specifically what it is that makes him so proud of his town and he will be unable to produce anything except a few platitudes backed up by statistics about area, wealth and population.

Sciatica Cured After Twenty Years of Torture.

For more than twenty years Mr. J. B. Massey of 3322 Clinton street, Minneapolis, Minn., was tortured by sciatica. The pain and suffering which he endured during this time is beyond comprehension. Nothing gave him any permanent relief until he used Chamberlain's Pain Balm. One application of that liniment relieved the pain and made sleep and rest possible, and less than one bottle has effected a permanent cure. If troubled with sciatica or rheumatism, why not try a 25-cent bottle of Pain Balm, and see for yourself how quickly it relieves the pain. For sale by all the leading druggists.

FRAZEE

Frazee, May 5.—(Special to The Herald.)—Mr. and Mrs. Delbert Dagett are happy over the arrival of a daughter.

The Baptist Ladies' Aid society will sell aprons and other useful articles at the Schleker building on May 12.

The Frazee high school baseball team has been on the training ground this week and will put a good team against the Detroit high school team today at Detroit. Last year the boys won one game each, but this year the Frazeeites want both games.

The fire department gave a ball on Friday evening which was well patronized by the public.

The graduating exercises will take place on the first Monday in June and the address to the graduating class will be given by Prof. Wells of Fargo. The class has done excellent work and is the first high school class that has graduated at Frazee.

Tree planting has been very lively this week, and most of the citizens have put in their garden seeds.

Miss Nona Regan, the primary teacher, has been appointed teacher at Little Falls. She has a host of friends in Frazee.

L. U. Graham has gone to Fargo to consult a specialist. He was accompanied by Dr. R. E. Barton. Mr. Graham arrived from his work in the woods suffering great pains in the head and ear. He is reported as some better.

A very heavy thunderstorm passed over Frazee on Wednesday evening, accompanied by rain. The present week has been very profitable and advantageous to the farmers who have almost put in their entire seed.

Mrs. Nicholas Longworth of Washington sent a neat visiting card and her regrets to Mrs. Annie Brabner Smith that she could not send a handkerchief for the sale for the Methodist Ladies' Aid society. The card and the autograph are valued by the receiver.

Mr. and Mrs. John Gummer, after visiting with Mr. and Mrs. Charles Jones of Burlington township, returned to their residence on Monday. They have been away all winter and both are much improved in health though not fully recovered.

Mr. and Mrs. Weymouth and family have moved into their residence on First street south.

Mr. and Mrs. Botts have rented the J. G. Lewis house for the summer.

Prof. Porter and wife of Taylor's Falls will return in June to reside in Frazee this summer and autumn.

Dr. E. R. Barton and wife are rejoicing over the arrival of a very fine boy at their residence on Thursday noon.

Mr. Barton of Duluth arrived on Friday and took James Barton, his grandson, for a few weeks' visit to his home in Minneapolis.

Stella DeVine arrived home from Ulen on Saturday after a term of teaching school which has been very successful.

The Methodist Ladies' Aid met with Mrs. Annie Brabner Smith on Wednesday and had a business meeting.

Marshal Gallagher and family have taken up residence over Miss Pearce's millinery store, where he can be nearer town when needed.

Elder and Mrs. Roberts, who have had rather indifferent health, are improving and able to be out of doors.

The Eastern Star chapter gave a social on Wednesday evening to its members and friends. After the regular work of the chapter, games were played and luncheon served to a very large gathering.

The G. I. & A. T. L. gave a literary program on Monday evening in the basement of the schoolhouse before a good audience.

Frazee fire department has decided to make merry on the Fourth of July and has secured the services for orator of Congressman Halvor Steenerson. Other very elaborate arrangements are being made for a real and big demonstration for that day. Committees have been appointed as follows: N. Rosenbloom, decorations; Alford King, sports; F. C. Clayton, entertainment; William Baer, finance, and P. C. Peterson, printing and advertising.

Mrs. E. J. Patchin of Elm Creek, Canada, is visiting with her friend Mrs. Dan Lucas.

Mayor L. D. Headry opened the handkerchief sale and supper in the Baer's hall on Saturday evening. Mr. Headry was accompanied to the platform by Mrs. I. J. Collins, president of the Methodist Ladies' Aid society; Mrs. Annie Brabner Smith, and the Rev. J. J. Brabner Smith, pastor. Handkerchiefs from many parts of the world were on sale, one from Congressman Steenerson being very attractive and sold for a good sum. Mrs. Edward Gummer and Mrs. Herman Bockus had charge of the handkerchief stall; Mrs. Stillings and Mrs. Kenneman, the apron stall, Mrs. Gelser asisting; Mrs. Stillings, Sr., and Mrs. Rosenbloom, candy stall, and Mrs. Brabner Smith, Mrs. Frank Collins, Mrs. Atkinson and the junior class had charge of the branpie. The supper committee was: Mrs. Gilmour, Mrs. Cummings, Mrs. Lyman, Mrs. Johnson, Mrs. Jernstad and Mrs. Hamilton. There were ten young ladies at the tables to serve. Mrs. I. J. Collins, Miss Jessie Ashley and Miss Margaret Graham were the reception committee, and Mrs. J. E. G. Lewis acting treasurer for the supper. Mrs. Guy Chilton, treasurer. The sale and supper were largely attended and the best of its kind for many a long time. The profits, including a check for $10 from Thomas Shevlin of Minneapolis, were about $75. The church and parsonage are to be painted with the money raised by the Ladies' Aid society. Albert King auctioned the handkerchiefs in an able manner.

Mrs. J. H. Baldwin has gone on a visit to her parents at Chippewa Falls.

Hiram Lashaway expects to leave for Minneapolis in a few days to work as filer at a sawmill in that city.

AURORA

Aurora, May 5.—(Special to The Herald.)—John Runquist this week started a force of men at work building a spur of the Iron Range road to the Meadow mine. P. K. Anderson is building camps on the old townsite to house and board the crew in. Supt. Thomas Owens and Roadmaster Shea were up in the private car Wednesday to inaugurate the work. Mr. Owens was accompanied by his daughter.

A number of witnesses in the murder case went to Duluth Wednesday to testify before the grand jury.

The work of constructing a new store building for H. J. Nathanson of Virginia has been started. Max Cohen's new building will be started next week.

G. A. St. Clair and party of Duluth men visited the Meadow mine Wednesday.

Erick Kusala of Eveleth has purchased the bakery here of Mrs. M. A. Mattson and will operate it in future.

F. O. Adamson, formerly of Ely, is now in the employ of Matt Alto.

R. J. McGhee was in Virginia on business Wednesday.

The firm of Hill & Koski, which applied for a saloon license here, was refused same by the village council at its last meeting. This makes two concerns that have been refused license for the same building.

A number of books have been received for the school library.

The Ladies' Aid Society of the M. E. church gave a supper Wednesday evening at the home of Mrs. B. Christianson. It was well patronized.

Officer Matt Turk is in Duluth testifying before the grand jury.

BIWABIK

Biwabik, May 5.—(Special to The Herald.)—Mrs. J. B. Furtney has disposed of her residence here and departed this week for Minneapolis. She will probably take a trip to the Pacific coast to visit relatives before deciding upon her future place of residence. Miss Bertha Furtney, her daughter, left on Wednesday for Hibbing to visit friends for a day or two before going to Minneapolis.

Gust Palvarinta has resigned his position with Max Cohen and has taken another with O. Peterson, so that he can have outdoor work, his health having been poorly of late.

But one firm of bond buyers offered a bid for the village bonds. The price offered was $25 above par. The bonds bear 5 per cent interest, and the bid of the Chicago firm was accepted. The plans and estimates of sewer and water systems made by the Duluth Engineering company were accepted by the council and the work of construction will soon be started.

Jack Sippola, aged 17, a young man who recently arrived from Finland, died of typhoid fever last Friday at the home of John Smo, where he boarded. The funeral was held on Saturday. Deceased has a brother residing here.

Mesdames F. B. Meyers, N. B. Shank, F. S. Colvin, J. S. Hopkins and C. T. Long, the latter of Sparta, went to Duluth Monday to attend the performance given by Sarah Bernhardt. Mrs. Colvin remained until today visiting relatives. Miss Clem Smith and sister, Mrs. Murdock McDonald of Virginia, also witnessed the performance.

Mrs. E. H. Lundstrom, who is ill of consumption, is very low and the physicians have entirely given up hope of her recovery.

Mrs. A. F. Howerton and children were recently made very ill from eating canned cherries. Mrs. Howerton suffered most from the effects of the poison, but fortunately all escaped without serious results.

The citizens of Biwabik raised $207 by subscription for the San Francisco sufferers, and the Knights of Pythias lodge also donated $50.

The local Odd Fellows celebrated the eighty-seventh anniversary of the order last evening by holding a social session at the lodge rooms.

The infant son of Mr. and Mrs. Salivar Basilla died on Monday from pneumonia, coupled with measles.

Mrs. B. Kinney entertained the Ladies' Card club Wednesday afternoon.

John Campbell of Mountain Iron visited his relatives here Sunday.

Miss Mabel Carmichael has returned from Duluth, where she visited her cousin, Mrs. Wurnder.

Magnus Peterson, who has been ill for some time past, has gone to the Mayo hospital at Rochester for treatment.

Mrs. Frank Thomas visited her relatives in Hibbing the first of the week.

Max Cohen was in Duluth on business Tuesday.

Joseph Shore has returned after ten days absence in Duluth.

CASS LAKE

Cass Lake, May 5.—(Special to The Herald.)—A largely attended and enthusiastic meeting of the Commercial club was held in the New York building Monday evening. The principle business transacted was the decision to purchase the boat landing owned by James Cardle.

The ladies aid society of the Catholic church met Thursday at the home of Mrs. R. F. Lussier.

N. P. Berry came down from Akely the first of the week to visit his family.

Glen Harding has accepted the position of night central in the local telephone office, Bert Williams resigned to take charge of his father's new launch.

The band boys gave their first open air concert last Wednesday evening and nearly every citizen in town was out to hear the melodious music. It seems to be the prevailing opinion that the Cass Lake band is equal to any organization of its kind in the state. The boys have received several invitations from neighboring towns inviting them to come and play concerts. The citizens of Cass Lake are desirous of hearing a concert every week during the entire summer and for that reason every business man and many employees contribute at least $1 a month for the support of the organization.

Mrs. F. B. Merrill instructed a dancing class in the "Moonlight schottische" at Burns' hall, Friday evening.

J. D. Caldwell returned Wednesday from Beaudette and Rainy Lake country, where he did some special work in the woods.

VIRGINIA

Virginia, May 5.—(Special to The Herald.)—The class of 1906 of the high school, assisted by a number of other high school pupils, will put on Shakespeare's "A Midsummer Night's Dream" as part of the closing exercises for the year. The play is under the direction of Prof. L. Bliss, assisted by the high school teachers. No pains will be spared to give a bright and pleasing presentation of Shakespeare's fairy play. The music will be classic and richly appropriate compositions of Mendelssohn's "Midsummer Night's Dream." About seventy-five pupils of the school will take part, the leading characters being impersonated by the seniors. Several rehearsals have already been held and most of the cast have their lines well in hand. The interludes by the hard-handed men of Athens will furnish the comic parts, and those by the fairies and soldiers will add beauty and entertainment. The stage fittings and costumes will be appropriate in all details.

PROCTOR

Proctor, May 5.—(Special to The Herald.)—During the past week, the board of health has started on its spring round of inspection, and begun to issue "clean up the premises" notices, so the eye which has been offended by stray tin cans and winter ash heaps may look for speedy relief. Some of the property owners have anticipated the council, and have already done the spring cleaning, and the appearance of the yards, raked up and cared for with the rubbish, which is such a menace to comfort and health, burned and out of the way, is an inspiration to those who have not yet begun.

The people of Lakeside banded themselves together a year or two ago, and drew up a lot of resolutions which they promised to observe, part of which read after this fashion: (1), to keep your front yard clean and neat as a Queen Anne garden; (2), to keep your chickens or rabbits within proper fences or bounds, as you would wish your neighbor to do if you had none and he had some.

Sunday afternoon, Mr. and Mrs. John D. Brown leave for a several weeks' stay in Memphis, Tenn. Mr. Brown goes as the delegate from Proctor to the International convention of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, which will convene in Memphis, May 9, and continue about four weeks.

A subject of anxious discussion in town this week has been the strike at the lake ports. The outlook for the season, which opened so auspiciously, seems rather uncertain. The effect of the strike makes itself felt here already by the cut in the crews, and if it continues, a complete tie-up is feared.

Last Monday evening, a farewell party was given in the town hall in honor of Mr. and Mrs. A. Willey, and was largely attended by their many friends, the hall being filled to its capacity. During the evening a twenty-one jewel gold watch was presented to Mr. Willey, as a token of esteem from his friends and co-workers in Proctor. Thomas Grimes made a very pleasing and humorous presentation address, and Mr. Willey responded in a few earnest words of thanks. The evening was spent in dancing. La Brosse's orchestra furnished the music, which was good, and the evening was much enjoyed. Supper was served by the ladies at 12 o'clock. Mr. and Mrs. Willey have made many friends during their stay in Proctor, and all regret their departure. They leave this week for an extended trip to the Western coast before Mr. Willey takes up the work in his new position.

In the morning the subject of his talk will be "The Christian Never Loses," and at the evening service, "The Consuming Fire of God." At the morning service the choir will sing an anthem, "Unanswered Yet," by J. A. Parks. At the evening service the program of music will be as follows:

Prelude .....
.....Mrs. William Comstock.
Anthem—"The Sun is Sinking Fast"...
.....Lorenz
.....Choir.
Solo—Selected .....
.....Mrs. C. B. Gilbert.

The choir is composed of: Mrs. E. S. Davis, Miss Chenoweth, sopranos; Mrs. C. B. Gilbert, alto; E. D. Ruse, H. M. Stuart, toners; M. L. Gay, E. D. Spurbeck, bassos; Mrs. William Comstock, organist.

The one-half size model of valve motion for the Y. M. C. A. study room, castings for which were furnished by the Baldwin Locomotive works, has been fitted up by the railway company, and was installed in the study room Friday. The model is a very valuable addition to the association apparatus, and will add to the interest in the study of locomotive machinery.

Much inconvenience has been caused at the Y. M. C. A. building and the Duguesm hotel the last few days by the lack of water, due to some obstruction in the pipes, which it has been impossible, as yet, to locate.

Mrs. Allen of Janesville, Wis., is visiting her daughter, Mrs. H. O. Smith.

Among the visitors to town this week were Mrs. N. Peyton, Mrs. John S. Brown, Miss Stillard, Mrs. J. H. Whalen, Mrs. E. S. Davis.

Those present were Mr. and Mrs. Ed Hawkins, Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Swanson, Theodore Swanson, Miss Augusta Lang, Miss Anna Swanson, John O'Mara and Mr. and Mrs. Carl Nelson.

Wednesday evening a church social was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. E. S. Davis, on the West side. A large number were present and enjoyed a very pleasant social evening. Much amusement was furnished by a hat-making competition suggested as a part of the evening's entertainment. Each guest was furnished with a sheet of white tissue-paper and two pins, and requested to make as artistic a hat as possible. Some of the effects achieved were surprisingly good, and a number of the men proved themselves very adept at amateur millinery. When the hats were finished, each maker donned his own work of art, and all paraded in a long line before the judges, Mrs. E. W. Forbes and C. B. Gil-

ST. ANTHONY'S HOSPITAL, BEMIDJI.

Bemidji, Minn., May 5.—(Special to The Herald.)—An institution which is of much benefit to Bemidji is St. Anthony's hospital, considered one of the best institutions of its kind in the north half of the state. St. Anthony's hospital is one of a large number of hospitals that have been founded by the order of the Sisters of St. Benedict, the mother-house of the order being located in Duluth. While primarily a teaching order, the good sisters found such urgent demands for their gentle and faithful ministrations as nurses, both for those who could afford it and destred the best of care as well as the sick and injured woodsmen and other unfortunates largely dependent upon charity, that a hospital was founded, out of which has grown the association which now owns flourishing hospitals at Brainerd, Crookston, Grand Rapids, Cass Lake and Bemidji, all of which are conducted from the Benedictine convent at Duluth, but each is conducted as a separate institution by a sister superior and the necessary complement of sisters. The local hospital was started when two sisters of the order came to Bemidji on Nov. 25, 1898, and fitted up hospital wards over the Nangle store. A few weeks after a fine tract of land fronting on Lake Bemidji was secured, plans drawn for a hospital building, the foundation laid, and a wing of the present hospital building erected. Work on the main building was commenced a few months after, and the hospital building as it now stands was completed, costing about $21,000. The furnishings cost $2,000 additional. The hospital contains five wards of various sizes, accommodating four beds in the smaller and eighteen in the larger wards. There are nine private rooms for patients who can afford to pay for privacy and special attendance, although in the matter of nursing, the same care and attention is given to all. The building is a three-story frame structure.

Michael Hurdly, a popular and well known boy of about 16, died last Saturday from a severe attack of typhold fever.

The county commissioners met here yesterday morning to drive to Duluth over the Miller trunk road and know for themselves its condition from one end to the other. It is reported to be very bad about twelve miles down. The commissioners will have a rig from here for twenty-five miles, which is nearly half the distance; at that place they will be met by a Duluth team. The men do not anticipate a pleasant drive, especially since the heavy rains of the past week set many of the corduroys afloat. In the party were Commissioners P. J. Ryan of Hibbing, Sundeen, Kauppi of Duluth and Neil McInnis of this place.

C. T. Long, a prominent Spartan, was in town Thursday.

Mrs. Daniel Shea, who has been suffering with an attack of tonsilitis, is able to be out.

Mr. and Mrs. Linas Fuller have moved into their home on B avenue, recently purchased from N. J. Paulson.

The Sax liquor store opened for business Tuesday.

Eveleth so far has felt very little of the ill effects of the lake strike, although the steam shovel men and extra train crews taken on for the summer shipping season have been laid off. There seems to be a spirit of confidence among the people here that it cannot be of long duration; that the difficulties will be readily adjusted, and that this will be the most prosperous season in the history of the range.

The Euchre club met yesterday with Mrs. Neil McInnis.

Miss Bessie Donnely of Superior is the guest of her sister, Mrs. George McCormack.

Mrs. Martha Robarts has been a guest at the George Vipond home the past week.

Patty Burke departed Tuesday evening for Rochester to consult with the Drs. Mayo.

HIBBING

Hibbing, May 5.—(Special to The Herald.)—Several important motions were made and carried at the meeting of the village council held at the town hall on Tuesday afternoon. The salary of W. G. Williams, superintendent of the village water and light plant, was raised from $100 to $120 per month. Fire Chief O'Connor was raised from $90 to $95, his assistant to $75, and all other firemen were given a $5 raise. The purchase of six additional fire alarm boxes for the Southern addition to Hibbing was authorized. Fire Chief O'Conner reported that in the month of April only $125 was lost by fire in the village. Six alarms were turned in, one caused from an overheated stove, one which was caused by a spark from an engine burned about $75 worth of wood at the Sellers mine, and four alarms were turned in for chimney fires. A communication received from Andrew Carnegie was read and referred to the library board. Mr. Carnegie agreed to give the village $15,000 for a public library, provided the city furnish the site and pledge $1,500 a year for the support and maintenance of the project. This matter will be taken up by the library board at a very early date and acted upon. The fund which is being raised in Hibbing to aid the San Francisco sufferers is steadily growing. J. F. Twitchell, S. R. Kirby and L. G. Sicard, the committee appointed by the council to raise the funds, have been working part hard, and have so far, up to Thursday evening, been successful in securing $285. They want to make it $500, and at the daily rate of increase they hope to realize their expectations. The following contributions are among those already received: Itasca Mercantile company, $25; Village President Frank Ansley, $25; Merchants' & Miners' State bank, $25; W. C. Barrett, $25; Miko Somers, $10; W. J. West, $10; T. York, $25; P. H. Nelson, $25; Peter McHardy, $25; Martin Hughes, $10; J. F. Twitchell, $10; Mrs. H. M. Masseau, $5; P. J. Ryan, $10; Father C. V. Gamache, $10; John Kleffman, $25; J. J. Cox, $5.

Dr. and Mrs. G. N. Butchart and children will start Wednesday on their Western trip. They will travel through Canada and the Western states. Mr. Butchart will return in a few weeks, but his wife and children will remain for the summer.

W. J. Ryder was called to the Twin Cities this week on matters of important business.

Rev. Guy S. Davis, pastor of the Presbyterian church at Carlton, Minn., filled the pulpit in the First Presbyterian church at Hibbing last Sunday at both of the services, having exchanged pulpits for the day with the pastor, Rev. Charles P. Bates. Mr. Davis' sermons were both very fine, and appreciated by a large congregation. During the evening service he preached on the "Monotony of Sin." He handled this subject in a very able and impressive manner. Rev. S. McInnis of Duluth will preach both morning and evening at the Presbyterian church on the coming Sunday, during the absence of the pastor. Rev. Bates, who will preach at the First Presbyterian Church of Duluth, Sunday school will be held at noon. The regular meeting for prayer and Bible study will be held as usual in the pastor's study in the church on Wednesday evening at 7:30. All are cordially invited.

Mrs. J. Parker visited friends in Superior last week.

James Peak of Eveleth was in Hibbing Tuesday.

W. A. Masters of Chisholm was in town for a few days the fore part of the week, having come to attend to some pressing business matters.

Mrs. H. E. Jenks of 211 Sellers street is entertaining Mrs. Al Osborn of Nashwauk.

Mrs. J. A. Healy and daughter Jessie departed Wednesday for St. Paul.

Miss Helma Hooker of Duluth visited friends in Hibbing over Sunday.

Harry Belmont, who has been visiting friends in Brainerd for several weeks, returned home Saturday.

The many friends of E. B. Dunning, who has held the position of head bookkeeper for the Itasca Mercantile company's store at Hibbing for several years, will be sorry to hear that he will soon leave Hibbing to accept a position in Duluth. Mr. Dunning is a very popular man, and has made a great many warm friends during his residence here. It is understood that he has accepted a very desirable position in a broader field in Duluth. Before going he will have to promise his friends to return occasionally and visit here. The good will of the people of Hibbing in general goes with Mr. Dunning, and he is wished abundant success by all his friends.

The Ladies of the Royal Neighbors will give their third annual ball in the Close hall Friday evening, May 11. These ladies have now gained a very good reputation for being providers of good times. A very fine supper will be prepared and served. The music will be furnished by Heine's orchestra. Tickets, including refreshments, $1.50.

Mrs. Frank Dear returned on Saturday from Richmond, Va., where she has spent several weeks visiting friends and relatives. Her son Herbert, who accompanied her, remained in the East for a more extended visit, but is expected to return to Hibbing before the summer is over.

At the annual meeting of the Christ Episcopal church, recently held, Rev. Frank Durant, the pastor, was re-elected. He began his fourth year with this charge on Sunday last. The prospects are now much brighter than at any time previous throughout his service here. Since its erection and dedication, now ten years ago, this little stone church has been an elevating star in the community, but it has become particularly so under the spiritual guidance and broad scholastic devotion of the present rector. The church was erected by Miss Jane E. Schmeizel of Boston, in memory of her father, and in addition to this gift she has, up to the present time, given $500 a year to its support. This support has now been discontinued by her, and so it will be necessary for the congregation to raise that additional amount. The directors are feeling confident that they will experience no great difficulty in keeping the added obligation. Several needed repairs are now being made on the building. At the recent election of officers of the society A. P. Silliman was elected treasurer, to succeed G. H. Thompson.

Mrs. Scott L. Holtzlander of 220 Sellers street departed Wednesday morning for her old home at North Tonawanda, N. Y., to be gone for about two months. She will spend the first two weeks of her trip at Flint, Mich., visiting Mr. Holtzlander's sister. Mr. Holtzlander went as far as Duluth with her, and returned on the evening train. Miss Joerns, the music teacher, and her brother will occupy the home during Mrs. Holtzlander's absence. Last Saturday evening the Carpe Diem club, the class of the Presbyterian Sunday school that Mrs. Holtzlander has been teaching, very pleasantly surprised her, in order to wish her a happy and enjoyable trip. About twenty of the young people of the club were present. The evening hours were rapidly passed in singing and merry-making. Miss Estelle Chase and George Cobb, Jr., favored the gathering with recitations. Before going, the president, in behalf of the Carpe Diem club, presented Mrs. Holtzlander with a set of three plus, bearing the letters of the club, and the good will of all the members.

Stephen O. Geiser departed Sunday for a business trip to Chicago and New York, and will be gone for a couple of weeks.

Mr. and Mrs. B. M. Fessenden have sold their residence at 432 Lincoln street to A. E. Pfremmer, and will depart Saturday noon for Iowa, where they will visit friends and relatives for some time. They expect to return to their farm in Aitkin county.

S. R. Kirby and John A. Redfern spent the fore part of the week at Swan lake, endeavoring to get the latter's new gasoline launch to run smoothly and gently. The launch is named Ronomor, and is a fine specimen of mechanism.

Patrick McGrane, a veteran of the Civil war of Negaunee, Mich., is spending the summer with his daughter at Mountain Iron, came over to Hibbing this week to consult an eye specialist.

The Methodists are feeling very proud of the handsome new electric sign, reading "M. E. Church," which they have this week suspended across the sidewalk in front of their fine church edifice. The idea is an entirely new one, being original with the pastor, Rev. Rupert Swinnerton, who is a man of fine executive ability. Since Mr. Swinnerton's pastorate here he has introduced many new ideas, and has done much for the advancement of his church. The new sign is of the latest and most modern type and was manufactured in Hibbing. These signs are getting very popular here. In the last few months over twenty-five have been hung over business places on the main streets of Hibbing.

The board of supervisors of the township of Stuntz held their regular monthly meeting at the office of the municipal judge on Tuesday afternoon. Nothing of importance was brought before the board, so after the usual number of bills were allowed the meeting was adjourned.

John Dugal, son of the proprietor of the Central hotel, caused his parents, and particularly his mother a great deal of worry last week by very mysteriously disappearing. Johnnie for some time has made some threats at home about running away, and last week took advantage of the free transportation to the new of the free transportation to the new and Duluth, Missabe & Northern train, and went to Duluth. From there he went to Minneapolis, his parents being unaware of his proceedings. A friend of the family happened to see Johnnie in Duluth, and thinking it unusual to find the boy in that city, reported to the lad's parents. Mrs. Dugal departed at once, and overtook her son in Minneapolis. Not very strange to say, Johnnie was just aching to get a chance to come back, and returned with his mother on Monday. He has decided that Hibbing was after all a pretty fair little town, and that he will never run away again.

Bids for the new Italian Catholic church were opened at a meeting held Tuesday, and out of the several bidders Lubrec, Lepage & Gognan, were the lowest, their figures being $947. It is expected that the excavating will begin some time this week, and the structure will be pushed through to completion as rapidly as possible. The church will be located on Cedar street, back of the Hibbing Pharmacy.

Mrs. Joseph Cobelli, through her attorney, V. L. Power of Hibbing, has brought suit in the district court in Duluth against Jacob Kitz, the Pine street merchant, for $5,000, because of the alleged indignity of being forcibly ejected from his store. This is the outcome of an incident that caused considerable comment several months ago. Mrs. Cobelli claims that the injuries which were inflicted, where received when she tried to collect $4.50 from the defendant for scrubbing his store. She claims that he refused to pay her more than $3, and that he became angry and assaulted her without cause. Mr. Kitz has not yet filed his answer, but immediately following the alleged trouble he made a statement to the effect that he did not assault the woman, but simply forcibly ejected her from his store, as she was raising a disturbance. He claims that he had a right to do what he did, and that her charges for work done were exorbitant.

L. G. Bradley was over from Movey Tuesday.

Mrs. Charles M. Bates and daughter, Gertrude, left Wednesday noon for St. Louis, Mich., to visit Mrs. Bates' parents and old home. They will be gone for a couple of months, and during their absence the home will be occupied by Mr. and Mrs. R. G. Lacy. About July 1, Mr. and Mrs. Lacy will move to Bovey, where he will take up the duties of station agent for the Duluth, Missabe & Northern railway at the new town.

M. Connihan came up from Proctor to transact business here Tuesday.

G. W. Mulligan of Eveleth was in Hibbing Tuesday and Wednesday, greeting some of his friends here.

It is reported that Gracie, the little daughter of President and Mrs. Frank Ansley is very ill.

Mrs. J. A. Healy and daughter, Jessie, left Wednesday noon for St. Paul and Minneapolis, where they will visit friends.

Joe Thouin returned Monday from Michigan, where he has been visiting friends and relatives for several weeks.

Miss Jessie Dixon, head operator at the Hibbing telephone exchange is again seriously ill.

H. E. Jenks has removed his family to their new home at 211 Sellers street, which he recently purchased from A. F. Bradley.

Silas Casey of Eveleth is visiting his son in Hibbing this week. He expects to locate here permanently in the near future.

The Elks will attend the Episcopal church in a body Sunday evening to listen to the scriptural teachings of Rev. Frank Durant, who is one of their members. All are cordially invited. The morning service will be held at 10:30, and the evening at 7:30.

Max Shulrman of the Keewatin Mercantile company was in Hibbing early this week stocking up.

L. Helstein is in Chicago on business.

J. H. Carlson, proprietor of the Carlson Mercantile company returned home Saturday last, after an absence of about three months. How Ben and Lucy Changed Their Opinion of "Old Crossbones."

BY MAUD WALKER.

"Oh, mamma, why did you take Old Crossbones to board?" fretted little Lucy Mayer as she stood on the back porch washing the breakfast dishes. "Now, Ben and I will have to creep 'round as still as mice—never daring to breathe aloud, for they say he's awful." And Lucy emphasized the last word decidedly.

"Why, daughter, that's an ugly way for you to speak of old Mr. Perkins—poor, sick man," said Mrs. Mayer. "Who did you ever hear call him 'Old Crossbones?' "

"W'y, all the children in town call him that," declared Lucy. "And that's a good name for him, too, for he's nothing but a pack of bones, and he's as cross as a sore-headed bear."

"Did my little girl ever know a sore-headed bear?" asked Mrs. Mayer, smiling indulgently at her pretty 10-year-old daughter, whose blue eyes sparkled, and whose rosy cheeks radiated health.

"N-o-o, 'm, I never did," confessed Lucy, bending her eyes on the work. "But Ben, he says sore-headed bears are dreadful."

"Well, as Ben is your brother—just two years older than yourself—and has lived all his life in this house, the same as you have, I think he knows as little about sore-headed bears as Miss Lucy does. And now I want to ask you what you know of poor old Mr. Perkins, who is such an invalid." And Mrs. Mayer put her hand on her little girl's shoulder as she waited for the answer.

"Well, all I know, mamma, is—is—w'y, is that he's an old cross-bones," explained Lucy, somewhat confused. "All the children hate him—he's such a—what-you-call-it—a crank."

"Ah, dearie, you should not use the word hate in connection with a poor, old sick man," corrected Mrs. Mayer. "But to answer your question as to why I have promised to take Mr. Perkins here to board, I shall say that the reason is a selfish one. You see, he always pays liberally, being an invalid and requiring extra attention. And as you and Benny know, mamma has had a hard time making both ends meet since dear papa's death. And I am so worn out with sewing by the day in families—which is otherwise a hardship, as it takes me away from my home all day—that I have decided to take a few boarders through the summer and stay at home and rest up a bit. Housework is not wearing on one like sewing is. And I want to be at home with my children. But, to come out even, I knew I must get one or two boarders who would pay liberally; otherwise I would be obliged to keep at the sewing machine."

"Oh, mamma, dear, forgive me for feeling provoked about old er—I mean Mr. Perkins," pleaded little Lucy, her heart going out to her good, industrious and over-worked mother. "I don't mind having him a bit—if it makes it possible for you to stay at home all day with us, instead of having to go out to sew. Besides, we won't see much of him, except at the table, for he's too ill to come trotting about the house and into the back yard."

"But we must not be selfish, dear," said Mrs. Mayer. "We must not forget that one who is sick and suffering all the time needs cheerful companionship. Just remember how your papa, during the year of his illness, enjoyed the visits and attentions of his friends. Even though he had us, he looked forward longingly to the frequent calls of those who came in smiling, with some humorous anecdotes to relate. We must do all we can to cheer the poor sick man, and make his hours—that must seem long—as endurable as possible."

Then Mrs. Mayer went up stairs to fix the best front room for the coming invalid's occupancy. She had promised him in the morning that all would be in readiness for him early in the afternoon.

"Well, I wonder what Ben will say when he comes home and I tell him that mamma has taken in old Cross-bones—I mean Mr. Perkins—to board," soliloquized Lucy, as she swept the back porch. "Well, he's got to look at it as I do—sensibly," she added, wagging her pretty head.

About 2 o'clock old Mr. Perkins moved into the best front room of the home of "Widow Mayer," bringing with him a lot of books and a strange-looking iron-clad box. Otherwise his belongings were meagre. He asked the widow—who was helping to get him comfortably settled in his room—to raise a window overlooking the yard at the side of the house, and to place his easy chair beside it that he might get the afternoon sunshine and hear the birds sing in the nearby trees.

But hardly had the invalid got settled when his attention was attracted by a beautiful, sunny-haired little girl, who sat in the yard just beneath his window picking over strawberries. He turned to ask the widow who the child was, but she had bustled out of his room, closing the door behind her. Then the sick man began to watch the little girl with a great deal of interest, for children were new to him, as he had always made it a point to board where "dogs, cats and children" were not allowed. But, somehow, this busy little miss held a peculiar charm for him, and he found himself hoping that she belonged to the house where he was now a guest.

"How strange that I never inquired about children, cats and dogs," he mused. "It may turn out that the place is infested with one of each. Well, I was so taken by the big yard and the quiet surroundings that I forgot to be particular in my investigation concerning those very important points."

"Oh, so you've got home at last," cried the little girl under the window, waving her hand gaily toward someone who was doubtless coming in through the back yard. Then, in another minute a sturdy, barefooted boy, half hidden under an immense straw hat, came into the invalid's view. "Oh, heavens!" groaned the sick man. "A boy—a boy and a girl, both!" And as he looked once more he closed his eyes to shut out the dreadful sight, for there, coming round the corner of the house, was a shaggy dog, the boy's property and comrade, of course!

"My, what a big string of fish you got!" the girl exclaimed, speaking to the boy. Then the sick man looked again, for although he was an invalid he was fond of good things to eat, and fresh fish was one of his favorite dishes.

"Say, Ben," the girl continued, "mamma has taken a new boarder. He's already here—luggage and all. Bet you can't guess who he is." But without waiting for the curious Ben to guess, Lucy—for she it was who sat beneath the window—stopped work and bent forward intently, giving the surprise in store for Ben full justice: "It—is—a — man — we — kids—have — always — hated — but—what—I—don't—mean—to—ever—hate—again! It's old—Cross-bones!"

"Cross-bones!" And Ben's eyes stared while his mouth flew open in surprise. "Honest Injun, Sis?"

"Cross my heart!" assured Lucy, suiting the action to the word. "But, say, Ben, we've got to be kind and good——"

"Oh, rot!" exclaimed Ben. "What on earth did mamma take——"

"Hush right up, Mister," ordered Lucy. "Now, don't you reckon 'at mamma's 'bout wore out sewing for families? And isn't it much nicer to have some boarders so as she can stay at home with us?"

"But she ought to get boarders what are well and not as cross as soreheaded bears——"

"Oh, what do you know of soreheaded bears?" retorted Lucy. "Besides, sick folks have got to stay somewheres. Just remember our own dear papa." And Lucy's tone quavered and tears filled her blue eyes. "No, sir, mamma says we must be kind and good to this poor sick man, and we must stop calling him 'old Cross-bones,' too. And we must tell him funny stories to cheer him up, so we must. See! I'm putting all the real nice big berries into a bowl to themselves, for I mean to put them to Mr. Perkins' place at supper."

Ben stood silent, contemplating his sister, whose words always had great weight with him. Then, looking down at his string of fish, he said: "Wonder if he likes fish? Here's a bit—that one in the middle—that can be broiled for him. I mean it for mamma; but, if he's so—so—sick—well, he can have it."

And that evening when the invalid came down to supper the Mayers were astonished at his cheerful, cordial good humor. He ate the fish and berries with a relish, chatting the while to the young fisherman, giving him "pointers" on catching trout. And when the evening meal was over he invited the children to come to his room and look at his books and hear some stories of the sea, for he had at one time been a sailor.

"Oh, he's lovely!" cried Lucy, when the sick man had gone upstairs. "As soon as our work is done we'll go up and visit with him. How could anybody have given him that name of 'Old Cross-bones'?"

"It's because people don't know him," answered Ben. "He's a nice old man, and I'm glad he's come here to live."

While this conversation was going on down stairs between the children, Mr. Perkins was communing with himself upstairs thus: "Who would have thought that two children—things I've always stood in awe of—could have made me pass such a pleasant meal! Why, I forgot to get mad about anything; for the first time in years I did not scold the servant who waited on me, nor complain about my food. And I'm feeling better, too. Marvelous!"

But a tap on the door interrupted his musings. "Come right in," he called out cheerily, and in came Ben and Lucy with—yes, with that awful dog behind them!

"Do you mind Shep, sir?" asked Ben, holding the dog's collar, and about to thrust him out into the hall.

"No! no! bring your dog in," answered Mr. Perkins. And in another minute he was laughing and telling stories to the children who, with Shep, sat at his feet listening eagerly.

And so the days, weeks and months went by, "Old Crossbones" growing weaker but happier every day in the sweet home life of the "Widow Mayer" and her children. At last, being too ill to come down stairs to his meals, he became alarmed about his condition, and made preparations to take that long journey from which no traveler returns. He sent for a lawyer and several witnesses, who drew up a very serious looking document, so thought Mrs. Mayer, who entered the room on some errand while the legal visitors were there.

And a few days later, with Ben and Lucy sitting beside him, "cheering him up," he passed into the other world, a smile of contentment on his lips.

And then it was discovered that he had made a will, giving to the Widow Mayer and her children the contents of the iron-clad box hidden away in the closet of his room, which on being opened was found to be full of silver and gold money and deeds to several valuable pieces of property. On the top of the contents of the strong box lay a letter addressed to Ben and Lucy Mayer. It bore the date of the old invalid's coming to their house to live and ran thus:

"Dear Little Ones—Today I overheard your conversation carried on in the yard beneath my window. You then disclosed your sweet, innocent, generous little souls to me, and made me see the faults of 'Old Crossbones' as others must have always seen them. You have made me know myself as I have never done before. For this kindness I bless you, for it is not too late to mend my 'cranky' ways and become a different man.

"Your reward for sweet kindnesses to me in my last days shall be the contents of this strong box. Your dear mamma will not be obliged to go out sewing by the day after getting possession of this, and you two little ones will have the advantages of education and opportunity.

"With the blessings of a dying man, who is happy in your sunshine,

"Your friend, who is no longer

"CROSSBONES."

Find the boy who left his fishing pole stuck in the bank and ran away to hunt birds.

"Oh, so you've got home at last!" cried the little girl.

Cut out the above picture and carefully paste on a bit of smooth cardboard. When dry take your water colors and tint the background pale blue; the clown in the background may be dressed in yellow, with white spots; the dog on the pedestal brown, with green collar and hat. The clown in the foregrouud may be in bright red, with yellow spots, a white collar and purple hat and slippers. The paper-covered hoop should be left white, and the dog may be tinted dark gray, with a pink collar. Press when dry and mount on a dark gray mat.

Through America's Dead Sea Runs a Railroad.

Right through Great Salt Lake—the Dead Sea of the New World—runs a railroad! The actual length of this, the longest trestle in the world, is 12 miles. It contains 23,000 piles, the longest single pile being 90 feet, and the longest spliced pile 120 feet. The cost of constructing this wonderful piece of railroad was $5,000,000, and the time required to build it was three years. At one place in the bed of the lake thousands of cars of rock were emptied without making the least impression in the way of foundation.

In riding over this road—right through the beautiful, sparkling Salt Lake—one notices the absence of boats of any kind, although the lake is over 100 miles in length and 70 miles across at its widest place, and one would think it afforded great attractions for the sailor or oarsman. But the fact is, rowing or sailing is almost impossible on the waters of this Dead Sea, for it is so heavy with salt that navigation—or even swimming—is slow and laborious, rendering, therefore, little pleasure for the pains.

If one dips up a pail of water from Great Salt Lake and lets it stand in the sun till the water evaporates, there will be found one-third of a pail of salt.

Hundreds of centuries ago the waters of this great body extended over the thousands of acres of land that surrounds it now in the form of dry, desolate wastes on which nothing grows, for no animal, vegetable nor fowl life can exist on this one-time salt sea bed.

The Dialogue.

Boy—Wasp, you build a castle fair!
Wasp—Heaven taught me how to rear.
Boy—You have a lance like ancient knight!
Wasp—And I can put a man to flight.
Boy—Wasp, your jacket is of yellow!
Wasp—Yes, I am a dandy fellow.

Mistress Bunny Cottontail AND Her Wonderful Experience

By Helena Davis

It had been a hard winter for the Cottontails. The snows had been unusually deep and lasting, only melting away in April. And as the ground was so tightly frozen that getting to the juicy roots was an impossibility, the Cottontails had to live on what bark they could gnaw from the fruit trees on the surrounding farms and the grain they could dig up through the snow in the old wheat fields. And the gnawing of fruit-tree bark was always accompanied by a great deal of danger. In the first place, there were those huge and ferocious animals called dogs to be avoided, and in the second place there were cleverly contrived traps to catch the unwary Cottontail that put its head into odd little nests, or pens, in quest of the food so temptingly displayed.

One family of Cottontails had indeed suffered greatly from the scarcity of food and the extreme cold, and with the first thaw the mother, Mistress Bunny Cottontail, started out in quest of a place where her family might find food. But before going out from the woods in which their home—a fallen hollow tree—was located, Mistress Bunny called her little ones about her and gave them orders.

"Do not wander away from home during my absence," she said, just like a human mother instructing her young children. "The very minute I find something for you to eat I'll come right back and lead you to it. I know you are all hungry, but it will not do for you to go abroad without my guidance. Now, all be good bunnies, and mamma will come back as quickly as she can."

Then Mistress Bunny kissed each son and daughter—she had two of each—and went away. The road she chose led over a high hill, passing between broad fields and gardens. But Mistress Bunny had seen early in the winter a magnificent orchard that covered several acres of ground on a farm far to the southward, and thither she bent her way.

The sun was barely up when Mistress Bunny arrived at the farm of the orchard, for she had started before dawn and had traveled fast. With her hunger urging her on she ran at once to the trees whose sweet, nutritious bark would soon give her sustenance, and which, if as she expected to find them, would furnish food to her children whom she would bring there that night under cover of darkness; for although Mistress Bunny would put her own nose into danger, she would not lead her innocent children into it by allowing them to venture there by daylight.

But imagine Mistress Bunny's disappointment when on arriving in the orchard she found every tree trunk wrapped, first about with straw and over that a closely woven wire netting, which prevented any animal from getting its poor nose in close contact with the bark, let alone their teeth. If rabbits cry I am sure poor bunny fell a-weeping when she found herself thus prohibited from taking a few bites from the fruit trees that grew in such great numbers all about her.

"Well, well, I must look for food elsewhere," she murmured, turning about. Then she followed a well-beaten path which led through the orchard, for she knew it would take her some place where provisions might be obtainable.

And it did. This path led her to a big barnyard full of chickens, pigs and calves. For a few moments Mistress Bunny crouched behind a tuft of old winter-killed vine that hung about the barnyard fence, for she felt too frightened to enter when all these strange beings were running about and making so much noise. Surely they had nothing to fear, she thought, for they were so free and bold in their actions.

But when one is on the verge of starvation one will face any danger for food, and Mistress Bunny, her eyes on the delicious food that lay scattered everywhere about crept from her hiding-place and entered one corner of the barnyard. There she sat down beside a chicken trough and commenced a ravenous breakfast.

While she was thus engaged a pair of bright blue eyes caught sight of her from the hay mow in the barn, and a rosy-cheeked boy of 12 smiled kindly upon her. "Poor little rabbit," he said, "everybody is against you, trying to kill you. But you may come here and eat in the little barnyard whenever you want to, for I'll see to it that old Sport and Towser are not allowed to chase you away. Wish you only knew how safe you would be with me and you'd come to live here and I would build you a hutch."

But this blue-eyed, rosy-cheeked fellow did not have long to watch Mrs. Bunny at her meal, for she stopped just long enough to eat a few hurried mouthfuls, and then set off after her children. "The little dears will be about starved," she said to herself, "and I must not eat my fill till they can enjoy the food with me."

It was still early in the day when Mistress Bunny reached her home, where her dear ones were watching eagerly for her.

"Come, my pets, hurry up and follow me, for I've found a place where there is an abundance of food lying in a big pile, and we may eat and eat to our hearts' content, which means our stomachs' fill," cried Mistress Bunny Cottontail to her four little Cottontails.

And you may believe that those four small rabbits did not delay in starting, but sprang to their nimble feet at once and went off behind their mother like the wind.

Now, after Mistress Bunny had taken her sudden leave of the barnyard, the blue-eyed, rosy-cheeked boy went about his morning chore of feeding the farm horses. But his mind was full of the pretty rabbit that had come there to find her breakfast, and somehow he felt she would come again. So, when he returned to the house for breakfast, he told his father and mother about the little animal's visit and declared that he meant to do everything he could to invite her to make her home with them.

"Why, son, don't you know what destroyers rabbits are about the farm?" his father asked.

"They would not destroy if they were fed," replied the boy. "I'll coax the bunny here and see that she has enough to eat. Then she will not have to destroy anything to keep from starving. I guess we would destroy, too, if we couldn't get food in any other way."

"You are about right, son," acknowledged the man. "Everything created loves life; and to live one must eat. I guess the rabbit is more sinned against than sinning."

So it was that the boy had his own way regarding Mistress Bunny Cottontail. And he set to work that very day to build a hutch, with the hope of coaxing her to live in it. What was his surprise that afternoon, just as he was contemplating a spot in which to place the hutch he had built, to see Mistress Bunny coming through the fence, followed by four little bunnies. Quietly he crept beside the hutch, which he had filled with food and water, and waited. Mistress Bunny came into the barnyard cautiously and peered round. Seeing nothing to frighten her, she turned and gave the signal to her children to come in.

Then their noses led them to the hutch, where they ate till their hunger was appeased, after which they lapped some of the fresh, clear water. "Oh, mamma," cried one happy little son, "let's stay here and live in this lovely little house! We'll have all we want to eat and such a beautiful shelter."

"Yes, let us stay," urged a second child. "And just see those awful big birds running about on the ground! Aren't they queer?" And little Bun pointed a paw at the chickens that strutted and scratched about the barnyard.

"Well, we'll all take a nap now before starting back to the woods," said Mistress Bunny, whose two long trips that day had almost exhausted her. "But I doubt the wisdom of staying here. We may come over here every few days to get food, but the place seems too full of strange beings to be safe for us rabbits."

Then they all crept away back into the farthest corner of the hutch, burying their noses in each other's fur, and fell asleep. And, owing to their hearty meal and fatigue from the long journey, they all slept very soundly—a thing unusual with rabbits, for, like cats, the softest sigh of the wind, the gentlest rustle of the grass or the most cautious footfall will rouse them instantly. But, as I said, their hearty meal, following their extreme fatigue, caused them to lose themselves in a deep slumber—so deep, indeed, that they knew nothing of a transaction taking place that made them prisoners.

After they had fallen into this profound sleep the boy cautiously crept away toward the house, got a small window screen and brought it to the hutch. Creeping stealthily up to the hutch he put the wire frame over the hutch door, placing a large rock against it, so that the little animals inside could not knock it over and escape. Then, after making sure of his prisoners, the boy sat down beside the hutch and waited till the rabbits should awake.

After about half an hour's sleep old Mistress Bunny roused herself, and by so doing awoke the four little bunnies. They all got up at once, and old Mistress Bunny ran to the door. Then she stopped, dropped back in terror and pointed one paw towards the screen barrier which made them prisoners.

"Oh, my little ones! Oh, my darlings! What have I led you into?" cried the good mother, thinking not of herself, but of her little Cottontails. The little bunnies set up a wail, crowding against the door. As they did so the boy quickly slipped his hand behind the screen and grabbed one of them. This frightened the others so much that they frantically withdrew to the farthest corner of the hutch, their hearts beating like bell-clappers in their breasts.

And the poor little fellow, thus held a victim in human hands, was more frightened than the others. His eyes fairly started from his head, and he trembled violently.

"Oh, you pretty one, don't be afraid," soothingly coaxed the boy as he gently stroked the terrified little animal and pressed his cheek against it lovingly. "I wouldn't hurt a hair of your silken coat, so I wouldn't." Then, after he coaxed and caressed it some more he tied a long string about one of its front paws and fastened the other end to the edge of the screen frame, after which he tenderly replaced it within the hutch again. "Now, my little friends—for such you will be soon—I'm going to get some more food for you."

Then the boy went running to the house.

"Well, well, well!" sighed old Mistress Bunny. "How strangely that animal behaved. I felt sure our last days had come; but to my surprise he only petted Whitehair and put him back here alive and unhurt. What can be his intention, I wonder?"

"Well, his paws stroked me gently," said Whitehair. "And, really, I don't think I would mind being held in his clutch again. He seemed quite fond of me."

Just then the boy came running back to the hutch, bringing with him a lot of food. This he thrust into the hutch. Then taking hold of the string that confined Whitehair he drew that little fellow toward him. And, strange to say, Whitehair did not tremble much this time, but nested down in the boy's warm hands, as if saying: "I trust you and like you, big, two-legged animal."

And so a week went by, during which time the boy proved to Mistress Bunny that he was a friend and protector to her and her little ones, and he had also built a big screened inclosure, into which he turned them, so that they might run and play.

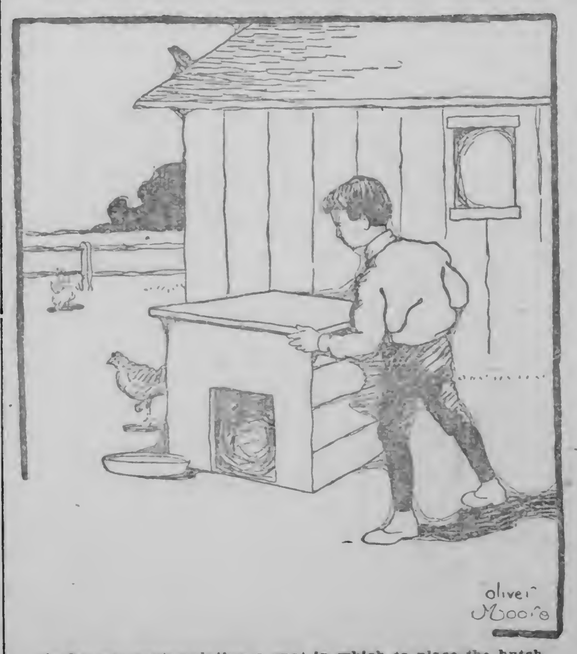
"Well, my dears," smiled Mistress Bunny one night as she and her children were going to bed in some soft, clean hay; "I guess we are fixed for life—and well fixed, too."

"Ah, mamma, dear, there'll be no more cold and hunger for us now," said one of the daughters. "Every day there is an abundance of food and fresh water put right at our noses. That big, two-legged animal is a strange creature, indeed, to take such a fancy to us."

"And I have the same fancy for him," declared Whitehair. "He chose me as his particular chum on the first day of our temporary imprisonment, and I mean to hold the place as long as I live."

"And now that this kind creature is allowing us to run about the big green yard we must be careful to never nibble a fruit tree, nor damage the garden that is near," continued Mistress Bunny. "We must be grateful to our good friend who held our lives in his hand, and who spared us to make us supremely happy."

Then all said good night and fell asleep.



As he was contemplating a spot in which to place the hutch.

Don'ts to be Observed.

Don't neglect the care of your teeth. Health and appearance depend upon a wholesome mouth.

Don't wear dirty fingernails, for nothing about the person is more noticeable than the hands.

Don't forget the care of the hair and scalp. Use the brush and comb several times a day, and cleanse the scalp at least once in every two weeks.

Don't put on your clothes without first brushing them thoroughly.

Don't substitute a pin for a button. Learn to sew and see that buttons, hooks and eyes are never missing from your garments.

Don't wear sloven shoes. Brushes and blacking are too cheap to allow of such untidiness.

Don't wear soiled collars and neckties. Better to knot a clean handkerchief about the throat than to appear with such unsightly accessions to your toilet.

Don't neglect the weekly hot water bath, followed by a "salt rub," to keep the body clean and healthy.

Don't neglect to observe all the "Don'ts" above set down.

Conundrums

What man can spend many days each week on a bust and yet never taste liquor?
The sculptor.

Why are hospitals like guardians?
They both have wards.

When is a crab like a married couple keeping house?
When devilled by the cook.

Why is a baby like a worm?
They both creep.

What fruit tree is similar to the almanac?
The date tree. Both bear dates.

The Fate of a Mocking Bird.

Way up in a tree-top
A mocking bird swung,
Singing his song full of glee,
And straight from his heart
Came that beautiful song
As it wafted to you
And to me

All day he was happy
In sunshine so bright;
For near sat his mate in a nest,
And he fed her by day
And watched her by night

For a husband's sweet love
Filled his breast.

But one day came a boy
With an air-gun—ah, me!
(A boy with a heart made of stone,)
And he slyly took aim
At that nest in the tree,
Then the poor mocking bird
Was alone!

On the ground far below
His little wife lay,
Ne'er more to open her eyes,
Ne'er more would she hear
Her mate's round-de-lay,
While the joy of his song
Reached the skies.

And that poor mocking bird
Drooped his head with a sigh,
And gloom filled that beautiful day—
The love-light of his life,
The mate from her nest,
Had been ruthlessly
Taken away.

And the boy, with the gun,
Trudged on o'er the hill,
Without thought of th' lives he has crushed,
Seeking further for victims
To show his gun-skill,
Caring naught for th' voices
He hushed.

BURGLARS ROB JOS. LEITER OF SECURITIES VALUED AT $25,000

Break in the Office Door With a Sledge Hammer.

Pick Over Bonds and Take Those That Are Negotiable.

Lawyers' Offices Next Door Also Robbed of About $5,000.

Chicago, May 7.—The office of Joseph Leiter and of the estate of the late Levi Z. Leiter, father of Joseph Leiter, was robbed last night, and bonds and securities valued at from $10,000 to $25,000 were stolen. The burglars gained entrance to the office by breaking in the door with a sledge hammer, using rubber mats to deaden the force of the blows. The robbery, which is supposed to have been committed Saturday night, was not discovered until the clerks entered the office today. A hasty examination of the contents of the vault caused the assertion by the clerks that securities valued at from $100,000 to $150,000 had been taken. When Hugh Crabbe, the manager of the estate of Levi Z. Leiter, arrived at the office he at once declared that the amount of the robbery would not amount to more than $10,000 or $25,000, and produced a package of bonds valued at $125,000, which the clerks thought had been stolen. The offices of Robert E. and Frank Crowe, attorneys, adjoining that of the Leiter estate, were also entered, and securities valued at about $5,000 were taken. The door to this office was broken open in the same manner as that of the Leiter estate, and in both cases the vault doors were opened with chisels.

The robbers evidently conducted their work in the most deliberate manner, as they had pulled down the curtains, turned on the lights and scrutinized the bonds in order to determine which were negotiable, and which were not. All of the securities taken were negotiable.

Joseph Leiter, who is stopping at Lake Geneva, Wis., was informed of the robbery by telephone, and said that he did not believe that the robbers secured any negotiable paper.

"My best knowledge is," said Mr. Leiter, that the vault contained nothing but leases, contracts and similar papers. I do not believe that anything of value was taken."

PROGRAM FOR PIKE CENTENNIAL

Celebration Will be Greatest of the Kind Ever Held.

Colorado Springs, Colo., May 7.—An outline of the program to be observed in Colorado Springs the last week in next September indicates that the centenary celebration planned will be the greatest of the kind ever held in the country. The one hundredth anniversary of the discovery of Pike's Peak by Zebulon Montgomery Pike is the occasion, and the military and civic features give ample range for novel effects. The executive committee have taker every advantage of the unique conditions to arrange a spectacle that will appeal to all.

In addition to the military displays, parades, war dances, cowboy sports, etc., there will be polo, golf and automobile tournaments. The program has been arranged to present an allegorical picture of the state from the advent of Gen. Pike to the present day. It will be of peculiar interest to the people of the East, many of whom yet entertain the idea that Colorado is the home of only the buffalo and savage Indian tribes. The celebration will serve to demonstrate to the entire country that Colorado, although one of the youngest states, is one of the greatest in the Union.

A brief synopsis of the program is as follows:

Sunday, Sept. 23: Appropriate services in all churches in the state commemorative of the highly moral and religious life of Pike.

Monday, Sept. 24: Military day—Parade of United States troops, G. A. R. veterans, Spanish-American war veterans, National Guard, cadets and patriotic societies, polo tournament in afternoon and military reception in evening by Governor Jesse F. McDonald.

Tuesday, Sept. 25: Pioneer day—Exercises by early settlers under auspices of Pioner societies of state. Golf tournament in afternoon and reception to pioneers in evening.

Wednesday, Sept. 26: Historical day—Civic and Industrial parade illustrating progress of state. Uncovering of great tablet on summit of Pike's Peak under auspices of Colorado College. National historians to participate. Polo and golf tournaments in the afternoon; receptions in evening.

Thursday, Sept. 27: Pike day—Unveiling of huge granite block in Antlers park. Rendition of Centennial Ode by chorus of 1,000 voices. Daughters of Revolution and federated clubs of state to participate. Military review in afternoon and reception to government officials, diplomats, attaches, etc., in evening.

Friday, Sept. 28: Colorado day—Parade of military, veterans, Indians, cowboys, fraternal societies, patriotic, etc. Automobile endurance run from Denver to Colorado Springs. Evening reception to prominent citizens of state.

Saturday, Sept. 29: Centennial day—Military demonstrations, automobile maneuvers, reunion Sons of Colorado and other patriotic societies. Grand illumination of Pike's Peak and fireworks in city parks in evening.

PRESENTS CREDENTIALS.

Belgrade, May 7.—The new American minister, John Riddle, today presented his credentials to King Peter.

BRITISH DEMANDS

To be Considered by Turks in Extraordinary Council.

Attempt to Reopen the Discussion Meets With Refusal.

Constantinople, May 7.—An extraordinary meeting of the council of ministers has been summoned for today to consider the British note demanding the evacuation of Tabas within ten days and Turkish consent to a joint demonstration of the frontier of the Sinaitic peninsula.

An attempt made yesterday by the sultan through the intermediary of a palace official to reopen the discussion met with an intimation from Sir Nicholas R. O'Connor, the British ambassador to Turkey that any communications on the subject must come through the Turkish foreign minister.

London, May 7.—Walter Runcyman, parliamentary secretary to the local government board, announced in behalf of the government in the house of commons that the British government had been informed by the government of Germany that there is no foundation for the statement that the action of Turkey respecting the Egyptian frontier has been encouraged by the German government.

ADVERSE REPORT ON RESOLUTION

Looking to a National Guaranty of Credit for Frisco.

Washington, May 7.—The senate committee on finance today authorized an adverse report on Senator Newland's resolution looking to a national guaranty of credit to San Francisco. The report of the committee said it was determined unanimously that the relief plans "are without the legitimate province of congressional action, and therefore that the appointment of a joint committee to consider their advisibility or practicability is inexpedient.

"It does not seem to your committee advisable at this time to appoint a committee to consider other plans for national aid.

"They therefore report the resolution adversely and recommend that it be indefinitely postponed."

HIS WEIGHT DROPPED.

Four Hundred Pounder Shrinks Before the Customs Officers.

New York, May 7.—When Louis Martin of Philadelphia came down the gang plank of the French liner Lorraine Saturday, he looked as though he weighed at least 400 pounds. After the customs officers got through with him he looked as though he weighed 120.

Investigation showed that Martin had wound around his body 1,000 feet of celluloid photographic film and had sewed about his arms, waist and legs twenty-eight dozen glass magic lantern slides. After all the articles were removed from his person, Martin shrank visibly, both mentally and physically.

According to the customs officers, he confessed that he was trying to get the goods into the country without paying duty thereon, because, as he is alleged to have said, he is a poor man and wished to start up a store in Philadelphia with these goods as a basis of stock. The goods were seized. They are valued at about $300.

TRIES TO KILL SELF ON PASSENGER TRAIN.

St. Cloud, Minn., May 7.—On his way from Bemidji to Texas, William Miles of Bemidji Saturday afternoon attempted to commit suicide on a Northern Pacific passenger train, between Little Falls and this city. No cause is known for the deed.

Laudanum was taken by Miles. A brakeman found him prostrate and finding the empty bottle of the poison near the man took prompt steps to restore him. This timely aid probably saved Miles' life.

He is a brother of C. H. Miles, keeper of the principal saloon in Bemidji and the man who won notoriety through his possession of the slot machine privilege at the St. Louis world's fair. Miles has a family. He had been employed in his brother's saloon.

SNOW FALLS IN MANY PLACES IN MICHIGAN.

Detroit, May 7.—Light flurries of snow have fallen in the past twenty-four hours in a number of places in Michigan, but no damage has been done to the fruit trees or crops. There were two light flurries in Detroit today and a light snow fell for half an hour in Grand Rapids, while Ludington also reported a slight fall. Houghton, in the upper peninsula, where there was a decided fall yesterday in the eastern portion, reported today a little snow.

KILLED BY A BURGLAR

Prominent Staten Island Man Shot in Duel With Robber.

Thief Returned Fire of Business Man With Deadly Effect.

New York, May 7.—Charles L. Spier, a prominent business man of Staten Island and said to be a confidential agent of H. H. Rogers, vice president of the Standard Oil company, was shot and instantly killed in a duel with a burglar in his home in Tompkins avenue, New Brighton, Staten island, early today. Mr. Spier was one of the officers of the Richmond Light & Power company and was connected with the Staten Island Rapid Transit company and occupied a fine house in one of the best residential districts on Staten island. He and his wife were prominent in social affairs of the island. After his house was robbed by burglars several months ago he prepared to defend it against them when they paid him another visit. This morning Mr. and Mrs. Spier were awakened by the noise of a burglar, who was gathering up the silverware in the dining room on the floor below. Arming himself with his revolver, Mr. Spier ran down stairs and shot at the intruder. His first shot missed the man, who drew his own weapon and fired at Mr. Spier until the weapon was empty.

After the first shot Spier's revolver missed fire, but two of the burglar's shots penetrated his heart and Mr. Spier's body was found by his wife on the floor of the dining room. The burglar escaped leaving behind the booty he had collected.

SURVEYING PARTY

Starts From Ely on a Long Trip Into Lake County.

Ely, Minn., May 7.—(Special to The Herald.)—A government surveying party, ten in number, left Ely yesterday afternoon in charge of H. T. Armstrong, to make a survey of town 61, ranges 6, 7, 8, 9 and 10, and town 62, ranges 6 and 7, Lake county. It will take about five months to complete the survey.

Captain James Bale, with a crew of seven men, employed by the Oliver Mining company, left this morning to look over and estimate pine timber, located about eighteen miles northwest of Ely. They will be gone about ten days.

The Duluth & Iron Range railroad laid off another yard crew today, numbering five men.

IT WAS ANOTHER RUSSIAN GOVERNOR WHO WAS SHOT

St. Petersburg, May 7.—The report of the assassination of the governor of Elizabethpol, in revenge for his savage repressions in the Caucasus, which reached here last night, was incorrect. It was the governor general of Ekaterinoslav, South Russia, who was assassinated yesterday evening by six unknown persons, who fired volleys from revolvers at him and then escaped.

GOVERNOR HAS A NARROW ESCAPE

VICE ADMIRAL DOUBASSOFF.

IN HANDS OF A MOB

Rioters Are in Control of Guadeloupe, French Indies.

United States Battleship Has Been Ordered to Scene.

Washington, May 7.—Guadaloupe, French Indies, is under mob rule according to a dispatch received at the state department today from G. Jarvis Bowens, the American consul at that point. His dispatch says the mob is increasing and the authorities are unable to restrain it. Election troubles are the cause of the disturbance. For several weeks there has been rioting which is supposed to have come to a head yesterday which was election day. While there are a few Americans at the place, large quantities of American goods are stored there.

At the request of the state department the navy department has ordered Commander William H. H. Southerland, the senior officer in command of the fleet at San Domingo, to send a warship at once to Guadaloupe to protect American interests from the rioters. The sailing from San Domingo to Guadaloupe is not more than twenty-four hours.

CASTRO AT DOVER.

London, May 7.—A dispatch to a news agency from Dover says that Gen. Castro, former president of Venezuela, arrived there this afternoon from Calais, France.

QUARTER OF A MILLION

Persons Are Being Daily Supplied With Rations at Frisco.

Gen. Greely Reports That Conditions Are Gradually Improving.

Washington, May 7.—The military secretary received the following dispatch today from Gen. Greely, dated San Francisco yesterday:

"Conditions are steadily improving. Arrival of thirty-six officers permits assignments to numerous camps of commanding officers to insure decency, order and sanitation. Rough estimates place number of persons thus living at fifty thousand. Naturally such large bodies became threatening factors as regards the future health of city. When practicable further report will be made on the number of campers, which is apparently increasing. Registration and census of their number is progressing. Presumably mouths fed today will approximate quarter of million. Am proceeding with methods calculated to largely reduce this number through institution of facilities for cheap meals and gradual restrictions on issue to male adults. Rations are plentiful as far as flour and potatoes go, but extremely limited as to other articles."

Another dispatch received from Gen. Greely stated that on last Saturday the number of rations isued was 230,000.

WAS A REVOLUTIONIST.

Doubossoff's Assailant Was Disguised as a Naval Officer.

Moscow, May 7.—It turns out that the man who attempted yesterday to assassinate Governor General Doubossoff, was a revolutionist disguised as a naval officer which enabled him to approach the palace without creating suspicion. He carried the bomb in a candy box and had a false passport, in which his name was given as Metz, which proved his connection with the three revolutionists who were killed by the explosion of a bomb in their room on Saturday last, that being the name under which the apartment occupied by the revolutionists was rented.

ELIJAH'S BOAST TO RESTORE LIFE FAILS.

Lisbon Falls, Maine, May 7.—"If I don't bring that child to life I am a false prophet," is a remark made by the Rev. Frank W. Sandford, "Elijah" of Shiloh, when he claimed that he could raise a little child from the dead.

It has just been divulged that about a year ago a child of Ed. Brown died at Shiloh. For sixty days and nights the body lay in the turret at Shiloh, and Sandford, in the presence of his disciples, declared that he would raise it from the dead. Most of the people were kept in ignorance of Sandford's attempt of the miracle and supposed the body had been buried.

The body had been kept until, on account of decomposition, it had to be buried.

The people of Shiloh are again living on short rations, while Sandford himself, is cruising along the Atlantic coast in his yacht.

ELIZA CROSSING THE ICE.

PRESIDENT KEEFE SAYS THE DOCKMEN HAVE NOT COMMENCED TO FIGHT

SHOCKING TRAGEDY

Wealthy N. Y. Woman Kills Her Favorite Daughter.

Shoots Her While Asleep and Then Kills Herself.

New York, May 7.—Mrs. Mary Waters entered the room of her home in West Seventh-Sixth street, where her two daughters, Agatha and Ruth, lay sleeping early today, and shot and killed Agatha, the eldest and her favorite, and, without attempting to harm Ruth, then killed herself. Temporary insanity due to worry over the daughter's ill health is assigned as the reason. Mrs. Waters was the wife of John R. Waters, a well-to-do insurance broker, and was 52 years old. Agatha was 26 and Ruth is 17.

The mother, who has been melancholy for a long period, had grieved over the thought that Agatha, who was her almost constant companion, expected to sail for Europe next Saturday in the hope of recovering her health. During Sunday the mother had displayed no symptoms of mental disturbance, but had spent a portion of the day in planning the trip which Agatha was to have in Europe.

About 2 o'clock this morning, Mrs. Waters entered the room occupied by the two girls and placing the revolver at the temple of her daughter, fired, killing her instantly. She then left the room. As she descended the stairs she sent a bullet into her own head. She died almost instantly, her body falling at the feet of her husband who had been awakened at the first shot and was hurrying forward to ascertain the cause for it.

THE GOVERNMENT GAINS INCREASE

Will Have a Handsome Majority in New Chamber of Deputies.

Paris, May 7.—The election results today show increasing government gains. The ministry of the interior gives the gains at 35 and the losses at 11 or a net gain of 24 seats. The effect of this is to give the "Bloc" or groups supporting the government in the chamber of deputies, 243 votes, against a total of 146 for the opposition groups. The governmental left, therefore, appears to be assured of a majority of about 100. There remain over 150 districts in which second ballots will be necessary.

Among the prominent men elected are Former Foreign Minister Delcasse, Former Premier Ribot, War Minister Etienne, Minister of Marine Thomson, Former Minister of the Interior Dubief, Count Boni De Castelane, the Marquis de Dion, Minister of Public Works Barthou, Minister of Agriculture Ruaol, Jean Leon Jaures, the Socialist leader; Beaudry D'Asson, Premier Sarrien and Paul Deschanel, former president of the chamber of deputies.

Included among the new deputies are M. Leroy Beaulieu, the political economist, and Maurice Barres, the academician, The defeated candidates include M. Bos, chairman of the budget committee, Count Stansilaus De Castellane, brother of Count Boni de Castellane and Former Premier Flourens.

The picturesque characters, Colonel Marchand and M. De Roulede, require second ballots in their districts.

YOUNG CARY EVIDENTLY COMMITTED SUICIDE.

London, May 7.—The death of Howard Cary of New York, who was found May 3, shot, in his bed, at a Kensington boarding house, is being investigated by the coroner. Apparently it is a case of suicide. Cary was staying at a boarding house with his cousin, Lord Fairbury. The latter testified at the opening of the inquest that he and Cary dined and went to the theater together May 3. The deceased appeared to be quite cheerful.

Howard Cary was a son of Mrs. Clarence Cary of New York. He was 25 years of age, a graduate of Harvard university. No reason for his death can be furnished by his relatives.

TRYING TO UNRAVEL THE DISAPPEARANCE OF HOUCK.

St. Paul, May 7.—(Special to The Herald.)—The police of St. Paul and Minneapolis are trying to unravel the mystery of William Houck of Madison, S. D. He was last seen in Minneapolis April 1. He was known to have $200 with him at that time. Houck, on that date, went to the St. James hotel and secured a room. He went out after supper and was seen later at the Metropolitan theater. Since then no trace of him has been found.

No Intention of Giving Up Fight for the Mates.

Thousands Are Ready to Come Out at the Word.

Strike of Vessel Crews, However, Seems Near an End.

Detroit, May 7.—(Special to The Herald.)—President D. J. Keefe of the Longshoremen's union did not leave for Cleveland last night as it was understood he had done and he said today:

"There is absolutely no truth in reports from Cleveland that the dockmen are about to give up the fight for the mates. We will hang on to the mates and what is more we have not begun to fight yet. I want to say that the dockmen at all points on the upper lakes, except Duluth and Superior, are union men and are ready to quit work at the drop of the hat. So far we have refrained from calling them out because we do not want any more of the men idle than is absolutely necessary."

President J. J. Joyce of the Scoopers' union, is in the city conferring with President Keefe and he today emphatically denied that the scoopers are weakening.

Chicago, May 7.—(Special to The Herald.)—The United States Steel Corporation is sending its fleet into South Chicago, where, so far, the boats have been unloaded without serious delay. Among the vessels which arrived at the Calumet last night and today are the Linn, Roebling, Gary, Poe, Marsala, Queen City and Manola. The small steamer Manola is being used as a tug to get the boats into the slips. At the Iroquois docks, the Ravenscraig is being unloaded, but her firemen and oilers have been pulled off. The Standard Oil barge No. 86, was towed to Whiting by the steamer George Stone, the trust tugs refusing to handle her. It is said there is a full force of firemen inside the plant of the Illinois Steel Company to replace the strikers on all boats arriving and that there will be no delay on that score.

In marine circles the sentiment was prevalent today that the strike, so far as it concerns crews of vessels, was nearly at an end.

The question of hours of labor and wages of longshoremen, which have been in the background, will now come forward.

ORDERED OUT OF CITY HALL

Northeast Wing of Chicago's Municipal Home is Condemned.

Chicago, May 7.—Building Commissioner Bartzen today ordered the abandonment of the northeast wing of the city hall. He said that it is in absolute danger and may fall at any time. Several months ago, the county building, which adjoined the city hall on the east, was torn down to permit of the erection of a new building. Since it was deprived of this support, the city hall, which was really the west half of the same building, has been sinking, the walls have been cracking and joists have been slipping. The removals caused great inconvenience at the city hall, as it was overcrowded, and in the present condition of the municipal finances there is no money with which to ret other offices.

BLACKSMITH MAY BE IN GOVERNOR'S RACE.

Burlington, Vt., May 7.—James E. Burke, the blacksmith mayor of this city, will undoubtedly be the Democratic candidate for governor of Vermont this year. While working at his forge Saturday, he said:

"I have had letters from all parts of the state. Some prominent men have been to see me, and strong persuasion has been brought to bear to induce me to become a candidate for governor. I have not the time to give to the canvass and campaign, but I feel strongly on this matter and strongly believe the Democratic party should take full advantage of its opportunities, and it seems to me that the party is in a position to make great gains this year."

The mayor is now serving his fourth term and his successive elections have been a remarkable evidence of his popularity. There is no doubt in the minds of his friends that he would poll a large vote among labor men if he should be a candidate, for he is himself a union man and works daily at his forge.

UNION CIGARMAKERS OF BOSTON GO ON A STRIKE.

Boston, May 7.—A strike of union cigarmakers of this city was started here today. It is estimated that about 1,200 men are out in an effort to force an increase in wages. About seven of the largest cigar factories were affected. Most of the small places have agreed to the new union schedule, which called for an increase of from 50 cents to $2 a thousand in various grades of cigars.

WEATHER FORECAST—Cloudy weather; easterly winds, shifting to northwesterly Tuesday. Warmer tonight.

"My dear Raffles," said Sherlock Holmes, "if you must steal clothes, steal the ready-made. There is more actual value in them than in the custom tailor's product. The value in the latter is problematical and the price is invariably inflated out of all proportion to the cost. Patronize the custom-tailor and pay for his name. Patronize the ready-made and pay for the clothes."

NEW PARK ON LAKE SHORE

City May Acquire Railroad Property at Twelfth Avenue East.

Mayor Cullum Calls Meeting of Property Owners Interested.

Another valuable piece of park property will be acquired by the city in the near future, if plans which are now under consideration by Mayor Cullum and the board of park commissioners, are carried out.

For several months the mayor has been in communication with the officers of the Northern Pacific railroad, with the purpose of securing for the city, the vacant land owned by the railroad company at Twelfth avenue east, below the tracks of the Duluth & Iron Range road.

The tract of land comprises about ten acres, and lies on the lake shore, in the center of the residence portion of the East end. It is but a short walk from the car line and would make a very convenient and popular place for a park.

It has long been urged that the city should secure some land along the lake shore on London road for park purposes, before it is all improved, and the negotiations were opened by the mayor with this object in view.

He has secured a proposition from the company, and a meeting of those interested in the plan will be held this evening in the mayor's office. The members of the park board, the mayor, and several of the other city officers will be present, and an invitation is extended to all those property owners in the East end, who are interested in the plan, to attend and present their views.

The meeting will be held promptly at 7:30 o'clock in the mayor's office in the city hall.

DELINQUENT IS FINED $25

Jacob Hill's Little Spree Proves a Costly One.

Jacob Hill, summoned to give testimony before the grand jury in the case of the state against Edward Hill, who was accused of seriously stabbing August Koho in a Lake avenue saloon, was taken before Judge Dibell this morning on a warrant charging contempt of court. He failed to report to the grand jury. The accused was indicted and held for trial in spite of the fact that Hill's testimony was very much desired.

When questioned by Judge Dibell why he did not obey the summons, Jacob Hill said he came to Duluth Tuesday, May 1, but started in drinking as he did not feel well and wound up with getting so drunk that he was unable to appear before the grand jury, May 2. Hill said he had been in this country fifteen years, but does not yet understand English very well.

Judge Dibell found him to be in contempt and fined him $25, with the alternative of sojourning in jail until the fine is paid, not to exceed fifteen days. Hill did not have the money and, unless some of his friends come to his relief, his address will be the county bastile for the next two weeks.

SPEAKER CANNON IS 70 YEARS OLD.

Washington, May 7.—Speaker Cannon is 70 years old today. The house knew that this was the speaker's birthday, for when "Uncle Joe" appeared in the doorway nearest the speaker's desk and when he ascended the rostrum, long continued applause followed his steps.

The basket social which was to have been given May 1 in Sloan's hall, was postponed until Tuesday, May 8.

STAY WITH STEAMER

Union Crew of Tomlinson Steamer Sylvania Fails to Quit.

Feeling That Strike Will Not Last—Coulby Is Here.

The Tomlinson steamer Sylvania got away yesterday with a cargo of ore and her union crew, none of them attempting to quit. In fact, from the feeling here and the evident feeling at lower ports, as shown in the dispatches, it is beginning to be believed that the strike will be of only short duration now, as the men are very much dissatisfied with the condition of things. The Sylvania is the third Tomlinson boat to begin a new round trip since the strike began.

The conditions are bad here, and in fact all over the lakes. It will take some time after the strike has been declared off to get the fleets properly scattered again and the delay and loss will be great, it is said.

STEAMER COULBY HERE.

New Vessel Reaches Duluth on Her Maiden Trip.

The new steamer Harry Coulby, which was launched at the Wyandotte yards on March 24, arrived in port this morning at 9:30 on her maiden trip. The Coulby belongs to the Pittsburg Steamship company and is named for the manager and president of the company.

She is a duplicate of the four big steamers of last year, the Gary, Corey, Frick and Perkins. She is 569 feet over all, 549 feet keel, 56 feet beam and 31 feet deep. She has 34 hatches, spaced 12-foot centers. Her engines are triple expansion, with 24, 39 and 65-inch diameters by 42-inch stroke. She is equipped with two Scotch boilers, 15 feet, 4 inches in diameter and 11½ feet long. On the usual draught of water she will be able to carry nearly 11,000 tons of ore.

The master of the Coulby is Capt. Ralph J. Lyons of Lorain, O., and her engineer is E. Hull of Buffalo.

The Coulby went to the Missabe dock to load ore.

LAUNCHING MAY 19.

New Steamer Earling Will Take Initial Bath Then.

It is expected that the steamer E. J. Earling, which is now building at the Superior yards, will be launched a week from next Saturday. She will be so far completed on the stocks that she will be ready to sail a few days after her launching.

One drydock at the Superior yards is empty and nothing appears available to put into it. This is the first time the dock has been empty since the storm of Nov. 28 last year. If the work on the steamer Matauta progresses rapidly enough, she may be brought to the yard in a few days for rebuilding. Capt. Reid's tugs are at work on her now, pumping her out.

RAILROAD GETS SPECIALS.

Men Are Employed to Protect Ore Docks During Strike.

Twenty special policemen were sworn in this morning and detailed to the Duluth, Missabe & Northern ore docks at Oneota.

The special policemen are vested with full police power on the property of the railroad, but they have no authority on other property.

No trouble is anticipated at the ore docks, it is said, but the special officers have been sworn in as a precautionary measure, and to guard against any destruction of the valuable property of the railroad company, during the strike. They are paid by the company.

WHAT MARINE STRIKE IS ABOUT

Representative of Vessel Owners Makes Statement of Their Position.

Even though the position of the mates and longshoremen has been given out in their strike and attempted tie-up of lake commerce, there seem to be a great many people in Duluth who do not understand the situation and wish to know just what the strike is all about. Recognition of the pilots' union by the Lake Carriers' association is to date the sole principle involved. It is not believed that the scale of wages or the number of hours of work would have entered into it at all as these seemed satisfactory to both sides, but the conference between the Lake Carriers and President Keefe of the longshoremen did not get that far. At once when the conference started the recognition of the mates was brought up and the Lake Carriers absolutely refusing to consider it, the conference abruptly came to an end. A good many of the mates, it is claimed, have affiliated with the longshoremen and that is why the latter organization has taken up cudgels for them. It is purely a matter of principle that is at stake.

C. C. McCain of Buffalo, commissioner of the association of Lake Lines which is composed of all the package freight lines operating on the Great Lakes, has issued the following statement giving the vessel owners' side of the fight and telling why they will not recognize the mates.

"The Lake Carriers' association has a membership of substantially all the vessel interests on the Great Lakes, including the package freight carrying lines. A committee of the association has for several seasons past arranged for the wages and conditions of the various subordinate classes of vessel labor and has been prepared to consider and arrange for the conditions to apply for the season of 1906.

"At the annual meeting of the Lake Carriers' association held in January last, attention was given to the understood attitude of the mates and the following resolution was adopted:

"'Resolved that as the mates are executive officers and the sources to which we look for masters and are educating to be masters of our ships, our masters are instructed not to employ any mate who is a member of or affiliated with any labor union.'

"Numerous additional reasons could be stated why a mates' union, as such and affiliated with labor organizations, would be inimical to the carriers' rights. It would mean a relinquishment by owners of the control and direction of the principal vessel officers, the obligation to accept the assignment to vessels of officers of questionable competency, the dominating influence over such officers by unions composed by subordinate employes, the consequent impairment of discipline and interference at critical and important periods with the companies' management, and public duty as a common carrier.

"The orderly and expeditious conduct of the freight traffic on the lakes, the navigation of vessels, the proper protection of shippers' property and the fulfillment of the lake carrying companies' obligations to the shipping public and connecting transportation lines, renders it absolutely necessary that owners shall have the unrestricted right to employ such officers aboard vessels as will insure this necessary and proper protection and compliance with those accepted business obligations."

Ten Men Break Contracts.

Milwaukee, May 7.—Ten men were called from the Clarion and Wissahickon Anchor line boats by union officials yesterday. Three firemen and two oilers left each vessel. While the men were under contract to remain on the boat until the completion of the trip at Buffalo, the union officials claim that the mates employed on the boats were non-union men, and for this reason the union men were justified in leaving the steamers. It is claimed that the mates will join the union Monday and the boats will be able to make the return trip to Buffalo, where the men will then leave the vessels.

Activity at Cleveland.

Cleveland, May 7.—There was some activity on the local docks yesterday, non-union men being employed on the outer docks unloading several boats. The Northwind, which came in from Buffalo, found forty men waiting and, under the supervision of four men brought from Buffalo, one hundred tons of freight were discharged and the steamer left last night for Duluth, carrying 300 tons.

The longshoremen declined to state whether any meetings had been held here to consider the strike situation. Union leaders said they knew nothing of any friction between longshoremen and mates, as reported. Many union longshoremen witnessed the unloading of the boats, but offered no trouble.

Tug Ordered Back to Work.

Ashland, May 7.—The tug Crosby, owned by the Great Lakes company, tied up last Wednesday night on telegraphic orders from President Burke of the Firemen's union at Sault Ste Marie, unexpectedly received orders Saturday night to resume work. This order came in a telegram direct from President D. J. Keefe of the Longshoremen's union, who stated that there is no trouble at Ashland and that the tug should resume work. The striking firemen immediately boarded the tug and it resumed towing. The tugmen are at a loss to know why the strike order from the firemen's union should be contradicted by President Keefe, but are very glad to get back to work again.

SKIN ERUPTIONS FOR 35 YEARS

Suffered Severely With Eczema All Over Body—Examined 15 Times by Government Board Who Said There Was No Cure—An Old Soldier Completely Cured.

A THOUSAND THANKS TO CUTICURA REMEDIES

"For over thirty-five years I was a severe sufferer from eczema. The eruption was not confined to any one place. It was all over my body, limbs, and even on my head. I am sixty years old and an old soldier, and have been examined by the Government Board over fifteen times, and they said there was no cure for me. I have taken all kinds of medicine and have spent large sums of money for doctors, without avail. A short time ago I decided to try the Cuticura Remedies, and after using two cakes of Cuticura Soap, two boxes of Cuticura Ointment, and two bottles of Cuticura Resolvent, two treatments in all, I am now well and completely cured. A thousand thanks to Cuticura. I cannot speak too highly of the Cuticura Remedies. John T. Roach, Richmondale, Ross Co., Ohio, July 17, 1905."

SUMMER HOME IS DESTROYED

Fire Consumes Cottage of H. C. Marshall on Park Point.

The beautiful summer cottage owned by H. C. Marshall, at Twenty-ninth street, Park Point, was burned to the ground about noon today.

The house had been rented to F. E. Lindahl for the summer and Mrs. Lindahl and a maid were in the house, putting it in readiness for occupation. They were planning to move in within a day or two.

Some small fires had been started in the grass beside the house, and Mrs. Lindahl and the maid went to extinguish them. When they turned to go back into the house they saw that it was ablaze.

The alarm was given and a crew of men at work on the extension of the street car line, came to the scene on the work car. A bucket brigade was quickly organized and after a hard fight they succeeded in keeping the fire from spreading to the adjoining houses, although nothing could be done to save the Marshall house, which was totally destroyed.

The fire department sent a chemical engine to the scene, but it was unable to reach the fire in time to be of any assistance.

POLES HEAR ADDRESSES

Those at Head of Lakes Hold Their Annual Celebration.

Observe Hundred and Fifteenth Anniversary of Constitution's Adoption.

Poland was eulogized in song and story at the Armory yesterday afternoon, when the Poles of Duluth and Superior celebrated the One hundred and fifteenth anniversary of the adoption of the Polish constitution.

Fifteen hundred people of Polish extraction were present at the exercises, cheering the speakers and humming to themselves the refrains of the Polish melodies which local talent sang, from the platform.

The Armory was decorated with the Polish colors and the Third Regiment band played Polish national airs.

The speakers included Mayor Cullum, Professor Siemiradzki of Chicago, editor of the Polish Zagoda, and formerly a professor in one of the leading colleges of Poland, and Father Laskeski, Father Skeputudski, and Father Babinski of the Polish churches of Duluth and Superior.

Professor Siemiradzki gave the principal address of the afternoon and he was listened to with a great deal of interest by those present. He told of the struggles the Poles have had against oppressive Russia, in his own tongue. He emphasized the significance of Poland's suffering in world's history, and concluded his talk with a thrilling tribute to the land of his adoption, these United States of America. He urged his hearers to keep in mind the land of their nativity, the fatherland, but such reflections could but be of the past, while the brighter eyes of the future should be turned toward this land of the free and the home of the brave.

Mayor Cullum delivered an address of welcome at the outset of the exercises. He was introduced to the assemblage by A. Grabarkiewicz, who acted as chairman. Mayor Cullum congratulated the Poles at the Head of the Lakes for the progress they had made toward building up their homes in a new land and declared that they were valuable additions to the population of the country and most desirable citizens.

The religious aspect of the life of the Poles, in this country, was taken up by Father Laskeski of St. Peter's church, who said many nice things about his charges and those of the other Polish parishes in Duluth and across the bay. He said the Poles were inherently religious and law-abiding.

The tone of all speakers was hopeful. Most of them looked forward to the freedom of Poland, a condition which many of their countrymen had also looked forward to with eyes dimmed by what they had seen.

Other numbers of the program were as follows:

Recitation, "Love of Fatherland," Miss Katie Galezka; song, "Welcome May the Third," chorus of sixteen male and female voices from the two churches of Duluth; song, "Our Country Beautiful," choir of St. Cecelia of the West end parish; national song, "White Eagle," choir of St. Mary's church; recitation, "Oh Polish Mother," by Miss Victoria Ressall; duet, "How Beautiful Our Cause," Miss Sophia Frankowski and Miss Agnes Rybak; recitation, "The Polish Child," Miss Martha Potulma; recitation, Miss T. Sawicka, of Superior, double quartet, "Wreath of Polish Melodies."

At the conclusion of the exercises, the band played the stirring Polish march. The assemblage had gathered at Garfield avenue and marched to the Armory, and the march back to the starting point was made after the program had been given.

FLIGHT OF BRETHREN

Duluth Eagles Hold Services in Memory of Dead Members.

Two Speakers Pay Tribute—Appropriate Solos Given.

The Eagles of Duluth held special services at their hall in the Folz building yesterday afternoon in memory of their dead. The services which were largely attended, were solemn in the extreme and the various Eagles seemed to feel the impressiveness of the occasion.

James W. Parker, the worthy president of Duluth aerie, presided. The services opened with the playing of Chopin's funeral march by Flaaten's orchestra, which was followed by the opening ceremonies and ritual by the president. Then E. A. Tessman, worthy chaplain, gave the invocation and the ceremonies according to ritual took place. Miss Florence Hyland sung "One Sweetly Solemn Thought," which was followed by the roll call by the worthy secretary. This was a beautiful ceremony. As the secretary called the names of the dead, the president struck a muffled bell and answered "Absent." As each reply was given, W. E. McEwen snuffed out one of the row of candles in front of the rostrum.

Following this came the address of John H. Norton, and Miss Ella Mason sang "Plains of Peace." Alderman W. E. McEwen gave a short address and Miss Alice Cooley then sang "The Passing of Day." After the closing ceremonies the benediction was given by Chaplain E. A. Tessman and the orchestra then played "The Lost Chord." Mr. Norton's memorial address was in part as follows:

"We have assembled today according to a beautiful custom to pay our respects to our dead and departed brothers. All human history attents the fact that man desires to be remembered after he has been laid away in the silent tomb. It is for this reason that we erect monuments and erect statues to satisfy the craving to be perpetuated in the minds and memory of men. We may raise monuments and build tombs and paint names in letters of gilt and gold that shall catch and flash back the sunlight, but it will be an idle and prompt effort unless there lies behind it a life well spent and a character worthy of emulation. The world will little note nor long remember the names of any except those who have done something for mankind.

"The highest and best effort of man does not lie in accumulating great fortunes or in financing great enterprises. The captains of industry and masters of high finance who have aimed only at building up great names at the expense of the people and the public will not deserve anything but the execration of the multitude and their names will not last a generation after they have passed away.

"The only thing worth striving for is character. Structures may crumble and fortunes may fade but a spotless character is immortal.

"We have come here to read the names of those who have gone before as, that they may be kept fresh in our memory and to drop a passing tear upon their grave. Our brothers did not hold so high a place in the nation or the state that they will be remembered for their position, but they are just as near and dear to us as if they held the most exalted positions. We may not all be able to do great deeds; it may not come to us to do great things; the pages of history may not echo with the reverberations of our names, but we can all be just and generous; we can extend the hand of charity to the needy and the unfortunate; we can speak words of comfort and good cheer to the sick and sorrowing and make the world brighter and better, and by so doing accomplish the end and aim of our existence.

"Experience has shown that the Fraternal Order of Eagles has justified its existence. It has grown in a phenomenal manner and counts its membership not by thousands but by hundreds of thousands. The fundamental principles which underlie our order are liberty, truth, justice and equality. They are its foundation stones. Its founders have kindled a fire in the hearts of humanity that will grow into a bigger and brighter blaze.

"The names of our departed brothers will be ever dear to us. When we think of them we remember that they belonged to the Fraternal Order of Eagles and that they were our brothers. Not only brothers by reason of that relation that makes the whole world kin, but in a larger and loftier sense. They were always ready and willing to aid the needy, to succor the distressed and to comfort the sorrowing. And now that they have gone from us we remember the smiling faces and the kindly words with which they greeted us, but their places are vacant and we shall see them no more, but we believe that they are with us in spirit and in truth."

The address by Alderman McEwen was concerning the order itself and told of its origin eight years ago and of its marvelous growth. He said, among other things that it fulfills a mission of life in that it does not merely bury brethren under a bed of roses when their path through life has been mostly of thorns, but that it provides care and tender attention in life as well, and a brother can rest assured that in cases of sickness neither he nor his loved ones are going to suffer. He said that the sole belief of the Eagles as an order is that God is the father and all men are brothers; and the order has human charity truly developed.

The spirit of the order, he said, taught their sleeping brothers the lesson which prepared them for that flight to the heavenly aerie which they have taken. He declared that as long as the mottoes of the order—"Liberty, truth, justice, equality"—are observed the order will never die.

EGG VOLLEY FIRED BY ILLINOIS STUDENTS.

Champaign, Ill., May 7.—While the students of the university of Illinois were celebrating the double victory over the university of Chicago athletes Saturday night, they attempted to force an entrance into Walker Opera house. Manager Hamilton and his employees reinforced by others stood the attack of the students and succeeded in keeping them out of the playhouse by severely injuring several of them. The students retaliated by throwing bricks through the windows and doing other damage.

The police succeeded in arresting a few of them and then the city building was bombarded with ripe egg fruit.

THE STORE OF QUALITY — Silberstein & Bondy Company — THE STORE OF QUALITY

CONCERNING WOMEN

The sight that threatens fastidious and esthetic loving Duluthians this year is a dimpled and enticing elbow exposed to view, then a space uncovered and more or less interesting forearm, to end in a black silk gloved hand. It gives one nervous shudders to think of such a wierd and ungraceful combination for the Venus of Milo if her arms were beautiful or the person with the most aplomb in the world is defied to wear with ease and grace a glove that stops at the wrist in conjunction with a sleeve that ends slightly above the elbow. The wise person will have the sleeve contine to slightely below that middle arm joint, for no grown woman has an elbow fit to be seen.

To return to the distress that has half of feminine Duluth in its throes. A famine of long silk gloves is here. There are but one or two pairs of white ones left. There are no black ones. Not a single one, and your wheedling tone in asking the uninterested young woman in the nice shirt waist to just look once more, meets stocial indifference. "What will I do," you wail, and she's sure she doesn't know. She has got over being genuinely distressed, for her emotions would be torn a dozen times a day if she lamented with all those who came to her in sorrow over the dreath of long black silk gloves. There are some colors, but they are being snapped up with lightening like rapidity. The matter is really a serious one. Every woman who has foresight and good management has her clothes made, and they are all made with elbow sleeves. They are so practical, you know. The place where a waist solls first and most is under the sleeves, above the wrist, and the laundry bills you are going to save excuses the part decollete effect, and then any disinterested person will say that elbow sleeves with any kind of proper encouragement of an arm that is soft and round and pink, are the most fascinating things on earth. But who can go on the street with a short sleeved waist? Long gloves are a necessity, a necessity which the town does not afford, a necessity which manufacturers all over the country lacked the ability to forsee, a necessity, the lack of which will probably make folks put long cuffs on all their waists, or go about with freckled and burned arms. It is distressing and really a great worry, but if you want to be with the great ungloved, go down and have your name added to the list of those who have sent their names to the manufacturers, and no matter how you feel, it is no fair to borrow the first pair. There is no hope held out by the retail firms. They frankly hardly expect any more long black silk gloves this summer.

BIENNIAL PROGRAM.

Plans Almost Complete for Meeting at St. Paul.

The plans for the biennial convention of the General Federation of Women's clubs, which will be held at St. Paul in June, were practically completed at a meeting held Friday at St. Paul, by the local biennial board of the general federation. Duluth women, with all the club women of the state, are interested in this meeting and the women of this city, especially as Mrs. J. L. Washburn of this city is president of the Minnesota State Federation.

Although all the details of the convention have not been definitely arranged, the program is practically completed. The opening day's program has been fully prepared and also a general outline of the convention. The morning and afternoon sessions will be devoted to the business of the federation and the evenings to the discussion of topics of national importance, at which some of the best speakers in the country will participate. One evening is to be devoted to the discussion of women in professions. Among the prominent speakers who will handle this subject are: Amelia Bingham, "The Stage;" Mary E. Wooley of Mount Holyoke, "Education;" Sarah Kendall of Seattle, "Medicine;" and Mrs. Phillp Carpenter of New York, "Law." Prof. S. H. Clark of the University of Chicago has been engaged to read "Ulysses" on Saturday evening, June 2. Mrs. T. S. Dennison, New York; Mrs. Henroth, Chicago, and Mrs. Julia Ward Howe, former vice presidents of the general federation, will be among the guests of honor.

In speaking of the election of officers for the coming year, Mrs. Russell B. Dorr, president of the local board, said that it is a foregone conclusion that Mrs. Sarah Platt Decker, the present president, will be re-elected. "We shall make no effort to secure any office," she said, as we deem it only courtesy that the hostess city should have no political aspirations." Yesterday's meeting was the last regular meeting which will be held by the local board, although special meetings may be called.

The program as prepared, and which will probably be carried out, follows:

WEDNESDAY, MAY 30.

Morning—
Hotel Ryan.
10 o'clock—Meeting of the board of directors:
House of Representatives, Old Capitol.
Afternoon—
3 o'clock—Meeting of the council.

Engagements

Mr. and Mrs. James Foster Tilson of 1416 East Superior street, have announced the engagement of their twin daughters, Miss Estelle May Tilson to William Murray Gravatt and Miss Anna Isabel to Herbert Clinton Gravatt. A double wedding will take place in June.

WHAT RETAIL MARKETS OFFER.

Calves' brains, 10 cents a set.
Calves' tongues, 15 cents a pound.
Lake Superior white fish, 15 cents a pound.
New potatoes, 5 cents a pound.
Strawberries, 15 cents a quart.

There is no doubt of the fact that strawberry short cake time has arrived. Any misguided housewife who persuades her family otherwise is that unenviable thing, master in her own house. All things tend to emphasize the fact that the time of deliciously soaked, luciously short, thrillingly combined and wonderfully blended rich biscuit dough and the best berry that Nature ever made, has come again with all former allurements. There is nothing that can quite come up to strawberry shortcake. A frown of discontent or a scowl of worry may disfigure the faces of the diners, temporarily, but let a strawberry shortcake appear and with heavenward rolling, ecstatic eyes, anything will be given the cook, even to half the kingdom of the master of the house. If it should turn out tough? There! We knew there'd be some death's head at the feast and a spoil sport. Anybody who can think of strawberry shortcake and at the same time think of one that might not be good is a dyspepsia suffering pessimist. Us for the strawberry shortcake, three times a day!

WEST DULUTH

FOUR GO TO MAJORITY

West Duluthians Pass Away—Deaths Due to Various Causes.

Miss Florence Cashin Succumbs to Long Seige of Sickness.

Within the past few days four deaths have occurred at West Duluth, and more than four families, in consequence, are thrown into grief. Probably the best known of those who have died was Miss Florence Cashin, the 20-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Machael Cashin of 605 North Fifty-seventh avenue west. She has lived in West Duluth almost all of her life and up to the time she became too sick to attend, was a student at the Duluth Normal school, her ambition being to become a teacher. She has been confined to her bed for nine weeks and the cause of her death was congestion of the lungs. Miss Cashin was a member of the Ladies' auxiliary of the Blessed Virgin.

Her funeral will occur either Wednesday or Thursday morning, the time not being fixed yet. The funeral will be held from the house, going to St. James Catholic church and from there to Calvary cemetery. She leaves, besides her parents, four sisters and five brothers, all of whom lived in West Duluth with the exception of one married sister, who lives in the city proper. They are: Mesdames Edward McDowell and Nathan Rall. Misses Katherine Cashin and Edith Cashin, and John, P. H., William, Thomas and Frank Cashin.

Conrad Jolitz, a young man of West Duluth, who lived with his brothers, F. William and Carl P. Jolitz, at 5312 Ramsey street, died yesterday of tuberculosis and the body was shipped this afternoon to Marion, Wis., for interment. He had four sisters, all living away from here, and they arrived yesterday, just in time to be with him at the end. They are: Mrs. J. N. Jonas of Fargo, N. D.; Mrs. David Steinberg of Tilledo, Wis.; Mrs. William Salzman of Tilledo, Wis., and Mrs. Herman Jolitz of Peaopolis, Wis. Mr. Jolitz, husband of the latter, arrived also.

Mildred, the 15-months-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. B. Mitchell of 208 South Sixty-second avenue west died this morning of pneumonia and the funeral will take place from the family residence, on Wednesday afternoon. Interment will be in Oneota cemetery.

Mrs. A. Christopherson died Saturday at the home of her son, A. Christopherson of New Duluth. She was 75 years of age. The body was shipped to Wyoming for burial today.

SUES FORMER EMPLOYER.

Wilfred Lirette Wants Settlement With Joseph Brotherton.

Wilfred Lirette has begun suit in district court against his former employer, Joseph Brotherton, who keeps a barber shop on Central avenue, to recover $66 which he claims is due him. It seems, according to his complaint that Lirette made a verbal contract with Brotherton to work for one year for $16 a week, $14 of which was to be paid in cash at the end of each week, and $2 a week put in the bank to his credit and to be paid over to Lirette at the end of the year.

Lirette worked only thirty-three weeks and claims that Brotherton now refuses to turn over the weekly $2, Brotherton claiming the contract void because Lirette did not work the year out.

Dr. Smith Coming Here.

Rev. Dr. Samuel G. Smith, pastor of the People's church of St. Paul, will preach tomorrow afternoon and evening at Plymouth Congregational church West Duluth. The afternoon service will begin at 4:30 o'clock and the evening service will begin at 8 in the evening. Dr. Smith is one of the most noted divines in the Northwest and is said to be a speaker of exceptional magnetism and ability.

Real Estate Sale at Proctor.

Michael Johnson of Proctor has sold his house and lot to William Buckingham, through Russell J. Hamilton, manager at Proctor for J. A. Scott of West Duluth. The purchase price was $1,200 and the property is described as follows: Lot 13, block 1, Second division to Proctor. Mr. Johnson is building a new house on his farm just west of Proctor.

West Duluth Briefs.

The Irving school alumni will hold its next regular meeting next Friday evening, at which time the new constitution will be brought up to be voted upon. Plans will be made at that time for the annual banquet of the alumni, which will take place next month. Members are asked to keep the meeting in mind.

The Ladies' Missionary and Aid society of the Plymouth Congregational church will hold its regular meeting Tuesday afternoon with Mrs. C. C. Salter, 324 Fifty-second avenue west.

A. H. Merriman was elected first vice-president of the West Duluth Republican club on Saturday evening. An interesting meeting was held and the address of H. J. McClearn was much enjoyed.

The infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Myles of 418 Fifty-eighth avenue west is very ill with pneumonia and measles.

Otto Eklund's condition is quite serious.

Wanted—Maid, for June 6, German preferred. Mrs. Richard Schell, 5613 Highland avenue.

Mrs. W. J. Works is entertaining Mrs. K. Moran of Deer River.

Anton Wilschek and J. Egberg nearly lost their lives yesterday morning by their boat capsizing near Curo's boat house. They were rescued in time, however.

Oscar Sunberg of Grand avenue has obtained a position in a sawmill in Cloquet, so he and his family have moved there.

Miss Florence Taylor has gone to Oshkosh to visit friends.

William Murnion has sold his house on Fifty-fourth avenue west to William Johnson, the liveryman. Mr. Murnion will move his family shortly to a house on Main strtet, near Fifty-third avenue west.

If you ask for the best baby syrup, you get "Carler's Sirup Pectoral" at Nygren's.

Jewelry repairing—Hurst, 301 Central.

John Ransbottom of 129 South Sixty-third avenue west is entertaining his mother, Mrs. Harriet Ransbottom of Braderick, Ohio, whom he has not seen for fifteen years.

THE STAGE

COMING ATTRACTIONS.

LYCEUM—Friday and Saturday, Dockstader's minstrels.

DOCKSTADER'S MINSTRELS.

The singing contingent of Dockstader's minstrels is remarkable. The vocalists include Manuel Romaine, Harry Ellis, William Hallet, Mat Keefe, William McDonald, Clarence Marks, G. F. Waller, J. B. Bradley, T. Vale Wood, Curtis Somers and Wilson N. Miller, each in turn a singer of highest culture, each voice being given its true value in choral work. The result from a musical standpoint is delightful, and Mr. Dockstader's claim that he has the best singing company that minstrelsy has even known, is doubtless justified and not an infraction of modesty. The minstrels will be here Friday and Saturday.

THE FIFTIETH ANNIVERSARY

Of Formation of First Methodist Conference in Minnesota.

Methodist ministers of the Minnesota conference (comprising those of Southern Minnesota) and the ministers of the Northern Minnesota conference will join this fall in a celebration of the fiftieth anniversary of the formation of the first conference in this state. The celebration will probably take place in Central Park M. E. church, St. Paul, of which Rev. Benjamin Longley is pastor.

Both the Minnesota and the Northern Minnesota conferences will meet at the same time, probably the first week in October, though the date has not yet been determined by the bishop whose duty it is to name the time. The former conference will meet in First M. E. church, St. Paul. The latter will convene in Hennepin Avenue M. E. church, Minneapolis.

Previous to the organization of the first conference fifty years ago, the Methodist church in Minnesota was officially a part of the Western Wisconsin conference. Then when the Minnesota state conference organized, its territory was the entire state of Minnesota. In 1894, when the conference was held in Duluth, on account of the growth of the church it was deemed best to divide the state into the Minnesota conference and the Northern Minnesota conference. The dividing line was between St. Paul and Minneapolis. So it was that in 1895 occurred the first meeting of the Northern Minnesota conference in Minneapolis.

The sessions of the two conferences this fall will be entirely separate with the exception of the one day when they will be united in Central Park church, St. Paul, for the celebration of the half-century celebration. The present plan is to have Dr. J. F. Chaffee, now a resident of Pasadena, Cal., and one of the pioneers of the Minnesota conference, as the principal speaker of the occasion. It is also probable that Dr. William McKinley, also a pioneer of Minnesota Methodism, but now retired, will take a prominent part.

The committee in charge of the arrangements for the Northern Minnesota conference consists of Presiding Elder S. P. Long, Rev. L. T. Guild and Dr. F. L. Thompson, the latter being pastor of the church where the conference will convene. Some 300 are expected to attend the gathering. An invitation has been extended to the members of the conference to bring their wives with them and to be the guests of Minnesota Methodists. The conference this year will be made up exclusively of ministers, laymen representation taking place but once in four years.

Fortunate Missourians.

"When I was a druggist, at Livonia, Mo.," writes T. J. Dwyer, now of Graysville, Mo., "three of my customers were permanently cured of consumption by Dr. King's New Discovery, and are well and strong today. One was trying to sell his property and move to Arizona, but after using New Discovery a short time he found it unnecessary to do so. I regard Dr. King's New Discovery as the most wonderful medicine in existence." Surest Cough and Cold cure and Throat and Lung healer. Guaranteed by all druggists. 50c and $1. Trial bottle free.

FOUR MEN STABBED.

Fight Over Card Game in Austrian Boardinghouse.

Hibbing, Minn., May 7.—In a free-for-all fight over a card game in an Austrian boardinghouse, four laborers, whose names are not known, were stabbed. When the officers arrived, the men had fled and the place was in darkness.

It is not known how badly the men are injured, but E. Lenovitch, a boarder, told the police that a miner called "Big Charlie" had cut A. Maki deeply across the face.

With blood streaming from the wound Maki ran out of the building closely followed by "Big Charlie," but the latter was restrained by friends.

INVOLUNTARY BANKRUPTCY

Filed in United States Court Against Marine Market.

An involuntary petition in bankruptcy in the matter of the Marine Meat Market of Duluth was filed Saturday afternoon in the United States court. The petition is made by three creditors of the concern who, together with the amounts due, are as follows: Frank F. Starkey, $863.70; Tucker-Overman Co., $41.81; and H. J. Kolling & Co., $29.39.

James A. Skelly, a lumberman of Aitkin, has filed a petition in bankruptcy setting forth his debts as $18,-123.70 and his assets, all of which are claimed to be exempt, at $1,225.

New Waist Coats

Sizes 33 to 50.

'A very extensive new line of them was placed in stock here last week. They are of the well-known R. & W. make—all beautiful designs in the latest colorings and of the approved fabrics, including pure flannels and linens. Some are decidedly loud and some are quiet and bashful.

But all our vests fit—that's why they make a hit with every man who tries one on. You know so many of these fancy vests refuse to hug the back of your neck and persist in climbing up your front. Ours do the right thing by you. Sizes 33 to 50. Prices $1.50 to $6.00.

CITY BRIEFS

The young people of the Lester Park M. E. church will have charge of the services at the Star of Hope Mission this evening at 8 o'clock. The pastor, Rev. Charles Fox Davis, will speak. Arthur Browne will have charge of the singing.

Ollie Olson, a 17-year-old girl, was arrested about midnight Saturday, by Officer Walsh, and taken to headquarters to explain her habit of frequenting the streets late at night. She was released yesterday afternoon and ordered to return home.

A stipulation that Clarence Nixon take judgment for $51.10 against G. H. Reeves was filed in the district court this morning. Mr. Nixon was awarded a verdict of $15 when the case was tried. Mr. Reeves objected to the taxation for costs and appealed from the same. In the stipulation he withdraws his objections and dismisses the appeal.

Frank Wiersheim, who was indicted for grand larceny by the grand jury, failed to appear in the district court Saturday afternoon, and forfeited his bail of $200 which he furnished to secure his release from custody pending the action of the grand jury. A bench warrant has been issued for Wiersheim.

The First Division of the Minnesota Naval reserve will hold an election this evening to fill a vacancy caused by the resignation of Ensign Paul G. Clarkson.

The Woman's Aid society of the First Methodist church will give a social tomorrow evening at the church. Dr. Rice will speak on Ruskin.

The regular monthly meeting of the board of county commissioners will occur tomorrow. The range commissioners arrived in the city to attend the committee meetings which always precede the board meeting. It is expected that some important road matters will come up for consideration tomorrow and that the new courthouse project will be discussed.

CIVIL CASES ON TRIAL.

Petit Jury Starts In Work for May Term.

Two civil actions were started for trial by jury in the district court this morning. The personal injury case of Henry Engels against the Duluth Street Railway company is being heard in Judge Ensign's room. Engels was struck by a car at Fifth avenue west and Superior street last summer and claims to have had a leg broken and to have received numerous other injuries.

In Judge Cant's room the adverse possession case of G. Willis Peters and others against William Tackaberry is on trial for the third time. The second time it was tried, several months ago, and the jury disagreed. The suit involves a lot on Fifth or Sixth avenue east, which Tackaberry claims to have resided on for several years.

DELIBERATING OVER PAVEMENT

Second Street Property Owners Considering Material to Use.

This afternoon property owners and representatives of owners were meeting at the city hall to select the kind of pavement to be laid on Second street. About fifty were present and at the time of going to press their deliberations were still in progress.

Frank M. Barnard of Minneapolis, representing the manufacturers of creosoted block, spoke in favor of that material. Capt. McDougall argued for cedar block, and Dr. Tufte, Julius D. Howard and others spoke for tar macadam.

A vote is to be taken and the board of public works will select the material that most of the owners favor.

Bed Clothing Burns.

An insignificant blaze in a rooming house at 121 Fourth avenue West, kept by Mrs. Kathrine Monsen, destroyed some bed clothing and damaged some furniture this afternoon. Mrs. Monsen declares that the fire was started by a bibulous roomer, who is in the habit of sleeping days and remaining out all night. The fire was in the room he occupied and it was discovered by Mrs. Monsen. The bibulous one was nowhere to be found. The loss to the household goods is not covered by insurance. W. M. Prindle & company are agents for the property.

ANOTHER IS NOW IN RACE

Charles J. Dahl Files for the Nomination for Sheriff.

Jack Miles Will Speak Later and Says "Then Lookout."

The airing of the Bates-Miles-Armstead letter and agreement and the rather unpleasant situation in which it has placed those candidates is evidently leading others with political desires to believe that there is a good chance for new men in the field. Charles J. Dahl, general foreman for the Consolidated Elevator Company, filed this afternoon for the Republican nomination. He lives at Twenty-first avenue west and First street.

Jack Miles is again in town but chooses to preserve a sphynx like silence and cause his brothers in trouble to shiver with the suggestion that when the time comes he will speak and present things in a light different from that in which they now appear and then "look out." He addresses the following to The Herald:

"I arrived home on the Great Northern, Saturday noon, from the Kenny mine location, near Buhl, where newspapers seem to be unknown. At Cloquet I bought a Duluth morning paper, and read the account of the Bates-Miles-Armstead mixup. Since my arrival home I understand reporters from your paper have been trying to reach me for an interview. This will save you the trouble. I intend letting the other fellows do the talking, and although my position may seem a peculiar one to yourself and readers, who do not know the circumstances and the facts of the case, I do not intend exposing my hand now, but will play my trumps when the proper time arrives and then look out. Things will then appear in a much different light when this time arrives."

Saturday R. E. Patterson filed for the nomination for sheriff. Those people who pay no attention to the initials of a man's name—and there are many to whom initials apparently mean nothing—think that the man who has filed is Commissioner E. M. Patterson. He has been asked by a number of people yesterday and today who believed he was the man. R. E. Patterson is not even a relative of his.

EVIDENTLY HAVE AGREED

Jubilant Feeling on the Part of Miners and Operators.

New York, May 7.—Committees representing the mine operators and the mine workers' union began a conference in this city shortly after 2 o'clock today.

The conference adjourned at 3:10 p. m. As President Baer of the Philadelphia & Reading left the conference room he said:

"Everything is lovely and the goose hangs high. We will give out a statement as soon as it can be typewritten."

It is believed the conferees have reached an agreement.

After the meeting it was said unofficially that an understanding had been arrived at for the extension of the strike commission awards for another three years and that the companies had agreed to replace in their positions all men except those who have committed acts of violence.

COMMISSION HEARS PLAINT

St. Paul, May 7.—(Special to The Herald.)—The complaint of the little town of Goodhue, 410 population, against the Chicago Great Western company, was responsible for a hearing in St. Paul today by the interstate commerce commission.

The commerce commission was represented by Commissioner C. A. Prouty. Goodhue by Attorney General Young, and the Great Western by Attorney C. A. Severance.

The essence of the complaint is that Red Wing, 70 miles further from Chicago than Goodhue, enjoys a local grain rate of 12½ cents to Chicago, while Goodhue people are forced to pay 15 cents. This is, however, only part of the complaint, for it is claimed that Red Wing in reality ships out most of its grain to Chicago on the milling in transit rate from Minneapolis, of 10 cents, making an actual difference in the freight rate of 5 cents in favor of Red Wing and against Goodhue. The discrimination, it is claimed by Goodhue residents, is throttling that little town and enabling Red Wing to grow prosperous on territorty that should be tributary to the complaining town.

Three witnesses, one a Red Wing citizen and two from Goodhue, were examined by Commissioner Prouty.

JUMPS TO HER DEATH

St. Paul, May 7.—(Special to The Herald.)—A woman whose name is said to be Mrs. Clemenson, jumped from the third story window of St. John's hospital last night. Her injuries were such that she died shortly afterward. The authorities of the hospital declined to give any information concerning the woman or the reason for her act. Coroner Miller is investigating the affair. It is understood that the woman went to the hospital for an operation.

LEADER OF HOLY ROLLERS KILLED

Seattle, May 7.—Frank A. Creffield, leader of the so-called religious organization known as the Holy Rollers, was shot in the head and killed today on First avenue near Cherry street, by George Mitchell, a laborer, aged 23 years. Mitchell, when arrested, asserted that Creffield had wronged his two sisters. Creffield and his wife were walking down First avenue when Mitchell, who had been following them, addressed a remark in a low tone to Creffield and then shot him.

NO SENTIMENT

Toward Calling off the Strike Develops Among Longshoremen.

Cleveland, May 7.—It was given out today after a meeting of the longshoremen, oilers and firemen that no sentiment developed to call the strike off, and that there would be no weakening of the union to maintain the strike. The Pilots' Protective association announced that 80 per cent of the mates on vessels lying off at Cleveland and Erie are holding union cards, but refuse to join the strike largely for fear of losing their licenses for leaving boats while out of port.

Capt. Rush, president of the Pilots' union, said that there is no trouble between himself and President Keefe of the Longshoremen's union and that he is perfectly satisfied with the situation as it stands at present.

FURNITURE COMPANY AT RACINE IS REORGANIZED.

Racine, Wis., May 7.—It was officially announced here today that the American School Furniture company had reorganized, all of the bondholders surrendering their bonds and taking stock. Hereafter the company will be the American Seating company. The capital stock is $10,000,000. They have twenty-one factories under their control and ten of them are in operation. Thomas Boyd, Chicago, is president, and L. A. Pell of Racine is vice president.

F. E. House Returns.

F. E. House, president of the Duluth & Iron Range road, has returned from California with members of his family, who have been spending the winter there. Mr. House was on his way West when the San Francisco disaster occurred and he took nurses and supplies aboard his private car when he left Portland for California.

VOTED DOWN AMENDMENT

To Include Private Car Owners As Common Carriers.

Senate Takes Position That Private Cars Are Included.

Washington, May 7.—When the senate met today a communication from the secretary of commerce and labor was read stating that the full report of the commissioner of corporations on the subject of the transportation of oil is now in the hands of the public printer and that as soon as received from that official it will be transmitted to congress as requested by a recent resolution. Messrs. Clapp, McCumber and Dubois were appointed conferees on the Indian appropriation bill.

Consideration of the railroad rate bill was then resumed, Mr. Kittredge's amendment including the owners of all private cars within the definition of carriers being first in order. Mr. Clapp opposed the provisions as impracticable at this time. He said that as it stands the bill makes the railroad companies responsible for these cars, whether owned by them or not, and expressed the opinion that the provision would prove effective. Furthermore, he was of the opinion that the adoption of the Kittredge amendment would have the effect of legalizing the private car line, and thus render further legislation on the question difficult.

In reply to questions put by Mr. Hopkins and Mr. Beveridge, Mr. Kittredge expressed the opinion that the bill as it stands does not reach the questions of relations between the railroad companies and the private car combines.

Mr. Beveridge expressed surprise over this declaration and appealed to Mr. Tillman to know whether shippers using private car lines would be compelled under the bill to deal with more than one company. The South Carolina senator gave it as his opinion that as the bill stands it would be necessary to deal with only one company and he and the Indiana senator united in the opinion that in that view of the bill it would be unwise to adopt the amendment and thus compel dealing with two companies.

Mr. Knox took the position that private cars are already properly included in the bill as instrumentalities of transportation. The amendment was voted down without division.

The senate adopted the substitute for the Foraker anti-pass amendment, 38 to 35.

IN THE HOUSE.

Washington, May 7.—Although Speaker Cannon started in bravely to ignore the fact that he is 70 years old today, he was forced soon after the house convened to relinquish his gavel and retire to his private room where senators and members demanded audiences and telegrams of congratulation came thick and fast. One signed "The Kissing Bug," combines congratulation with the hope that Hobson will be made chairman of the naval committee when he comes to congress. Another condemns the Osler theory to the winds and urges the speaker to live to be a hundred.

An Illinois constituent wires: "No patriotic American can become so old or so exalted as to be justified in disregarding the mandate of the people when they call."

Again filibustering tactics were resorted to by Mr. Williams, but without success. It developed that the opposition to the "blanket order" grew out of opposition to the pure food bill, which is given the same position as an appropriation bill, should the order be passed. Mr. Adamson and Mr. Bartlett announced their opposition to the pure food bill.

The following bills were passed:

Providing for the allotment and distribution of Indian tribal funds.

To withhold from sale a portion of Fort Brady military reservation in Sault Ste. Marie, Mich.

Authorizing the secretary of the interior to allot homesteads to the natives of Alaska.

To provide for the settlement of a claim of the United States against the state of Michigan for moneys held by said state as trustee of the United States in connection with the St. Mary's Falls ship canal.

SPECIAL GRAND JURY MEETS

New York, May 7.—The special grand jury which is to investigate insurance matters and especially political campaign contributions, was empanneled today. District Attorney Jerome, who asked for this jury, was present with several of his assistants when it was sworn. Justice Scott of the criminal branch of the supreme court, in his charge, said:

"Your attention will be called to a series of alleged crimes which have occasioned much discussion in the public press and in various financial circles.

"The legislature has passed laws remedying, so far as it can, all past mistakes. Your duty is to inquire if any crime has been committed under the law as it stod before the legislative action. You will have the active and energetic assistance of the district attorney and you are entitled at all times to call upon him for assistance and advise. You are not to be swayed by suspicion or clamor in any of your work."

NOMINATED BY PRESIDENT.

Washington, May 7.—The president today sent the following nominations to the senate: Register of the land office at Des Moines, J. J. Payne. Postmasters—Minnesota: K. Wakefield, Hutchinson.

JAY GOULD DEFEATS PENNELL AT TENNIS.

London, May 7.—At the Queen club today, Jay Gould of Lakewood, defeated V. Pennell, last year's runner-up by 3-1 in the amateur court tennis championship of Great Britain and will now meet Eustace Miles, holder of the championship.

The sets were 6-0, 6-1, 3-6 and 6-1. In the first two seats Gould ran away from his opponent, Bennell showing nothing like his usual form. In the third set, however, Pennell played up splendidly, gave a great exhibition and won by 6 to 3. The effort, however, exhausted the Englishman and Gould took the last and winning set as he liked.

The American champion will probably meet Miles on Wednesday.

A GOOD IDEA.

The policy of the Duluth board of education in beginning to name the schools after local pioneers who have passed away is highly commendable.

Last Friday evening the board had the naming of two schools, and though as usual there was much pressure in behalf of names of personages of national note, one was named Ely and the other Nettleton, after pioneers of the Head of the Lakes whose lives and services well merited the honor.

Rev. Edmund F. Ely was a Presbyterian missionary, who came first to the Head of the Lakes in 1833. After a short stay he returned to New York, and came back again later and settled, building in Oneota the first school house ever put up at the Head of the Lakes. This makes it peculiarly fitting that he should be honored by having one of the modern schools, that have taken up and are carrying on the work he began so many years ago, named after him.

William Nettleton is also fittingly honored in the same manner. He was one of the very first settlers in Duluth, and at one time owned a homestead located squarely in the heart of the city.

This policy is much better than that of naming schools after notables who, while dear to the entire country, have no particular significance to the people of Duluth. Schools everywhere are named after presidents and educators and poets and authors, but in every community there have been a few sturdy pioneers who deserve commemoration, and it can be done in no better way than to name school buildings after them.

A BETTER REASON.

Down in the district represented in congress by James T. McCleary, standpatter, there is a movement on foot to defeat him, headed by a promising candidate who seeks to wrest the Republican nomination away from him at the primaries.

In some quarters the fight against him is being made on the ground that he has had the job long enough, that two terms are enough for any legislator, and that his six terms should warrant his retirement to make place for another man.

This is poor reasoning. McCleary will never be defeated on that ground, and he should not be. If the public has a good man in office, the fact that he has held his place a long time is no reason for retiring him. There has been too much of this thing of looking upon political places as commercial commodities, to be passed around like an apple through a crowd of boys that want a bite apiece.

If you are in business, and you get a good man in your service, you don't set a definite term upon his employment and discharge him to give somebody else a job when his time is up. If he is a good man you want to keep him as long as he is good, and by advances in salary and words of praise you seek to make him want to stay. There is no reason why that should not apply to a congressman, so long as he is doing good work and faithfully representing his people.

But this is not to say that Congressman McCleary should not be retired from his position. He has failed to represent his state or his district. The people of Minnesota, in the Second congressional district no less than elsewhere, believe in tariff revision. Congressman McCleary has publicly acknowledged that his people believe in revising the tariff, but instead of seeking to heed their wishes, he has announced that he is coming home to teach them that they do not want tariff revision, but that they should want what he wants them to want.

This is not the proper attitude of a public servant. His stand is marked by an arrogance and self-sufficiency that amply earn him defeat. If the people of the Second district want to retire him, let them do it on the ground that he has failed to represent the sentiment of his constituency, not on the ground that he has served six terms in congress. That only makes him the better congressman, or ought to. It is his attempt to bend the wishes of his people to suit his own conveniences that makes him a bad congressman, and that warrants his defeat.

THEY ARE POISONERS.

The bureau of chemistry of the federal department of agriculture is out with a bulletin upon food adulteration in which it protests against what it calls exaggeration in the campaign against impure and adulterated foods. The bureau thinks that the habit many writers and speakers have fallen into, of speaking of food as "poisoned" and of manufacturers of adulterated foods as "poisoners", is bad, and that the expressions are untrue.

It does not seem that this opinion is either timely or to the point. It may be that in their indignation over the evils of food adulteration some writers have become intemperate in their use of terms, but this is true of the terms mentioned only in a relative degree.

It is agreed that the adulteration of food includes the administering to the people of matter that is not nutritious, and that in many cases is positively injurious. It is agreed that the drugs put into food to color it, preserve it, or give it flavor are responsible, in a large measure, for the prevalence of stomach and nerve diseases.

It is true that people seldom die directly from such ills. But they often lead to more serious disabilities that do result fatally, and in that event, if it is true that the inception of the trouble was in the eating of adulterated food, the blame must go back to the manufacturers of the stuff that did the business.

Now it does not seem to be necessary, in order to put a man into the class of poisoners, that he should administer doses immediately fatal. Some of the cunning poisoners of old, who sought to remove enemies and human obstacles from their paths by poison, used to give doses that took a long time and many repetitions to do the work, so that when the victims finally died there was nothing to tell what killed them. These were poisoners as much as the coarser workmen who killed with one dose.

While the food adulterators do not kill immediately, they often do ultimately. While the amount of poison in a meal of adulterated food would kill no one, it makes a stealthy inroad on health, and repeated often enough may have fatal results.

Under these considerations, it is hard to see where the protest of the bureau of chemistry has any foundation in justice. Manufacturers who put injurious adulterants into food are poisoners, and the fact that they kill but slowly does not make them any the less entitled to the term. The bureau of chemistry might use its time to better advantage by continuing the exposures of food adulteration through which it has already done much good work.

THE GARFIELD REPORT.

The revelations of the Garfield report on the Standard Oil company are not sufficiently novel or unexpected to create a great sensation. The meat of the matter is that the Standard Oil company has been favored by the railroads with rebates and discriminatory rates, and this everybody knew before. It is a matter of common knowledge that it was the rebate system that built up the oil trust, and that without the help of this nefarious device it never could have acquired the substantial monopoly of the oil business it now enjoys.

The question is, what is going to be done about it? It helps a little to have the facts made a part of the official record, so that there may be a basis for further proceedings, but it will not help us much merely to know that rebates have been made and are now being made, unless something is done to stop them.

As to rebates already given and received, nothing can be done, very likely, except to punish somebody for their wrong-doing. That will be some satisfaction, and it will also help to guard against repetitions of the offense in the future. But when congress took the sting out of the anti-rebate law by eliminating the criminal clause, so that now the worst that can be done to a rebater is to fine him, the fight against rebates was sadly crippled.

If the law provided imprisonment, instead of a mere fine which the public ultimately has to pay anyway, the fight against rebating would be infinitely more effective. There are no terrors in a criminal prosecution that can end in nothing worse than a fine; but if there was a chance that conviction meant imprisonment railroad and trust officials would be much less ready to arrange rebates.

If congress will merely restore the imprisonment clause to the anti-rebate law, and then pass the rate regulation bill in such shape that the interstate commerce commission will be able to deal with rebates and with discriminatory rates, there is a strong likelihood that the public will experience relief very soon. Through the Garfield report we have the facts to work upon, and prosecutions based upon them should be started immediately. The report does not state whether Mr. Garfield got his information in such a manner as to render all the officials concerned immune from punishment after the manner of the beef trust officials in Judge Humphrey's Chicago court, but it is certainly to be hoped that he has not left such a loophole open in this case.

The reply of the Standard Oil people, published Saturday, while very earnest and excited, is not so much convincing as convicting. In the light of common knowledge, it is a practical confession of guilt.

If this political letter-writing and contract-making keeps up, the local campaign will be far from dull.

Hobson has been mentioned for president, but probably that is only the entering wedge for a campaign that is scheduled to take place when the women vote.

Hobson found it so easy to catch the eye of the nation that he is going to be terribly surprised when he goes to Washington and tries to catch the speaker's eye.

The Middle River Pioneer offers small consolation to Harry Ives of the St. Hilaire Spectator, who was married recently in overalls, because practical jokers stole his clothes. The Pioneer says: "If he doesn't have to wear overalls a good share of the time after his marriage he will be more fortunate than a whole lot of other editors."

HOTEL GOSSIP

"Japan's ambition, more than ever since the successful issue of the war, is to become a great industrial power, and to this end she is working hard," said B. T. Kaiser of Seattle, Wash., at the Spalding. "As she bent all her energies to beating her enemies, so now she is bending all her energies to develop her resources, establish her industries on a sound footing and care for her people. The war was no sooner closed that the people settled down, steadily, to business, and the soldier became the artisan again.

"I spent two months in Nagasaki last year. It is not a commercial port of importance. The value of the harbor is largely strategetic, and because of its dock facilities. Because of its closeness to the coal mines, it is a handy coaling point for the many steamers which stop there. Opposite the city, in the largest dock yards in the Far East, two large steamers are now being built.

"I returned to America on the Coptic, of the Pacific Mail line, and as an instance of the large traffic between the two countries may be mentioned the fact that the vessel carried more than 1,400 passengers. Much of the trade from Korea's southern ports touches Nagasaki. The latter country is of importance commercially. Thousands of Japanese families are making their homes there. I believe Korea's great mineral wealth will soon be exploited.

"Earthquakes are numerous in Japan, but they are not as serious by any means as the one which visited San Francisco recently. Sometimes they have three or four mild ones over there a day, so do not mind them much."

Maj. S. W. Campbell, who has charge of the La Pointe Indian agency, is a guest at the St. Louis, together with his son, F. R. Campbell, of Eveleth. The major says the money for Indian pine in his jurisdiction is not being held back by the lumbermen, as is claimed in the case of some of the agencies by supporters of Senator La Follette's proposition to have an amendment made to the Indian appropriation bill to permit the payment, at short intervals, of the money due the Indians for timber cut on allotments.

"As for the banks that hold the money," said Maj. Campbell, "they give indemnity bonds for its safe keeping and pay 2½ per cent interest on deposits held six months or more, and 2 per cent on less than six months. The funds are deposited at the discretion of the commissioner of Indian affairs.

"I do not deem it advisable for the Indians to be given all the money coming to them in a lump sum at short intervals. I feel qualified to speak from experience, for I have been among them on the agency for the past eight years. I suggested the $10 a month system which was afterwards adopted by the department. I have tried both systems and have paid over sums of from $1,000 to $5,000 to Indians who in no case made good use of large amounts.

"I believe our present policy of allowing them $10 a month when they have the money coming, or perhaps $20 a month if they need it, is the best we can do for the Indians at present. But this rule is not an arbitrary one. If an Indian has the money coming, and shows a disposition to make improvements, buy cows and horses, etc., then I believed in getting it for him, and no Indian is refused money if he makes good use of it.

"On the Bad River reservation we have probably 100 Indians who have from two to sixty acres cleared on their allotments. If we turn all the money they have coming over to the Indians they will soon have none at all, for they do not know the value of money, and spend it like water. On the reservation is one chief who is 85 years of age. He has $3,000 coming to him and he draws $20 a month. He would be broke in a week if we were to turn over to him the entire amount."

"The North Wisconsin Farmers' association has been a success from the start," said Walter Sherry of Ashland, at the St. Louis. "It is still hammering away in its efforts to boom Northern Wisconsin, and is succeeding in excellent shape. The lands through that section are really good for farming, and all that was needed to bring in settlers was the proper kind of advertising. This advertising has been given by the association, principally through the medium of Secretary H. S. Fairall and the car Grassland, which has made several trips through the farming districts of the Middle West, showing the people in the districts visited what can be raised in the way of grains, vegetables and grasses in the Northern country.

"Whatever town the car may be in, it is visited by large numbers of people. Care is taken to answer all their questions and to supply them with information which is likely to make them want more, and literature descriptive of the Wisconsin country is given out. Results that are highly satisfactory have been obtained in this manner."

Rough on the Crops.

Puck: "Good weather for crops, eh?" chirped the traveler, one of your superficial optimists.

The farmer shook his head sadly.

"On the contrary," he replied, for he was an educated farmer.

"No?"

"As a matter of fact, the crops are suffering."

"On account of the weather?"

"On account of the weather."

"Bright sunshine, following copious showers, do crops suffer in such weather?"

"Naturally, crops are bound to suffer in any weather which makes fish bite. If these conditions continue, we shan't raise much this year."

And the farmer shook his head again and sighed heavily.

Warming Up.

Ladies' Home Journal: A fond mother, hearing an unusual noise in the nursery overhead, hurried upstairs to find out what was the matter.

She found Johnny sitting in the middle of the floor quietly smiling.

"Oh," said he, "I've locked grandpa and Uncle Henry in the cupboard, and when they get a little angrier I'm going to play Daniel in the lion's den."

THE WEATHER

This is a decided improvement. Saturday was a succession of quick changes, from smiles to frowns, from tears to laughter. It rained, and then the sun came out; then it snowed, and again the sun came out; incidentally it hailed a little, and blew a lot. Yesterday was dull and chill and rather like November, but this morning the sky was clear, the sun was out in full force, and though the wind still had a slight chill in its embrace, the prospects were good for fine conditions. While the weather man expects it to be cloudy tonight and tomorrow, with fresh easterly winds, the winds are due to shift to northwesterly tomorrow, and it will be warmer tonight. Yesterday's high temperature was 36 deg. and last night's lowest was 26 deg. Says Mr. Richardson of conditions:

"Copious rains fell during Sunday or last night over Atlantic and Southern states in connection with a disturbance that is central off the New England coast. The barometer is falling and temperatures are rising in the Dakotas and Eastern Montana, causing light showers or snow flurries at scattered points in the Northwest. This disturbance is central over Western North Dakota, and as it moves eastward will likely cause partly cloudy weather and easterly to northerly winds in this locality tonight and Tuesday. The barometer is high over the Lower Mississippi valley and Alberta. Killing frosts occurred Sunday and this morning in the upper lake region, Upper Mississippi and Red River valleys."

Following were last night's lowest temperatures as recorded by the weather bureau:

Department of Agriculture, Weather Bureau, Duluth, May 7.—Local forecast for twenty-four hours ending at 7 p. m. Tuesday: Duluth, Superior and vicinity: Mostly cloudy tonight and Tuesday, with fresh easterly winds probably shifting to northwesterly late Tuesday. Warmer tonight.

H. W. RICHARDSON,
Local Forecaster.

Chicago, May 7.—Forecasts until 7 p. m. Tuesday: Wisconsin and Minnesota: Fair tonight and Tuesday. Warmer tonight.

North Dakota and South Dakota: Generally fair tonight and Tuesday.

Upper Lakes: Light to fresh variable winds, mostly southerly tonight, shifting to westerly Tuesday. Fair weather.

PLEASANTLY POINTED.

Philadelphia Ledger: "Our John's going to be a preacher, I guess," said Farmer Korntop. 'Jedgin' from what his college professor sez about him."

"What's that?' asked his wife.

"He sez he's inclined to be bibulous."

Washington Star: "The vote I esteem," said the statesman, "is the vote that is not bought."

"Yes," answered Senator Sorghum; "you can figure that as clear profit."

Indianapolis News: "How do you know your husband really works hard at his office at night?" asked the suspicious woman.

"Because he hasn't any headache next morning," answered Mrs. Wise.

Baltimore American: "Go away," said the cook to her admirer, as she looked up from working the dough. "Don't you see I'm busy?"

"But," he replied, persuasively, "you know you told me to come to you in your hour of knead."

Philadelphia Press: "Good morning," Naybor called socially across the fence.

"Hello," growled Subbubs, as he thumped a clod of earth with the hoe.

"What are you raising?' asked Naybor.

"Blisters, mostly," grunted Subbubs.

Philadelphia Press: "Is Mike Clancy here?" asked the visitor at the quarry, just after the premature explosion.

"No, sor," replied Costigan; "he's gone."

"For good?"

"Well, sor, he wint in that direction."

Chicago Tribune: Deacon Hardesty—I'm sorry to hear that you are dissatisfied with your preacher. He is a most excellent man.

Brother McGinnis (of another congregation)—O, yes, and he's a good preacher; but he doesn't draw well. We have a church now to get a man who has just been tried for heresy."

Philadelphia Ledger: "Beg pardon, sir," said the peddler of supplies, "but have you got a typewriter?"

"Yes," replied the merchant.

"May I ask what style?"

"Oh, out of sight! A regular peach! Come in and I'll introduce you to her."

Reflections of a Bachelor.

New York Press: A joke is not a joke when you have to listen to it instead of telling it.

The very nicest girl wouldn't be half as nice if she had a practical mind.

It is operating in the market when either you buy a stock and it goes down or you intended to buy, but didn't, and it goes up.

If the people in the suburbs would quit trying to raise their own vegetables, they could save enough money to live in the city.

A woman will get as excited over what the baby didn't try to say when it is learning to talk as a man will over a forty-point rise in a stock he is gambling in.

A Jolly Old Soul Is He.

Old King Coal is a jolly old soul,
And a jolly old soul is he.
He does as he likes and he orders up strikes
With an irresponsible glee.
He makes folks swear at George F. Baer
And he keeps John Mitchell warm
As he blithely sits in the anthracite pits
And laughs at the coming storm.

Old King Coal is a canny old soul
And he gathers his precious sacks,
And, being a czar, when he calls for war
The peasantry pay the tax.
He is full of jokes as he smokes and smokes
From his pipe with its jet-black bowl,
And he plays on his fiddle, "Both ends and the middle
Are lucky for Old King Coal."

Old King Coal is a callous old soul,
Whose mortgage covers the land.
The poor men shake and the rich men quake
At the clutch of his smutty hand.
He's fiendishly gay—but beware the day
When old King Coal is vexed!
Though he may lie low, we never quite know
Where he's going to hit us next.
—WALLACE IRWIN in New York Globe.

The Greater Artist.

'Neath the fiddler's spell I marveled at the thrill that could be put
Into rosin, wood and horse-hair and a bit of tightened gut;
Then remembered I that father, with a bit of wood alone,
Used to thrill spots in my being never reached by fiddle-tone.
—STRICKLAND W. GILLILAN in Judge.

TWENTY YEARS AGO.

Taken From the Columns of The Herald of This Date, 1886.

William Streeter, who is familiarly known as "Wild Bill," was placed on trial in the district court today on a charge of shooting Swan Algren on July 4 last, at Section 38 on the Duluth & Iron Range railroad, and the jury returned a verdict of manslaughter in the second degree.

Thomas Dowse has made to St. Paul parties the largest sale of inside residence property ever made in Duluth. It consists of 100 lots on "Nob Hill" in Third division.

C. H. Graves & Co. have sold for C. H. Clark of Philadelphia 100 feet on East Superior street, corner First avenue east, which is now occupied by a saloon. The price paid was $18,300, and the buyers are Philadelphia parties.

The following real estate transfers have been recorded:

W. L. Banning to P. T. Norton, lots 5, 6, 7 and 8, block 18, Portland division, $500.

Jacob R. Myers to Nils Hall, lot 208, block 28, Second division, $586.

W. L. Banning to P. T. Norton, lots 3, 4, 5 and 6, block 16, Portland division, $2,000.

McLachlin & Jackson to Peter M. Olson, lots 34 and 36, block 86, Third division, $350.

Alexander McKinnon has purchased a half interest in the tug Zenith from Eslie Stevens.

L. O. Fox has started a broom factory on Second street and Eighth avenue west.

Leander Hesterlink and family bade their friends a final farewell yesterday and left for Sweden.

A new paint shop has been opened on Michigan street by Musgrove & Pierce, the latter a brother of the well known hardware merchant.

The United States land office was moved today to the municipal court building. The rooms are just opposite the council chamber.

Duluth is to have a new suburb. The Lakeside Land company, recently formed, have acquired a large block of land around the north of Lester river and in London addition, and lots are to be placed on the market soon. The Duluth & Iron Range railroad will build stations at both New London and Lester Park, and at least three trains a day will be run between these points and Duluth.

C. R. Hines and wife, and Mrs. Watson returned home from Philadelphia yesterday afternoon.

Miss Crawford of Bay City, Mich., sister of Harry Crawford, is in the city, visiting Mrs. C. G. Greenwood.

Thomas Orr, a Kansas City capitalist, who is possessed of considerable Duluth realty, is in the city and states that he will in the near future remove his family to Duluth.

MINNESOTA OPINIONS.

Fergus Falls Journal: It will not do to ignore the fact that Robert C. Dunn will be a power in the coming Republican state convention and after it has floundered around for a while stranger things may happen than his nomination.

St. Cloud Journal-Press: Republican voters of Minnesota remember this: The only way in which J. F. Jacobson can be prevented from receiving the nomination for governor at Duluth on June 13, is by the use of corporation money. If the corporations and the politicians keep their hands off he will be nominated by acclamation. He is the choice of the people. He is the only candidate who will receive votes from every section of the state—and he receives these because the people have confidence in him.

Preston Times: It is to laugh, if the situation was not so tragic, that in this year, when every sane man must admit that without absolute harmony the Republican party cannot win, candidates are actually tumbling over each other in the scramble for a nomination which bids fair to be but an empty bauble, a nomination which even under the most favorable conditions can only be ratified at the polls by a most vigorous campaign. Slow up, gentlemen, and save your wind. All this strenuous activity should come after the convention, not before.

Northfield News: The only way to elect a Republican ticket this year is to make that ticket one that ought to be elected. The independent voter is with us and party names mean nothing to him.

Le Sueur News: If we can not have tariff reform by a Republican majority and a Republican president let us have it with a Democratic majority and a Democratic president. The country demands tariff reform and will be heard.

Long Prairie Leader: The politician who "wants to let well enough alone" usually has both feet in the trough.

Princeton Union: At a meeting in Minneapolis the other evening Hon. George P. Wilson, ex-attorney general, intimated that one Van Sant might be the Republican nominee for governor this year. Mr. Wilson has a great nose for political carrion.

Red Lake Falls Courier: As between Bryan, conservative, and Roosevelt, radical, the average voter might as well mark his ballot with his eyes shut.

Elk River Star-News: There is some mighty good timber getting into the game for the state senate throughout the state. And if the people really live up to their professions and elect them, next winter's session of the legislature ought to be productive of much wise legislation for the public.

Stillwater Gazette: The fellow who writes under the heading of Hellograms in the Prison Mirror says that "if it is as hard to enter heaven as some people say it is, the angels who swing the pearly gates have a softer snap than the two inmates who swing the big gates at this place." "When a fellow is on the hog it does him no good to squeal."

Thief River Fall News: Jacobson is still the choice of the people and, unless a large amount of money is used to defeat him, he will be nominated in spite of the opposition.

INDEPENDENT NEWSPAPERS.

Grand Rapids Press: In no field is independence more noticeable or apparently more prized than in that of journalism. The successful and influential newspapers of today are independent in politics. Party papers still exist, but their number is small, and they are no longer the leading papers or the influential papers. On political matters their opinion is known in advance. Their arguments are those of the retained attorney, and their views on all subjects are affected by their partisan fetters. Their news matter must be more or less colored to suit their party ideas and favor their party friends. The people do not care for a partisan interpretation, but want the facts in order that they may make up their own minds and exercise their own judgment intelligently.

In all of the large cities there are papers which have been long established and are known as Democratic or Republican, but in most cases the name is reminiscent of former partisanship rather than of present affiliations, and where they still remain nominally partisan their independence and freedom in printing all of the news and their vigorous comments are the despair and terror of party managers. The more independent the paper and the more free from fetters of any kind, the larger is its circulation and the greater its influence.

It is not always through party affiliations that a paper is fettered. It may be tied to a personal ambition, to a business interest, or worst of all secretly allied to a clique which for personal reasons desires an organ. In the latter case, its affiliations are sure to become known and the public is especially suspicious, and has need to be, because only those interested know why and in what way opinions are colored and the news columns juggled.

Absolute independence is essential to the success of the modern newspaper, and it is likewise the surest factor in gaining success. The people in these days think for themselves, act on their own judgment, and they want to know that the news and the statements on which they found their judgment are correct. They welcome discussion, but they want it to be fair and they want to be sure that it is truthful.

John Chinaman's Example.

New York Evening Post: When the Chinese merchants turned over their contributions to the mayor yesterday, and were asked if it was to be devoted expressly to the relief of their countrymen in San Francisco, the spokesman replied: "No, for all; for American man, too." Somewhat pathetic, this, coming from almost the only race none of whom may become an "American man, too."

Where the Knock Comes In.

Philadelphia Press: If the fire insurance companies in their times of prosperity would share their dividends with the public there would not be so much objection to making the public share their losses in times of disaster.

DULUTH AND THE HERALD.

Stillwater Gazette: The Stillwater Gazette says that "some of the fellows who claim to have a touch of spring fever are only developing a lazy streak and refuse to take the proper remedy." If the Gazette has a cure for laziness, it should not withhold it in that manner.—Duluth Herald. Early to bed and early to rise, and don't forget to advertise. These will help some, and possibly nature will do the rest.

Two Harbors Iron News: The Herald states the people of Duluth, while not implicated in the squabble over the place where Bernhardt was to show, "have been blushing somewhat because these things should have happened in this city." That explains the lurid reflection in the clouds to the west of Two Harbors. Some thought it was a gorgeous sunset, others the flare of a conflagration, and lots of folks thought it was the bright-hued aurora borealis.

Princeton Union: A report comes to us that an immense ice floe—with a superficial measurement equal, perhaps, to that of Block's platform—has been captured in Duluth harbor and anchored. Whether the intention of its captors is to hold it for the accommodation of the Hennepin delegation, we have not been able to ascertain.

Granite Falls Tribune: It is a safe proposition that hereafter state conventions will not be held exclusively in any one town, for the delegates to Duluth will be so well pleased with their entertainment that they will want to go there again, and it is well. Few realize the wonderful change that has taken place the last few years at the Head of the Lakes and that little conception is gained of it without a visit, therefore the convention will be the means of enlightening the people on what we have on our northeast boundary.

Littlefork Times: When it comes to boosting for Northern Minnesota, The Duluth Evening Herald is there with the goods. It never lets a chance slip by to further any cause for the upbuilding of the northern part of the state, and the present development is largely due to The Herald's generous spirit along that line.

Quentin in Minneapolis Tribune: Mr. Passing Show of The Duluth Herald says that openwork hose is all right in its place, but it makes very poor garden hose. 'Skeeters in Duluth as early as this?

Aitkin Age: The theatrical trust succeeded in shutting Sarah Bernhardt out of every theater and auditorium in Duluth, but the popular actress appeared in a tent and probably did a bigger business than had any of the auditoriums been open to her. The thing for the Duluth public to do is to build a big auditorium same as Minneapolis did. As a coming convention city, she needs it.

Princeton Union: The Duluth Herald thinks that to plant government seeds as a mark of confidence in the administration is an unfair test. Not at all. Last year we planted what purported to be beet seed and got an elegant stand of marigolds. Certainly no Democratic administration could do better than that.—Orionville Herald-Star.

And the Bede "onion" seeds planted by us brought forth a number of pretty yellow nodding plants of the convolvulus family which an expert florist told us were poisonous and known as mountebanks.

Elk River Star-News: The Duluth newspapers are certainly giving all candidates for governor a square deal. Even Jacobson is accorded a pleasant look.

Crookston Journal: Only a month yet and still Duluth displays no signs of nervousness.

Stillwater Gazette: The Herald man at Duluth admits that the openwork hose is all right in its place, but suggests that it makes very poor garden hose. That's right, all right, because it isn't the place for openwork hose.

The One Great Topic.

New York Press: This is what a man claims to have heard walking four short blocks in the shopping district:

"She looked a perfect fright in it, poor creature! but——"

"I was determined to have it cut princess so——"

"They say that the Empire will be all——"

"And so many of the new blouses are ——"

"I never remember a year when hats ——"

"It was a dream of chiffon and pink ——"

"I saw her yesterday in purple broadcloth and passe——"

"I've pretty well decided to buy a wreath for it of——"

"The wretched dressmaker made a botch of the whole——"

"These were panels of lace to match the——"

"I nearly fainted when I saw the bill, and Jack——"

The Woman Canvasser.

St. James' Gazette: A lady canvasser in the Eye division asked a Framlingham laborer if he was in favor of protection, and he replied by inquiring what it was. The question embarrassed the lady somewhat. "Well," she replied, a trifle abashed, "I cannot go into precise details at the moment, but it is a subject of vital importance to all who care for wild birds."

THE WORLD OF SPORTS

PLANS FOR BALL TEAM

Enthusiasts in Wolvin Building Rumored to be Secretly Organizing.

Say They Will Beat Any Fourteen-Year-Old Team.

In the spring, a young man's thoughts lightly turn to thoughts of baseball and so thorough is the turning in the Wolvin building that plans for an all-star baseball team are already brewing.

J. L. Norman is one of the prime movers in the project and is confident that he will be able to accrue an organization that will be capable of trimming up the "Little Blue Jeans" and the "Orioles" as if they were nothing at all.

At first, until the boys get into shape, games are desired with any 14-year-old team in the city and many of the financial heavyweights who hold down roll-top desks in the Steel corporation structure are willing to back their players if the other side shows a disposition to make any wagers.

While plans for the team are still in their infancy, there is already speculation as to whom will be called upon to fill the different positions. A general call may be issued and all who show up for practice may try for the team, but there is a chance that politics will enter into the selections and the players be named by Norman, who is the "Muggsy" McGraw of the Wolvin bat swishers.

The building is said to contain several twirlers who are lords and masters of the "spit ball" and other curves. It is said that when the entire diamond aggregation is lined up, it will resemble a dress rehearsal of the Giants.

John Endres of the Duluth & Iron Range offices, a southpaw, who, rumor has it, formerly played with the Home Runners of St. Paul, has been mentioned as the man in the box and G. U. Ferguson of the same floor, is one of the most prominent candidates for the position of shortstop. As able tossers have been mentioned in connection with other important places. Rumor has it that E. J. Maney has been tendered the position of team treasurer.

GET CHILLY RECEPTION

Freezing Temperature Greets White Sox in First Home Game.

Freeman Proves Mystery and Duluth Team is Defeated.

While 800 fans sat on the chilly benches and chattered their teeth away before the playful northwest zephyr, the Hibbing independent team with their legal southpaw in the box, walked away with the first game from O'Dea's men yesterday afternoon.

As an exhibition game between the Bear Hunters and the Whale Chasers in the Esquimaux league, the contest might have passed muster, but it wasn't baseball.

The players were taking their lives in their hands when they essayed to get in the way of a line drive. Their benumbed fingers swelled up like stewed prunes whenever the ball smote them, and the most charitable scorekeeper couldn't keep the error column from looking like a woodman's meal ticket on Saturday night.

Freeman, the young attorney from Hibbing, put up a masterly argument, and presented his case in such a forceful manner, that his opponents were hunting grass from the first inning to the end of the game.

Treadway started in for Duluth, and got along nicely for three innings. With the score 1 to 0 in favor of Duluth, Artie decided that Treadway had had enough sport for one day, and put in Ferguson to show the fans what he could do. Before Mr. Ferguson got the kinks out of his arm, and had loosened up his frosted hinges, the niners had pounded in four runs. They got another in the fifth, and Morton took Ferguson's place. Morton's joints were also a little rusty from his period of inactivity on the bench, and he wasn't as much of a mystery as he might have been. Hibbing hammered out three more runs before the end of the game, making a total of eight.

Meanwhile the Sox had been having their troubles with Freeman. The lawyer was hit frequently enough, but they did not come in bunches as they should have done, and the nine safe singles counted for but three runs.

MILITIA MEN IN PRACTICE SHOOT

Members of Companies A and C Complete on Rifle Ranges.

In preparation for a tournament to be held in Duluth this summer, members of Companies A and C held a practice shoot on the rifle ranges yesterday afternoon.

The weather was unfavorable for the sport, but some good scores were made.

At the tournament to be held here this summer, there will be teams from Superior, Eau Claire and a number of Minnesota towns.

TORPEDO BOATS TO JOIN FLEET.

Valetta, Island of Malta, May 7.—Three torpedo boat destroyers sailed from here today to join the British fleet at Piraeus, Greece. The transport Dilwarra is now embarking the Worcestershire regiment, which will sail for Alexandria, Egypt, tomorrow.

What Hunyadi Janos Is.

The Origin of the Name.

In Hungary, in the 15th century, there lived a wonderful man—a great soldier and wise statesman—who was principally instrumental in driving back the "Unspeakable Turk" and keeping him out of Hungary at the period when bands of these marauders were ravaging most of Europe. By his victories in war and peace this man endeared himself to the people and gained a great and permanent place in the nation's history. His name was HUNYADI JANOS, or John Hunyadi, as it would be in English. To the present day, in the affections of all Hungarians, he holds the place of one of their greatest national Heroes. Is it strange then that they should wish to give this honored name to one of their most wonderful natural products—the famous Mineral Laxative Water from the springs at Buda Pesth? The unfailing value of this water as a sure and gentle Natural Laxative has gained for it a world wide reputation, greater even than that enjoyed by old John Hunyadi in Hungary. A bottle costs but a trifle and contains many doses. One dose, ½ a tumblerful (drunk on arising, slightly warmed for best results,) will within an hour move the bowels gently but coplously. At all Druggists. Ask for it by the full name —HUNYADI JANOS.

WILL STAND FOR NO ROWDYISM

President Price Names Umpires and Says He Will Back Them.

"The officials of the Northern-Copper County Baseball league will stand for no rowdyism this season," writes President Price to The Herald.

"If any players in the league get the idea they cannot participate in a game without a roughhouse with the umpire, they will find themselves with little salary coming at the end of the month, and repeated and aggravated offenses means suspension.

"I have selected a corps of bright, clean men that I believe know the game. They will have my support and backing in their official acts and fines which they impose must stick.

"The men named as arbiters of the play in this league are: Messrs. Anderson, Bassen, Rudderham, McGraw and Jones. Anderson was in this league last year and was so good the American association endeavored to secure his services. Dr. Bassen is well known as an official. Rudderham and McGraw have done good work in the old Copper league and Jones is a Helena man with a good record. We will carry five umpires in case of illness of any of the officials, and will work in two men whenever the occasion demands."

Speaking of other matters in the league, President Price announced the selection of the Spalding ball as official.

The meeting, which was last week, deemed necessary in order to make some of the managers trim their salary limit within bounds, may not be held as some matters are being arranged by correspondence. President Price will not call the meeting if the league regulations are observed.

WALKER DEFEATED.

Bemidji Baseball Team Wins Its Third Straight Victory.

Bemidji, Minn., May 7.—(Special to The Herald.)—The Bemidji and Walker baseball teams played a game in Bemidji Sunday afternoon, and the home team won its third straight victory; score, Bemidji, 12; Walker, 3. Through a misunderstanding, but four of the regular members of the visiting team put in an appearance, and the vacancies were filled by players picked at random about the city. Ed Rogers, the former Minnesota U football and baseball player, was with Walker, and he did the pitching. Despite the fact that he was compelled to "heave" them over to a total stranger behind the plate, he pitched a good game. He at no time let himself out, being afraid of the consequences to the receiving end of the battery. At that, but nine hits were secured off his delivery, and they were well scattered, muffs, wild throws and other inexcusable errors made by some of the men behind him figuring in the run-getting. Toward the end of the game he made use of a spit ball that was very puzzling to the opposing batsmen, and it is believed that if his regular team-mates had been in the game the contest would have been a very close one. He struck out ten batsmen.

Bemidji had two new men in the game, Holstein, of the White Earth Indian team, was catching, succeeding Louis Roy, who has gone to McHenry, N. D., to play with the team of that place. Collins, formerly with Little Falls, was tried out and covered left field. Holstein is a fine backstop, and did good work Sunday. Collins got four of the nine hits secured by Bemidji and fielded his position. Munroe pitched seven innings for Bemidji. He allowed but one hit and struck out four. Farley Le Gore pitched two innings. He struck out two and gave one safety. Summers played his usual strong game and knocked out a beautiful three-bagger. Considering the cold weather, the game was a fairly good one, and the crowd enjoyed it. It is not known what team will play here next Sunday, but it is possible that the Bena Indians will be secured.

THINKS HEPBURN BILL WILL PASS

President Believes That Rate Legislation is Certain This Session.

Washington, May 7.—President Roosevelt yesterday reiterated his views on railroad rate legislation in a telegram to the legislative committee of the Pennsylvania state grange. The telegram follows:

"Washington, May 6.—W. F. Hill and members legislative committee, Pennsylvania state grange: Telegram received. I am happy to tell you that not only am I standing on my original position as regards rate legislation, but it seems likely that congress will take this position, too. The Hepburn bill meets my views, as I have from the beginning stated. The Allison amendment is only declaratory of what the Hepburn bill must mean, supposing it to be constitutional, and no genuine friend of the bill can object without stultifying himself. In addition I should be glad to get certain amendments, such as those commonly known as the Long and Overman amendments, but they are not vital, and even without them the Hepburn bill, with the Allison amendment, contains practically exactly what I have both originally and always since asked for, and if enacted into law it will represent the longest step ever yet taken in the direction of solving the railway rate problem.

TWO KILLED, THREE BADLY INJURED IN SALOON ROW.

Greensburg, Ind., May 7.—In a desperate pistol fight at New Point, six miles east, Pleasant Land was shot and almost instantly killed and his brother, Winfield Land, was shot through the heart dying last night. Jeff Williams was shot also and is not expected to live. Garfield A. Williams and William Bare, the other participants in the affair were not injured and are now in the county jail here.

The shooting occurred in Charles Carr's saloon Saturday night, but owing to a break in telephone connections, the news did not reach here until last evening. The trouble followed a drunken quarrel.

COOK STOVE WRECKED

By Flash of Lightning, But No One Was Injured.

Nashwauk, Minn., May 7.—Herbert Meredith, a settler living north of here, drove to town Saturday to purchase a cook stove to replace the one destroyed by a flash of lightning. During a severe electrical storm a bolt struck the chimney, went down into the kitchen and wrecked the stove upon which Mrs. Meredith was preparing dinner.

She did not happen to be near the stove at the time, and beyond a severe shock, escaped injury. The lightning also tore away some of the weather-boarding from the house. The storm was accompanied by a heavy rain, which probably saved his home from destruction by the fire started by the lightning.

ARRESTED AT BRAINERD.

Bemidji Man Charged With Misappropriation of Employer's Money.

Bemidji, Minn., May 7.—(Special to The Herald.)—Charged with appropriating to his own use $18 belonging to his former employer, George Warrick has been arrested at Brainerd by Deputy Sheriff J. N. Bailey and brought back to Bemidji to stand trial. It is claimed by the complainant, E. L. Naylor, that while Warrick was in his employ he took $18, for which amount he never made any return to the firm. Mr. Naylor was away at the time the alleged theft is said to have been made, and Mrs. Naylor was temporarily in charge. Mrs. Naylor discharged Warrick during the absence of Naylor. Warrick claims that he had no intention of leaving Bemidji, had he not been discharged, and will endeavor to settle the matter before a trial is called.

BRIEF TELEGRAMS.

Mark Twain, who had planned to leave New York Saturday for Dublin, N. H., where he was to spend the summer, has been compelled to postpone his departure indefinitely owing to an attack of bronchitis.

The candidacy of Edward Rosewater, proprietor of the Omaha Bee, for the Republican nomination for United States senator at the coming state convention will be announced Monday in the Bee.

Fire in the storage yards of the Wenricke-Mariner Chemical company, in the western suburb of Jacksonville, Fla., Sunday night, destroyed 15,000 tons of batting draught, a rosin waste used by the company in making oil, valued at $150,000. The retorts and building of the company were in great danger, but were saved by hard work.

The twentieth national convention of the Independent Order of B'Rith Abraham began in New York Sunday with several hundred delegates in attendance. Nominations for the various offices were made and will be voted on later.

An order by Mayor Thomas A. Combs issued to the police to keep saloons closed at Lexington, Ky., was strictly enforced. This is the first time in two years that local saloons have not been open for Sunday. The action of the mayor is the result of the killing of Martin Clark by Aaron McCabe in a saloon a week ago Sunday.

STOCKHOLDERS WILL DECIDE

Amusement Park Project Hinges on Wishes of Subscribers.

At a meeting of the Amusement Park committee of the Commercial club, Saturday afternoon, it was decided to go ahead with the project on a $30,000 basis, instead of waiting any longer to secure subscriptions totaling $50,000, provided those who have already subscribed are willing.

The committee already has $30,000 raised and believes that will be sufficient to get the project well started, by a slight modification of the plans for the park by Architect Ivey of St. Paul.

Whitney Wall, C. A. Marshall and O. C. Hartman have been appointed to draft a circular letter to be sent all the subscribers, stating the situation and asking them if they will consent to the modified plans. It is expected that the replies will be favorable to the change. If they are the preliminaries will be quickly arranged and the park will probably be open by July 4.

WILL ATTEMPT TO OUST THEM

Defeated Candidates in Superior Begin Legal Action.

W. R. Hallam and Charles A. Swanson, who were the unsuccessful candidates for the offices of alderman and supervisor, respectively, from the Allouez district in Superior, Wis., have started a suit to oust Alderman Anthony Lally and Supervisor Edward Buchanan, the successful candidates at the recent election held in that city.

Hallam and Swanson allege that they received the requisite number of votes but that the inspectors of election unlawfully declared Lally and Buchanan to have been elected.

Former Alderman Hallam, after the votes were counted and he learned he had been defeated by the narrow margin of two, declared that the O'Hare interests had colonized the ward. He claims he should have been credited with eight more votes than Alderman Lally. He alleges that three of the votes cast for Lally were illegal for the reason that the men casting them were not residents of the state of Wisconsin. Other votes for Lally are claimed to have been defective and Hallam says that some which were cast for him and which the inspectors threw out were entirely legal.

Swanson's claims are of a somewhat similar nature.

The matter will come up for trial at the June term of the circuit court.

COOK WAS INSULTED

Attempted to Shoot Man Who Disparaged His Cooking.

Albert Helstrom Tried for Assault in Second Degree.

"The cook said he would kill me for 15 cents and that he would kill me if I came in to dinner. Idid not go in," testified Peter Winthrall, a six-foot tiemaker who was formerly employed at the Cloquet Lumber Company's Camp No. 5 near Rush Lake, and whom Albert Helstrom is accused of shooting at March 22 last.

Helstrom was indicted for assault in the second degree, although none of the bullets hit the mark for which he is said to have intended them. His trial began this morning, the first criminal case on the present term calendar. He is defended by C. E. Adams and is a well dressed young man much smaller than Winthrall.

According to the testimony given by Winthrall he returned to the tie camp about 4 o'clock in the afternoon of March 22 and proceeded to the sleeping shanty to take off his wet clothes. He claims that while he was sitting next the stove Helstrom entered partially under the influence of liquor and began flourishing a bottle of whisky. Helstrom accused Winthrall of making disparaging remarks about his cooking. Winthrall says he made such remarks and that Helstrom advanced toward him with the whisky bottle uplifted to strike, and that he sought to defend himself and struck Helstrom on the wrist with a stick of kindling wood, and the latter ran out of the shanty, making threats that he would kill Winthrall.

It was further testified by Winthrall that a few minutes later Helstrom returned with a revolver under his apron which he drew out and began shooting at him. Winthrall described to the jury how he jumped and dodged behind the stove and woodpile in the sleeping shanty while Helstrom was firing two shots. He said one of the bullets struck a stick of wood and threw splinters in his face.

Other men in the shanty are said to have induced Helstrom to stop his cannonading and he went out making threats against Winthrall.

Helstrom was arrested the next day after the shooting and has been held in the St. Louis county jail ever since, awaiting trial.

It is not known yet what his defense will be, but surmised that it will be self defense.

John Kelley, who was indicted for grand larceny, has withdrawn the demurrer he made to the indictment and will stand trial on his plea of not guilty. He is accused of stealing a watch in Superior, Wis., and of bringing it into Minnesota with intent to dispose of it in Duluth.

John Johnson appeared before Judge Dibell this morning and entered plea of guilty to an indictment charging grand larceny.

Steve Bukovich who was indicted for assault in the first degree also decided to plead guilty. Both men have been remanded to await their sentences.

It was expected that the case of the state against "Muckless" McLain, indicted for assault in the first degree, would be the first criminal action called for trial this term. McLain, it is rumored, has decided to plead guilty to assault in the second degree and his case will come up later. He struck a man by the name of Conway over the head with a piece of gas pipe. Conway received a severe wound but when he recovered he disappeared and has not since been found.

REMOVE WRECKAGE.

City is Requested to Clear Away Old Buildings on Point.

In a communication from the public affairs committee this morning, the board of public works was requested to take steps to cause the removal of the buildings on St. Croix avenue which were damaged by the big storm last November.

Some of the wreckage is still remaining and it is very unsightly.

The board was also commended for the stand it has taken in compelling contractors to quit blocking the streets with building material.

BOY'S DEATH LAID AT DOOR OF UNCLE

Well-to-do Farmer is Charged With Murdering His Nephew.

Menominee, Mich., May 7.—Charged with murdering Emil Johnson, the 21-year-old son of his wife's sister, on the night of March 28, 1901, Ole Johnson, a prosperous farmer, has just been released here under a $4,000 bail bond.

In addition to this case the officers are working on a clue which may result in another murder being laid at the door of the suspected man. About twenty years ago a Canadian Frenchman settled near Johnson's place. One night a few months after coming to the county the Frenchman disappeared from his home. Neighbors and old residents assert that circumstances pointed strongly to Ole Johnson as the man who made away with the settler.

Emil Johnson, then only 21, came here from Green Bay a few months before the murder and secured employment with his uncle, who has a large farm and cedar yards near Carney, a small town a few miles north of this city. He worked for his uncle for thirty days and was paid $20 for his services. He then left the house hurriedly to catch his train for Green Bay and was never seen alive since that time.

Ole Johnson is a miserly fellow, and has the reputation of hiding his money about the farm. In a drawer of a bureau of the house he kept some money, including a $5 and a $10 bill and some silver. It was out of this drawer that he paid his nephew.

Mrs. Johnson says she remembers distinctly that the $10 bill had a black ink spot in the center and that the $5 had one corner torn off. The theory is advanced that Emil Johnson had a sum of money saved up and that he had it on his person at the time he left the Ole Johnson home, and that it was for this money that he was killed.

Mrs. Ole Johnson says that her husband had been in the habit of getting up an early hour and taking his breakfast at about 6 o'clock. However, the morning after the nephew left Mrs. Johnson says her husband was up a little after 4. She says there had been a heavy storm the night before, and that on arising she could see the footprints made by her husband leading to an outhouse near the barns, where the employees of the farm and cedar yards had been accustomed to spend their leisure time.

Under this outhouse there was a deep excavation which had been used as a roothouse. Mrs. Johnson, when she arose, was surprised to find that there was no fire in the kitchen stove. She started a fire, prepared breakfast and went outside the house to call her husband. After waiting some time and receiving no answer, she called him again. After another interval she started toward the outhouse. A few rods from the house she was met by her husband, who told her to go back and eat breakfast. The meal was nearly two hours late.

After breakfast Mrs. Johnson went to the outhouse and was amazed to find that there was no fire in it and that the place was very cold. She also noticed that a box of sand which had been kept near the stove in case of fire had disappeared. A few days later, happening to look in the bureau, where her husband kept part of his money, she was surprised to find the $10 bill with the blot of ink in the center.

Mrs. Johnson says her husband grew morose and moody, and when she had callers invariably concealed himself about the farm or in the barns.

In spite of the many peculiar actions of her husband, Mrs. Johnson says she never suspected him of murder until a few months ago, when her sister wrote her from Green Bay, stating that Emil Johnson had been a youth of exemplary habits, and declaring that he must have been murdered, as he would not have left home without advising his parents.

This set Mrs. Johnson to thinking, and, after turning the matter over in her mind for some time, she advised her relatives at Green Bay of her suspicions, and action was taken by Martin Burke, uncle of the boy, which resulted in the arrest of Ole Johnson.

When Johnson was arrested he had a rifle, two shotguns, two revolvers and a long dagger on his person and about his house. To a neighbor he said the officers took him by surprise, and that if he had been given an opportunity to use his weapons there would have been a serious conflict.

Mrs. Johnson, Saturday, commenced divorce proceedings against her husband, and will move to Green Bay to make her home with relatives. If she is not allowed to testify against him the case may fall.

DOUVASSOFF HAS NARROW ESCAPE

Governor General of Moscow Wounded by Explosion of Bomb.

Moscow, May 7.—A bomb was thrown at the carriage of Vice Admiral Doubassoff, governor general of Moscow, as he was being driven to the palace yesterday. He was wounded in the foot and his aide de camp and sentry were killed. The man who threw the bomb is reported to have been killed. He wore an officer's uniform. Access to the palace is barred.

Gov. Gen. Doubassoff was returning in an open carriage from the Uspenski cathedral, and the outrage took place outside the carriage entrance to his palace. Several bystanders were injured.

Vice Admiral Doubassoff's life was saved by the poor aim of his would-be assassin. The bomb exploded on the pavement several paces to the rear of his carriage, hurling the mutilated corpse of the terrorist several yards and tearing off one arm and the face of an aide, who was descending from the carriage. Gov. Gen. Doubassoff was thrown under the horses' heels. His back was burned and his leg bruised, but he was able to walk unassisted into the palace.

The coachman's skull was fractured and he was taken to a hospital.

It is thought the assassin was the student in whose rooms a bomb exploded Saturday, killing three accomplices, but who at the time was watching the palace from a room in a hotel opposite.

TEN YEARS IN PRISON.

Goll Sentenced by Judge Quaries to Leavenworth Prison.

Milwaukee, May 7.—Henry G. Goll, former assistant cashier of the First National bank of this city, who was convicted on nineteen counts in the United States district court a week ago of misapplying a large amount of funds of the bank was late Saturday afternoon denied a new trial by Judge Quarles and sentenced to ten years in the military prison at Fort Leavenworth, Kansas, the sentence to begin at noon today. By an arrangement between counsel for the defendant and the United States marshal the prisoner will be allowed to remain in Milwaukee a few days before being taken to prison.

Counsel for Goll argued for a new trial the great part of the day, holding that under the statutes the court did not have jurisdiction to try he case at a special term. Other minor exceptions were also argued. United States District Attorney Butterfield held to the contrary and cited where the court had the power under special act of congress. Judge Quarles, after reviewing the argument of counsel for the defendant at considerable length and stating that the defendant had an absolutely fair trial, denied the motion for a new trial. A motion for an arrest of judgment was also denied.

The attorneys for the defendant thereupon gave notice of an appeal upon a writ of error to the circuit court of appeals and was granted forty-five days in which to file a bill of exceptions.

Upon being asked if he had anything to say before sentence was passed, Goll asserted that he was innocent of all the charges.

S.S.S. PURELY VEGETABLE

The fact that S. S. S. is a purely vegetable preparation, containing not the slightest trace of mineral in any form, has been one of the strongest points in its favor during its forty years of existence. It is recognized everywhere not only as the best of all blood purifiers, but the one medicine that can be taken with absolute safety by the youngest child or the oldest member of the family. Next in importance to removing the cause of any disease is the condition in which the system is left after a course of medical treatment. Medicines containing mercury, potash or other strong mineral ingredients often do permanent injury by eating out the delicate lining and tissues of the stomach, producing chronic dyspepsia, unfavorably affecting the bowels and so damaging the system that even if the original cause of the disease has been removed, it is left in such a deranged and weakened condition that the health is permanently impaired. S. S. S. enjoys the distinction of being the only blood medicine on the market that does not contain a mineral property in some form. Being made entirely of roots, herbs and barks it is absolutely harmless to any part of the system, and while curing disease adds strength and health to every part of the body. S. S. S. removes all poisons, freshens and purifies the blood and gives better and more lasting results than any other blood medicine. S. S. S. is the very best treatment for Rheumatism, Catarrh, Scrofula, Sores and Ulcers, Skin Diseases, Contagious Blood Poison and all troubles due to an impure or poisoned blood supply. Besides being the King of blood purifiers S. S. S. is the best and most invigorating of all tonics.

WILL TEST AN OLD LAW

John Kelley Demurs to an Indictment Charging Grand Larceny.

Held for Trial Here for Stealing in Wisconsin.

John Kelley, who was indicted on a charge of grand larceny in the second degree, has, through his attorney, John H. Norton, demurred to the indictment and intends to test one of the old statutes of the state of Minnesota that has been incorporated in the revised laws.

Kelley is charged with stealing a watch and chain from Robert McLean, in Superior, Wis. It is claimed that he brought the stolen property into this state and attempted to dispose of it at a second-hand store on the Bowery.

Ordinarily, a person who is arrested in one state for a crime committed in another, is taken back for trial at the place where the crime was committed. In this instance Kelley, who is charged with stealing in Wisconsin, is to be tried in Minnesota, and it is on the grounds that such procedure cannot be sustained by the courts he is demurring to the indictment.

So far as can be learned from the personal recollections of the county authorities, or the criminal records of St. Louis county, this is the first time the old law has been called into question, and for that reason it is of more than passing interest.

Section 5037 of the revised laws of Minnesota covers the offense, as follows:

"Every person who, at any place out of the state, shall have stolen the property of another, or received such property knowing it to have been stolen, and shall bring the same into the state, may be tried and punished in the same manner as if such larceny, or receiving, had been committed within the state, and the offense may be charged to have been committed, and an indictment found, and tried in any county into or through which the stolen property shall have been brought."

Kelley is to be tried, therefore, as if he had stolen the goods in this state and county.

It is understood that Kelley would have been delivered over to the Douglas county, Wis., authorities had they insisted on returning him to that state for trial, but as they are willing that his case shall be disposed of in Minnesota, he will have to face trial here, unless his attorney succeeds in getting the court to sustain the demurrer.

John Spejar and Joseph Sertich, who are indicted on charges of murder in the first degree, have entered pleas of not guilty, and Judge Dibell has appointed John H. Norton to defend Spejar, and J. D. Holmes to defend Sertich. The state charges that the two men killed Frank Peterson, near the old townsite of Aurora, several weeks ago. The state is getting its evidence ready and the trial will probably be reached in a week or two.

John Rhody, who was indicted on a charge of grand larceny in the second degree, has pleaded guilty. He has been remanded to the custody of the sheriff to await sentence. Rhody is said to have relieved a man of something over $50 in broad daylight on the streets of this city.

John Briggs who was indicted on a charge of burglary in the third degree, has pleaded not guilty. No attorney has been appointed yet to defend him. It is claimed that Briggs forced his entrance into a range saloon, while drunk.

Two other indicted persons were arraigned Saturday afternoon and were to plead today.

BATTLESHIP IS FLOATED

The Rhode Island Pulled Off Shoal by Four Naval Tugs.

Norfolk, May 7.—The battleship Rhode Island was floated last night after having been aground on the York Spit bar since Saturday morning. It was due to the efforts of four powerful naval tugs, the Uncas, Wahneta, Hercules and Mohawk that the big warship was drawn from the sandbar. She was floated at high tide at 6:30 o'clock yesterday afternoon. The United States cruiser Minneapolis stood by and saw the Rhode Island pulled off the shoals, and would have assisted in getting her off but for her inability to get a hawser aboard the battleship.

When the naval tugs reached the stranded warship, after a thirty mile run, from the Norfolk navy yard, they found the Rhode Island's bow high on the shoal at the eastern entrance to York river. Early yesterday morning the cruiser Minneapolis endeavored to get a line aboard the Rhode Island's stern, with the assistance of the naval tug Uncas. In maneuvering, the Uncas was in collision with the Rhode Island, and carried away part of her rail.

Later, the Mohawk went aground alongside the Rhode Island while passing a hawser aboard that vessel, but eventually got afloat.

Efforts to float the Rhode Island at high tide yesterday morning did not move the vessel. At low tide the battleship was drawing twenty-four feet of water aft and eighteen feet forward. Water was pumped from the forward tanks aft and every piece of movable material was shifted from the forward part of the ship with the view of lightering that quarter. In the afternoon the naval tugs tandemed up, at high tide for a try at the battleship. Their efforts were successful. The Rhode Island then dropped anchor in the mouth of York river and will come to Hampton Roads today.

The extent of the injury to the ship was not known last night. It develops that there was no native pilot taken aboard the vessel when she entered the capes. The Virginia pilots say that one was offered but refused. No other pilot would have undertaken to take the ship to York bay. The battleship is supposed to have passed in the Virginia capes at 4:40 o'clock Saturday morning. It took her probably three hours to get from the capes to the point at which she ran aground and if that is true, she went ashore at high water.

TWENTY-ONE ARE INDICTED

For Conspiracy to Secure Lands in Oregon Illegally.

Portland, Ore., May 7.—Late Saturday night United States District Attorney W. C. Bristol made public the names of twenty-one persons included in the final and most important government land fraud indictments returned by the federal grand jury, which yesterday brought its hearings to a conclusion and was discharged.

The indictments, which charge a far reaching and intricate conspiracy to secure 200,000 acres of some of the finest timber land in Oregan, in Crook, Lake and Kiamates counties, name F. W. Gilchrist, Ralph Gilchrist, Patrick Culligan and James McPherson, Alpena, Mich.; H. W. Stone, Brison, Minn.; C. A. Baron, M. W. S. Schlierholz, Little Rock, Ark.; Charles M. Elkins and Jack Combs, Princeville, Ore., and Benjamin F. Allen, Portland, Ore., doing business as "Elkins" syndicate. Judge F. M. Brink, Princeville; D. F. Steffa, editor of the Crook County Journal of Princeville; A. C. Palmer, and H. J. Palmer, lawyers, Portland; E. Dourgan, F. J. Devine and J. V. Collins, members of the law firm of Dourgen & Co., Albany, Or.; Malcolm McAlpin, merchant, Albany; J. W. Hopkins, Van Couver, Wash.; W. W. Brown, Seattle, Wash., attorney; T. H. Watkins, Princeville, and Edgar M. White, saloonkeeper, Portland.

If the allegations of the indictment are true, the mode of operation was similar to that used in nearly all the conspiracies which have been found in the state.

Warrants will be issued at once for the arrest of the accused.

Alpena, Mich., May 7.—F. W. Gilchrist, who is included in the indictments found by a federal grand jury at Portland, Or., says he has no knowledge of any land frauds in Oregon. His son was in Oregon this spring and bought some land, but Mr. Gilchrist declares the transaction was correct and proper in every respect.

Accidents will happen, but the best-regulated families keep Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil for such emergencies. It subdues the pain and heals the hurts.

MYSTERIOUS SHOOTING AFFRAY IN TENNESSEE.

Nashville, Tenn., May 7.—Marvin Winters was killed and Thomas Stewart and his young daughter severely wounded during a shooting affray at Stewart's home, near Pleasant View, Cheatham county, Saturday night. The cause of the shooting is a mystery.

A few days ago Stewart received a letter warning him that if he and his family did not leave the neighborhood within ten days, they would all be killed.

About 11 o'clock Saturday night, a mob surrounded Stewart's house and opened fire on it and Stewart and his daughter were wounded. Stewart returned the shots and the mob scattered. Yesterday morning the body of Winters was found about fifty yards from Stewart's home.

No explanation whatever can be secured to account for the action of the mob nor has any light been so far shed on how Winters came to his death.

TRADE WITH BRAZILIANS

Larger Than With Any Other South American Country.

Third Among Countries From Which Our Imports Are Drawn.

Washington, May 7.—(Special to The Herald.)—Trade of the United States with Brazil aggregates $110,000,0000, a larger sum than with any other country of South America, and is only exceeded by our trade with the United Kingdom, Germany, France, Canada, and Cuba. Brazil stands third in rank among the countries from which our imports are drawn; on the export side of our statement, however, Brazil stands twentieth among the countries to which American merchandise is sent. The United States uses in manufacturing industries practically one-half of the crude india rubber produced in the world, and her people consume more than one-half of the coffee grown. As Brazil is the world's largest producer of india rubber and coffee, her sales to the United States are large, but as her principal ports lie upon the beaten track of vessels engaged in trade between Europe and South America, and as her merchants and consumers are of European origin and closely identified with European business interests and customs, she draws most of her imports from Europe.

The total value of Brazil's imports in 1904 was $130,000,000, while the exports of the United States to Brazil in that year were less, than $11,000,000 her total exports in 1904 were $192,000,000 and our imports were $95,000,000, so that we take about one-half of her exports while we supply but a small share of her imports. Our imports from Brazil are far larger than those from any other South American country, having been in the fiscal year 1905, according to the reports issued by the department of commerce and labor through its bureau of statistics, $99,-843,094, against $15,354,901 from Argentina and $11,071,613 from Chile. Indeed, merchandise from Brazil formed in 1905 practically two-thirds of the imports from all South America. On the other hand, the exports to Brazil were in 1905 but $10,985,096, against $23,-564,066 to Argentina, and formed less than one-fifth of our total exports to South America.

In 1905 imports into the United States from Brazil exceeded exports thereto by nearly $90,000,000. This large excess of imports over exports, a much larger excess of imports than occurs with any other country, has always characterized the trade between the United States and Brazil. As a result of the demand for coffee and india rubber, the excess of imports over exports in our trade with Brazil has seldom fallen below $50,000,000 in the last twenty years, and was in 1900 over $88,000,000. The total value of imports into the United States from Brazil from 1867 to 1905 was $2,158,095,-230 and the total exports to Brazil in that period $372,707,684, making the excess of imports over exports during that time $1,785,387,546.

Of the practically $100,000,000 worth of imports from Brazil in 1905, $61,000,-000 was coffee, $28,000,000 india rubber, $2,750,000 hides and skins, $1,250,000 sugar, and $1,250,000 cocoa. In coffee importations, there has been a steady growth in quantity, though the values have fluctuated by reason of changes in prices. The total quantity of coffee imported from Brazil in 1905 was 920,-000,000 pounds, against 596,000,000 in 1900, 435,000,000 in 1895, and 310,000,000 in 1890.

The exports to Brazil, which amounted in 1905 to $10,985,096, include a very large number of articles, mineral oil showing the largest total, with $2,-456,645; flour, $1,225,565; lumber, $621,-433; locomotives, $117,086; other steam engines, $105,733; sewing machines, $142,165; other machinery of iron and steel, $363,549; agricultural implements, $151,715; cotton cloths, colored, $552,-827; and cotton cloths, uncolored, $183,-090.

Comparing conditions in 1905 with those of 1895, the total exports to Brazil show a fall from $15,165,079 in 1895 to $10,985,086 in 1905. This decrease occurs chiefly in provisions. Bacon exports to Brazil in 1895 amounted to $1,-598,394, and in 1905 to $77,021; lard in 1895 amounted to $1,141,128, and in 1905, to $190,220. Flour exports also show a marked decrease, having been in 1895, $2,683,948, and in 1905, $1,225,565. This reduction in our exports of meats and flour to Brazil is doubtless due to the increased supply offered by her much nearer neighbor, Argentina. Locomotive exports were also far less in value in 1905 than in 1895; the figures of 1895, $1,648,758, were much larger than those of any other recent year, and have been gradually reduced being in 1905 only $117,086. Cotton cloths also show a decline compared with a decade earlier, the number of yards exported to Brazil in 1895 having been $22,500,000, and in 1895, $9,500,000 and the value in 1895, $1,594,726, and in 1905, $745,962. The official reports of the Brazilian government show that of the total imports of Brazil in 1904, the latest available year, 27.7 per cent was drawn from the United Kingdom, 12.7 per cent from Germany, 11.1 per cent from the United States, 8.9 per cent from France, and 8.6 per cent from Italy.

KING GIVES DINNER.

Rome, May 7.—King Victor Emmanuel and Queen Helena last night gave a dinner in honor of the delegates of the International Postal congress. Edward Rosewater, of Omaha, and Captain N. M. Brooks, superintendent of foreign mails of the United States postoffice department, attended. After the dinner their majesties conversed with the delegates.

Dear Doctor—

I owe you so much—for you saved my Mama's life—She was awful sick—the Doctor came and Papa cried—so did I—The Doctor could not help her—but Aunt Emma—She told Mama to take Dr. Pierce's Favorate Prescription—and so she got well in nough time.

I thank you very much

To Dr. R. V. Pierce. Enid Decker.

Many mothers of families in the United States have reason to be grateful to the person who recommended Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. This is a medicine specially prescribed for diseases of womankind. It does not cure eczema, catarrh in all its forms, nor heart disease, for it is put up for the single purpose of curing diseases peculiar to women. It has a reputation of over a third of a century of cures, and has sold more largely on this continent than any other medicine for women. Another point in its favor—it does not contain a single drop of alcohol or harmful habit-forming drugs. It is purely vegetable and perfectly harmless in any condition of the system. An alcoholic compound for women is something no woman should take and yet "Favorite Prescription" is the only tonic and nervine put up for sale through druggists, especially for woman's weaknesses, that does not contain alcohol and that too in large quantities. Womanly weakness will always bring nervous irritability and a nervous condition, for which alcohol is the worst thing in the world. What a woman thus afflicted needs is a vegetable tonic and invigorating nervine like Doctor Pierce's Favorite Prescription, which will build up her delicate system and bring about a healthy tone. It cures the drains and weaknesses of women, also displacements, as prolapsus, anteversion, retroversion, irregular and painful periods and kindred ailments.

If you want to know what ails you the United States mail will bring you the best medical advice for only the cost of writing materials and stamps.

Many women owe their present good health to the fact that they consulted Dr. Pierce by letter, giving him all possible information about their condition, symptoms, etc., and received in return good medical advice which cost them nothing. This is why we advise you to write to Dr. R. V. Pierce, the founder of the Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, at Buffalo, N. Y.

Dr. Pierce by no means confines himself to prescribing his well-known proprietary medicines. He tells you in the most common-sense way what is you, what you ought to do, what line of treatment should be followed out in your particular case, and if your case does not indicate the need of his proprietary medicine, he tells you plainly and frankly what you do need, and the best possible method of improving your health. If you are a young woman just entering upon the duties of life, you should have good medical advice of a confidential nature. If you're the mother of children, you may want advice about yourself and how best to put your system in order that your children may be healthy. To sufferers from chronic diseases which do not readily yield to treatment, or to people who are past the youthful stage of life and want confidential advice about their ailments or their physical condition, Dr. Pierce offers careful consideration and the best medical advice within his power, free of cost.

"'Favorite Prescription' is indeed an ideal medicine for women, and by far the best I have known to restore lost health and strength," writes Mrs. R. C. Roelker, 24 Ingram Street, Henderson, Ky. "I suffered misery for several years, being troubled with flooding. My back ached and I had bearing-down pains and frequent headaches. Would often awake from sleep in such pain and suffering it would be hours before I could close my weary eyes again. I dreaded the long nights as well as the weary days. Consulted two different physicians hoping to get relief, but finding that their medicine did not seem to cure me I tried Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, as a friend had recommended it so strongly. Am glad that I followed her advice for it was the only medicine for me. Every ache and pain has gone, and not only this, my general health has improved. I feel well and strong, have a fine appetite, have gained flesh and never looked better. My advice to suffering women is to take the 'Favorite Prescription' and they will never be disappointed with the results." Formula printed on wrapper.

The Autobiography of an Elderly Woman

In Everybody's for May, a dear old lady, with a gentle and kindly pen, tells how her grown-up children, with the best intentions in the world, are making her life miserable by their over-devotion.

The story of a rich life full of golden memories. Beautiful! But oh! if young people only knew how their old mothers and fathers loved to share both the joys and sorrows of their life of today!

HEINZE SLATED FOR THE SENATE

Deal by Which He Will Succeed Clark is Reported.

F. AUGUSTUS HEINZE.

New York, May 7.—Within twenty-four hours after the announcement by United States Senator William A. Clark of Montana, that he will not be a candidate for re-election next year, comes the statement that his successor will be his former business and political foe, F. Augustus Heinze, another copper man, and that Heinze's election as Clark's successor is part of the deal by which the long and bitter war between the Amalgamated and Heinze copper interests was settled last February.

This announcement of a big political surprise is made on the authority of a man who has large interests in Montana and is in a position to know the details of the Amalgamated-Heinze settlement, which have never been published.

Though formerly allied in politics and friendly in business the two have been enemies for the last five years. Senator Clark gradually drew away from Mr. Heinze and in late years has been on friendly terms with the Amalgamated interests. This placed him in an attitude of antagonism to Mr. Heinze and until the news of Mr. Clark's refusal to stand for re-election was published, it was taken for granted that the next Montana legislature would see a battle royal between the two foe for the honors.

Only by the explanation that Heinze's election to the senate was pledged in the deal ending the copper war can Montanans in this city understand the voluntary withdrawal of Mr. Clark.

Both Clark and Heinze are Democrats, but each is a copper producer, and in Montana of late years, the various "copper parties" have been more in evidence in the campaign than the political parties. Sometimes the state goes Republican, sometimes Democratic, but always it goes with one or the other great copper interests. With the Amalgamated, the Clark interests and the Heinze now in harmony, it is not venturing to the realms of dangerous prophesy to foretell the election of a Democratic legislature next fall and the subsequent election of F. Augustus Heinze to the senate.

At present Montana has one Republican in the United States senate, Thomas H. Carter. Mr. Carter is allied with the Amalgamated-Standard Oil interests in the state, and the elements which were favorable to him at home should now become friendly to Heinze.

HAWKINS IS OUT OF RACE

No Longer Candidate for Nomination for Lieutenant Governor.

Believes Withdrawal is Wise Under Existing Circumstances.

Senator E. B. Hawkins is no longer a candidate for the nomination of lieutenant governor. He returned yesterday from Tarpon Springs, Fla., where he spent the winter. As was expected would be the case, he announced during the day that he had decided to withdraw from the race.

"St. Louis county should have absolutely an undivided delegation at the Republican state convention in June," said the senator, "to work for the best interests of Northern Minnesota, and to further this I think it will be better if I get out of the contest altogether. I believe it will be best for St. Louis county to have no candidate of its own for a state office at the coming convention. The delegation from here will then be able to work far more effectively for the interests of this part of the state.

"I cannot too freely express my gratitude to the friends who have helped along my candidacy thus far, and who expressed pleasure at the idea of my getting into the field, but I think it is best under the circumstances, that I should not stand for the nomination. I consider that the prospects for a Republican victory in the state this year are very good. Several excellent men are talked of to head the Republican ticket, and it looks as if the ticket ought to be a strong one from top to bottom."

Senator Hawkins says that business throughout the country is booming, and that the lake strike is the only obstacle in the path of general prosperity for the season. The Drake & Stratton company, of which the senator is vice-president, is employing 1,200 men on the Mesaba range, which is a full force. The company, he says, expects to move about 3,000,000 cubic yards of material this year.

Postmaster Robbed.

G. W. Fouts, postmaster at Riverton, Iowa, nearly lost his life and was robbed of all comfort, according to his letter, which says: "For twenty years I had chronic liver complaint, which led to such a severe case of jaundice that even my finger nails turned yellow; when my doctor prescribed Electric Bitters; which cured me and have kept me well for eleven years." Sure cure for Biliousness, Neuralgia, Weakness and all Stomach, Liver, Kidney and Bladder derangements. A wonderful Tonic. At all drug stores. 50 cents.

DANIEL O'DAY SICK, TOO.

Chief of Standard Oil Offshoots on Trust's Ailing List.

New York, May 7.—Daniel O'Day has joined the list of Standard Oil sick men. He has succumbed to the strain of overwork. His physicians have ordered him to take a long rest. He is arranging his affairs for a long stay abroad. He plans to go first to Aix-Les-Bains in about two weeks.

His town house in West Seventy-second street, valued at $125,000, and his stables, valued at $36,000, have been closed and placed on the market. The country home at Deal Beach, N. J., which Mr. O'Day built about five years ago, will also be sold, it is said. This property represents an outlay of $1,000,000.

Mr. O'Day has for years been the active head of several of the Standard's subsidary companies.

PALON GETS OFF WITH ASSAULT INDICTMENT.

Faribault, Minn., May 7.—Dick Palon has been indicted for assault in the second degree. Last March he became involved in a fight with Patrick Shea in the town of Dundas, both being drunk. Shea was knocked down and kicked and jumped upon.

Later both men left the saloon, where they had been drinking, and the next morning the conductor of a freight train found the dead body of a man beside the track. It was Shea's, and the popular opinion is that he was killed by Palon and his body placed on the track to hide the crime. However, no one can prove it, and he has been indicted simply for assault.

Charles Sammon of the town of Warsaw, was struck by lightning and instantly killed. He was 19.

Erick Erickson was killed by falling twenty-five feet from a scaffold on which he was working.

MOTHER GOES TO DIE; SON TO TAKE A BRIDE.

New York, May 7.—Two of the passengers on the St. Louis attracted considerable attention as the steamship left port Saturday. They were Mrs. Matilda Rogers, 70 years old, and her grandson, John L. Rogers. Mrs. Rogers sailed with the idea of ending her days in her old home in England, while her grandson will end a five-year courtship by marrying the girl he left behind when he came to this country.

Mrs. Rogers came to this country in 1860 and, her husband dying, became a nurse in the Civil war. She was wounded at the battle of Shiloh. After the war she supported herself by sewing, being a needlework expert. Five years ago her grandson joined her and they lived on a little farm in Ohio.

A few years ago Mrs. Rogers' eyesight failed and when John decided to return to England to marry and settle down there, she decided to go, too. The last the watchers on the pier saw of her as the St. Louis went down the river, she was energeitically waving a small American flag.

DYING OF STARVATION.

Albert Lea Man Found Almost Lifeless in Hay Stack.

Des Moines, Iowa, May 7.—J. W. Unwin, formerly of Albert Lea, a telegraph operator, was found dying on a hay stack near Oskaloosa. He had been without food two weeks and was unable to move. He had been kept alive by eating an occasional wisp of straw.

MAD DOG BITES MAN WHO SAVES CHILDREN.

Collinsville, Tex., May 7.—R. S. Godsey was terribly bitten by a mad dog Saturday while he fought with the rabid animal to divert its rage from a party of school children.

Just as he was nearing his home he met several boys and girls running wildly in his direction and screaming that a mad dog was pursuing them. Just behind them he saw a huge Newfoundland dog with eyes ablaze and shaggy coat dripping with green foam from its mouth

He walked toward the animal, attempting to seize its throat, but missed, catching its shoulders instead. A desperate encounter ensued, the dog ripping and tearing flesh from his antagonist's arms and body. Godsey was bitten fifteen times before neighbors arrived and shot the dog to death.

He was at once taken to the Pasteur institute in Austin, but even should the treatment prevent hydrophobia, he can hardly recover from the wounds he received.

BACK FROM THE BRULE.

Governor Johnson Has Enjoyable and Successful Fishing Trip.

Governor John A. Johnson and party were in Duluth yesterday, returning to St. Paul from a fishing trip to the Brule river. With the governor were Mrs. Johnson, Miss Agnes Peterson and Misses Mary and Rachel O'Brien of St. Paul. Governor and Mrs. Johnson left on the night train for St. Paul, but the others will remain in Duluth for a few days visiting with friends. While on the Brule they were guests at C. D. O'Brien's fishing and hunting lodge. Judge W. B. Hook of Leavenworth, of the United States court of appeals, was a guest at the lodge at the same time.

The governor said everyone in the party had a fine time, and that fishing was exceptionally good. He gives Judge Hook credit for being the best fisherman in the crowd.

PATTERSON A CANDIDATE

Is Looking For the Republican Nomination For Sheriff.

Possibility That E. L. Fisher and J. H. Bishop Will File.

Robert E. Patterson, former boiler inspector, has filed for the Republican nomination for sheriff. Retiring Postmaster E. L. Fisher is talked of as another possible candidate, and it is said the labor interests, or a certain part of them, are advancing the name of James H. Bishop, a tug engineer, as a candidate for the Republican nomination for sheriff.

The rather unpleasant light into which three of the sheriffalty candidates who had already filed were thrown by the publication of the Armstead letter and Miles-Bates agreement has appeared to weaken the chances of these men, in the minds of some, at least, and encouraged others to lay themselves open for the nomination, provided the proper amount of sentiment in their favor is displayed.

Mr. Fisher returned from Deerwood yesterday. He was surprised that his name should have been mentioned in connection with the office of sheriff, and said that no thought of entering the race for the position had entered his mind, and that none of his friends had even suggested such a thing to him. Mr. Fisher has been prominently mentioned as a candidate, however, and it is believed that he is in a receptive frame of mind, and could, with the proper amount of pressure, be prevailed upon to run.

"I haven't given any thought to the matter at all," he said, "and don't want to be looked upon as a perennial office-seeker."

Mr. Bishop himself hasn't announced that he will get into the game, but his friends among the laboring men say an effort is being made to have him announce his candidacy.

BATTLESHIP BUT LITTLE INJURED

The Rhode Island Struck on a Soft Muddy Bottom.

Norfolk, Va., May 7.—The United States battleship Rhode Island, which went ashore on York Spit Saturday, while en route from Boston to the York river target grounds and was successfully floated last evening by the United States cruiser Minneapolis and the naval tugs Hercules, Mohawk, Wahneta and Uncas, is thought to be but little, if any, injured, as she struck on mud bottom. The ship at the time she struck was proceeding at the rate of 10 knots an hour. Her commander lost his bearings to some extent and went too close to the channel buoys. The Rhode Island draws from 26 to 28 feet of water.

In the event an examination of her bottom by divers proves that the Rhode Island needs to be docked for repairs naval officials said today she will probably return North for this purpose as the present docks at the Norfolk navy yard are not sufficiently large to receive her.

THE SUMMER SCHOOL

Of University of California Will be Held, Despite Earthquake.

Berkeley, Cal., May 7.—President Wheeler has definitely announced that the summer session of the university of California will be held from June 25 to August 4. While the university suffered very heavily by the loss of income property in the San Francisco fire, the university buildings and their contents at Berkeley suffered very little damage. The university work will continue as usual, as soon as the refugees, who are housed in the various buildings on the campus have been cared for.

In consideration of the fact that the university cadets will probably be employed for some time further in guarding property, and the women students of the university will be busy with the relief work, the academic council has voted to suspend the rules, which require that final examinations be given before marks for the term can be filed with the recorder. The students will be passed in their subjects on the basis of the term's work, which was within one week of completion at the time of the earthquake. In cases where the instructor is doubtful as to the students having satisfactorily done the work of the course, examination will be deferred until the opening of college next August. Commencement exercises will be held. The date of the exercises and the form they will take will be announced later.

WIFE SEES MAN KILLED.

Engineer Meets Horrible Death Under a Huge Locomotive.

Winnipeg, Man., May 7.—J. J. Wolsey, a Canadian Pacific engineer, met a horrible death at Edmonton yesterday in the presence of his young wife. He was ascending the steps of the locomotive when the injector burst, filling the cab with steam. Wolsey jumped, but the motor released the throttle and the big engine sprang forward, throwing Wolsey to the ground, the wheels passing over his neck.

MURDERER IS SANE.

Dr. Oliver Haugh is Now Due to be Electrocuted.

Dayton, Ohio, May 7.—Dr. Oliver C. Haugh, triple murderer, was declared by a jury to be sane. The only thing that stands between him and electrocution now is interference upon the part of Governor Pattison or the board of pardons, and it is not expected that either will intervene.

Haugh was declared by experts to be shamming insanity. Last year he murdered his father, mother and brother near here, then set the house afire. The bodies were cremated.

"THE FACT IS,"

Said a customer today, "that one can buy clothes at your store for even less price than the many stores that make a specialty of the cheaper or lower grade garments!

"I found this out to my own satisfaction today, after shopping in about every store that makes a pretense of selling women's garments!

"I saw nothing at under forty-five to fifty dollars that seemed to have the style and quality that this suit, for which I am paying you thirty, has!

"They didn't seem to have the cut nor the hang that your garments have—and, as for materials, they did not begin to compare!

"Their suits seemed to all look alike to me!—None of that individuality and smartness that seems to characterize your garments!

"When some of my friends talked to me about your store and your goods, I used to think they were perhaps over-enthusiastic, but since I've paid more attention, I myself can see the difference! I don't wonder that women sing the praises of your garments!

"I used to think it impossible to get that individuality and exclusiveness unless I paid a very high price to some modiste or tailor, but I've changed my mind very materially. I find that I can get more real style and character in the clothes I buy at this store!"

Talk, you say?

Not a bit of it—we can convince you, just as we've convinced this lady, and dozens of others who were willing to be convinced! You will see the best kind of an example in our present displays—whether you expect to pay seventy-five, sixty, fifty or forty, you will find that the above argument holds good!

In our display of suits at $35.00, $32.50, $27.50, $25.00 and even twenty-two fifty and eighteen fifty—you will find that same care and attention has been given to every little detail—!

We do not sell suits for a less price than $18.50 because we can't give you the "Gidding" kind of a garment for less than that price—!

WHEAT HAS A DECLINE

Prices for July Option Lower in All American Markets.

Flax Materially Stronger in the Duluth Market.

Duluth Board of Trade, May 7.—Wheat declined in most of the American markets today, despite higher cables and rumors of drouth in some parts of Russia. The world's shipments were about as estimated. Prices were firm at the opening, but broke toward the close. Liverpool closed ½d to ¼d higher, Paris unchanged to 20c lower, Antwerp unchanged, Berlin ⅜c lower and Budapest ¼c higher.

The amount of wheat on passage increased 248,000 bus., and the amount of corn, 1,506,000 bus.

The May option closed ¼c lower in Duluth, Chicago and St. Louis, was ¼c up in Minneapolis, ½c off in New York, a shade off in Kansas City and unchanged in Winnipeg. The July option closed ¼c lower in Duluth and Minneapolis, ⅛-¼c off in Chicago, and ¼c in New York, St. Louis, Kansas City and Winnipeg.

Corn was stronger, the July option being ¼c higher. Corn was ⅛d to ⅜d higher in Liverpool. July oats closed a shade higher in Chicago.

World's shipments of wheat and corn last week, the week previous and the corresponding week last year, were as follows:

	WHEAT. Last Week.	Previous Week.	Last Year.
America	1,872,000	2,272,000	1,664,000

1st page.

Car receipts at Duluth were 22, against 1 last year, and at Minneapolis 214, against 152 last year, making a total for the Northwest of 236, against 153 last year. Chicago received 6, against 2 last year. Winnipeg received 205, against 46 last year.

Primary receipts of wheat were 394,000 bus; last year, 198,000 bus. Shipments, 227,000 bus; last year, 200,000 bus. Clearances of wheat and flour aggregated 359,000 bus.

The visible supply of wheat decreased 2,700,000 bus, and is now 38,431,000 bus, against 26,335,000 bus last year.

Primary receipts of corn were 581,000 bus; last year, 159,000 bus. Shipments, 358,000 bus; last year, 313,000 bus. Clearances of corn were 268,000 bus. The visible supply of corn decreased 518,000 bus, and is now 3,381,000 bus, against 8,904,000 bus last year.

Wheat was quiet during the entire session of the Duluth market. May wheat opened ¼c higher at 80¼c, advanced to 80¾c, and declined to 80¼c, closing at 79⅞c, a loss of ⅛c from Saturday. July wheat opened ⅛c higher at 80⅝c, advanced to 80½c at 9:35, declined to 80⅜c at 9:50, rallied to 80½c at 10:20, declined to 80c at 1:10 and closed at 80c, a loss of ½c from Saturday. September wheat closed unchanged at 78c.

Flax was active and stronger at the opening, but it became quiet later in the session, although prices held firm and later advanced. Flax was ⅞c lower in London. Some was worked for export by Duluth exporters. May flax opened 1c higher at $1.15½, declined to $1.15 and closed at $1.15¾, a gain of ⅜c over Saturday. July flax opened ½c higher at $1.16½, advanced to $1.17½, declined to $1.16¾, rallied to $1.17⅜ and closed at $1.17⅜, a gain of 1⅜c over Saturday.

THE CHICAGO MARKET.

Wheat Active and Firm Opening, Unchanged to Higher.

Chicago, May 7.—The wheat market today at the opening was active and firm. July opened unchanged to ⅛-¼c higher at 79¼c to 79⅜@¾c, advanced to 79⅝@¾c and declined to 79½c, where for a time it held steady. Minneapolis, Duluth and Chicago reported receipts of 244 cars, against 274 cars last week and 155 cars one year ago.

A sharp break in May, due to profit-taking, carried July to 78⅞c. The close was easy, with July off ⅛ at 79c.

The corn market was very dull and prices were steady. July opened a shade lower to a shade higher at 45⅞c to 46c advanced to 46@46¼c, and reacted to 45⅞@46c. Local receipts were 148 cars with 31 of contract grade.

The market became weak and the close was ⅛@⅜c below the close of Saturday, at 45⅜c for July.

The oats market was quiet. July opened at 31c and sold up to 31⅛c. Local receipts were 185 cars.

Provision were firm. July pork opened 7½c higher at $16.17½. Lard was up 2½ to 5c at $8.40@8.42½. Ribs were up 2½c at $7.52½.

Grain Gossip.

Logan & Bryan, Chicago: Wheat—Market closed with a small fractional loss for the day. Ordinarily traders would expect an active market when prices show 2¼c range, as they did today on May wheat, but the trade was small, and in the main unimportant. A buying order for a limited amount caused a sharp advance, at which point a little selling appeared, which brought out some uncovering of stop orders, resulting in a sharp break. Prices subsequently reacting and advancing steadily, with May closing 1½c above the low point. There seemed to be no evidence of the recognized leaders in May doing anything in the market. There has been for some time a little crowd of little people operating on the long side of the May month, and it is believed their changing around today caused the violent break and subsequent recovery. We see nothing in the market on which to base permanent bullish hopes. The government report coming on Thursday will settle to a certain extent the much discussed question as to whether or not winter wheat crop has deteriated since April report was issued. The reports by the various states so far would indicate that crop conditions are very favorable.

Corn—Cash people were the prominent sellers in today's market and seemed to have July or September on sale right from the opening. The decline was not far-reaching, but nevertheless suggests that the period of small receipts from first hands is about over. Farm work is about completed and with vast stocks held in the country, a larger acreage under cultivation this year than last, it seems as though it will be hard to maintain higher prices.

Wisconsin Grain & Stock company: Wheat opened higher on stronger Liverpool cables and good demand from shorts and speculators, who bought on report of delayed seeding by wet weather and heavy frost in spring wheat territory. Broomhall sent out word saying the foreign crop outlook was not nearly as favorable as had been expected, and complaints of drought in Southeastern Russia were also received. There is a very strong possibility that these reports will be confirmed, that the wheat ready for shipment at the Head of the Lakes will move more freely towards the seaboard. We think that wheat around the present level is a very unsafe article to sell short, as we are now drifting into the period of the year when crop scares are numerous and shorts are forced to cover their sales at a loss, and we would rather favor purchases of July, especially if it works back any from present prices.

• • •

Chicago Record-Herald: Government figures on the condition of winter wheat and the area abandoned will be issued Thursday. Judging from the state reports thus far issued, there should be a moderate improvement as compared with the April report. This was the case last year when the condition of 91.6 on April 1 had improved to 92.5 by May 1. There was, however, a large abandonment area last year—1,432,000 acres—thus pulling down the crop prospect, despite the improved condition of the remaining acreage. By harvest time the winter wheat condition had been reduced to 82.7.

• • •

Chicago Record-Herald: The wheat bears have been disappointed in that the 2,500,000 bushels of winter wheat that not proved a football to be kicked around at will. Those who have the property evidently have an expanding view of the value of it each day, despite weakness in new crop months, and there are many others who have bought the grain for delivery this month who have not yet received it. Each day develops something new in the estimate of the short interest. Delivery day it was not hard for the shorts to keep under cover, now that delivery day has passed and many small millers and speculators have not received their wheat it is becoming more difficult for the bears to retain the grain. There are new corn fronted with the opposition of covering a large amount of short wheat in a narrow market, in which the previous purchases by smaller millers make a steadily diminishing supply.

Stock Gossip.

Chicago Journal: Nearly every big steamship in the Transatlantic ferry at either bringing gold to New York or taking securities from Wall street to Europe. They come with gold and go back with the securities. This is going to make a big impression upon our situation. The inflow of gold is greater than the outgoing of securities, but the fact that we are placing large amounts of securities on the other side means that we have a better claim to the gold than if it were being imported merely as the result of temporary necessities. International bankers reported early in the week that the foreign buying of our securities had halted, because prices were breaking so badly as to arouse uneasiness, but, as the market shows signs of having got itself in hand, the foreign buying will increase, following prices up rather than down.

• • •

Logan & Bryan to Paine, Webber & Co.: The market closed strong, with tone much improved. Opening prices were adversely affected by lower quotations from abroad, declines at the opening being from ¼ to 1¼ lower than Saturday. Market through most of the day ranged irregular and nervous, but in the last half hour strength in specialties like Brooklyn Rapid Transit, Colorado Fuel & Iron and Reading caused what looked to be extensive short covering. We have not as yet been able to distinguish anything but short covering and buying of stocks for supporting purposes. The unsettlement in the insurance field, we feel, will continue to operate against extensive commitments on the long side. The market is likely to be a trading one, with sales on the bulges advisable.

STRENGTH EXHIBITED

By Stocks at the Close, With Tone Much Improved.

Market Through Most of Day Ruled Irregular and Nervous.

New York, May 7.—A majority of the important stocks were under pressure at the opening of business in the stock market today, especially St. Paul, Union Pacific, Reading, Great Northern preferred and Copper, while losses ranged from 1 to 1⅜. On the other hand, there were quite a few specialties and active railroads that opened at good improvements. Lead and Colorado Fuel improved 1; American Ice, 1⅜, and Pacific Coast, 2⅜.

The hesitation and depression at the start was not prolonged, prices rising strongly when large buying orders came in for Reading and the grain carriers. Reading rallied from 124⅞ to 128⅝, but weakened under a tremendous realizing and fell back 1½. Full recoveries were made in the general market, and a number of leaders eventually sold at much above Saturday's close as they had opened below. A feature of the market was the strength of many of the metal specialties. Reading advanced again easily to 3½ over Saturday, but the general list did not rise as high as in the first hour. There were some gains in industrial stocks. Bonds were irregular at noon.

Stocks yielded easily after midday, in sympathy with a 3-point reaction, in Reading. The Hill stocks betrayed noticable weakness, and there was a general return to the low prices prevailing at the opening or below. Northern Pacific dropped 3½. Anaconda 4¼ and Great Northern preferred 5¾.

Spasmodic rallies were very poorly maintained, the market meeting considerable offerings as prices improved, and the market was allowed to sag back to the lowest. Business was but little more than nominal during the greater part of the hour. International Pump, exceptionally, moved up 5 points.

The United States Steel sold at 38½, a loss of a point, and Erie first preferred declined a point.

Reading's influence upon the market was reaffirmed when it rose again to 125⅜, after losing all but half a point of its gain and prices at some other points recovered to the top level. Chicago & Alton recovered ¼ of Saturday's loss. Brooklyn Transit rose 3⅝. Colorado Fuel 2 and Colorado & Southern 1⅝. The recoveries were partly held again. The closing was irregular.

SUMMONS IN APPLICATION FOR REGISTRATION OF LAND.—(Torrens No. 382.)

State of Minnesota, County of St. Louis, ss.
District Court, Eleventh Judicial District.
In the matter of the application of American Carbolite Company, a corporation, to register the title to the following described real estate situated in St. Louis County, Minnesota, namely: Lots One (1) and Two (2) in Block Sixty-seven (67) West Duluth, Second Division, according to the recorded plat thereof,—and also that piece or parcel of land described as follows:

Beginning at the Southwesterly corner of Block Fifty-one (51) on the plat of West Duluth, First Division, according to the record of said plat, in the office of the Register of Deeds of said County of St. Louis and State of Minnesota; thence extending easterly along the southerly line of Blocks Fifty-one (51), Fifty (50) and Forty-nine (49) in said plat of West Duluth, First Division, four hundred and seventy (470) feet to a point; thence extending southerly on a line at right angles with the last mentioned line, seven hundred and seven (707) feet more or less to a point on the northwesterly line of the right-of-way of the Duluth Transfer Railway Company, as heretofore deeded to it (the same now being the property of the Northern Pacific Railway Company); thence extending southwesterly along the northwesterly line of said right-of-way as deeded to said Duluth Transfer Railway Company, by the various courses and distances thereof to its intersection with the easterly line of Central Avenue, as platted on the plat of West Duluth, First Division, aforesaid, prolonged south, which avenue is also known as Fifty-fifth Avenue West; thence extending northerly on said prolonged easterly line of Central Avenue, nine hundred and fourteen (914) feet more or less to the place of beginning, containing eight and 97-100ths (8-95) acres of land more or less. Applicant, vs.

Thomas Lowry and all other persons or parties unknown, claiming any right, title, estate, lien or interest in the real estate described in the application herein, Defendants.

The State of Minnesota to the above named defendants:

You are hereby summoned and required to answer the application of the applicant in the above entitled proceeding and to file your answer to the said application in the office of the clerk of said court, in said county, within twenty (20) days after the service of this summons upon you, exclusive of the day of such service, and, if you fail to answer the said application within the time aforesaid, the applicant in this proceeding will apply to the court for the relief demanded therein.

Witness, J. P. Johnson, clerk of said court, and the seal thereof, at Duluth, in said county, this twenty-eighth day of April, A. D. 1906.

THE NEVADA GOLD FIELD

Former Duluthian Tells of Riches Found in That State.

E. J. Luther Says Its Camps Will Eclipse All Others.

E. J. Luther, formerly of Duluth but now of the Prospectors' Brokerage Company of Manhattan, Goldfield, Fallon and Fairfield, Nevada, is in Duluth today on his way to Grand Rapids, Minn., where he formerly resided, and where several members of his family are located. He will return to Nevada shortly.

Like many others who went there and became successful, Mr. Luther is enthusiastic over the Nevada gold fields, and while he has not become a millionaire yet, he is confident that if he remains there, his stay will ultimately spell success. He tells of others who went there with nothing and are now capitalists.

"Manhattan is the greatest gold camp in the world," said Mr. Luther today. "The output will some day eclipse that of any other, in my opinion. It is the newest camp in Nevada. Jan. 1 it comprised fifteen or twenty tents, while now it has a population of something like 4,000, 200 business houses and two banks. One mercantile establishment carries an $80,000 stock of goods in a tent.

"The field has an extent of about twenty-four miles north and south and twelve miles east and west. Its showing is already better than that of any of the other Nevada camps. The surface assays are anywhere from a few dollars to $340,000 to a ton. New strikes are being made all the time.

"The Nevada gold field mines are sacking ore that is going $80 to the pound. The average Black Hills ore is less than $3.50 a pound. No attention is paid to gold ore in Nevada which shows less than $60 to a ton.

"The more they are worked the more valuable the mines become. The Tonopah mines are increasing in value with depth right along.

"You would be surprised to know how many automobiles are to be seen in that rough mining country. They are everywhere, and some remarkable runs are made from one camp to another every day. Some time ago the owners of an automobile, a 60-horse power affair, made in Goldfield, took the machine to Manhattan and tried to get the enthusiasts of that place to put up their money, the autoists being willing to wager that the new, Nevada-made machine would be able to make the run from Manhattan to Tonopah, across the Summit, in an hour and thirty minutes, when the usual time is three hours.

"Of course, prices are still higher there than they are here, but wages are correspondingly high. The surface miners get $5 a day and the underground miners $5.50 a day. The unions are very strong there. Carpenters get $8 a day for eight hours' work, and clerks receive $5 a day. Butter is 60 cents a pound, eggs 50 to 75 cents a pound, eight pounds of sugar for $1, bacon 25 cents a pound and fresh meat from 25 cents to 28 cents a pound."

Among those interested in the Prospectors' Brokerage company is O. W. Baldwin, formerly of Duluth. The company has five incorporated companies, in which are interested Thomas Lockhart, McCormick of Goldfield, D'Orsay of Goldfield and San Francisco, and A. S. Watson, formerly of New York. Mr. Luther says that Watson went to Nevada less than two years ago with $500 of borrowed money, is now worth $500,000, and has excellent chances of becoming a multi-millionaire.

CHANCE FOR REVENGE.

Duluth Ball Team Will Play Series of Three Games in Hibbing.

Three games with a picked team of local amateurs will be played by the Duluth White Sox, tomorrow, Wednesday and Thursday, and on Friday O'Dea's men will go to Hibbing, seeking revenge for the defeat yesterday at Athletic park.

Three games will be played with Hibbing, on Friday, Saturday and Sunday, and on Monday the team will return home to prepare for the trip to Fargo and the opening of the season.

The men are determined to take all three games of the Hibbing series, if possible, in return for the defeat of yesterday.

Amateur Games.

The St. Clements school team defeated the French school, Saturday, by a score of 29 to 15.

* * *

The Franklin alumni team defeated the Websters yesterday afternoon in a well-played game on Park Point, by the score of 12 to 7.

GETS LOWER BID.

Small Amount Saved on City Printing Contract by Re-advertisement.

Bids for the miscellaneous city printing were opened by the city clerk today, and they will be referred to the council this evening for action.

The lowest bid was that of Merritt & Hector, which was $20 lower than the bid of Peachey & Lounsberry. The latter bid was turned down by the council two weeks ago, and the clerk ordered to re-advertise. The action is believed to have been an outcome of the pressure brought to bear by the union printers, although it was stated at the time that the object of re-advertising was the belief that lower bids could be secured.

The difference of $20 will pay the cost of the advertising, and leave a small margin to the good.

LATE DOINGS IN MICHIGAN

Seven-Year-Old Boy Saves His Life by His Coolness.

Menominee—While walking on the railroad track one foot of Alfred Waif, aged 7, became caught in the frog of a switch. He tried in vain to extricate his foot and when an engine whistled calmly sat down on the rail and unlaced his shoe, stepping from the track just as the train thundered past.

Houghton—After having terrorized the residents within the radius of a couple of miles of Pelkie, south of here, Frank Wolff, hopelessly insane on Socialistic ideas, has finally been captured by Sheriff August Beck and lodged in the county jail. Wolff toted a big gun with him wherever he went and the residents lived in constant fear for their lives. The man's capture was made by the sheriff executing a flank movement while Wolff was eating a meal, the officer slipping behind him and relieving him of his gun. With his only weapon gone Wolff lost all his bravado and submitted to arrest without any fight. During his violent insane spells he frequently shot at persons, and drove numerous families out of their homes.

C. E. Steele, for the past three years secretary of the Portage Lake Y. M. C. A., has gone to Billings, Mont., where he has accepted a similar position. During his stay here Mr. Steele brought the local association from a deep hole and placed it on a much higher and broader plane.

Frank N. Provost, now serving a sentence in the Marquette branch prison, having been found guilty of dynamitting the home of Norman J. Dolph, a real estate dealer, residing at Kenton, this county, has just been granted a new trial by the state supreme court.

The circuit court denied the motion of Provost's attorney for a trial on the ground of irregularities.

Marquette—Another round of Walter T. Ward's fight to regain the office of mayor, which he held last year, is scheduled for Tuesday. The history of this municipal contest will go down as a remarkable chapter in upper peninsula annals. The campaign preceding election day was exciting and was attended with no little bitterness. Opposing Ward for election was Attorney Rush Culver, who the year before had been defeated by Ward. There was no issue of salient importance at stake, yet uncompromising warfare was raged. The balloting was unusually close.

On the face of the returns Culver won by seven votes. Irregularities were alleged by Ward, but the common council, sitting as a canvassing board, by a vote of 14 to 4, declared Culver the choice of the electorate. Ward applied to the supreme court for a writ of mandamus, asking a recount of the votes cast in the First, Second and Fifth wards. The Lansing tribunal has granted a recount in the First and Fifth wards. This recount will be made Tuesday. If Culver is found to still have a majority, the clouds surrounding his right to the executive chair will at once be dissipated; otherwise there is a prospect of further litigation.

The municipal board is pro-Culver by an overwhelming majority.

RAILROADS

RAILROAD BUILDING

Records Will be Broken in the Northwest This Year.

Several hundred miles more of railroad will be built in the Northwest this year than last, despite the fact that 1905 was a record-breaker in this respect. Practically every road of any importance in the West is building extensions and new lines this summer.

The greatest piece of work has been undertaken by the Northern Pacific which has let contracts for the construction of a stretch of 225 miles of track, to extend from Kennewick, Wash., to Vancouver, along the shore of the Columbia river. The work complete will cost $25,000,000. It is very expensive, for the greater part of it is rock cutting.

A sixty-five mile extension is also being built by the Northern Pacific beyond Coldersac, Idaho, and seventy miles extending along the north side of the Snake river from Wallonia east.

The Great Northern company has a big job on its hands in the construction of a 500-mile line from Midway, Wash., west to Vancouver. It will take several years to complete this work.

Both the Great Northern and Burlington roads are building a 225-mile extension in Montana, from Billings to Armington. The Great Northern has several other important extensions in progress this spring. They include a 25-mile strip from Aneta to Devils Lake, N. D., part of which is being doubled-tracked; and extension from St. John, N. D., to Brandon, Man., and a line extending thirty-five miles north from Greenbush.

In addition to the above there are numerous other extensions of from fifteen to fifty or more miles being built. In Minnesota there is the Duluth, Rainy Lake & Winnipeg, from Virginia north to the border; the probable completion of the Minnesota & International to International Falls this summer; the probable extension of the Great Northern from its Fosston line to the Canadian border on the Minnesota line; the Missabe extension to Alborn, and an extension of the Aigers-Smith road. Active work is now in progress on the Lake Superior & Southeastern, the extension of the Wisconsin Central, already completed from the south as far as Ladysmith, Wis., and now being built north to Duluth.

MANY DELINQUENTS.

Very Small Percentage of Dog Owners Have Taken Out Licenses.

About 2,000 dog owners in the city of Duluth are delinquent with their dog taxes.

The licenses should have been secured May 1, but up to the present time only 175 of them have been issued. The total number of dogs in the city is something over 2,000, and the owners of the others are violating the law in neglecting to take out their licenses.

A special officer will probably be detailed to the work of enforcing the dog tax, this week.

TAXES ARE COMING IN

County Treasurer Holgate is Receiving Many Checks Daily.

Ten Per Cent Penalty Will Attach After May 31.

The real estate taxes for the year 1905 became due the first Monday in January and, since the first of May County Treasurer Holgate has received a large grist of checks through the mails. Thus far there have been few personal visits by taxpayers to the treasurer's office to settle for last year's taxes and the increasing mail business done by that office each year indicates the tendency of the taxpayers to use that means as the most convenient. In former years a large majority of the persons who had real estate taxes to pay would go to the treasurer's office and stand in line to await their turn. The fact that it is so easy a matter to return the tax statement with a check for the amount called for has brought about a change, and now the greater portion of the taxes are paid by checks, through the mails. Where this is done the taxpayer does not get his tax receipt so quickly as where he pays in person but he saves time and annoyance.

The law provides that one-half of the real estate tax may be paid in May each year, and the last half in October. If the first half is not paid by the last day of May, a 10 per cent penalty on the whole amount of the tax is attached. If one-half the tax is paid before the last day of May and the last half of the tax becomes delinquent, then the 10 per cent penalty attaches after Oct. 31 on the part remaining unpaid.

If the 1905 taxes are not paid by the first Monday in January, 1906, an additional 5 per cent penalty will be attached and tax sales will take place the second Monday of May following. The amount of the sale draws interest at the rate of 1 per cent per month until redeemed. If not redeemed within three years from the date of the sale all lands become the absolute property of the state or the purchaser of the tax title.

There is one exception to the rule that only one-half the real estate tax has to be paid before June 1 to escape the penalty. Where the whole tax is less than $2 it must be paid in full.

PERMIT FOR ELEVATOR

Peavey Company Planning to Erect Structure to Cost $275,000.

Building Operations for May Likely to Establish New Record.

Application has been made to the building inspector by the Peavey Elevator company for a permit to construct a new elevator building to cost $275,000.

The building is to replace the one burned down last winter.

The inspector has called for a copy of the plans, and before issuing the permit, he will look them over to see that they conform with the ordinance. If they are found to be in compliance with the law, the permit will be issued at once.

Application has also been made for a permit to construct an addition to the New Jersey building, to cost $40,000. The work is now in progress, and if the plans are found to be in conformity with the ordinance, the permit will be issued at once.

The building records for May promise to establish another new mark. March broke all records for the building inspector's department, since the office was established, owing to the one large permit of $500,000 for the ore docks.

This month will equal, if not surpass, the March record, however, if the present rate is maintained. Already the permits issued since May 1 call for an aggregate expenditure of about $125,000, and the two large permits for which application has been made will bring the total up to nearly $450,000. There are a number of other large permits in sight this month, and there is no doubt but that the total for the month will pass the $500,000 mark and perhaps establish still another new monthly record for the department.

The Lake Shore to Boston.

One fare plus $1 for the round trip, good going May 31st to June 9th, inclusive. Return limit by depositing ticket July 15th.

An excellent opportunity to spend your vacation in New England.
